In writing my Preface I bring to a close a work which has for some years been my chief occupation, and which has indeed been seldom out of my thoughts since the time when, as an undergraduate, I first made acquaintance with Coleridge's Aids to Reflection, and was led in consequence to study with some eare the Epistle of St. James, to which reference is made in the carlier Aphorisms of that book.

In the Introduction I have stated my reasons for believing this Epistle to be the earliest of the books of the New Testament, written probably in the fifth decade of the Christian cra by one who had been brought up with Jesus from his childhood and whose teaching is in many points identical with the actual words of our Lord as recorded in the Synoptic Gospels. If I am not mistaken, it presents to us a picture of pre-Pauline Christianity, which is not only interesting historically, but is likely to be of special value in an age of religious doubt and anxiety like the present. Amongst those to whom the formulas of later Christianity have lost or are losing their significance, there must be many who will find a message suited to them in the language of this, the least technical of all the Epistles, many who will appreciate the strong practical sense and carnest philanthropy of St. James, and take to heart his warnings against unreal professions of whatever kind. In its plain positive truching his Epistle affords a common platform for Christians of every degree of attainment, from which they may advance again with new hope to such further developments of the faith, as it may be given to each from above to receive and to profit by.

The eighth and ninth Chapters of the Introduction deal with the Grammar and Style of the Epistle, and, in some degree, with those of the New Testament writers generally. As a corollary to these, I have, in the tenth Chapter, pointed out some objections to the hypothesis which has been lately revived amongst us, that the Greek is a translation from an Aramaic original.

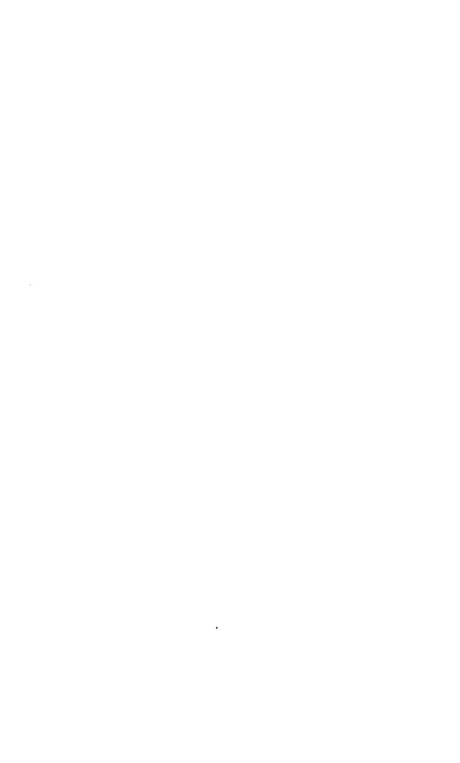

As regards the Text I have been almost entirely dependent on the labours of others, especially those of Tischendorf, Bishop Westeott and Dr. Hort. In the very rare cases in which I have ventured to depart from a reading of WH., I have earefully explained my reasons for doing so in the Notes. The comparison of three Latin Versions of the Epistle, and the collations of the Codex Patiriensis and Codex Bobiensis will, I hope, be found useful by those who are interested in textual criticism.

In the Notes it has been my aim, treating the book like any other uncient writing, to ascertain the precise meaning of each sentence, phrase, and word, as it was intended by the writer, and understood by those to whom his Epistle was addressed. The names of previous annotators, to whom I am indebted, will be found in the eleventh Chapter of the Introduction. In the Comments which follow I have in the first place viewed the Epistle more as a whole, tracing the general connexion of ideas and illustrating and discussing the wider questions involved: and, in the second place, regarding it as an integral portion of the canonical Scriptures, which are recognized by all Christians as authoritative in matters of faith, I have to some small extent endeavoured to show in what sense its teaching is to be understood by us now, and how it is to be applied to the circumstances of modern life.

It only remains for me to acknowledge with hearty thanks the assistance I have received from friends who have looked through portions of the proof-sheets, especially to Dr. E. A. Abbott (A), the Rev. G. H. Gwilliam (G.H.G.) Prof. Sanday (S) and Dr. Charles Taylor, Master of St. John's College, Cambridge (C.T.), whose initials are appended to notes communicated by them.

Introduction

P. xxxix.—Add the following to note (2) after 'priests': 'Eusebius (H.E. ii. 23) brings the death into connexion with Paul's journey to Rome. In Chron. Euseb. the date is 63 A.D.'

P. xl. l. 10.—For an read μn .

P. xlii.—Add to note (1): Meleager in his epitaph on himself (Anth. Pal. vii. 417) calls it the Syrian Athens, πάτρα δέ με τίκτει Ατθις έν 'Ασσυρίοις ναιομένη Γαδάροις.

P. lii.—On Clement c. 38, add after ἔργοις ἀγαθοῖς: 'cf. above c. 30.'

P. lxxxiv.—Under Luke, add xx. 46, 47 προσέχετε ἀπὸ τῶν γραμματέων τῶν θελόντων περιπατείν έν στολαίς καὶ φιλούντων...πρωτοκαθεδρίας έν τα ι ς συναγωγα ι ς...οι κατεσθίουσιν τὰς οικίας τῶν χηρῶν κα ὶ προφάσει μακρὰ προσεύχονται οὖτοι λήμψονται περίσσότερον κρίμα: James i. 27, ii. 2, iii. 1. P. xcii.—Under 1 Corinthians, add xiv. 33 (speaking of disorderly meetings)

οὐ γάρ ἐστιν ἀκαταστασίας ὁ Θεός, ἀλλὰ εἰρήνης: James iii. 16, 17, ὅπου

ζηλός καὶ ἐριθία, ἐκεῖ ἀ κ α τ α σ τ α σ ί α... ἡ δὲ ἄνωθεν σοφία εἰρηνική. P. cliv. (d).—For i. 36 read i. 26.

P. clv.—Únder ἐσθίω, add Gen. iii. 14, 15, xliii. 6, Exod. xii. 8, Ezek. xxv.

See below p. clxxxv.

P. clxi., last line but one.—Insert: In James ii. 19 είς ἐστὶν ὁ Θεός, the presence of the article shows that ϵis is predicative; in iv. 12, if we read ϵis $\hat{\epsilon}\sigma\tau\nu$ νομοθέτης, the absence of the article shows that $\epsilon\hat{\iota}s$ is subject; if again we read είς εστιν νομοθέτης, making εστιν not the copula but the substantive verb, ϵis becomes an epithet of $\nu o \mu$. 'there is one lawgiver.'

P. clxxii.—Under είς, insert, after i. 18 ἀπεκύησεν...ἀπαρχήν: iii. 3 βάλλομεν είς τὸ πείθεσθαι αὐτούς.

P. clxxiii.—Under έξ (for which read έκ), insert in l. 2, after γλυκύ: v. 20 έπιστρέψας άμαρτωλον έκ πλάνης: in l. 5, for iii. 18 read iii. 13.

P. clxxiv.—Add at the bottom Aor. Pass, used as Middle, iv. 10 ταπεινώθητε, v. 19 $\pi \lambda a \nu \eta \theta \hat{\eta}$.

P. clxxix.—Add under ἐάν after γινωσκέτω: with perf. subj. in prot. and

fut. ind. in apod., v. 15 κὰν άμαρτίας ἢ πεποιηκὸς ἀφεθήσεται.
P. clxxxi.—Insert before Ellipsis: 'For γάρ, δέ, καί, οὖν, τε, see Index.'
P. cxcii.—At end of first paragraph insert χρή iii. 10, cl.: l. 3 of second paragraph omit πηδάλιον.

TEXT AND NOTES

P. 8, ver. 2.—Omit $\tau \dot{\eta} \nu$ before $\sigma \nu \nu a \gamma \omega \gamma \dot{\eta} \nu$, and in critical note insert (after BC) Ti. Tr. WH. as accepting the omission.

P. 25, ver. 16.—I think now that I was not justified in reading τὰ παραπτώματα instead of τὰs άμαρτίας. The primary reason for the exhortation to mutual confession will then be to assist them in praying for one another. Still the sins first thought of would naturally be their failures in duty towards each other.

P. 31.—For the play of words in χαίρειν, χαράν compare Tobit v. 9 (varia lectio) έχαιρέτισεν αὐτον πρώτος καὶ είπεν αὐτῷ, χαίρειν σοὶ πολλὰ γένοιτο καὶ αποκριθείς Τ. εἶπεν αὐτῷ, τί μοι ἔτι ὑπάρχει χαίρειν;

P. 32. – περιπέσητε. Add Acta Johannis Zahn p. 244 n. έὰν περιπέσης πειρασ-μοίς μὴ πτοιηθήση.

P. 38 n.—Hofmann might have found a better example of διακρίνω in the sense of 'to question' in Herm. Sim. ii. 1.

P. 46. --ον επηγγείλατο. For omission of subject Θεός, cf. 1 Joh. v. 16 δώσει αὐτῷ ζωήν.

P. 48.—ἀπείραστος. Other examples may be found in Acta Johannis Zahn
 p. 75 l. 15 τοις τότε πειράζουσιν τὸν Θεὸν ὁ ἀπείραστος τῆ πείρα ἐκείνων τὴν εὐθύτητα ἐδίδου, p. 113, 5 μὴ πείραζε τὸν ἀπείραστον, p. 190, 18 μακάριος ὅστις οὐκ ἐπείρασεν ἐν σοὶ τὸν Θεόν, ὁ γὰρ σὲ πειράζων τὸν ἀπείραστον πειράζει.

ib. n. 1.—For '1066, Panar.' read 'Panar. 1066.'

ib. n. 3.—Add 1 Cor. xi. 19 δεί αίρέσεις εν ύμιν είναι ίνα οί δύκιμοι φανεροί γένωνται.

P. 53.—(All good comes from God,) cf. Tobit iv. 19 αὐτὸς ὁ Κύρως δίδωσι πάντα τὰ ἀγαθά. In reference to the hexameter, H. Fischer makes the somewhat comical suggestion (Philologus 1891, heft 2) that St. James is here giving a novel application of a proverb which in common life meant 'do not look a gift horse in the mouth.' But surely the difference of intonation required by the two senses would prevent any such application, not to mention the improbability of a phrase like $\pi \hat{a} \nu \delta \hat{\omega} \rho \eta \mu a \tau \epsilon \lambda \epsilon \iota \nu \nu$ getting such a proverbial force.

Mishnah, Surenh. iv. 116 (Jewish Fathers p. 85).

Ib. n. 3.—On θ έλειν and βούλεσθαι cf. Plato Alcib. i. 135, quoted [below on p. 141.

P. 59.—For λόγος ἀληθείας cf. Westcott on 1 Joh. i. 1 περὶ τοῦ λόγου τῆς ζωῆς. In lines 9—14 read after 'apposition' as follows: comparing John viii. 31, 32 'if ye...thy word is truth'; but why not objective etc.

P. 60, l. 6.—For quidam read quendam. For position of αὐτοῦ cf. Joh. v. 47 τοῖς ἐκείνου γράμμασιν, 2 Cor. viii. 9 τῆ ἐκείνου πτωχεία, ib. ver. 14 τὸ ἐκείνων ὑστέρημα...περίσσευμα, 2 Tim. ii. 26 τὸ ἐκείνου θέλημα., Tit. iii. 5 κατὰ τὸ αὐτοῦ ἔλεος, ib. iii. 7 τῆ ἐκείνου χάριτι, 2 Pet. i. 16 τῆς ἐκείνου μεγαλειότητος. On mood of ἴστε cf. Joh. ii. 20, iii. 5, 15.

ib. l. 13 from bottom.—For (Prov.) 11, xxix. read xxix. 11, 20.

P. 61.—Heading: for i. 20, 21, read i. 18—21.

P. 62.—περισσείαν. Cf. Plut. De Aud. 42 B ἀποτίθεσθαι τὰ περιττὰ τῆς ψυχῆς quoted below under ἐσόπτρφ ver. 23. It seems to be equivalent to ζύμη κακίας in 1 Cor. v. 8.

P. 65.—Heading: for i. 21, 23, read i. 21—23.

P. 66.—ἐσόπτρφ. Cf. pseudo-Cyprian De duobus montibus c. 13 ita me in vobis ridete, quomodo quis vestrum se videt in aquam ant in speculum.

P. 71.—καθαρά. In quotation from Erasmus, read morticinum for morti-

P. 76.—τ^ς δόξης. Cf. Justin Tryph. c. 61 ό Θεὸς γεγέννηκε δύναμίν τινα έξ έαυτοῦ λογικήν, ήτις καὶ δόξα Κυρίου καλείται. ποτὲ δὲ υίος, ποτὲ δὲ σοφία κ.τ.λ.

P. 78.—ἐπιβλέψητε. In Arist. Magna Moralia ii. 15 we find ἐπιβλέπειν ἐπὶ ib. 1. 7 from bottom.—For $\dot{\eta}$ read $\dot{\eta}$.

P. 79, l. 1.—Add Exod. xix. 17 $\hat{v}\pi\hat{o}$ $\tau\hat{o}$ $\mathring{o}\rho\sigma$ s. The addition of $\tau\hat{\omega}\nu$ $\pi\sigma\hat{o}\hat{\omega}\nu$, found in A and other MSS., is borrowed from Ps. ex. 1, which is quoted repeatedly in the N.T.

ib. - κριταὶ διαλ. πον. Peile compares Soph. Aj. 888 μακρᾶν ἀλατὰν πόνων.

P. 83, l. 4 from end of second paragraph.—For 'has' read 'have,'

P. 84.—βασιλικός. Cf. Justin Apol. i. 12 ο λόγος...οὖ βασιλικώτατον (superl. for comparat.) ἄρχοντα μετὰ τὸν γεννήσαντα θεὸν οὐδένα οἴδαμεν ὅντα.

The substantival use of $\dot{\epsilon}\nu\dot{\iota}$ in this verse is supported by i. 4 P. 86.— εν ενί.

P. 87. - μη μοιχεύσης. For the order of the commandments, compare also Clem. Al. Strom. vi. 816. For the general thought cf. Basil. Baptism. ii. 9 (quoted by Cellerier) παράνομός έστιν δ μίαν έντολην παραβάς.

ib.—On the difference between άγνίζω and καθαρίζω see Westcott's n. on 1 Joh. iii. 3.

P. 137.— τ απεινώθητε. For aor. pass. with middle meaning cf. $\pi \lambda a \nu \eta \theta \hat{g}$ in

P. 140.—πρός δλίγον. Cf. 1 Tim. iv. 8 πρός δλίγον έστιν ωφέλιμος.

P. 143.—iμάτια. Cf. Curt. v. 20 In Persepolin totius Persidis opes congesserunt : aurum argentumque cumulatum crat, vestis ingens modus.

P. 144.— $\tilde{\epsilon}\sigma\tau a\iota$. The force of the future may be thus expressed: 'when you come to inspect your treasures, the rust will be a witness that you have not used them as you ought.'

Since the notes were printed, Bernhard Weiss has brought out his Text-kritische Untersuchungen und Textherstellung of the Catholic Epistles, containing a careful investigation of the characteristics of the two groups of uncial MSS., Sin.ABC representing the older text, and KLP representing the later text. As he follows WH. in assigning the greatest authority to B, his own text is generally in agreement with theirs. I notice below all the instances in which his reading differs from theirs and from mine. The exceptical notes are not of much importance. As regards orthography he writes ἀλαζονεία, κακοπαθεία, ἐριθεία, Ἡλίας, where I have adopted Hort's spelling (see p. cliii of my Introduction). For ἀποκυεί he reads ἀποκύει, for θρησκώς, θρήσκως.

I. 8.—He takes ἀνὴρ δίψυχος in apposition to ἄνθρωπος, as I have done; not (with WH.) as subject of λήμψεται.

I. 9.—He reads δ (omitted by B) before ἀδελφός. I have followed WH. in bracketing it.

I. 10.—He follows Huther and Beyschlag in understanding πλούσιος of an unbeliever and giving an ironical force to καυχάσθω.

I. 17.—He takes ἄνωθέν ἐστιν καταβαίνον together; and interprets τροπῆς ἀποσκίασμα in the same way as Beyschlag 'eine durch eine Wendung der Himmelslichter hervorgebrachte Beschattung.'

I. 21.— He puts a comma after έν πραύτητι, taking it with ἀποθέμενοι.

1.23.—He translates τὸ πρόσωπον τῆς γενέσεως 'das Angesicht womit einer geboren ist.'

I. 25.—He translates ἐν τῆ ποιήσει 'auf Grund seines Thuns,' referring to

ł. 9.

II. 1.—He takes $\tilde{\epsilon}\chi\epsilon\tau\epsilon$ as imperative, not (with WH.) as indicative asking a question. In the same verse he makes $\tau\hat{\eta}s$ $\delta\delta\xi\eta s$ genitive of quality after $i\eta\sigma\hat{\sigma}s$ $N\rho\iota\sigma\tau\delta s$.

II. 2. —He explains συναγωγήν ύμῶν as a Jewish synagogue frequented by the Christians.

II. 5.— $\pi\tau\omega\chi$ οὺς $\tau\hat{\phi}$ κόσμ ϕ . Weiss translates 'in Bezug auf weltliche Güter, and says that the Dative 'steht zur Bezeichnung der Sphäre.' In the same verse he translates $\hat{\epsilon}\nu$ πίστει 'auf Grund Glaubens.

H. 14 and 16.—He reads τί τὸ ὄφελος, against B and WH.

II. 18.—Taking $\partial \lambda \lambda^{\prime}$ $\hat{\epsilon} \rho \epsilon \hat{\iota}$ $\tau \iota s$ as an objection made by a bystander to what had just been said, he understands $\sigma \iota'$ of the professing believer censured by St. James. Surely it is incredible that any writer could have stated an objection in so awkward a form.

II. 19. He reads $\hat{\epsilon \iota s}$ $\hat{\delta}$ $\Theta \epsilon \acute{o} s$ $\hat{\epsilon} \sigma \tau \iota \nu$ with C and WH.^m; $\hat{\epsilon \iota s}$ $\Theta \epsilon \acute{o} s$ $\hat{\epsilon} \sigma \tau \iota \nu$ is the reading of B and WH.; I read εἶs ἐστὶν ὁ Θεός with Sin. Ti. Treg. Weiss weakens the force of καὶ τὰ δαιμόνια πιστεύουσιν καὶ φρίσσουσιν by making it parenthetical.

III. 3.—He reads ϵi $\delta \hat{\epsilon}$, though he fails, like every one else, to find a natural apodosis, and acknowledges (p. 66) that the reading $\epsilon \iota$ $\delta \epsilon$ γap in Sin. proves that $\delta \epsilon$ was intended.

III. 6.—τὸν τροχὸν τῆς γενέσεως. He explains 'human life, whose restless movement spreads in all directions the once kindled flame.

III. 16.—He translates $\epsilon\rho\iota\theta\epsilon$ ia by 'Rechthaberei, der es nicht auf die Sache ankommt, sondern auf das Verfechten der eigenen Meinung,' and opposes it to $\epsilon \iota \iota \pi \epsilon \iota \theta \eta s$. 'A pertinacious argumentative disposition' is a meaning which would suit the passage well, but is hard to get out of the word. Why may we not suppose parties in the Churches of the Diaspora, as in the Church of Corinth?

IV. 2.—He reads φονεύετε καὶ ζηλοῦτε without a stop.

IV. 3.—He reads δαπανήσετε with B for δαπανήσητε, the reading of the other

MSS. accepted by WH.

IV. 5.—In this difficult verse Weiss makes πρὸς Φθόνον ἐπιποθεῖ τὸ πνεῦμα δ κατώκισεν εν ήμιν, μείζονα δε δίδωσιν χάριν parenthetic, and takes το πνεθμα as object of ἐπιποθεῖ. I have stated in my notes my reasons against this way of taking the passage.

IV. 9.—He here reads μετατραπήτω with BP and WH.

IV. 10.—He reads $\tau \circ \hat{v}$ before $K v \rho \circ v$ against the best MSS, and edd.

IV. 14.—He reads with WH. τῆς αὔριον ποία ἡ ζωὴ ὑμῶν. I have stated in my note why I prefer the reading of Sin. If a change is to be made I should rather give the exact reading of B, omitting the article before $\zeta\omega\dot{\eta}$. In the latter part of the verse Weiss departs from B and WH. by inserting the article before $\pi \rho \delta s$.

IV. 15.—He departs from B and WH. by reading $\theta \epsilon \lambda \dot{\eta} \sigma \eta$ for $\theta \dot{\epsilon} \lambda \eta$.

V. 3.—He puts a full stop after $\pi \hat{v}_{\rho}$ in opposition to WH.

V. 6.—He departs from WH. by reading ἀντιτάσσεται ὑμῖν without a question.

V. 11.—He omits δ before κύριος with B and WH.^m

V. 12.—He refers the swearing, which is here forbidden, to the asseveration of innocence made before the judges of verse 6. He writes to val val (not, as WH., $\tau \delta$ Nai vai) translating it 'Let your yea be yea,' i.e. perfectly straightforward, so as not to need the confirmation of an oath.

V. 13.—He reads κακοπαθεί τις εν ύμίν without an interrogation, and so άσθενεί τις έν ύμιν in verse 14.

V. 14.—He departs from B by keeping τοῦ Κυρίου after ὀνόματι, in spite of the variations of the other MSS.

V. 15.—He follows Huther in translating καν 'even if.'

V. 16.—He reads τàs ἀμαρτίας with WH. and the best MSS., and understands $l\dot{a}\theta\eta\tau\epsilon$ of bodily healing (comparing Gen. xx. 17, Exod. xv. 26) which could only be effected after the sin, which had caused the disease, had been confessed and forgiven. He thinks that $\pi\rho\epsilon\sigma\beta\dot{\nu}\tau\epsilon\rho\omega$ means simply the older members of the Christian community, who, as being the most experienced, would be sent for in the first instance, but that the same duty devolved upon all. He takes ένεργουμένη as middle, 'hinsichtlich seiner Wirksamkeit.'

V. 20.—He reads γινώσκετε with WH. and B. In the latter part of the verse he reads σώσει ψυχὴν έκ θανάτου αὐτοῦ with B, where WH. have σ. ψυχὴν αὐτοῦ ἐκ θανάτου with Sin. P. Surely if B's order were right, we must have had αὐτῆs, to suit the preceding ψυχήν. Weiss understands the sins which are hidden to be those of the converted person.

INTRODUCTION

THE AUTHOR

Internal Evidence. The author speaks with authority and in the tone of the O.T. rather than of the N.T. This agrees with what we read of James, the President of the Church at Jerusalem. Remarkable agreements between this Epistle and the speeches and letter of St. James contained in the Acts. This James was known as the Lord's brother, p. v. Three different explanations of the phrase. Passages of Scripture bearing on the subject. Hieronymian theory examined, p. ix. Epiphanian theory, p. xviii. Helvidian theory, p. xxiii. Examination of the objection, that the last is opposed to tradition, p. xxiii; and to Christian sentiment, p. xxxiii. Further particulars as to St. James derived from uninspired writings, p. xxxvi., the Gospel according to the Hebrews, Hegesippus, Josephus, Clement ne Homilies. General conclusion as to the life and character of St. James, p. xli. Hellenism in Syria. Resemblances between this Epistle and the teaching of our Lord, especially as recorded in the Sermon on the Mount, p. xlii. Unbelief and conversion of James, p. xlv.

EXTERNAL EVIDENCE FOR THE AUTHENTICITY OF THE EPISTLE

Direct evidence: Eusebius in his account of the Canonical books classes it amongst the Antilegomena, but elsewhere cites it as genuine, p. xlvii. It is omitted in the Muratorian fragment and in the Canon Mommsenianus; but included in the Peshitto and in the Catalogues of Origen, Cyril of Jerusalem, Gregory of Nazianzus, Athanasius, Amphilochius of Iconium, Epiphanius, Jerome and Augustine, and was finally accepted by the third Council of Carthage, p. xlviii. Indirect evidence: was known to Clement of Rome, to the author of the Didaché, of the Epistle of Barnabas, and of the Testaments of the Patriarchs, to Ignatius and to Polycarp, p. l. Hermas is full of allusions to it, p. lvii. It is referred to by Justin Martyr, Athenagoras, Irenaeus, Theophilus, Clement of Alexandria, and by the writers of the Ep. ad Diognetum, and the Acta Johannis, p. lxi. Origen first cites it by name as Scripture and as the work of St. James, p. lxiii. Allusions are also found to it in Tertullian, Dionysius of Alexandria, Gregory Thaumaturgus, the Clementine Homilies, Constitutiones Apostolicae, Lactantius, Athanasius, Chrysostom and Didymus. By the end of the fourth century it is all but universally accepted, p. lxiii.

ON THE DATE OF THE EPISTLE

The general result of the external and internal evidence points to the fifth decade after Christ as the time of composition, p. cxix. This date is confirmed by the absence of any reference to the fall of Jerusalem, or to the admission of Gentiles into the Church, p. cxx. The allusions to Church order and discipline, and the Judaic tone, are in accordance with an early date, p. cxxi. On the other hand it was written after a persecution, St. James had attained a position of authority, and the persons addressed were no longer recent converts, p. cxxiii. Grounds on which it has been ascribed to a later date; the use of the name 'Christ' without the article, condition of the Churches addressed, waning belief in the Second Coming, p. cxxv. CHAPTER I

THE AUTHOR

THE writer calls himself 'Jacob' (from which our name 'James' is derived through the Italian 'Giacomo'), and describes himself as The writer 'a servant of God and of the Lord Jesus Christ.' As the name speaks with authority, was very common in the first century, and the description is one which is applicable to all Christians, it is evident that he must have been distinguished from other Jacobs by position or character, so as to justify him in addressing the 'Twelve Tribes in the Dispersion' with the tone of authority which is so marked a feature in the Epistle before us. This inference receives support from the Epistle of Jude, the writer of which styles himself 'servant of Jesus Christ and brother of Jacob,' evidently assuming that his brother's name would carry weight with those whom he addresses.

Internal Evidence.

The Epistle of Jacob, or James, is strongly contrasted not only with the Epistles to the Romans and Galatians, against which some have supposed it to be directed, but also with the First Epistle of St. Peter, which in some points it closely resembles. The general characteristic by which it is distinguished from these Epistles is its Jewish tone of thought, style and doctrine. In style it reminds one now of the Proverbs, now of the stern denunciations of the prophets, now of the parables in the Gospels. It has scarcely any direct reference to Christ, who is indeed only named twice. In commending the duty of patience (v. 7-11), the writer refers, with the Psalmist (cxxvi. 6), to the example of the husbandman, and to Job and the prophets of the Old Testament: if he alludes to our Lord at all, he only does so obscurely in ver. 6 've killed the just; he doth not resist you';

while St. Peter on the contrary dwells exclusively on the example of Christ (cf. 1 Pet. ii. 19-24, iv. 12-14). So in urging the duty of prayer reference is made, not (as in Heb. v. 7) to the promises or the prayers of Christ, but to the prayer of Elijah: the duty of kindness, and the warning against evil-speaking in ch. iii. are based not on the example of Christ and the thought of our common brotherhood in him (as in 1 Pet. ii. 23, Rom. xii. 5, Eph. iv. 25), but on the parables of nature, on the fact that man was created in the image of God, and on general reasoning; and again (in iv. 11, 12) speaking evil of a brother is condemned as putting a slight on the Law, not as causing pain to Christ. No mention is made of the death or resurrection of Christ, or of the doctrines of the Incarnation and Atonement. To a careless reader the tone of the Epistle, as a whole, seems scarcely to rise above the level of the Old Testament; Christian ideas are still clothed in Jewish forms. Thus the Law, called for the sake of distinction 'the law of liberty' or 'the royal law,' seems to stand in place of the Gospel or even of Christ himself (ii. 8-13, iv. 11): the love of the world is condemned in the language of the Old Testament as adultery against God. This contrast rises to its highest point in treating of the relation between Faith and Works (ii, 14-26). While St. Paul writes (Rom. iii. 28) 'We reckon therefore that a man is justified by faith apart from the works of the law,' the language of St. James is (ii. 24) 'Ye see then how that by works a man is justified and not by faith only.' And while the case of Abraham is cited in Rom. iv. 3, 13, 16 in proof of the doctrine of justification by faith, and the case of Rahab is cited for the same purpose in Heb. xi. 31, St. James makes use of both to prove that man is justified by works (ii. 25). I shall have to go more fully into these questions hereafter, and shall then point out some considerations which will to a certain extent qualify the first impression left on the mind by a perusal of the Epistle; but speaking generally we may safely say that it has a more Jewish cast than any other writing of the New Testament, and that the author must have been one who would be more in sympathy with the Judaizing party and more likely to exercise an influence over them than any of the three great leaders, Peter, Paul or John.

If we turn now to the Epistles of St. Paul and to the Acts of the Apostles we find mention there of a James who exactly fulfils the conditions required in the writer of our Epistle. In Gal. i. 18, 19 This agrees St. Paul says that three years after his conversion, probably about said in the the year 38 A.D., he went from Damascus to Jerusalem and stayed and Acts of with Peter fifteen days, seeing no other apostle but only James the Lord's brother. This is quite in accordance with what we read in Church at the Acts xii. 17, where Peter, on his escape from prison (A.D. 44), is recorded to have gone to the house of Mary the mother of Mark, and desired that the news of his escape might be sent to James and the brethren. In Gal. ii. 1-10 St. Paul describes a later visit to Jerusalem after an interval of fourteen years, i.e. about A.D. 51. In this visit the leaders of the Church, James, Peter and John (l.c. ver. 9), after hearing his report of his first missionary journey, signified their approval of his work and 'gave right hands of fellowship, agreeing that Paul and Barnabas should preach to the Gentiles and they themselves to the circumcision. In verses 11-14 of the same chapter Peter's inconsistency in regard to eating with the Gentiles at Antioch is explained by the arrival of certain from James, πρὸ τοῦ γὰρ ἐλθεῖν τινὰς ἀπὸ Ἰακώβου μετὰ τῶν έθνῶν συνήσθιεν ότε δὲ ἦλθον, ὑπέστελλεν καὶ ἀφώριζεν έαυτὸν φοβούμενος τοὺς ἐκ περιτομῆς. This second visit is more fully described in Acts xv. 4-29, where James appears as President of the Council held to consider how far the Gentile Christians should be required to conform to the customs of the Jews. It is James who sums up the discussion, and proposes the resolution which is carried, in the words έγω κρίνω μη παρενοχλεῖν τοῖς ἀπὸ των έθνων ἐπιστρέφουσιν έπὶ τὸν Θεόν, κ.τ.λ.

Epistles James, the President Jerusalem.

It is important to notice that in his speech (ver. 14) Peter Remarkable is called Symeon, a name never assigned to him elsewhere in the Acts or in any part of the N.T. except in 2 Pet. i. 1. From this we gather that the actual words of the speaker are recorded either in their original form or in a translation; and it becomes thus a matter of interest to learn whether there is any resemblance between the language of our Epistle and that of the speech said to have been uttered by James, and of the circular containing the decree, which was probably drawn up by him. I cannot but think it a remarkable coincidence that, out of

230 words contained in the speech and circular, so many should reappear in our Epistle, written on a totally different subject. They are as follows: (1) the epistolary salutation χαίρειν (Jas. i. 1, Acts xv. 23, found in only one other passage of the N.T., the letter of Lysias to Felix (Acts xxiii. 26): (2) the curious phrase borrowed from the LXX, which occurs in the N.T. only in Acts xv. 17 & $\delta'\delta'$ ους επικέκληται τὸ ὄνομά μου επ' αυτούς, and James ii. 7 τὸ καλὸν όνομα τὸ ἐπικληθὲν ἐφ' ὑμᾶς: (3) ἀκούσατε ἀδελφοί μου found in James ii. 5 alone in the Epistles, compared with audoes adendoi ακούσατέ μου in Acts xv. 13: (4) επισκέπτεσθαι James i. 27, Acts xv. 14: (5) ἐπιστρέφειν James v. 19, 20, Acts xv. 19: (6) τηρείν and διατηρείν, James i. 27 άσπιλον έαυτον τηρείν από του κόσμου, Acts xv. 29 έξ ων διατηρούντες έαυτούς εὖ πράξετε: (7) ἀγαπητός occurs in the Acts only in xv. 25 σύν τοῖς ἀγαπητοῖς Βαρνάβα καὶ Παύλφ, while ἀδελφοί μου ἀγαπητοί is found three times in our Epistle: (8) perhaps we may compare also the repetition of the word άδελφός in James iv. 11 μη καταλαλείτε άλληλων άδελφοί ο καταλαλών άδελφου ή κρίνων τον άδελφον αυτου κρίνει τον νόμον κ.τ.λ. and Acts xv. 23 οί πρεσβύτεροι άδελφοί τοις κατά την Αντιόχειαν...άδελφοις χαίρειν: and the pregnant use of the word όνομα in James v. 10 ελάλησαν εν τω ονόματι Κυρίου, ver. 14 αλείψαντες έλαίω εν τω ονόματι, ii. 7 το καλον όνομα and in Acts xv. 14 λαβείν εξ εθνών λαον τώ ονόματι αὐτοῦ, ver. 26 ύπερ τοῦ ονόματος του Κυρίου ήμων Ίησου Χριστου.

Further agreements between what we are told of James in Acts xxi, and our Fpistle.

To return to our immediate subject: James is seen in the same position of authority in Acts xxi. 18, when Paul presents himself before him on his return from his third missionary journey (A.D. 58). After joining in praise to God for the success which had attended his labours, James and the elders who are with him warn St. Paul of the strong feeling against him which had been excited among the 'myriads of Jewish believers who were all zealous for the law' $\langle \xi \eta \lambda \omega \tau a \rangle \tau a \omega \omega \omega \omega \omega$ by the report that he had taught the Jews of the Dispersion to abandon circumcision and their other customs. To counteract this impression, they recommended him to join in a Nazarite vow, which had been undertaken by four members of their community, as a proof that the report was unfounded and that he himself walked according to the law. The description here given of the state of feeling at Jerusalem and of St. James' anxiety to avoid causing any offence to it is quite in accordance with the tone of our Epistle and may help to explain the reserve with which distinctive Christian doctrines are treated in it. Is it going too far to compare the use of ἀγνίζω in Acts xxi. 24 and James iv. 8, and the construction of $\delta a\pi a\nu \hat{a}\nu$ in the same verse $(\delta a\pi \hat{a}\nu\eta\sigma\sigma\nu \hat{\epsilon}\pi)$ αὐτοῖς) and in James iv. 3 "να ἐν ταῖς ἡδοναῖς ὑμῶν δαπανήσητε?

The only other passage in which James is mentioned by name The James The only other passage in which sames is mentioned by half is also in the Epistles is 1 Cor. xv. 7, where we are told that Jesus known as the Lord's the Lord's appeared to James after his Resurrection. Of this more will be brother. said shortly. But we have seen that in Gal. i. 19 he receives the appellation of 'the Lord's brother,' and there are further allusions to the 'brethren of the Lord' in 1 Cor. ix. 5, which is generally taken to imply that they were all married, and in Acts i. 14, where we are told that after the Ascension 'the Eleven with the women and Mary the mother of Jesus and his brethren remained together at Jerusalem waiting for the promise of the Spirit.' These passages also will come in for further consideration immediately. An objection may be raised to the identification of the writer of Reason why this title is the Epistle with the brother of the Lord, on the ground that no not used in the Epistle claim is made to this title in either of the Epistles which go by the names of the brothers James and Jude. If they were really brothers of the Lord, would they not have laid stress on the authority derived from this relationship, just as St. Paul lays stress on his apostleship? But what was Christ's own teaching on the matter? When his mother and brothers sought on one occasion to use the authority, which they assumed that their kinship gave them, they were met by the words 'Who is my mother, and who are my brethren?' And he stretched out his hand to his disciples and said 'Behold my mother and my brethren.' St. Paul expresses the same idea, of the disappearance of the earthly relationship in the higher spiritual union, by which all the members of the body are joined to the Head, in the words 'though we have known Christ after the flesh, yet now know we him so no more,' 2 Cor. v. Surely it is only what we should have expected beforehand. that James and Jude would shrink from claiming another name than that of 'servant' to express the relation in which they stood to their risen Lord, after having failed (as I shall shortly endeavour to show) to acknowledge Him as their Master in the days of his humiliation.

of the Epistle is or, to allow for a moment the possibility of its not being genuine, wishes to be understood as being, the President of the Church at Jerusalem, and the brother of the Lord.¹ We have now to investigate the meaning of this last expression. Is it to be understood literally of half-brothers of the Lord, sons of Mary his mother and of Joseph his reputed father? Or is it to be understood of foster-brothers, sons of his reputed father by, a former wife? Or is it to be understood of the cousins of the Lord, sons of Clopas or Alphaeus, the husband of his mother's sister, who bore the same name as herself? It may be well first to bring together the passages bearing on this subject in the Gospels, and then to examine them more carefully in reference to the three theories above stated. I quote from the R.V.

Passages in the New Testament bearing upon the sulject.

Matt. i. 25. Joseph . . . took unto him his wife and knew her not till she had brought forth a son.

Luke ii. 7. She brought forth her first-born son.

John ii. 12. After this he went down to Capernaum, he and his mother and his brethren and his disciples: and there they abode not many days.

Matt. xiii. 54—56. And coming into his own country he taught them in their synagogue, insomuch that they were astonished and said, Whence hath this man this wisdom and these mighty works? Is not this the carpenter's son? is not his mother called Mary? and his brethren James and Joses and Simon and Judas? And his sisters are they not all with us? Whence then hath this man these things?

Mark vi. 3. Is not this the carpenter, the son of Mary, and brother of James and Joses and Judas and Simon? and are not his sisters here with us? And they were offended in him. Cf. Luke iv. 16—30, John vi. 42.

Matt. xii. 47. While he was yet speaking to the multitudes, behold his mother and his brethren stood without, seeking to speak to him. And one said unto him, Behold thy mother and thy brethren stand without, seeking to speak to thee. But he answered and said unto him that told him, Who is my mother? and who are my brethren? And he stretched forth his hand to his disciples and said, Behold my mother and my brethren.

Mark iii. 20-22, 31-33. And the multitude cometh together again, so that they could not so much as eat bread. And when his friends (oi $\pi a \rho$ ' $a \dot{v} \tau o \hat{v}$) heard it they went out to lay hold on him; for they said, He is beside himself. And the scribes which came down from Jerusalem said, He hath Beelzebub, and by the prince of the devils casteth he out the devils. . . And there come his mother and his brethren; and standing without, they sent unto him, calling him. And a multitude was sitting about him; and they say unto him, Behold, thy mother and thy brethren without seek for thee. And he answered them and saith, Who is my mother and my brethren? &c. Cf. Luke viii. 19-21.

John vii. 2—8. Now the feast of the Jews, the feast of tabernacles, was at hand. His brethren therefore said unto him, Depart hence and go into Judaea, that thy disciples also may behold thy works which thou doest. For no man doeth anything in secret and himself seeketh to be known openly. If thou doest these things manifest thyself to the world. For even $(o\dot{v}\delta\dot{\epsilon})$ his brethren did not believe on him. Jesus therefore saith unto them, My time is not yet come, but your time is alway ready. The world cannot hate you, but me it hateth, because I testify of it that its works are evil.

Matt. xxvii. 56. And many women were there beholding from afar, which had followed Jesus from Galilee, ministering unto him: among whom was Mary Magdalene, and Mary the mother of James and Joses, and the mother of the sons of Zebedee.

Mark xv. 40. 'And there were also women beholding from afar: among whom were both Mary Magdalene, and Mary the mother of James the less (τοῦ μικροῦ) and of Joses, and Salome.' A little below (ver. 47) the second Mary is called 'Mary the mother of Joses,' and in xvi. 1 'the mother of James,' as in Luke xxiv. 10.

John xix. 25—27. There were standing by the cross his mother, and his mother's sister, Mary the wife of Chopas, and Mary Magdalene. When Jesus therefore saw his mother and the disciple standing by, whom he loved, he saith unto his mother, Woman, behold thy son! Then saith he to the disciple, Behold thy mother! And from that hour the disciple took her to his own home.

I think any one reading these passages for the first time, without any preconceived idea on the subject, would naturally take what is called the Helvidian view, that the brethren of the Lord were sons of Joseph and Mary. It will be seen, however, that there is much to be said in favour of the other views mentioned above. We will examine first the argument in favour of the Hieronymian theory—that those who are called brethren were really cousins.¹

A.—The Hieronymian Theory.

Jerome's theory, that by the brethren of the Lord is meant the sous of his mother's sister,

This theory was put forward about the year 383 A.D. as a novel hypothesis 2 by Jerome in answer to Helvidius, who had attacked the prevailing view of the superiority of the unmarried to the married state by referring to the example of the Lord's mother. of whom we read in Scripture that she bore children to her husband Joseph.' Jerome's argument briefly stated is, that James the brother of the Lord is called an Apostle by St. Paul, that he must therefore be identified with James the son of Alphaeus, since James the son of Zebedee was no longer living when Paul wrote; identified also with James the less in Mark xv. 40 (the comparative implying an opposition to James the greater,3 viz. the son of Zebedee), this James being there stated to be brother of Joses, But in Mark vi. 3 we find a James and Joses among the brethren of Jesus, and this agrees with John xix. 25, where Mary the mother of James and wife of Alphaeus is called Mary of Clopas, sister of the Lord's mother; from whence it follows that the four brothers and two or more sisters mentioned in Mark vi. 3 and elsewhere are really first cousins of Jesus. Jerome himself had no information on the subject of Clopas, but suggests that he may possibly have been father of Mary. Later writers added further developments to this theory. Clopas was identified with Alphaeus, as another form of the common Aramaic original Chalphai; and 'Judas of James,' who occurs in St. Luke's list of the Apostles (Luke vi. 16, Acts i. 13), is identified with the writer of the Epistle, who calls himself 'brother of James' (Jude 1), and also with the brother of Joses, James and Simon in Mark vi. 3. Simon Zelotes, who is joined with James and Judas in the list of the Apostles, is supposed to be another of these brethren; and some held that Matthew, being identical with Levi the son of Alphaeus, must belong to the same family.

Bishop Lightfoot calls attention to the fact that not only does Jerome make no pretence to any traditional support for this view, 1 but that he is himself by no means consistent in holding it. Thus in his comment on the Galatians written about 387 A.D. he says: is not held 'James was called the Lord's brother on account of his high character, his incomparable faith, and his extraordinary wisdom; the other apostles are also called brothers (John xx. 17), but he preeminently so, to whom the Lord at his departure had committed the sons of his mother (i.e. the members of the Church at Jerusalem).' In a later work still, the epistle to Hedibia, written about 406, he speaks of Mary of Cleophas (Clopas), the aunt of our Lord, and Mary the mother of James and Joses, as distinct persons, 'although some contend that the mother of James and Joses was his aunt.'

was altogether unknown before the time of Jerome and consistently by him.

I proceed now to examine the above argument.

(1) It is assumed that 'brother' (ἀδελφός) may be used in the Objections sense of cousin (ἀνεψιός, found in Col. iv. 10). The supporters of this theory do not offer any parallel from the N.T., but they appeal to classical use both in Greek and Latin, and to the O.T. The examples cited from classical Greek are merely expressive of warm affection, or else metaphorical, as Plato Crito § 16, where the laws sometimes of Athens are made to speak of οί ημέτεροι ἀδελφοὶ οί ἐν Αίδον morporallel There is no instance in classical Greek, as far as I know, of to Jerome's view. Though brother is used for · cousin ' in the Hebrew Bible and in the LXX for this use is cited either from the N.T. or from classical Greek.

After disputing the value of the authorities appealed to by Helvidius, he sets aside the appeal to authority in the words Verum nugas terimus et fonte veritatis omisso opinionum rivulos consectamur (Adv. Helv. 17); and in another treatise (De Viris Illustribus 2) contrasts his own view with the Epiphanian in the words Ut nonnulli existimant, Joseph ex alia uxore; ut autem miki ridetur, Mariae soveris matris Domini ... filius (Lightfoot, p. 259).

άδελφός being used to denote a cousin. In Latin frater may stand for frater patruclis, where there is no danger of being misunderstood (cf. Cic. ad Att. i. 5, 1). The Hebrew word is used loosely to include cousm, as in Gen. xiv. 14-16 (of Abraham and Lot), where the LXX, has ἀδελφιδοῦς; in Levit. x. 4, where the first cousins of Aaron are called brethren (ἀδελφοί) of his sons, Nadab and Abihu; in 1 Chron. xxiii. 21, 22 ('The sons of Mahli, Eleazar and Kish. And Eleazar died, and had no sons, but daughters: and their brethren the sons of Kish took them'), where also the LXX. has ἀδελφοί. These passages seem to me to be hardly covered by the general rule laid down by Bishop Lightfoot (p. 261): "in an affectionate and earnest appeal intended to move the sympathies of the hearer, a speaker might not unnaturally address a relation or a friend or even a fellow-countryman as his 'brother': and even when speaking of such to a third person he might through warmth of feeling and under certain aspects so designate him." I think, however, the Bishop is entirely right when he goes on te say: "It is scarcely conceivable that the cousins of any one should be commonly and indeed exclusively styled his 'brothers' by indifferent persons; still less, that one cousin in particular should be singled out and described in this loose way 'James, the Lord's brother." If we remark too the care with which Hegesippus (quoted under § 6 below) employs the term ἀδελφός of James and Jude, the brothers of the Lord, while he keeps the term averties for Symeon, the cousin of the Lord and second bishop of Jerusalem, we shall feel that there is a strong probability against the use of ἀδελφοί in the N.T. to denote anything but brothers, i.e. in the case before us either half-brothers or foster-brothers, according to the evidence to be considered later on.

(2) Jerome's main argument is that James the Lord's brother was one of the Twelve, and therefore identical with James the son of Alphaeus. He grounds this assertion on a single passage in St. Paul, which I shall presently examine. Bishop Lightfoot and others have shown that it is not a necessary consequence of St. Paul's language, and that it is opposed to the distinction everywhere made in the N.T. between the Brethren of the Lord and the Twelve. Thus in Acts i. 14, after the list of the Eleven including James the son of Alphaeus, we read 'these all continued instant in prayer' σὺν γυναιξὶν καὶ Μαριὰμ τῆ μητρὶ τοῦ Ἰησοῦ καὶ τοῦς ἀδελφοῖς αὐτοῦ. It will hardly be said that they are included in the Twelve, as Mary among the women, and specially mentioned afterwards, as she is, only on account of their superior importance. If so, they would have been mentioned immediately after the Apostles; on the contrary they are placed after Mary, being joined with her, as in several other passages, because they, with her, constitute the family to which Jesus belonged. John ii. 12 we read that Jesus went down to Capernaum auròs καὶ ή μήτηρ αὐτοῦ καὶ οἱ ἀδελφοὶ καὶ οἱ μαθηταὶ αὐτοῦ· καὶ ἐκεῖ ἔμειναν οὐ πολλὰς ἡμέρας: in Matt. xii. 47 foll. 'One said to him' ίδου ή μήτηρ σου και οι άδελφοί σου έξω εστήκασιν ζητοῦντές σοι $\lambda a \lambda \hat{n} \sigma a \iota \dots \iota$ and stretching forth his hand to his disciples he saith' ίδου ή μήτηρ μου και οι άδελφοί μου σστις γαρ αν ποιήση τὸ θέλημα τοῦ Πατρός μου, τοῦ ἐν οὐρανοῖς, αὐτός μοι ἀδελφὸς καὶ $\dot{a}\delta\epsilon\lambda\dot{\phi}\dot{\eta}$ καὶ μήτηρ $\dot{\epsilon}\sigma\tau\dot{\nu}$. In the last passage there is the same strong antithesis between natural earthly ties and his duty to his Father in heaven, which we observe in the words spoken by him when found as a boy in the Temple.

Notice also that there is in this passage not only a distinction On the conmade between the brethren of Jesus and his disciples, but a read that His certain opposition is implied, which is brought out more clearly in St. Mark's narrative of the same event (iii. 21, 31-35). From the latter it appears that the reason why they of his family (oi $\pi a \rho' a \dot{v} \tau o \hat{v}$) desired to speak with him was because the rumour which had reached them of his incessant labours led them to believe that he was out of his mind. As St. Mark goes on to say (ver. 22) that the scribes accused Jesus of casting out devils through Beelzebub, and as we further read in John (x. 20, viii. 48) that many said 'He hath a devil and is mad'; it would seem, though it is not expressly stated, that these calumnious reports of his enemies had not been without effect on some members of his own family. At all events, they went out prepared κρατεῖν αὐτόν, i.e. to put him under some restraint. This narrative gives additional point to the words in Mark vi. 4, spoken with immediate reference to the unbelief of the people of Nazareth, οὐκ ἔστιν προφήτης ἄτιμος εἰ μὴ ἐντῆ πατρίδι αὐτοῦ καὶ ἐντοῖς συγγενεῦσιν αὐτοῦ καὶ ἐν τῆ οἰκία αὐτοῦ. If it were simply the disbelief of townspeople not immediately related to him, there seems no need for the addition in his own kinsfolk and in his own house."

This inference, which we naturally draw from the words of St. Mark, is confirmed by the express statement of St. John (vii. 3-5), ουδε γαρ οι άδελφοι αυτου επίστευον είς αυτόν, and by our Lord's words addressed to them (ver. 7), οὐ δύναται ὁ κόσμος μισεῖν ύμας εμε δε μισεί, ὅτι ἐγω μαρτυρω περί αὐτοῦ ὅτι τὰ ἔργα αὐτοῦ πονηρά ἐστιν. Compare this with the words spoken shortly afterwards to the disciples (xv. 19), εἰ ἐκ τοῦ κόσμου ητε, ο κόσμος αν το ίδιον εφίλει ότι δε εκ του κόσμου ουκ έστε, άλλ' έγω έξέλεξα ύμας έκ τοῦ κόσμου, διὰ τοῦτο μισεί ύμας ό κόσμος. I defer the question as to the cause and nature of the unbelief imputed to the Lord's brothers, and the cause of their subsequent conversion. I simply note here that in vii. 3 they are represented as making a distinction between themselves and the disciples, and that in vv. 5-7 they are said to be on the side of the world against Christ. I think my readers will agree that the argument derived from St. Paul's words must be one of great force if it is to overthrow the combined evidence of so many passages, all showing that Christ's brothers were not included in the Twelve.

Examination of the texts adduced on the other side.

Meaning of $\epsilon i \, \mu \dot{\eta} \, in$ Gal. i. 19.

The words on which Jerome lays stress are Gal. i. 18, 19, ανηλθον είς Ίεροσόλυμα ίστορησαι Κηφαν και επέμεινα προς αὐτὸν ἡμέρας δεκάπεντε. Ετερον δὲ τῶν ἀποστόλων οὐκ εἶδον, εἰ μη Ἰάκωβον τὸν ἀδελφὸν τοῦ Κυρίου. Bishop Lightfoot in his note discusses whether this should be translated, 'I saw no other Apostle save James, or, 'I saw no other Apostle, but only James.' He gives instances to show that $\epsilon i \mu \hat{\eta}$ may have the latter force, e.q. Luke iv. 27, πολλοί λεπροί ήσαν έν τω Ίσραηλ έπὶ Έλισαίου τοῦ προφήτου, καὶ οὐδεὶς αὐτῶν ἐκαθαρίσθη εἰ μὴ Νααμὰν ὁ Σύρος. Gal. ii. 16, οὐ δικαιοῦται ἄνθρωπος ἐξ ἔργων νόμου ἐὰν μὴ διὰ πίστεως Ίησοῦ Χριστοῦ, Αρος. xxi. 27, οὐ μὴ εἰσέλθη εἰς αὐτὴν παν κοινου και ο ποιών βδέλυγμα και ψεύδος, εί μη οί γεγραμμένοι $\vec{\epsilon} \nu \tau \hat{\phi} \beta \iota \beta \lambda i \phi \tau \hat{\eta} s \zeta \omega \hat{\eta} s$, ib. ix. 4. The peculiarity of these cases is that, whereas, according to the ordinary use, $\epsilon i \mu \hat{n}$ introduces an exception to a general statement applicable to all the members of the class to which the excepted case belongs, in the instances cited the excepted case is not included in the foregoing class. It appears to be originally a colloquial use, and is employed with comic effect in Arist. Eq. 185, &c. Thus here Naaman was not one of the many lepers in Israel; they who are written in the Book of Life are not included among those who are guilty of abomination and falsehood; faith is not included in the works of the law, but is contrasted with them as a different kind of justification. Accordingly, St. James need not be included in the preceding Apostles. Much in the same way we find $\pi \lambda \dot{\eta} \nu$ used, where we should rather have expected ἀλλά, e.g. Acts xxvii. 22, ἀποβολή γὰρ ψυχής οὐδεμία ἔσται έξ ύμῶν πλήν τοῦ πλοίου. But even if we give its usual force to $\epsilon i \mu \eta$, it will not follow that St. James was included in the Twelve, for there can be no doubt that in Gal. i. 19 $\tilde{\epsilon}\tau\epsilon\rho\rho\nu$ looks backward to $K\eta\phi\hat{a}\nu$, not forward to Ἰάκωβον. The sentence would have been complete at είδον, 'I saw Peter and none other of the Apostles.' Then it strikes St. Paul, as an afterthought, that the position of James as President of the Church at Jerusalem, was not inferior to that of the Apostles, and he adds 'unless you reckon James among them.'

That the term 'apostle' was not strictly confined to the The term Twelve appears from another passage in which James is mentioned, 1 Cor. xv. 4—7. Here it is said that Jesus after his the Twelve resurrection 'appeared to Cephas, then to the Twelve, then to above 500 brethren at once, then to James, then to all the Apostles,' where we should perhaps consider the term to include the Seventy, according to the view of Irenaeus and other early writers. At any rate there can be no doubt as to St. Paul's apostleship. Barnabas also is called an apostle (Acts xiv. 4, 14), probably also Andronicus and Junias (Rom. xvi. 7), and Silvanus (1 Thess. ii. 6).1

It seems to me that the most natural interpretation of the two passages just dealt with is that which concedes the name 'apostle' in the wider sense to St. James, but makes a distinction between him and the Twelve. We should infer the same from 1 Cor. ix. 5, 6, 'have we not a right to take about a wife that is a believer' (ἀδελφὴν γυναῖκα) ώς καὶ οἱ λοιποὶ ἀπόστολοι καὶ οἱ ἀδελφοὶ τοῦ Κυρίου καὶ Κηφᾶς; ἡ μόνος ἐγὼ καὶ Βαρνάβας οὖκ ἔχομεν έξουσίαν μη έργάζεσθαι; Here οι λοιποι ἀπόστολοι is contrasted with εγώ και Βαρνάβας: and apparently the 'brethren of the Lord' and 'Cephas' are particularized as being those who were known to make use of the liberty belonging of right to all.

If it should be argued that, where the 'brethren of the Lord' are distinguished from the Twelve, this may be spoken loosely of the majority of them, and need not be understood to apply strictly to each separate brother; that it is consistent therefore with the supposition that James, for instance, was an Apostle, provided that Simon and Jude were not Apostles; the answer is that the theory derives part of its seeming strength from the coincidence of the names of three of the brethren of the Lord and three of the Twelve Apostles. But it is impossible to suppose repeated assertions to be made respecting the brethren of the Lord, which (on this supposition) are untrue of him who was by far the best known among them. Lastly it is to be noticed that neither James nor Jude claims the title of Apostle in his Epistle, and that Jude seems to disclaim the title for himself in ver. 17, μνήσθητε τῶν ἡημάτων των προειρημένων ύπὸ των άποστόλων τοῦ Κυρίου.

(3) It has been shown that probability is strongly against a cousin of the Lord being habitually known as άδελφὸς Κυρίου, and that the evidence is overwhelming against the brothers of the Lord being included in the Twelve. Scarcely less strong is the argument against the Hieronymian view drawn from what we read of the relation of the brethren of the Lord to his mother. Though, according to this view, their own mother Mary was living at the time of the crucifixion, and though there is nothing to show that their father was not also living, yet they are never found in the company of their parents or parent, but always with the Virgin. They move with her and her divine Son to Capernaum and form one household there (John ii. 12); they take upon themselves to control and check the actions of Jesus; they go with Mary 'to take him,' when it is feared that his mind is becoming unhinged. They are referred to by the neighbours as members of his family in exactly the same terms as his mother The testimony of the more doubt as to the one relationship than they have as to the other; they have known the parents, they have known the fraterial, no children; there is in their eyes no mystery in the matter, nothing the maternal to suggest anything out of the common order of nature. It is suggested indeed that the Virgin and her sister were both widows at this time, and had agreed to form one household; but this is mere hypothesis, and is scarcely consistent with the remarks of the neighbours, who endeavour to satisfy themselves that Jesus was not entitled to speak as he had done, by calling to mind those nearest to him in blood. We read that Joseph was still alive at the time of the visit to the Temple in His twelfth year; the neighbours must surely have known whether these six or seven brothers and sisters were really Joseph's children or those of Joseph's sister-in-law. But we need not dwell further on this point, since the assumption on which the whole theory rests is untenable, as I now proceed to show.

(4) That Mary of Clopas was the sister of Mary the mother of this Salome, not Mary of the Lord, is not only most improbable in itself (for where do we Clopas, who is called by find two sisters with the same name?), but is not the most natural St. John the interpretation of St. John xix. 25, είστήκεισαν δὲ παρὰ τῷ σταυρῷ τοῦ Ἰησοῦ ἡ μήτηρ αὐτοῦ καὶ ἡ ἀδελφὴ τῆς μητρὸς αὐτοῦ, Μαρία ή τοῦ Κλωπᾶ καὶ Μαρία ή Μαγδαληνή (translated in the Peshitto. 'His mother and his mother's sister, and Mary of Cleopha and Mary Magdalene'). If we compare this verse with Mark xv. 40 and Matt. xxvii. 56, we find that, of the three women named as present in addition to the mother of Jesus, Mary Magdalene occurs in all three lists; 'Mary the mother of James and Joses' of the two synoptic Gospels is generally identified with 'Mary of Clopas'; and we then have left in Matthew 'the mother of the sons of Zebedee,' in Mark 'Salome,' and in John 'his mother's sister.' Salome is generally identified with 'the mother of the sons of Zebedee, and there seems good reason also for identifying her with 'his mother's sister' in the Fourth Gospel. It does not seem likely that St. John would omit the name of his own mother; and the indirect way in which he describes her is very similar to the way in which he refers to himself as 'the disciple whom Jesus loved.' If we are right in this supposition, it is natural that the two sisters should be paired together, and then the two other Maries, just as we have the Apostles arranged in pairs without a connecting particle in Matt. x. 3, 4. If the sons of Zebedee were so nearly related to our Lord, it helps us to understand Salome's request that they might sit on his right hand and on his left hand in his glory, as well as the commendation by our Lord of his mother to one, who was not only his best-loved disciple, but her own nephew. If, however, this interpretation is correct, if the sister of the Lord's mother is not the mother of James and Joses, but the mother of the sons of Zebedee, then the foundation-stone of the Hieronymian theory is removed, and the whole fabric topples to the ground.

aunt of Jesus.

There is no ground for the identification either of James the Little with the brother with the writer of the epistle of Jude.

(5) I take next two minor identifications, that of 'James the less' with the 'brother of the Lord,' and that of Ἰούδας Ἰακώβου, of Luke vi. 16 and Acts i. 13, with Jude the writer of the Epistle, who calls himself 'brother of James.' We have seen that Mary of the Lord, or of Τούδαs the mother of James τοῦ μικροῦ and of Joses, in Mark xv. 40, is probably the same as Mary of Clopas, and that we have no reason for inferring from the Gospels that she was related to Jesus. If so, there is an end to the supposition that James the less is James the brother of the Lord. But it is worth while to notice the mistranslation in which Jerome imagined that he found a further argument for the identification of our James with the son of Alphaeus. The comparative minor, he says, suggests two persons, viz. the two Apostles of this name. But the Greek has no comparative, simply τοῦ μικροῦ, 'the little,' which no more implies a comparison with only one person, than any other descriptive epithet, such as εὐεργέτης or φιλάδελφος. As to Ἰούδας Ἰακώβου, no instance is cited for such an omission of the word άδελφός, and we must therefore translate 'Judas son of James' with the R.V. Independently of this, if James, Judas and Simon are all sons of Alphaeus, what a strange way is this of introducing their names in the list of the Apostles, 'James of Alphaeus, Simon Zelotes, Judas of James'! Why not speak of all as 'sons of Alphaeus,' or of the two latter as 'brothers of James'? Why not speak of all as 'brethren of the Lord'? It is especially strange that, if Judas were really known as such, he should have been distinguished in John (xiv. 22) merely by a negative, 'Judas not Iscariot,' and in the other Gospels by the appellation 'Lebbaeus' or 'Thaddaeus' (Matt. x. 3, Mark iii, 18).

There is no ground for identifying Clopas and Alphaeus.

(6) Much has been made of the identification of the names Alphaeus and Clopas, and of the duality of Clopas and Cleopas (Luke xxiv. 18). It seems doubtful whether the identification of the former and the separation of the latter pair can be maintained. Bp. Lightfoot considers that 'viewing the question as one of names only, it is quite as reasonable to identify Clopas with Cleopas as with Alphaeus' (l.c., pp. 256, 267). Supposing our previous argument to be sound, the question is of no importance as to our main subject. If however we extend our inquiry beyond the limits of the N.T. it again becomes a matter of interest, because we learn from Hegesippus (about 160 A.D.) that there was a connexion of a different nature between Clopas and our Lord. His testimony, negesippus tells us that preserved by Eusebius (H. E. iv. 22), is to the effect that 'after the Clopas was martyrdom of James the Just on the same charge as the Lord, his Joseph. His paternal uncle's child Symeon, the son of Clopas, is next made the second bishop, who was put forward by all as the second in succession, being cousin of the Lord' (μετὰ τὸ μαρτυρῆσαι Ἰάκωβον τὸν δίκαιον ώς καὶ ὁ Κύριος ἐπὶ τῷ αὐτῷ λόγω, πάλιν ὁ ἐκ τοῦ θείου αὐτοῦ Συμεων ο του Κλωπα καθίσταται επίσκοπος, ον προέθεντο πάντες όντα ἀνεψιὸν τοῦ Κυρίου δεύτερον). Some have understood this to mean that Symeon and James were both sons of the Lord's reputed uncle Clopas, and thus that Symeon was the second of his cousins who was bishop of Jerusalem. But Bp. Lightfoot well remarks that, if this were meant, we must have had έτερος των έκ τοῦ $\theta \epsilon iov$, not $\dot{o} \epsilon \kappa \tau o \hat{v} \theta \epsilon iov$, and that it would have been far more natural simply to have said ὁ ἀδελφὸς αὐτοῦ. The meaning of δεύτερον is made clear from Euseb. H. E. iii. 22 των ἐπ' ᾿Αντιοχείας Εὐοδίου πρώτου καταστάντος, δεύτερος ἐν τοῖς δηλουμένοις Ίγνάτιος εγνωρίζετο. Συμεών όμοίως δεύτερος μετά τὸν τοῦ Σωτῆρος ήμων άδελφον της έν Ίεροσολύμοις έκκλησίας κατά τούτους την λειτουργίαν έγκεχειρισμένος ην, ib. iii. 32 έν & (διωγμώ) Συμεωνα τὸν τοῦ Κλωπα, ὸν δεύτερον καταστήναι της ἐν Ἱεροσολύμοις έκκλησίας επίσκοπον εδηλώσαμεν, μαρτυρίω τον βίον αναλύσαι παρειλήφαμεν. These passages are also important as showing that, while the son of Clopas is described as the cousin of Jesus, James is still described as his brother: so too Jude (ib. iii, 20). The relationship is more exactly defined in the 11th ch. of the same book, where it is said that after the death of James the surviving aposties and disciples of the Lord unanimously elected Symeon as his successor, ἀνεψιόν, ὥς γε φασί, γεγονότα τοῦ Σωτῆρος τὸν γὰρ οὖν Κλωπᾶν ἀδελφὸν τοῦ Ἰωσὴφ ὑπάρχειν Ἡγήσιππος ἱστορεῖ. If Clopas is really the same as Alphaeus, this Symeon would be brother of the Apostles James the Little and Matthew, as well as of the Joses mentioned in Mark xv. 40: but few would contend that these nephews of the reputed father of Jesus could really be known as 'the Lord's brethren.'

I have endeavoured to point out the difficulties which beset the Extreme improbability Hieronymian theory and make it in my opinion less worthy of acceptance than either of the other theories. As it seems still to mian view.

be the predominant theory in the churches of Western Christ-brother of bishop of Jerusalem, is called eousin, not brother, of the Loid.

endom, reformed and unreformed, I have thought it might be well to show by a rough numerical estimate the force of the probabilities which are really arrayed against it. This will be found in the note below.2

B.—The Epiphanian Theory.

I proceed now to examine the Epiphanian view, according to which the Lord's brothers were sons of Joseph by a former wife. This was the generally accepted view when Jerome put forward his new theory, and to a great extent it escapes the difficulties which, we have seen, attach to that theory.

force in the objections made to the Epiphanian. theory from the Hieronymian point of view.

There is no

Two unimportant objections made both to it and to the Helvidian theory from the Hieronymian point of view are: (1) that they assume the existence of two sets of cousins having two names in common, James and Joseph being found both among the sons of Alphaeus and among the Lord's brothers; and if we accept the statement of Hegesippus that Symeon was son of Clopas, and

Those who have followed the argument in the text will not, I think, regard the following estimates of the chances in favour of the several suppositions involved in the Hieronymian theory as giving an unfair representation of the case:

(a) for the use of αδελφός for cousin in the phrase αδελφός Κυρίου—one out of five (1), making 4 to 1 against it.

(b) for the brethren of the Lord being included in the Twelve—one out of ten $(\frac{1}{10})$, making 9 to 1 against it.

(c) for the supposed sons of Clopas-Alphaeus being always found in companynot with their own mother, who was certainly still living, -but with their aunt, residing with her and her Son, and taking on themselves to control the actions of the latter—one out of ten $\binom{1}{10}$, making 9 to 1 against it.

(d) for two sisters having the same name—one out of ten $\binom{1}{10}$, making 9 to 1 against it.

There are various other improbabilities, some of which have been already touched on, and others of even greater weight will appear in treating of the Epiphanian view, but I should be willing to rest the case on the four points here named, giving a resultant probability in favour of the simultaneous realisation of the four above-stated hypotheses of $\frac{1}{5 \times 10 \times 10} = \frac{1}{5000}$, making 4999 probabilities to 1 against it, that is, against the truth of the Hieronymian theory.

identify Clopas with Alphaeus, we then get a third name Symeon common to the families. This objection is based on several assumptions, one being that Mary the wife of Clopas was sister of the Virgin Mary, which has been shown to be all but incredible. But waiving this, why should it be thought improbable that three of the commonest Jewish names should be found in two sets of cousins? We have a greater variety of Christian names in ordinary use in England than there were then in Judea, but no one would think such a recurrence of names in any way remarkable or extraordinary; in fact, so far as my experience goes, the improbability is all the other way.

(2) When a certain Mary is described as 'the mother of James' we naturally assume that the James intended is the most celebrated of the name, viz. the Lord's brother. But we elsewhere find the same Mary designated as mother of Joses (Mark xv. 47), or more generally of James and Joses (Matt. xxvii. 56, Mark xv. 40), so that no stress can be laid upon this.

It appears then that the Hieronymian theory is as weak in attack as it is in defence, and that if the Epiphanian theory is to lies in its forced interbe attacked with any prospect of success, it must be from the pretation of Helvidian side, on the ground that it gives an artificial and nonnatural rendering of two passages of Scripture which we have still to consider; that it weakens the force of the narrative which we have already considered, telling how the mother of Jesus came with his brothers to take him; and gives a less natural meaning to the word 'brother.' The two passages yet to be considered are Matt. i. 24 Ίωσηφ...παρέλαβεν την γυναίκα αὐτοῦ καὶ οὐκ ἐγίνωσκεν αὐτην έως οδ έτεκεν υίον, and Luke ii. 7 καὶ έτεκεν τὸν υίον αὐτης τὸν πρωτότοκον. Reading these in connexion with those other passages which speak of the brothers and sisters of Jesus, it is hard to believe that the Evangelists meant us to understand, or indeed that it ever entered their heads that the words could be understood to mean, any thing else than that these brothers were sons of the mother and the reputed father of the Lord. It has been attempted however to prove that we need not take the passages referred to in their ordinary and natural sense. Thus Pearson, treating of the phrase $\tilde{\epsilon}\omega_s$ ov, tells us that 'the manner of Attempt to weaken the Scripture language produceth no such inference,' as that, from force of $\tilde{\epsilon}\omega_s$ ov in Matt. a limit assigned to a negative, we may imply a subsequent affirmative: and he cites the following as instances in his favour. 'When God said to Jacob "I will not leave thee until I have done that which I have spoken to thee of" (Gen. xxviii. 15), it followeth not that, when that was done, the God of Jacob left him. conclusion of Deuteronomy was written it was said of Moses "No man knoweth of his sepulchre unto this day" (Deut. xxxiv. 6), but it were a weak argument to infer from thence, that the sepulchre of Moses has been known ever since. When Samuel had delivered a severe prediction unto Saul, he "came no more to see him unto the day of his death" (1 Sam. xv. 35); but it were a strange collection to infer, that he therefore gave him a visit after he was "Michal the daughter of Saul had no child unto the day of her death (2 Sam. vi. 23); and yet it were a ridiculous stupidity to dream of any midwifery in the grave. Christ promised his presence to the Apostles "until the end of the world" (Matt. xxviii. 20); who ever made so unhappy a construction, as to infer from thence that for ever after he would be absent from them?' (Creed, p. 174).

Importance of distinguishing between the limit which negatives. which suggests future action after the limit is attained.

It is difficult to believe that a man of Pearson's ability can have been blind to the difference between two kinds of limit, the mention of one of which suggests, while the mention of the other and the limit negatives, the future occurrence of the action spoken of. If we read 'the debate was adjourned till the papers should be in the hands of the members, it as certainly implies the intention to resume the debate at a subsequent period, as the phrase 'the debate was adjourned till that day six months,' or 'till the Greek Kalends,' implies the contrary. So when it is said 'to the day of his death,' 'to the end of the world,' this is only a more vivid way of saying in saccula sacculorum. In like manner the phrase 'unto this day' implies that a certain state of things continued up to the very last moment known to the writer: the suggestion is of course that it will still continue. The remaining instance is that contained in Gen. xxviii. 15. This is a promise of continued help on the part of God until a certain end is secured. When that end is secured God is no further bound by his promise, however much the patriarch might be justified in looking for further help from his general knowledge of the character and goodness of God. To take now a case similar to that in hand: supposing we read 'Michal had no child till she left David and became the wife of Phaltiel,' we should naturally assume that after that she did have a child.

in Matt. i. 24 the limit is not one beyond which the action becomes naturally and palpably impossible: on the contrary it is just that point of time when under ordinary circumstances the action would become both possible and natural, when therefore the reader, without warning to the contrary, might naturally be expected to assume that it did actually occur. How far this assumption on the part of the reader, natural under ordinary eircumstances, becomes unnatural under the very extraordinary eircumstances of the case, will be discussed further on. I confine myself here to the argument from language.2

(3) The natural inference drawn from the use of the word The use of πρωτότοκον in Luke ii. 7 is that other brothers or sisters in Luke ii. 7 were born subsequently; otherwise why should not the word $\mu o \nu o$ Jesus was not the only γενής have been used as in Tobit iii. 15 μονογενής είμι τῷ πατρί child of his μου, Luke vii. 12, viii. 42, &c.? In Rom. viii. 29 the word is used metaphorically, but retains its natural connotation, πρωτότοκον έν πολλοίς άδελφοίς, and so in every instance of its occurrence in the N.T. It occurs many times in its literal use in the LXX, e.g. Gen. xxvii. 19, 32, xliii. 33, Deut. xxi. 15, 1 Kings xvi. 34, 1 Chron. v. 1, xxvi. 10, but, so far as I have observed, never of an only son. It is said in answer to this by Bp. Lightfoot (p. 271) that "the prominent idea conveyed by the term first-born to a Jew would be not the birth of other children, but the special consecration of this one. The typical reference in fact is foremost in the mind of St. Luke, as he himself explains it, 'Every male that openeth the womb shall be called holy to the Lord' (ii. 23)." But need we ascribe to St. Luke any other purpose, in giving this quotation from the Mosaic law, beyond the simple desire to explain how it was that Simeon was enabled to see Him, who was not only 'the glory of his people Israel,' but also 'a light to lighten the Gentiles'? No doubt the law as to the first-born is equally valid whether there are other ehildren or not; but St. Luke is not here concerned in stating the law, but in giving a narrative of domestic life, viewed retrospectively from the standpoint of accomplished facts: under these circumstances the use of the word πρωτότοκος is surely misleading, and therefore improbable, if there were no children born afterwards.¹ I think also that there are circumstances connected with one remarkable episode in our Lord's childhood, which are more easily explicable if we suppose him not to have been his mother's only Is it likely that Mary and Joseph would have been so little solicitous about an only son, and that son the promised Messiah, as to begin their homeward journey after the feast of the Passover at Jerusalem, and to travel for a whole day without taking the pains to ascertain whether he was in their company or not? If they had several younger children to attend to, we can understand that their first thoughts would have been given to the latter; otherwise is it conceivable that Mary, however complete her confidence in her eldest Son, should first have lost him from her side, and then have allowed so long a time to elapse without an effort to find him?

C.—The Helvidian Theory.

Objections to the Helvidian view, that the brethren were sons of Joseph and Mary.

There are however some difficulties which must be grappled with before we can accept the Helvidian theory as satisfactory.

(1) If the mother of Jesus had had other sons would He have commended her to the care of a disciple rather than to that of a brother? (2) Is not the behaviour of the brethren towards Jesus that of elders towards a younger? (3) The theory is opposed to the Church tradition. (4) It is abhorrent to Christian sentiment.

(1) Bp. Lightfoot regards the first objection as fatal to the theory.

If Mary had had another son, she would not have been left to the care of a disciple.

(1) Bp. Lightfoot regards the first objection as fatal to the theory. 'Is it conceivable,' he says, 'that our Lord would thus have snapped asunder the most sacred ties of natural affection?' (p. 272). The usual answer to this is that the disbelief of the Lord's brothers would naturally separate them from His mother. But as this disbelief was even then on the point of being changed into undoubting faith; and as the separation, if it ever existed, of which there is no evidence, was at any rate to be changed in a day or two into the closest union with all true followers of the Lord; and as the preparation for this change must have been long perceptible to the eye of Jesus; it seems necessary to find another way of meeting the objection, if it is to be met at all. I think however that Bp. Lightfoot goes a little too far when he speaks just below of this hypothesis requiring us to believe that the mother, though 'living in the same city' with her sons 'and joining with them in a common worship (Acts i. 14), is consigned to the care of a stranger, of whose house she becomes henceforth the inmate.' We have seen that there is reason for believing Salome to have been the sister of Mary, and John therefore her nephew; but however this may be, in any case, as her Son's dearest friend, he must have been well known to her. And if we try to picture to ourselves the circumstances of the case, it is not difficult to imagine contingencies which would make it a very natural arrangement. It is generally supposed (from 1 Cor. ix. 5) that the brothers of the Lord were married men: the usual age for marriage among the Jews was about eighteen: supposing them to have been born before the visit to the Temple of the child Jesus, they would probably have married before his Crucifixion. If then all her children were dispersed in their several homes, and if, as we naturally infer, her nephew John was unmarried and living in a house of his own, is there anything unaccountable in the Lord's mother finding a home with the beloved disciple? Could this be regarded in any way as a slight by her other sons? Must they not have felt that the busy life of a family was not suited for the quiet pondering which now more than ever would characterize their mother? and further that this communion between the Mother and the Disciple was likely to be not only a source of comfort to both, but also most profitable to the Church at large?

(2) It depends more upon the positive age, than the relative age, The Drothers of the Lord of brothers, whether the interference of a younger with an elder is act towards lim as elders. probable or improbable. When all have reached manhood and towards a have settled in their different spheres, a few years' difference in age does not count for much. It might however be thought that those who had grown up with one like Jesus, must have felt such love and reverence for him, that they could never dream of blaming or criticizing what he thought best to do. Yet we know that his mother, to whom had been vouchsafed a much fuller revelation than was possible in their case, as to the true nature of her Son, did nevertheless on more than one occasion draw upon herself his reproof for ventured interference. If we remember how little even those whom he chose out as his Apostles were able to appreciate his aims and methods up to the very end of his life, how different was their idea of the Kingdom of Heaven and the office of the Messiah from His, we shall not wonder if his younger brothers, with all their admiration for his genius and goodness, were at times puzzled and bewildered at the words that fell from his lips; if they regarded him as a self-forgetting idealist and enthusiast, wanting in knowledge of the world as it was, and needing the constant care of his more practical friends to provide him with the ordinary comforts and necessaries of life. Thus much, I think, is certain from the known facts of the case; and we need nothing more than this to explain their fear that his mind might be overstrained, and their attempt to dictate the measures he should adopt in going up to the Feast, just as his mother had attempted to dictate to him at the marriage of Cana. (3) Dealing with the argument from tradition, we must bear in mind that what we are in search of is historical fact. The accepted historical belief at any given time depends, so far as the educated minority is concerned, partly upon the critical interpretation of supposed authentic documents by contemporary scholars, such as Jerome in the fourth century, who regarded it as mere waste of time to leave the Scriptures, the fountain of truth, and follow opinionum rivulos, the fancies of later writers who had no other ground for their guesses than the Scriptures themselves (Jer. Adv. Helv. 17). But even of the educated it is true to a certain extent, as it is entirely true of the uneducated, that they take their notions of history without inquiry either from the most popular epitome or from what may be loosely called tradition. And tradition as it exists in any age will probably have some nucleus of fact, but that nucleus is so transformed by the action of the imagination, and by the thoughts and feelings of the generations which have passed since the actual occurrences of which it embalms the memory, that we cannot trust it for details. Thus, while we may fully allow the interest and importance which attach to the thoughts and feelings of Christians in former ages, yet for our present purpose it seems desirable to separate our consideration of these from our consideration of tradition, as embodying an actual recollection of fact handed down orally from father to son, or crystallized in literature at a certain stage of its progress. There is also such a thing as manufactured tradition, like that of the Ciceroni, or merely literary tradition, like that which has grown up round the scenes of many of Scott's romances. In our investigation of any so-called tradition it is of the utmost importance to be on our guard against mistaking deliberate invention of this kind for natural growth.

If we go back to the fourth century we find Jerome, the Jerome and Origen trace author of the now dominant theory, throwing scorn on the back such tradition as tradition of his day, and taunting those who considered the existed on this subject Lord's brethren to be the sons of Joseph by a former wife, as in their days 'following the ravings of the apocryphal writings, and inventing a certain Melcha or Escha (for Joseph's first wife).' Origen too (d. 253), who holds the view derided by Jerome, quotes as his authority for it the apocryphal Gospel according to Peter, written before the middle of the second century (D. of Chr. Biog. ii. p. 712), and the Protevangelium Jacobi written about the same time (Lightfoot l.c. p. 275): 'He had no natural brothers, seeing that neither was any other child born to the Virgin, nor was he himself sprung from Joseph; accordingly (those mentioned) were his brothers only in a conventional sense, being sons of Joseph by a pre-deceased wife.'2 'Some persons on the ground of tradition, viz., the Gospel according to Peter or the Book of James, say that the brothers of Jesus were Joseph's sons by a former wife to whom he was married before Mary. Those who hold this view wish to preserve the honour of Mary in virginity throughout, in order that her body chosen for so high a purpose might not be degraded to lower use after the Holy Spirit had once come upon her. . . . And I think it reasonable that as Jesus was the first-fruit of purity and chastity among men, so Mary should be among women.'3

The historical value of the Apocryphal books.

In the last passage the grounds for accepting the explanation given are two: (1) that it is contained in the Apocryphal books mentioned, (2) that it is in harmony with the sentiment of the writer. The latter we shall shortly consider under the general head which follows: the former raises the question of the historical credibility of the Apocryphal Gospels, on which I need only quote Bp. Lightfoot's words in reference to the stories of our Lord's childhood contained in them: 'these accounts, so far as they step beyond the incidents narrated in the Canonical Gospels, are pure fabrication,' but still they may fairly be used as negative evidence against the Hieronymian view for 'the fabrication would hardly have taken this form, had that view been received or even known when they were written' (l.e. p. 275).

The writers of the first four centuries are mainly Epiphanian, as the Eastern Church still is,

The remaining authorities cited in Bp. Lightfoot's catena, while they prove conclusively the truth of Bp. Pearson's statement that 'St. Jerome first invented the other solution in the kindred of Mary' (Creed, p. 175 n.), are less decisive as to the Epiphanian theory. Omitting the Apocryphal Gospels, the general result is as follows. Of pre-Hieronymian writers seven understand the brothers of the Lord as sons of Joseph by a former wife, viz. Clement of Alexandria (about 200 AD.), Origen (d. 253), Eusebius the historian (d. about 340), Hilary of Poitiers (d. 368), Ambrosiaster (about 375), Gregory Nyssen (about 370), and Epiphanius, whose treatise on the subject was written some time before 374. Jerome put forward his theory in 383, and he is followed by Augustine and the Latin Fathers generally; but Ambrose, writing in 393, still adheres to the old view, though he considers the particular relationship of little consequence. In the Eastern Church Chrysostom, who in his earlier writings favours the Epiphanian view, comes round to Jerome in the later, and Theodoret may be mentioned on the same side; but the later Greek Fathers are almost all on the side of Epiphanius; and the Greek, Syrian, and Coptic Calendars mark the distinction between James the brother of the Lord and James the son of Alphaeus by assigning a separate day to each. This distinction is also maintained, apart from any statement as to the exact relationship imp'ied by οί δὲ ταῦτα λέγοντες τὸ ἀξίωμα τῆς Μαρίας ἐν παρθενία τηρεῖν μέχρι τέλους βούλονται Για μὴ τὸ κριθὲν ἐκεῖνο σῶμα...γνῷ κοίτην ἀνδρὸς μετὰ τὸ ἐπελθεῖν ἐν αὐτῆ πνεῖμα ἄγιον ...Καὶ οἶμαι λύγον ἔχειν ἀνδρῶν μὲν καθαρότητος τῆς ἐν άγνεία ἀπαρχὴν γεγονέναι τὸν Ἰησοῦν, γυναικῶν δὲ τὴν Μαριάιι. the term 'brother,' in the Clementine Homilies and Recognitions of the second century, and the Apostolic Constitutions of the third,¹ and probably by Cyril of Jerusalem.

Hegesippus (about 160) maintains, as we have seen, that James and Jude were brothers of the Lord, and speaks of the sons of Clopas, the brother of his reputed father Joseph, as his cousins, making no mention of cousins on the mother's side.

Basil the Great (379), discussing the meaning of Matt. i. 20, allows that the perpetual virginity is not a necessary article of belief, yet adheres to it himself, 'since the lovers of Christ cannot endure to hear that the mother of God ceased to be a virgin.' ² He cites Matt. xxviii. 20 to show that $\tilde{\epsilon}\omega_{S}$ need not imply any change in the virgin's state. So $\pi\rho\omega\tau\dot{\sigma}\tau\kappa_{S}$ may be used technically of him who opens the womb, though there may be no second child. He then refers to the apoeryphal story of Zacharias being slain by the Jews because he had placed Mary in the rank of the virgins after her conception.

On the other hand Tertullian (d. 220) argues against Marcion, who had made use of the text 'Who is my mother, and who my brethren?' as showing that Christ was not really man, in the following words: at vere mater et frater ejus foris stalant Tam proximas personas foris stare, extraneis intus defixis ad sermones ejus

Tertullian however makes the brothers of the Lord sons of Mary

1 Ap. Const. iii. 6 'There were with us (the Apostles) the mother of our Lord and his sisters, also Mary Magdalene and the mother of James, and Martha and Mary sisters of Lazarus, and Salome with other women' [We gather from this that the sisters of the Lord were not the sisters of James the Little]; ib. vi. 12 ἡμεῖs οἱ δώδεκα συνελθύντες εἰς 'ἱερουσαλἡμ... ἐπεσκεπτόμεθα ἄμα Ἰακώβω τῷ τῷ τοῦ Κυρίου ἀδελφῷ τἱ γένηται; and even more distinctly in vi. 14 where after the names of the Twelve are added Ἰάκωβός τε ὁ τοῦ Κυρίου ἀδελφὸς καὶ Ἱεροσολύμων ἐπίσκοπος, καὶ Παῦλος ὁ τῶν ἐθνῶν διδάσκαλος; ib. viii. 35 'I James the brother of Christ according to the flesh, but his servant as the only begotten God, and appointed bishop of Jerusalem by the Lord Himself and the Apostles do ordain thus,' &c. On the other hand the constitution of James, son of Alphaeus, is given in viii. 23. So Euseb. in Isa. xvii. 5 δέκα καὶ τέσσαρας ποιήσει τοὺς πάντας (ἀποστόλους), ὧν δώδεκα μὲν τοὺς πρώτους ἀποστόλους είποις ὰν είναι, οὐκ ἐλάττω δὲ αὐτῶν τὴν ἀρετὴν Παῦλον καὶ αὐτὸν κλητὸν ἀπόστολον καὶ τὸν Ἰάκωβον γεγονέναι, τὸν ἀδελφὸν τοῦ Κυρίου, δε πρῶτος ἐπίσκοπος τῆς 'ἱεροσυλύμων ἐκκλησίας ὑπ' αὐτοῦ καταστῆναι τοῦ Σωτῆρος μνημονεύεται. ... merito indignatus est. Transtulit sanguinis nomina in alios quos magis proximos pro tide judicaret . . . in semet ipso docens qui patrem aut matrem aut fratres proponeret verbo Dei non esse dignum discipulum (Ad. Marc. iv. 19). Similarly, arguing from the same text against the Marcionite Apelles, he says 'the words are not incensistent with the truth of his humanity.' No one would have told him that his mother and brethren stood without, qui non certus esset habere illum matrem et fratres . . . Fratres Domini nen crediderunt in illum ... Mater acque non demonstratur adhaesisse ei, cum Martha et Maria alia în commercio ejus frequentantur. Hoc denique in loco apparet incredulitas corum (De Carne Christi 7). As Tertullian in these passages gives no hint that the brothers of Jesus are less truly related to him than his mother, so in other treatises he takes it for granted that she ceased to be a virgin after the birth of Christ (De Monogamia 8): duae nolis antistites Christianae sanctitatis occurrunt, monogamia et continentia. Et Christum quidem rirgo enica est, semel nuptura post partum,1 ('being about to defer her marriage union till after the birth of her Son,' lit. 'being about to marry first after her delivery') ut nterque titulus sanctitatis in Christi sensu dispunyeretur per matrem et virginem et univiram; and in even plainer terms (De Virg. Vel. 6), where he discusses the meaning of the salutation benedicta tu inter mulieres. 'Was she called mulier and not virgo because she was espoused? We need not at any rate suppose a prophetic reference to her future state as a married woman': non enim poterut posteriorem mulierem nominare de qua Christus nasci non habebat, id est virum passam, sed illa (illam?) quae erat praesens, quae erat virgo ('for the Angel could not be referring to the wife that was to be, for Christ was not to be born of a wife, i.e. of one who had known a husband, but he referred to her who was before him, who was a virgin').

There is no evidence of an established tradition on the subject before the end of the fourth century.

These words of Tertullian, himself strongly ascetic, which were written about the end of the second century, do not betray any consciousness that he is controverting an established tradition in favour of the perpetual virginity; nor do the words of Basil cited before suggest anything of the sort even in the fourth century: he only bears witness to a prevailing sentiment which he thinks deserves consideration. We may remember also that both Origen and Jerome make the Apocryphal Gospels responsible for the theory afterwards defended by Epiphanius. I think therefore we may conclude that, setting aside these Gospels, there was no fixed recognized tradition on the subject before the end of the fourth century, though there was a growing feeling in favour of the perpetual virginity, which took definite shape in the title ἀειπαρθένος used of Mary by Athanasius; and the apocryphal fictions were eagerly embraced as affording a support for this belief.¹

A short abstract of the argument of Epiphanius will show us Abstract of the argument the grounds on which he relied, and will also furnish an interesting ment of Epiphanius specimen of tradition in the making. It is contained in the third book of his Panarium, Haer. lxxviii. (Against the Adversaries of Mary) p. 1037 foll.

the arguin favour of the perpetual virginity of Mary.

In this age of heresy, he says, while some have ventured to propagate errors about the Trinity, others have turned their assaults against $\hat{\tau}\hat{\eta}\hat{s}$ ayias M.φlas, της δειπαρθένου. Surely her very name is enough to confute them. As Abraham is always the Friend of God, James and John always Sons of Thunder, so Mary always the Virgin. The assertion that she ever ceased to be a virgin shows a want of knowledge of Scripture and of history. For first of all it was determined by lot that she should be delivered to Joseph, a widower of eighty years, for the purpose of protection, not of marriage.2 This Joseph was brother of Clopas and son of Jacob surnamed Panther. His first wife was of the tribe of Judah and by her he had six children, the eldest Jacob, surnamed Oblias and Just, the first to whom the Lord entrusted the episcopal throne, then Joses, Simeon, Judas, Mary, and Salome as we learn from Scripture (p. 1041). Epiphanius then lays stress on the use of the word μυηστευθείσης not γαμηθείσης, and argues that a just man, such as Joseph is described to be, one too who is still honoured as a pattern of virginity, could never have regarded as his wife her who was the chosen vessel of the Holy Ghost. The Holy Family returned from Egypt when Jesus was four years old; and not long afterwards Joseph died. If he had been still alive or if Mary had had children of her own, would Jesus have entrusted her to John at the Crucifixion? And why is she called mother of John? Surely because she is μήτηρ ἀρχηγὸς τῆς παρθενίας. Nothing is said as to the Virgin's death, but it does not seem that she accompanied St. John to Ephesus. What does this silence intimate? I tremble almost to say it, but in the Apocalypse (xii. 13) I read 'the dragon persecuted the woman which brought forth the man child, and to the woman were given two wings of a great eagle, that she might fly into her place.' May not this have been fulfilled in the Holy Virgin, so that she never tasted of death? Again let us give heed to the lessons of Nature. Science tells us that the lioness can only bring forth once, and Christ is the lion of the tribe of Judah. James, the eldest son of Joseph, died in his minty-sixth year, having preserved his virginity intact, having never cut his hair or used a bath, or tasted flesh, or worn more than one tunic. He alone was allowed to enter the Holy of Holies once a year and to wear the priestly petalum, because he was a Nazarite and of kin to the priests. After other particulars borrowed from Hegesippus (except that Epiphanius puts into the mouth of Symeon, son of Clopas, the words 'Why do you stone the Just? Behold he prayeth for you,' which Hegesippus ascribes to 'a priest of the sons of Rechab') he continues 'if then the sons of Joseph were virgins and Nazarites, how much more would their father have known how to respect the purity of the Virgin? Can we conceive it possible that, after all the miracles which attended the birth of Jesus, this pious old man should have been guilty of impicty towards the sacred body έν ὧ κατωκίσθη Θεός! But why inquire into these things! Why not accept what is written and leave the rest to God? Surely you will not assert that our salvation depends on believing that Joseph did know his wife after the birth of her first-born. Had the Scripture asserted this we should have accepted it without scruple. We fully believe in the sanctity of marriage. But a prophet has no time for the cares and duties of marriage. Moses had no children after he entered on his prophetic office, and Mary was a prophet as is shown by Isa, viii, 3. Hence the daughters of Philip who prophesied were virgins, and Thecla broke off her engagement when converted by Paul.¹

But, it is said, how are we to explain such expressions as $\pi \rho i \nu \eta$ συνελθείν αὐτοὺς, and οὐκ ἔγνω αὐτην ἔως ὅτου ἐγέντησε τὸν νίὸν αὐτης τὸν πρωτότοκον. As to the latter it must be observed that it is not said τὸν πρωτότοκον αὐτης, not 'her first-born,' but 'her son, the first-born,' viz., the first-born of all creation. As to the former, what difficulty is there in the phrase οὐκ ἤδει αὐτην ! [notice the tacit substitution of ἤδει for ἔγνω]. How was Joseph to know the dignity conferred on her, until he had seen the miraculous birth! Then as to the phrase πρὶν ἡ συνελθείν, this might represent an expectation on the part of ascetic views of marriage, sider any further arguments advanced by later writers on the same side. The exaltation of virginity above marriage, of which we see traces in the New Testament itself, as in Apoc. xiv. 4, 1 Cor. vii. 1, as well as among the Essenes and Therapeutae (Josephus B.J. ii. 8, 2, Philo Fray, M. 2 p. 633, Vii. Cont. pp. 471 foll.), and against the exaggeration of which St. Paul warns Timothy (Ep. 1. iv. 3), spread rapidly both amongst heretics and orthodox Christians. Of the former, Saturninus, Marcion, the Encratites and the Montanists in the second century are named as either depreciating or actually forbidding marriage among their adherents. Of the latter, evidence may be found in Athenagoras Apol. 28 εύροις δ' αν πολλούς των παρ' ήμεν και άνδρας και γυναικας καταγηράσκοντας αγάμους $\epsilon \lambda \pi i \delta i \tau o \hat{v} \mu \hat{a} \lambda \lambda o \nu \sigma v \nu \epsilon \sigma \epsilon \sigma \theta a i \tau \hat{\omega} \Theta \epsilon \hat{\omega}$; in such language as that of Cyprian (Hab. Vir. 3) flos est ille ecclesiastici germinis... Dei imago respondens ad sanetimonium Domini, illustrior portio gregis Christi; ib. 22 quod futuri sumus, vos jum esse corpistis...cum eastae perseveratis et virgines, angelis Dei estis aequales; and in the rash act by which Origen, at the beginning of the third century, believed himself to be carrying out the words of Christ (Matt. xix. 12). The same tendency is also noticeable in the neo-Pythagoreans and neo-Platonists. By the end of the third century it began to produce its natural consequence in the institution of celibate communities and the discouragement of marriage among the clergy. In the Council of Nicaea a determined attempt was made to compel married clergy to separate from their wives, and the hermit Paphnutius, who led the opposition, only pleaded in favour of what he calls the ancient custom, which, while it forbade marriage after a man had been ordained, did not require him to leave the wife whom he had married as a layman. We cannot doubt that those who were agitating for a stricter rule would make use of the example of the Virgin, insisting on the name as implying a permanent state, and would endeavour to give an artificial strength to their cause by the addition of imaginary circumstances to the simple narrative of the Gospel.

Thus it was not enough to suppose the brethren of the Lord to be The story of the Nativity sons of Joseph by a former wife; Joseph's age must be increased so as to make it impossible for him to have had children by his under the influence of second wife, though this supposition contradicts what the upholders of this view maintain to be the very purpose of Mary's marriage, viz. to screen her from all injurious imputations. How could the marriage effect this, if the husband were above eighty years of age, as Epiphanius says, following the Apocryphal Gospels? Again, if this were the case, why should not the Evangelist have stated it simply, instead of using the cautionary phrases $\pi \rho i \nu \dot{\eta} \sigma \nu \nu \epsilon \lambda \theta \epsilon i \nu$ and οὐκ ἐγίνωσκεν αὐτὴν ἕως οὖ ἔτεκεν? But even this was not enough for the ascetic spirit. Further barriers must be raised between the contamination of matrimony and the virgin ideal.

Joseph himself becomes a type of virginity: the 'brethren' are no longer his sons, but sons of Clopas, who was either his brother by one tradition, or his wife's sister's husband by another. made the child of promise and of miracle like Isaac, though not vet exalted to the honours of the Immaculate Conception; and we see Epiphanius already feeling his way to the doctrine of her Assumption, which was accepted by Gregory of Tours in the sixth century. One other development may be noticed, as it is found in the Protecungelium c. 20, though not mentioned by Epiphanius, viz, that not only the Conception but the Birth of our Lord was miraculous; in the words of Jeremy Taylor 'He that came from his grave fast tied with a stone and signature, and into the college of the Apostles, the doors being shut...came also (as the Church piously believes) into the world so without doing violence to the virginal and pure body of his mother, that he did also leave her virginity entire.'1

Fantastic application of prophecy.

This miracle, superfluous as it is and directly opposed to the words of St. Luke (ii. 23), is yet accepted by Jerome and his followers; and it is in reference to it that Bp. Lightfoot (l.c. p. 271), thinks that too much stress has been laid by modern writers on the false asceticism of the early Church as the only cause of the dislike to the Helvidian view. He considers that this dislike is 'due quite as much to another sentiment which the Fathers fantastically expressed by a comparison between the conception and the burial of our Lord. As after death his body was placed in a sepulchre wherein never man before was laid, so it seemed fitting that the womb consecrated by His presence should not thenceforth have borne any offspring of man.' So we find Pearson (Ureed, p. 326) citing Ezek, xliv. 2 'This gate shall be shut, it shall not be opened, and no man shall enter in by it; because the Lord, the God of Israel, hath entered in by it, therefore it shall be shut' in proof of the ἀειπαρθενία. Whether this sentiment is to be regarded as something independent of the idea of the impurity of marriage or as a natural offshoot of it, which I should be rather inclined to believe, is not of much importance. The only question worth considering is: Are these sentiments so authoritative as to justify us in twisting the words of the Scripture narrative and giving to them a non-natural sense? This question I shall endeavour to answer in the next section.

(4) It is 'the tendency,' says Dr. Mill (l.c. p. 301), 'of the Christian mystery, God manifest in the flesh, when heartily received, to generate an unwillingness to believe that the womb thus divinely honoured should have given birth to other merely human progeny.' 'The sentiment of veneration for this august vessel of grace which has ever animated Christians...could not have been wanting to the highly-favoured Joseph.' 'On the impossibility of refuting these sentiments...the truly Catholic Christian will have pleasure in reposing.' So Epiphanius, Jerome, and other ancient writers speak of this as a 'pious belief,' and the same is reiterated by Hammond and Jeremy Taylor cited by Mill (p. 309). In answer to this I would say that unless we are prepared to admit all the beliefs of the mediaeval Church, we must beware of allowing too much authority to pious opinions. Is there any extreme of superstition which cannot plead a 'pious opinion' in its favour? Of course it is right in studying history, whether Danger of imputing the sacred or profane, to put ourselves in the position of the actors, to sentiment of imagine how they must have felt and acted; but this is not quite an earlier. the same thing as imagining how we ourselves should have felt and acted under their circumstances, until at least we have done our best to strip off all that differentiates the mind of one century from the mind of another. If we could arrive at the real feeling of Joseph in respect to his wife, and of Mary in respect to her Son before and after his birth, this would undoubtedly be an element of the highest importance for the determination of the question before us: but to assume that they must have felt as a monk, or nun, or celibate priest of the Middle Ages; to assume even, with Dr. Mill, that they fully understood the mystery 'God manifest in the flesh,' is not merely to make an unauthorized assumption, it is to assume what is palpably contrary to fact.

Mary and Joseph were religious Jews, espoused to one another, Jewish sentiment on as it is natural to suppose, in the belief prevalent among the Jews the subject at the time that marriage was a duty, and that a special blessing attached to a prolific union.1 They looked forward, like Simeon and Anna, to the coming of the Messiah, the prophet like unto Moses who would speak the words of God to the people, the Prince of the house of David, who would not merely judge the heathen and restore again the glories of Solomon, but would sit as a refiner and purifier of silver and purify the sons of Levi themselves, and yet one who would bear the sins of many and make intercession for the transgressors. To both it is revealed that the Messiah should be born of Mary by a miraculous conception. Joseph is told that 'his name is to be called Jesus, because he shall save his people from their sins.' Mary is told in addition that 'he shall be called the Son of the Highest, and that the Lord God shall give him the throne of his father David, and he shall reign over the house of Jacob for ever.' There is surely nothing in these words which would disclose the Christian mystery 'God manifest in the flesh.' They point to a greater Moses, or David, or Solomon, or Samuel. Mary's hymn of praise is founded on the recollection of Hannah's exultation at the fulfilment of prophecy in the birth of her son. Her mind would naturally turn to other miraculous births, to that of Isaac under the old dispensation, to that now impending in the case of her cousin Elizabeth. And as there was nothing in the announcement made to them which could enable them to realize the astounding

Christian era.

¹ Cf. Lightfoot, Coloss. p. 139, 'The Talmudic writings teem with passages implying not only the superior sanctity, but even the imperative duty of marriage. The words of Geu. i. 28 were regarded not merely as a promise, but as a command, which was binding upon all. It is a maxim of the Talmud that "Any Jew who has not a

The fact indeed is so patent, that any accumulation of examples would be superfluous, and I shall content myself with referring to Pesachim, 113 a, b, as fairly illustrating the doctrine of orthodox Judaism on this point'; ib. pp. 168, 9, 'The early disciples in the mother Church of Jerusalem show Phyrisaic but not Essene sympathies. It was altogether within the sphere of orthodox Judaism that the Jewish element in the Christian brotherhood found its scope.' Cf. also C. Taylor, Lectures on the Diducke, pp. 86-88.

Ps. xvii. 35 και αὐτὸς βασιλεὺς δίκαιος και διδακτὸς ὑπὸ Θεοῦ ἐπ' αὐτούς και οὐκ ἔστιν αδικία εν ταις ήμέραις αὐτοῦ εν μέσφ αὐτῶν, ὕτι πάντες ἄγιοι και βασιλεὺς αὐτῶν Χριστὸς Κύριος (al. Κύριου). But (p. lv.) 'though endowed with divine gifts, he is nothing more than man. Neither of supernatural birth, nor of pre-existence in the bosom of God, or among the angels of God, do we find any trace.' He is an idealized Solomon. Again [p. lxii.) they remark, 'it is a matter not without interest and importance that our Psalms, which stand closest of all extant Jewish religious poetry to the Christian era, are so conspicuously similar to the songs contained in the opening chapters of St. Luke's Gospel. The editors appear even to suggest the possibility that the so-called Psalms of Solomon may have been written by the author of the Nanc dimittis (p. lix. n.). In Justin's dialogue (§ 49) Trypho asserts that the general belief of the Jews is that Christ would be merely man.

truth that he who was to be born of Mary was very God of very God, so there is nothing in the subsequent life of Mary which would lead us to believe that she, any more than his Apostles, had realized it before his Resurrection. On the contrary, it is plain that such a belief fully realized would have made it impossible for her to fulfil, I do not say her duties towards her husband, but her duties towards the Lord himself during his infancy and childhood. It is hard enough even now to hold together the ideas of the Humanity and Divinity of Christ without doing violence to either; but to those who knew him in the flesh we may safely say it was impossible until the Comforter had come and revealed it unto them. As to what should be the relations between the husband and wife after the birth of the promised Child there is one thing we may be sure of, viz. that these would be determined not by personal considerations, but either by immediate inspiration, as the journey to Egypt and other events had been, or, in the absence of this, by the one desire to do what they believed to be best for the bringing up of the Child entrusted to them. We can imagine their feeling it to be a duty to abstain from bringing other children into the world, in order that they might devote themselves more exclusively to the nurture and training of Jesus. On the other hand, the greatest prophets and saints had not been brought up in solitude. Moses, Samuel and David had had brothers and sisters. It might be God's will that the Messiah should experience in this, as in other things, the common lot of man. Whichever way the Divine guidance might lead them, we may be sure that the response of Mary would be still as before, 'Behold the handmaid of the Lord, be it unto me according to thy word.'

Even if the language of the Gospels had been entirely neutral There is no on this matter, it would surely have been a piece of high presumption on our part to assume that God's Providence must their part always follow the lines suggested by our notions of what is justify us in seemly; but when every conceivable barrier has been placed vesting the plain seemly; but when every conceivable barrier has been placed plain in the way of this interpretation by the frequent mention of scripture. brothers of the Lord, living with his mother and in constant attendance upon her; when He is called her first-born son, and when St. Matthew goes into what we might have been inclined to think almost unnecessary detail in fixing a limit to the separation between husband and wife; can we characterize it otherwise than as a contumacious setting up of an artificial tradition above the written Word, if we insist upon it that 'brother' must mean, not brother, but either cousin or one who is no blood-relation at all; that 'first-born' does not imply other children subsequently born; that the limit fixed to separation does not imply subsequent union?

Result of the discussion.

The conclusion then, to which our discussion leads, is that James the Lord's brother was son of Joseph and Mary, brought up with Jesus until hiseighteenth year at any rate, not one of the Twelve, not even a disciple till the very end of our Saviour's life, but convinced, as it would seem, by a special appearance to him of the risen Lord, and joining the company of the disciples before the day of Pente-After the martyrdom of Stephen, when the Apostles were scattered from Jerusalem, we find James holding a position of authority in the Church of Jerusalem (Gal. i. 18, 19, Acts xii. 17), which, as we may probably conjecture, had been conceded to him as brother of the Lord, and retaining this position till the end of his life.

Further particulars are supplied by Josephus, Hegesippus, the of the life of Gospel according to the Hebrews, and other Apocryphal books, including in these the Clementine Homilies and Recognitions. We have to be on our guard against the Ebionite tendencies of some of these writers, and their delight in puerile marvels and ascetic practices, but we may perhaps accept the general outline as correct, since St. James occupied a prominent position, and the facts were for the most part patent to all the world, in marked contrast with the circumstances of the infancy and childhood of our Lord.

The appearance of the Lord to James after the resurrection as narrated in the Gospel according to the Hebrews.

The Gospel according to the Hebrews, which Bp. Lightfoot speaks of as 'one of the earliest and most respectable of the apocryphal narratives' (Gal. p. 274), is quoted by Jerome (De Vir. Illustr. 2) to the following effect: The gospel known as that according to the Hebrews, which I have translated into Greek and Latin, and which is often referred to by Origen, tells us that the Lord after his resurrection appeared to James, who had sworn that he would not eat bread from the hour in which he had drunk the cup of the Lord till he saw him risen from the dead. Jesus therefore 'took bread and blessed and brake it and gave it to James the

Just, and said to him, My brother, eat thy bread, for the Son of Man has risen from the dead.' 1

It will be seen from the note that there are other versions of the story, and that in these the vow is said to have been made after the death of Christ. It is easy to see how a confusion might have arisen if James, whether having heard from others or himself having witnessed the events of the Last Supper, had shaped his vow after the Lord's own words 'I will not drink henceforth of the fruit of the vine, till the kingdom of God shall come.' There is, I think, a ring of genuineness about the narrative. Whereas we usually find in the Apocryphal Gospels some real incident of our Lord's life smothered in a parasitic growth of puerilities and trivialities, here there is an originality and simplicity which is not unworthy of the genuine Gospels themselves.

Hegesippus on James. I pass on now to Hegesippus, who is quoted to the following effect in Euseb. II.E. ii. 23:

The charge of the Church then (after the Ascension) devolved on James the brother of the Lord in concert with the Apostles. He is distinguished from the others of the same name by the title 'Just' (righteous) which has been applied to him from the first. He was holy from his mother's womb, drank no wine or strong drink, nor ate animal food: no razor came on his head, nor did he anoint himself with oil, or use the bath. To him alone was it permitted to enter into the Holy Place, for he wore no woollen, but only linen. And alone he would go into the temple, where he used to be found on his knees, asking forgiveness for the people, so that his knees became hard like a camel's because he was ever upon them worshipping God and asking forgiveness for the people. Accordingly through his exceeding righteousness he was called righteous ('Just') and 'Oblias' which being interpreted is 'the defence of the people' and 'righteousness,' as the prophets declared of him.1 Some of the seven sects, which I have mentioned, inquired of him, 'What is the door of Jesus (τίς ή θύρα του Ἰησου)?'2 And he said that he was the Saviour, whereupon some believed that Jesus is the Christ. Now the forementioned sects did not believe in the resurrection or in the coming of one to recompense each man according to his works. But as many as did believe, believed through James. So when many of the rulers believed, there was a disturbance among the Jews and the Scribes and the Pharisees, saying that there was a danger that all the people would look to Jesus as the Christ. They came together therefore and said to James 'We pray thee, restrain the people, for they have gone astray in regard to Jesus thinking him to be the Christ. We pray thee to persuade all that have come to the Passover about Jesus. For we all listen to thee. For we and all the people bear witness that thou art just, and hast no respect of persons. Do thou therefore stand on the pinnacle of the temple, so that thou mayest be conspicuous and thy words may be well heard by all the people, and persuade them not to go astray about Jesus. For all the tribes have come together with the Gentiles also on account of the Passover.' Then the forementioned Scribes and Pharisees set James on the pinnacle of the temple and cried to him 'O thou just one to whom we are all bound to listen, since the people are going astray after Jesus who was crucified, tell us what is the door of Jesus.' And he answered with a loud voice 'Why do you ask me concerning Jesus the Son of Man ! He is both seated in Heaven on the right hand of Power, and will come on the clouds of heaven.' And when many were convinced and gave glory at the witness of James, and cried 'Hosanna to the Son of David, the same Scribes and Pharisces said to each other 'We have done ill in bringing forward such a testimony to Jesus, but let us go up and cast him down that they may fear to believe him.' And they cried out saying 'Oh, oh, even the just has gone astray' and they fulfilled that which is written in Isaiah 'Let us take away the just, for he is not for our purpose; wherefore they shall eat the fruits of their deeds.' So they went up and they cast down James the Just, and said to one another 'let us stone James the Just.' And they began to stone him, since he was not killed by the fall; but he turned round and knelt down saying 'O Lord God my Father, I beseech thee, forgive them, for they know not what they do.' While they were thus stoning him one of the priests of the sons of Rechab, of whom Jeremiah the prophet testifies, cried out 'Stop! What do ye! The Just is praying for you.' And one of them who was a fuller smote the head of the Just one with his club. And so he bore his witness. And they buried him on the spot, and his pillar still remains by the side of the Temple (with the inscription),1 'He hath been a true witness both to Jews and Greeks that Jesus is the Christ.' And immediately Vespasian commenced the siege.

The brief account given by Josephus (Ant. Jud. xx. 9. 1) of the death of James exhibits some important divergences from that of Hegesippus.

During the interval between the death of Festus (probably in the year 62) A.D.) and the arrival of his successor Albinus, the high priest Ananus the his death by younger, being of rash and daring spirit and inclined like the Sadducees in general to extreme severity in punishing, brought to trial James, the brother of Jesus who is called the Christ, and some others before the court of the Sanhedrin, and having charged them with breaking the laws, delivered them over to be stoned. Josephus adds that the better class of citizens and those who were versed in the laws were indignant at this and made complaints both to King Agrippa and to Albinus, on the ground that Ananus had no right to summon the Sanhedrin without the consent of the procurator; and that Agrippa in consequence removed him from the high priesthood.²

Origen (Cels. i. p. 35 Spencer) and Eusebius (H.E. ii. 23) also cite Josephus as ascribing the miseries of the siege to the divine vengeance for the murder of James the Just; but this does not occur in his extant writings.

Bishop Lightfoot's comments on the preceding (l.c. pp. 366 and 330) are worth quoting.³ Of the account given by Josephus he says: 'It is probable in itself, which the account in Hegesippus is not, and is such as Josephus might be expected to write, if he touched on the matter at all. His stolid silence about Christianity

1 This seems the force of the Greek έτι αὐτοῦ ἡ στήλη μένει παρὰ τῷ ναῷ· μάρτυς οδτος αληθής 'Ιουδαίοις τε και Ελλησιν οδτος γεγένηται κ.τ.λ. Wieseler in the JB. f. deutsche Theologie 1878, pp. 99 fell., understands στήλη of a cenotaph, consisting of a broken pillar with inscription, erected by later Christians close to the temple of Jupiter Capitolinus, which was built by Hadrian on the site of the Jewish Temple. Jerome (De Vir. Ill. 2) renders $\sigma\tau\eta\lambda\eta$ by titulus.

² Schürer (Jewish People, vol. ii. p. 186 foll. Eng. Tr.) gives what to me appears a very singular reason for rejecting this date. The passage, he says, has probably suffered from Christian interpolation, since Origen read it differently from our text, as agreeing with Hegesippus in bringing the death of James into close relation with the fall of Jerusalem. But if there were such interpolation, its object must surely have been to magnify the importance of James' martyrdom and make it the immediate cause of God's anger shown in the destruction of the guilty city. It is plain therefore that the inconsistent date (62 A.D.) cannot have formed a part of the interpolation. Jerome l.c. says that Clem. Al., in his Hypot. bk. vii., gave the same date as Josephus. In Ant. xx. 9. 6 Josephus assigns a different cause for the fall of Jerusalem, viz. the presumption of the Levites in wearing the dress of the elsewhere cannot be owing to ignorance, for a sect which had been singled out for years before he wrote, as a mark for imperial vengeance at Rome, must have been only too well known in Judaea. On the other hand, if the passage had been a Christian interpolation, the notice of James would have been more laudatory, as is actually the case in the spurious addition read by Origen and Eusebius.' Of Hegesippus he says: 'His account presents some striking resemblances with the portion of the Clementine Recognitions conjectured to be taken from the Ebionite 'Aνaβaθμοὶ Ἰακώβου (so called as describing the ascents of James up the temple stairs, whence he harangued the people); and we may hazard the conjecture that the story of the martyrdom, to which Hegesippus is indebted, was the grand finale of these "Ascents." The Recognitions record how James refuted the Jewish sects; Hegesippus makes the conversion of certain of these sects the starting-point of the persecution which led to his martyrdom. the Recognitions he is thrown down the flight of steps and left as dead by his persecutors, but is taken up alive by the brethren: in Hegesippus he is hurled from the still loftier station, and this time his death is made sure.' 'There is much in the account which cannot be true: the assigning to him a privilege which was confined to the high priest alone is plainly false; such an imagination could only have arisen in a generation which knew nothing of the temple services. Moreover the account of his testimony and death not only contradicts the brief contemporary notice of Josephus, but is so full of high improbabilities that it must throw discredit on the whole context. Still it is possible that James may have been a Nazarite, may have been a strict ascetic.' Perhaps it may seem even more incredible that the Jews could have been in doubt as to the belief of him who had been the most prominent member of the Church at Jerusalem for twenty years or more, or could have imagined that one of such firm, unbending character, the very opposite of a Cranmer, could be induced to deny his faith before the people.

Position assigned to Junes in the Clementine Homilies James sumus as one Junes in the whole Church, as is shown by the commencement of the letter from the sumulation of the su Clement, Κλήμης Ίακώβω τῷ κυρίω καὶ ἐπισκόπων ἐπισκόπω διέποντι δὲ τὴν <ἐν> Ἱερουσαλὴμ ἁγίαν Ἑβραίων ἐκκλησίαν καὶ τὰς πανταχή Θεού προνοία ίδρυθείσας καλώς κ.τ.λ.

What do we gather from all this with regard to the life and character of James the Just, the son of that Joseph of whom also it is recorded that he was 'a just man'? The word 'just' implies one character of who not only observes but loves the law, and we may be sure that the reverence for the Jewish law, which shows itself in our Epistle, was learnt in the well-ordered home of Nazareth. There, too, he may His training have acquired, with the full sanction of his parents, who would gladly education. devote the eldest-born of Joseph in such marked way to the future service of God and his Messiah, those strict ascetic habits which tradition ascribes to him. But the constant intercourse with Him who was full of grace and truth, in childhood as in manhood, must have prepared James to find in the Ten Commandments no mere outward regulations, but an inner law of liberty and love written in the heart. That deep interest in the mysteries of the kingdom, that earnest search after truth which led the child Jesus to remain behind in the temple, both listening to the doctors and asking them questions, must surely have had its effect upon his brother. Whatever means of instruction were within reach of the home at Nazareth would, we may feel certain, have been eagerly taken advantage of by all its inmates. While accepting, therefore, the view which seems to be best supported, that Jesus and his brothers usually spoke Aramaic, we are surely not bound to suppose that with towns like Sepphoris and Tiberias in their immediate vicinity, with Ptolemais, Scythopolis, and Gadara at no great distance, they remained ignorant of Greek. In the eyes of the Scribes they might 'never have learnt letters,' since they had not attended the rabbinical schools at Jerusalem; but the ordinary education of Jewish children and the Sabbath readings in the synagogue would give sufficient start to enable any intelligent boy to carry on his studies for himself; while the example of Solomon and the teaching of the so-called 'sapiential' books, with which the writer of our Epistle was familiarly acquainted, held up the pursuit of knowledge and wisdom as the highest duty of man.² Not many years before, four of the most accomplished literary men of the time were

The question whether our Epistle was originally written in Greek will be considered further on; but these considerations may perhaps lead us to the conclusion that it was not more impossible for a peasant of Galilee to learn to write good Greek, than for one who had been brought up as a Welsh peasant to learn to write good English, or for a Breton to write good French; far more likely, we might think, than that a clever Hindoo should, as so many have done, make himself familiar with the best English authors, and write a good English style. Connected with this is the question, as to which something will be said in a future chapter, whether there are any indications of acquaintance with Greek poets and philosophers on the part of St. James, and possibly even of our Lord Himself.

Character-

The use of figurative speech.

There are other characteristics of our Epistle which find their best explanation in the supposition that James was the son of Joseph and Mary. The use of parables was common among Jewish teachers, and especially common in Galilee,2 but it was carried to an unusual extent by our Lord, both in his preaching to the multitude, of which it is said 'without a parable spake he not unto them' (Matt. xiii. 34), and even in his ordinary conversation, which constantly ran into a parabolic or figurative form, to the great bewilderment of his disciples, as when he bid them 'beware of the leaven of the Pharisees' (Matt. xvi. 6, cf. John xvi. 29, Luke viii. 10). One distinctive feature of our Lord's use of parables is that there is nothing forced or artificial either in the figure or in the application: natural phenomena and the varied circumstances of human life are watched with an observant eye and a sympathetic and loving imagination, and the spiritual analogies which they suggest are seen to flow naturally from them. And we may be sure

It will suffice to refer here to the more general barmony between the two as to the spiritual view of the Law (James i. 25, ii. 8, 12, 13, Matt. v. 17-44), the blessings of adversity (James i. 2, 3, 12, ii. 5, v. 7, 8, 11, Matt. v. 3-12), the dangers and the uncertainty of wealth (James i. 10, 11, ii. 6, 7, iv. 4, 6, 13-16, v. 1-6, Matt. vi. 19-21, 24-34), the futility of a mere profession of religion (James i. 26, 27, Matt. vi. 1-7), the contrast between saying and doing (James i. 22-25, ii. 14-26, iii. 13, 18, Matt. vii. 15-27), the true nature of prayer (James i. 5-8, iv. 3, v. 13-18, Matt. vi. 6-13), the incompatibility between the love of the world and the love of God (James ii. 5, iii. 6, iv. 4-8, Matt. vi. 24), the need to forgive others if we would be forgiven ourselves (James ii. 12, 13, Matt. vi. 14, 15), the tree known by its fruits (James iii. 11, 12, Matt. vii. 16-20), the interdiction of oaths (James v. 12, Matt. v. 34-37), and of censoriousness (James iv. 11, 12, Matt. vii. 1-5), the praise of singleness of aim (James i. 8, iv. 8, Matt. vi. 22, 23). It is to be noticed that, close as is the connexion of sentiment and even of language in many of these passages, it never amounts to actual quotation. It is like the reminiscence of thoughts often uttered by the original speaker and sinking into the heart of the hearer, who reproduces them in his own manner. And the Sermon on the Mount is made up of what may be called the commonplaces of Christ's teaching, the fundamental ideas with which he commenced his ministry.

But these reminiscences are not confined to the Sermon on Reministhe Mount, or to our Lord's words as reported by St. Matthew. othersayings Thus the opposition between faith and wavering $(\delta \iota \alpha \kappa \rho i \nu \epsilon \sigma \theta a \iota)$ the Gospels; which appears in James i. 6, ii. 4 is found also in Matt. xxi. 21, Mark xi. 23, 24; the royal law of James ii. 8 is the same of which it is said in Matt. xxii. 39 that on it and its companion law, which enjoins love to God, 'hang all the law and the prophets'; the desire to be called Rabbi is condemned alike in James iii. and Matt. xxiii. 8–12; the dangers of hasty speaking are pointed out in James iii. 2 and in Matt. xii. 37; the Judge 'standeth before the door' in James v. 9, 'he is nigh even at the doors' in Matt. xxiv. 33, Mark xiii. 29; the woes denounced against the prosperous and self-confident in James iv. 9, v. 1 are also found in Luke vi. 24, 25; the light, and the truth, and the freedom inspired by the truth, of which so much is said in the discourses reported by St. John, are recalled to us in James i. 17, 18, 25; and there are many other similar parallels which will suggest themselves to the attentive reader.

also of unrecorded sayings,

The thought naturally suggests itself, If St. James in his short Epistle has preserved so much of the teaching of our Lord as recorded in the Gospels-more, it has been said, than is contained in all the other Epistles put together—is it not probable that he may have also preserved savings of our Lord not recorded in the Gospels? Dr. A. Resch, in his collection of such unrecorded sayings,1 includes several verses from our Epistle which are mentioned in my note on i. 12: 'Blessed is the man that endureth temptation: for when he hath been approved he shall receive the crown of life, which he promised to them that love him.' This is repeated in nearly the same words in ii. 5, 'Did not God choose them that are poor to the world to be rich in faith and heirs of the kingdom which he promised to them that love him?' and in 2 Tim. iv. 8, I Pet. v. 4, Apoc. ii. 10. Beyond this passage, however, I am not satisfied that any of those quoted by Resch are certainly to be included in the Agrapha, though it can hardly be doubted that there must be other echoes of Christ's words in the Epistle, which we are now unable to identify, as they do not occur in the Gospels and are not expressly ascribed to Him either by St. James or by any early writer. Dr. Resch seems to regard the frequency of quotation by subsequent writers as a proof that the passage was originally uttered by Christ, but is not this to assume that it was impossible for a text from St. James to get into general circulation?

Leaving this subordinate point, the facts we have been consider-rossible causes of the ing are certainly confirmatory of the belief that St. James was unbelief of really our Lord's brother, and not only so, but that he grew up under his Brother's influence, and that his mind was deeply imbued with his Brother's teaching. How then are we to explain the fact that at a later period 'he did not believe on him'?

I have given what seems to me the general explanation on p. xxiii. foll., but, after reviewing the particular points in which we have definite proof of agreement from the Epistle written by St. James long after he had enrolled himself among the disciples, we may perhaps gather from its silence a confirmation of what we might have suspected on general grounds, that one of his character of mind would find a difficulty in accepting some of the utterances of Christ. 'Before Abraham was, I am,' 'Except ye eat the flesh of the Son of Man and drink his blood, ye have no life in you,'these must have been 'hard sayings' to the brother of Jesus even more than to strangers. It is highly probable that his faith may have been shaken by the absence of any sign from heaven to announce the inauguration of the temporal reign of the Messiah. We can imagine also that he may have found a stumbling-block in our Lord's severity towards the religious leaders of the time and his tenderness shown to publicans and sinners, so unlike the Psalmist's declaration 'I will not know a wicked person,' 'I hate them with a perfect hatred.' This state of mind, while perhaps not incompatible with the belief in Christ's mission as a preacher of righteousness, and a willingness to accept him as the anointed King of the Jewish people, might easily lead to an anxious solicitude as to his sanity, and the prudence of the measures he took for extending the number of his adherents. Yet underneath this anxiety there must have always been on the part of the brothers an intense love and reverence for Jesus, a suspicion that, after all, if it were only practicable, His course was a nobler, simpler course than that which they themselves suggested; just as the friends of Socrates felt when he refused to follow their counsel and escape from prison. I do not quite understand Bp. Lightfoot's saying that the circumstances of the Crucifixion were such as 'to confirm rather than dissipate the former unbelief.' If Crito and the other friends of Socrates felt that his death had added a crown of glory to his life, and raised affection into all but worship; how much more must this have been the case with the friends of Jesus, when according to his word 'the corn of wheat had fallen into the ground and died,' and they could look back on that life of pure self-sacrifice, that high mysterious perfection of which they had all along been dimly conscious, and remember how its sorrows had been increased by the lack of sympathy on the part of those who should have been the nearest and the dearest. How natural that a brother standing beneath the Cross, having heard of the words spoken at the Last Supper, should then at last have thrown in his lot with Jesus and resolved, whether in despairing remorse or with some faint dawning of believing hope, 'I too will no more eat bread nor drink wine till the kingdom of God shall come!' How natural, also, that one of the earliest appearances of the Risen Lord should have been made to his repentant brother, and that that brother should from that day forth have united himself to the company of the Apostles, and been chosen by them to preside over the church in Jerusalem, while they proceeded to carry out their Master's last charge, to preach the Gospel to every nation!1

On the External Evidence for the Authenticity of the Epistle

A. Direct Evidence. Catalogues, &c.1

I HAVE endeavoured to show that the general tone and character of the Epistle are just such as we should expect from James the Lord's brother, as he is described to us in the New Testament. remains now to exhibit the external evidence for its authenticity. We will take, as our starting-point in the investigation, the wellknown passage in which Eusebius distinguishes between the disputed (ἀντιλεγόμενα) and the undisputed (ὁμολογούμενα) books which made up 'the New Testament' and were publicly read in Church at the time when he wrote (Lightfoot, in D. of Ch. Biog. ii. p. 323, gives 314 A.D. as the date of the earlier books of the H. E.). Together they contain all the books included in our present Canon and no others, those which were 'disputed, though generally known,' being the Epistle which goes under the name of James (των δ' αντιλεγομένων, γνωρίμων δ' οὖν ὅμως τοῖς πολλοίς, ή λεγομένη Ἰακώβου φέρεται) and that of Jude as well as the second of Peter and the so-called second and third of John, 'whether they really belong to the Evangelist or possibly to another of the same name.' The Apocalypse of St. John he had before doubtfully classed among the undisputed, but questions whether it should not rather be classed with the spurious, like the Acts of Paul and the Revelation of Peter (H. E. iii. 25). Elsewhere, speaking more particularly of our Epistle, he says, 'The first of the Epistles styled Catholic is said to be by James the Lord's brother. But I must remark that it is held by some to be spurious. Certainly not many old writers have mentioned it, as neither have they the Epistle of Jude, which is also one of the seven so-called Catholic Epistles' (ib. ii. 23). His own practice, however, betrays no suspicion of its genuineness, as in one passage he quotes James iv. 11 as Scripture (Comm. in Psalm. p. 648 Montf.), in another quotes James v. 13 as spoken by the holy Apostle (ib. p. 247).

The doubt as to the canonicity of the Epistle in early times is sufficiently shown by its omission from some of the early versions and catalogues of Sacred Books. Thus it is omitted from the earliest extant catalogue, contained in what is known as the Muratorian Fragment, of which Bp. Westcott says that it may be regarded as 'a summary of the opinion of the Western Church on the Canon shortly after the middle of the second century.' 1 Of the disputed books this contains two Epistles of St. John, the Apocalypse, and Jude, omitting Hebrews, James, and Peter 1, 2. It has been suggested, however, that there is a corruption in the text, where it now speaks of the Apocalypse of Peter (Apocalapse etiam Johannis et Petri tantum recipimus quam quidam ex nostris legi in ecclesia nolunt), and that the original Greek may have been something of this sort: καὶ ἡ ἀποκάλυψις δὲ Ἰωάννου καὶ Πέτρου [ἐπιστολὴ μία, ἡν] μόνην ἀποδεχόμεθα· [ἔστι δὲ καὶ έτέρα] ήν τινες των ήμετέρων αναγινώσκεσθαι εν εκκλησία οὐ θέλουσιν. Bp. Westcott remarks that the canon of the old Latin version used by Tertullian corresponds with the Muratorian in omitting the Epistle of St. James, the second of St. Peter, and Hebrews.² The Canon Mommsenianus, first published by Th. Mommsen in 1886 from a MS. of the tenth century, containing the Liber Generationis attributed to Hippolytus, appears to belong to the year 359 A.D., and to have been written in Africa.3 It contains all our canonical books with the exception of James, Jude, and Hebrews; but the mention of the three Epistles of St. John and the two of Peter is followed by the words una sola, apparently a correction by an early reader. On the other hand, the old Syriac version (Peshitto)² contains all the books of our present Canon excepting the Apocalypse, the second of Peter, and the second and third of John. Origen (Hom. in Jos. vii. 1) recognizes all our books, and the catalogue contained in the Catechism of Cyril of Jerusalem (348 A.D.) includes all but the Apocalypse, with an urgent warning against the use of any other books. With him agrees Gregory of Nazianzus writing about the same time, who ends his metrical catalogue with the words πάσας ἔχεις. Εἴ τις δὲ τούτων ἐκτός, οὐκ ἐν γνησίοις. Athanasius, in his 39th Festal Letter, dated 367 A.D., gives precisely our present Canon, concluding with the words èv τούτοις μόνοις τὸ τῆς εὐσεβείας διδασκαλεῖον εὐαγγελίζεται. μηδεὶς τούτοις ἐπιβαλλέτω, μηδὲ τούτων ἀφαιρείσθω τι. Amphilochius, bishop of Iconium, speaks less confidently in a metrical catalogue (about 380 A.D.), τινές δὲ φασὶ τὴν πρὸς Ἑβραίους νόθον, οὐκ εὖ λέγοντες· γνησία γὰρ ἡ χάρις. εἶεν· τί λοιπόν; καθολικῶν έπιστολών τινές μεν έπτα φασίν, οι δε τρείς μόνας χρήναι δέχεσθαι, την Ίακώβου μίαν, μίαν δὲ Πέτρου, την τ' Ἰωάννου μίαν, τινές δὲ τὰς τρεῖς καὶ πρὸς αὐταῖς τὰς δύο Πέτρου δέχονται τὴν Ἰουδά δ' έβδόμην την δ' 'Αποκάλυψιν την 'Ιωάννου πάλιν τινές μέν έγκρίνουσιν, οί πλείους δέ γε νόθον λέγουσιν. Epiphanius, bishop of Salamis in Cyprus, who died about 403 A.D., gives 'a canon of the N.T. exactly coinciding with our own' (adv. Haeres, lxxvi. 5). On the other hand we are told that our Epistle was rejected by Theodore of Mopsuestia (d. 429).3

Towards the end of the fourth century Jerome (representing the views of the Church of Rome) and Augustine (representing the Church of Carthage) pronounced in favour of our present Canon. The judgment of the former is given in the Vulgate and in the catalogue contained in his epistle Ad Paulinum liii. 8; elsewhere speaking of James he says (Vir. Ill. 2) Jacobus qui appellatur frater Domini...unam tantum scripsit epistulam, quae de septem Catholicis est, quae et ipsa ab alio quodam sub nomine ejus note una sola implying that the MS. named only one Epistle in each case.

This has usually been ascribed to the beginning of the second century, but from the absence of references to the Catholic Epistles in the Doctrine of Addai and the Homilies of Aphraates it has been argued that these Epistles were not included in the earliest Syrian Canon. See Stud. Bibl. iii. p. 245, Class. Rev. iii. 456 foll.

edita asseritur, liect paulatim tempore procedente obtinuerit auctoritatem. Augustine (De Doctrina Christiana, ii. 12), after giving a complete list of the sacred books, adds in his omnibus libris timente Deum et pictute mansueli quaerunt voluntatem Dei. He took part in the third Council of Carthage (397 A.D.), where our present Canon of Scripture received its first undoubted synodical ratification; though this was not binding on the Eastern Church till it was sanctioned by the Trullan or Quinisext Council of 692 A.D. It will have been observed that, while the Churches of Rome and Carthage long doubted the canonicity of the Epistle of St. James, it was acknowledged from a very early period by the Churches of Jerusalem and (probably) of Syria, and is included in the catalogues of Sacred Books which have come down to us from the Churches of Egypt and Asia Minor. The difference is easily explained from the fact that the Epistle was probably written at Jerusalem and addressed to the Jews of the Eastern Dispersion; it did not profess to be written by an Apostle or to be addressed to Gentile churches, and it seemed to contradict the teaching of the great Apostle to the Gentiles.

B. Indirect Evidence. Quotations and Allusions.

Thus far I have confined myself to the evidence as to the canonicity of our Epistle, which is to be found in catalogues more or less formal; but the casual references which occur in early writers are of no less importance and interest as bearing on the question (1) of its date, and (2) of the authority attaching to it, as proceeding from an inspired writer, if not an Apostle, yet one whose words were no less weighty than those of an Apostle. Most of the references occur without any mark of citation; and in some cases it may be thought that the resemblance to St. James is merely accidental; but if I do not deceive myself, the general result is to show that our Epistle was more widely known during the first three centuries than has been commonly supposed. It is a remarkable fact that our earliest witnesses belong to the Church which was one of the latest to recognize the Epistle as canonical, viz. the Church of Rome. Zahn explains this from the preponderatingly Jewish character of that Church during the first century of its existence (Neut. Kan. 1, p. 963). In proportion as the Gentile element in the Church increased, the Judaistic epistle fell into the background. A parallel case is that of the Epistle to the Hebrews, which Clement seems to have known by heart, but which, like the Epistle of James, is omitted in the Muratorian Canon.

Clement of Rome, Epistle to the Corinthians. A.D. 95. The fact that Clement balances the teaching of St. Paul by that of St. James is sufficient proof of the authority he ascribed to the latter, see below on c. 33.¹

Thus Abraham, whom Clement (c. 10 and 17) after St. James (ii. 23) speaks of as δ φίλος (τοῦ Θεοῦ) προσαγορευθείς, is rewarded neither for faith alone, nor works alone, but for faith combined with righteousness and truth (c. 31), with obedience and hospitality (c. 10). The Didaché is usually assigned in its present form to the end of the first century, but was probably founded on an earlier Jewish work: see C. Taylor, Lectures on the Teaching of the Twelve Apostles, pp. 8—48. It is difficult in these early writings to satisfy oneself in regard to resemblances to our canonical books, whether these arise from direct quotation or are merely allusions to the oral teaching which preceded the composition of the books. The following passages, however, seem to take a colouring from the Epistle of St. James.

ii. 4 οὐκ ἔση διγνώμων οὐδὲ δίγλωσσος παγὶς γὰρ θανάτου ή διγλωσσία:

James iii. 6—8, 9, 10.

 5 οὐκ ἔσται ὁ λόγος σου ψευδής, οὐ κενός, ἀλλὰ μεμεστωμένος πράξει: James iii. 14 μή ψεύδεσθε κατά της άληθείας, ii. 20 θέλεις δε γνώναι, ώ ἄνθρωπε κενὲ, ὅτι ἡ πίστις χωρὶς τῶν ἔργων ἀργή ἐστιν; ih. i. 21, 26, ii. 14—17, iii. 18 ή ἄνωθεν σοφία...μεστή έλέους καὶ καρπῶν ἀγαθῶν.

The Epistle of Barnabas, which was written according to Bishop Lightfoot (Apostolic Fathers, Part I. vol. ii. 503 foll. 1890) at Alexandria during the reign of Vespasian (A.D. 70-79), according to Hilgenfeld in the reign of Nerva (A.D. 96-98), according to Volkmar during the reign of Hadrian (A.D. 119—138), contains references to the Gospels and to some of St. Paul's Epistles. The following appear to be allusions to St. James.

*Ι. 2 οὖτως ἔμφυτον τῆς δωρεᾶς<τῆς>πνευματικῆς χάριν εἰλήφατε, cf. ix. 9 οίδεν ό την έμφυτον δωρεάν της διδαχης αὐτοῦ θέμενος έν ὑμίν: 21 εν πραθτητι δέξασθε τον έμφυτον λόγον, ib. ver. 17 παν δώρημα τέλειον ἄνωθέν

Χ. 3 ὅταν σπαταλῶσιν ἐπιλανθάνονται τοῦ Κυρίου ἐαυτῶν, ὅταν δὲ ὑστερηθῶσιν έπιγινώσκουσι τὸν Κύριον: James v. 5, ii. 6, 7.

XÍX, 8 οὐκ ἔση πρόγλωσσος παγὶς γὰρ τὸ στόμα θανάτου: altered from Did, apparently to bring it nearer to James i, 19, iii, 6, 8,

*X1X. 10 μνησθήση ήμέραν κρίσεως...μελετών είς τὸ σῶσαι ψυχὴν τῷ λόγω, ή δια των χειρων σου έργαση είς λύτρωσιν άμαρτιων σου (altered from Did. iv. 6 so as to bring it nearer to St. James): James v. 9, 12, i. 21, ν. 20 δ επιστρέψας άμαρτωλον...σώσει ψυχήν έκ θανάτου καὶ καλύψει πλήθος άμαρτιῶν.

Testamenta XII. Patriarcharum, written about the beginning of the second century by a Jewish Christian, who seems to have been much influenced by the teaching and example of St. James. Thus Mr. Sinker, in his edition (1869), calls attention to the high estimate of poverty and of an ascetic life (p. 21 foll. p. 121), to the view of the Law 'as an eternal system of justice' which had been 'partially changed in its outward aspects and workings by the coming of Christ, who is called ἄνδρα ἀνακαινοποιοῦντα τὸν νόμον ' (p. 26), to the commendation of wisdom, benevolence, compassion, peaceableness, above all of $i\pi\lambda \delta\tau\eta s$, the opposite to $\delta\iota\psi\nu\chi ia.^2$

Elishop Lightfoot (ttal, p. 319 foll,) says of the Test, vii, Patr. 'the language in the moral and didactic portions takes its colour from the Epistle of James,' and

There is little general resemblance between the epistles of Ignatius and that of St. James, but the following phrases may be noted.

Our next witness, Hermas, who probably wrote before the middle of the second century, abounds in references to St. James, dwelling especially on the subject of διψυχία. His peculiar style of quotation is well described by Dr. Taylor, who has made a careful study of the manner in which he has used the Diduché and St. James in the Journal of Philology, vol. xviii, pp. 297 foll. He disguises the Scriptures from which he quotes, 'the form of his work, which claims to be the embodiment of a revelation, not allowing him to cite them openly.' 'He allegorizes, he disintegrates, he amalgamates. He plays upon the sense or varies the form of a saying, he repeats its words in fresh combinations or replaces them by synonyms, but he will not cite a passage simply and in its entirety' (l.e. pp. 324, 5).

Clement of Alexandria (d. about 220 A.D.) is said by Eusebius (H. E. vi. 14) to have included in his Outlines (εν ταις ὑποτυπώσεσι) short explanations of all the sacred books μηδὲ τὰς ἀντιλεγομένας παρελθών, τὴν Ἰούδα λέγω και τὰς λοιπὰς καθολικὰς ἐπι-στολάς, τήν τε Βαρνάβα καὶ τὴν Πέτρου λεγομένην ἀποκάλυψιν. Cassiodorius (Inst. div. lit. 8) on the other hand says that Clement commented 'on the Canonical Epistles, that is to say, on the first Epistle of St. Peter, the first and second of St. John, and the Epistle of St. James.' The notes on 1 Peter, Jude, 1 John, 2 John are still extant in a Latin translation, and some have doubted whether he really wrote on the other Catholic epistles, and would read Jude for James in Cassiodorius, see however Zahn, N. K. I. 322, Forschungen iii. 153, Sanday in Stud. Bibl. iii. 248.

Lastly Didymus (d. 394), the head of the catechetical school at Alexandria, who taught Jerome and Rufinus, has left brief comments on all the Catholic Epistles. Within three years of his death the Western Church also, at the Council of Carthage (397), had formally pronounced on the Canonical character of the Epistle, which is quoted like the other Scriptures by Jerome and Augustine, see Bp. Wordsworth in Stud. Bibl. I. 128, 129.

THE RELATION OF THE EPISTLE TO EARLIER WRITERS

- Canonical Books of the Old Testament.
 Apocrypha.
 Philo. (4) Greek Philosophers.
 - (1) Canonical Books of the Old Testament.

Genesis-

Besides the general reference to the history of Abraham in James ii. 21—23, on which compare especially Gen. xxii. 1—18, we have in James ii. 23 a quotation from Gen. xv. 6 καὶ ἐπίστενσεν ᾿Αβραὰμ τῷ Θεῷ καὶ ἐλογίσθη αὐτῷ εἰς δικαιοσύνην, only reading as in Rom. iv. 3, Philo, &c., ἐπίστενσεν δέ for καὶ ἐπ. [The Hebrew here has the active 'God counted it to him.'] It is probable also that φίλος Θεοῦ ἐκλήθη in the same verse of James is a quotation from Gen. xviii. 17 οὖ μὴ κρίψω ἀπὸ ᾿Αβραὰμ τοῦ παιδός μου, where Philo reads τοῦ ψίλου μου: see the notes.

i. 26 κ.ὰ εἶπεν ὁ Θεός Ποιήσωμεν ἄνθρωπον κατ' εἰκόνα ἡμετέραν καὶ καθ' ὁ μο ἱ ω σ ι ν καὶ ἀρχέτωσαν τῶν ἰχθύων τῆς θαλάσσης καὶ τῶν πετ εινῶν τοῦ οἰρανοῦ καὶ τῶν κτηνῶν καὶ πάσης τῆς γῆς καὶ πάντων τῶν έρ πετ ῶν τῶν έρπόντων επὶ τῆς γῆς. This is the source of two verses in James: iii. 9 ἐν αὐτῆ εὐλογοῦμεντὸν Κύριον καὶ Πατέρα, καὶ ἐν αὐτῆ καταρώμεθα τοὺς ἀνθρώπους τοὺς καθ' ὁμοίωσιν Θεοῦ γεγονότας (which should also be compared with Gen. is. 6, as tracing back our duty towards our fellow-men to our common participation in the divine image), and iii. 7 πᾶσα γὰρ φύσις θηρίων τε καὶ πετεινῶν, ἐρπετῶν τε καὶ ἐναλίων, δαμάζεται καὶ δεδάμασται τῆ φύσει τῆ ἀνθρωπίνη, for the classification of animals and their subjugation to man. With this should be compared Gen. ix. 2.

iv. 10 φωνή αίματος του άδελφου βοά πρός με έκ της γης, cf. below Deut. xxiv. 15.

ii. 23 see below on Deut, xxiv. 15.

xx. 5 Θεδς ζηλωτής, see below on Deut. iv. 24.

xx. 13 The LXX, here puts the seventh commandment before the sixth, as in James ii. 11 and Luke xviii. 20. The two latter, however, change the $o\dot{v}$ μοιχεύσεις of the former (which is preserved in Matt. v. 27) into μή μοιχεύσης.

Leviticus—

xix. 13 οὐκ ἀδικήσεις τὸν πλησίον...καὶ οὐ μὴ κοιμηθήσεται ὁ μισθὸς τοῦ μισθωτού σου παρά σοί έως πρωί, cf. below Deut. xxiv. 15.

xix. 15 οὐ λήψη πρόσωπον πτωχοῦ οὐδὲ μὴ θαυμάσης πρόσωπον δυναστοῦ ἐν δικαιοσύνη κρινείς τον πλησίον σου: apparently the earliest use of the phrase $\lambda \alpha \mu \beta \dot{\alpha} \nu \epsilon \iota \nu \pi \rho \dot{\sigma} \sigma \omega \pi \sigma \nu$, referred to in James ii. 1, 9.

xv. 30 καὶ ψυχή ήτις ποιήση έν χειρὶ ὑπερηφανίας, τὸν Θεὸν οὖτος παροξυιεῖ, James iv. 6.

Deuteronomy—

iv. 7 ποίον ἔθνος μέγα ὧ έστὶν αὐτῷ Θεὸς ἐγγίζων, and ver. 4 ὑμεῖς οί προσκείμενοι Κυρίω τῷ Θεῷ ὑμῶν ζῆτε πάντες: James iv. 8 ἐγγίσατε τῷ Θεῷ καὶ ἐγγίσει ὑμίν.

iv. 24 Κύριος ό Θεύς σου πυρ καταναλίσκον έστί, Θεός ζηλωτής, Deut. xxxii. 11 foll. ως ἀετὸς...ἐπὶ τοῖς νέσσοις αὐτοῦ ἐπεπόθησε, ver. 16 παρώξυνάν με ἐπὸ άλλοτρίοις, ver. 19 και είδε Κύριος και εζήλωσε, ver. 21: James iv. 4, 5 μοιχαλίδες οὐκ οἴδατε ὅτι ἡ Φιλία τοῦ κόσμου ἔχθρα τοῦ Θεοῦ ἐστίν;...ἡ δοκεῖτε ὅτι κενῶς ἡ γραφή λέγει Πρός φθόνον ἐπιποθεῖ τὸ πνεῦμα δ κατώκισεν ἐν ἡμῖν;

vi. 4 ἄκους Ἰσραήλ, Κύριος ὁ Θεὸς ἡμῶν εἶς ἔστιν, quoted exactly in Mark xii. 29, referred to in James ii. 19.

xi. 14 δώσει τὸν ὑετὸν τῆ γῆ σου καθ' ὥραν πρώϊμον κ. ἄψιμον, cf. Hos. vi. 4, Jer. v. 24, Joel ii. 23, Zech. x. 1 : James v. 7.

xiv. 2 καί σε έξελ έξατο Κύριος ὁ Θεός σου γενέσθαι σε λαὸν αὐτῷ περιούσιον: James ii. 5.

xxiv. 15 αθημερον ἀποδώσεις τον μισθον αθτού...ὅτι πένης ἐστὶ καὶ...κ ατ α β οήσεται κατά σου πρός Κύριον καὶ ἔσται ἐν σοὶ άμαρτία, Exod. ii. 23 ἀν έβη ή βο ή αὐτῶν πρὸς τὸν Θεόν, Jer. xxii. 13, Mal. iii. 5: James v. 4 ίδου ὁ μισθὸς τῶν ἀμησάντων τὰς χώρας ὑμῶν, ὁ ἀφυστερημένος ἀφ' ὑμῶν, κράζει· καὶ αἱ βοαὶ τῶν θερισάντων εἰς τὰ ὧτα Κυρίου Σαβαὼθ εἰσελήλυθαν, iv. 17 άμαρτία αὐτῷ ἐστίν.

xxviii. 58 τὸ ὄνομα τὸ ἔντιμον, τὸ θαυμαστὸν τοῦτο, Κύριον τὸν Θεόν σου : James

xxxii. 36-39 έγω αποκτείνω και ζην ποιήσω: James iv. 12, cf. ver. 6.

Joshua-

ii. esp. verses 5, 11, 12, 15, 16: referred to in James ii. 25 όμοίως καὶ Ῥαὰβ ή π΄ρνη οὐκ ἐξ ἔργων ἐδικαιώθη ὑποδεξαμένη τοὺς ἀγγέλους καὶ ἐτέρα ὁδῷ ἐκβαλοῦσα and Heb. xi. 31.

I. Kings—

iii. 9—12 (prayer of Solomon): James i. 5 εί τις λείπεται σοφίας αιτείτω παρὰ τοῦ διδόντος Θεοῦ πᾶσιν άπλως.

xviii. 1, 42 (prayer of Elijah): James v. 17, 18, and Luke iv. 25.

2 Chron. xx. 7 Art not thou our Father who gavest it (the land) to Abraham thy friend (Heb.): James ii. 23.

The general moral of this book, that patient endurance of affliction leads to wisdom and to final happiness, is also that enforced in the Epistle of James: see especially xlii. 12 ὁ δè Κύριος εὐλόγησε τὰ ἔσχατα Ἰωβ ἢ τὰ ἔμπροσθεν: James v. 11 την υπομονην 'Ιωβ ηκούσατε και το τέλος Κυρίου είδετε.

(4) Greek Philosophers.

While the more general resemblances between the philosophers and the Bible are no doubt to be explained on St. Paul's principle of the law written in the heart (Rom. ii. 15), yet there is probably more to be said on behalf of the view that the former may have been influenced, directly or indirectly, by Jewish teaching, than is generally recognized in the present day. I think there can be no doubt that some of the touches in Virgil's fourth Eclogue are derived from Isaiah through the Sibylline forgeries; and Sir A. Grant and Bishop Lightfoot have both called attention to the fact that several of the Stoics came from the East. On the other hand it is certain that the Jews after the time of Alexander were much influenced by Greek thought, as we see in the Book of Wisdom, the 4th Book of Maccabees, and above all in Philo. Possibly the parallels that follow are to be explained as reminiscences of Greek Philosophy filtered down through the writing of some Hellenistic Jew; but I would not exclude the possibility that Stoic parallels in St. James may have been taken directly from such a writer as Posidonius. I have given occasional references to post-Augustan authors, because the later Stoics borrow so much from their predecessors. Perhaps the parallels from Lucian and Porphyry should rather be regarded as taken directly from Christian sources.

(1) Synoptic Gospels.

Matthew-

iii. 2 ήγγικεν ή βασιλεία τῶν οὐρανῶν: James v. 8.

*v. 3 μακάριοι οἱ πτωχοὶ (τῷ πνεύματι) ὅτι αὐτῶν ἐστιν ἡ βασιλεία τῶν οὐρανῶν (the words in brackets are omitted in the parallel passage, Luke vi. 20), Matt. xix. 28 καθήσεσθε καὶ ὑμεῖς ἐπὶ θρόνους: James ii. 5.

xviii. 21—35 : James ii. 13.

v. 8 μακ. οἱ καθαροὶ τἢ καρδίμ: James iv. 8.

v. 9 μάκ. οἱ εἰρηνοποιοί: James iii. 18.

*v. 11, 12 μακ. ἐστε ὅταν ἀνειδίσωσιν ὑμᾶς...χαίρετε καὶ ἀγαλλιᾶσθε ...οὕτως γὰρ ἐδίωξαν τοὺς προφήτας, Luke vi. 22 : James i. 2, v. 10, 11.

v. 16 ουτως λαμψάτω τὸ φῶς ὑμῶν ὅπως...δοξάζωσιν τόν πατέρα ὑμῶν:

James i. 17.

v. 17 μη νομίσητε ότι ηλθον καταλύσαι τον νόμον...ουκ ηλθον καταλύσαι άλλα

 $\pi \lambda \eta \rho \hat{\omega} \sigma \alpha \iota$: James i. 25 (a law, but a perfect law of liberty).

- v. 19 δς εὰν λύση μίαν τῶν εντολῶν τοὐτων τῶν ελαχίστων καὶ διδάξη οὖτως τοὺς ἀνθρώπους. ἐλάχιστος κληθήσεται ἐντῆ βασιλεία τῶν οὐρανῶν ὑς δ' ἀν ποιήση καὶ διδάξη οὖτος μέγας κληθήσεται: James ii. 10, i. 22.
- *v. 34—37 εγω δε λέγω υμίν μη δμύσαι όλως, μήτε εν τῶ οὐρανῷ... μήτε εν τῆ γῆ...μήτε εἰς Ἱεροσόλυμα...μήτε εν τῆ κεφαλῆ σου...ἔστω δε ὑ λύγος ὑμών ναὶ ναί, οὖ οὕ τὸ δε περισσὸν τούτων εκ τοῦ πονηροῦ ἐστίν: James v. 12.

v. 48 ἔσεσθε οὖν ὑμεῖς τέλειοι, xix. 21 εἰ θέλεις τέλειος εἶναι: James i. 4, iii. 2.
 *vi. 16 τὸν ἄρτον ἡμῶν τὸν ἐπιούσιον δὸς ἡμῶν σήμερον: James ii. 15, 16.¹

See Chase (The Lord's Prayer in the Early Church, p. 48), who gives reasons for believing that ἐπιούστος is a second liturgical rendering of the original Aramaic, represented in Matt. by σήμερον, in Luke xi. 3 by τὸ καθ' ἡμέραν, in James ii. 15 by τῆς ἐφημέρου τροφῆς.

καὶ βρῶσις ἀφανίζει, Luke xii. 21 : James v. 2, 3.

*vi. 22 εὰν ἦ ὁ ὁφθαλμός σου άπλοῦς, ὅλον τὸ σῶμά σου φωτινὸν ἔσται, ver. 24 οὐδεὶς δύναται δυσὶ κυρίοις δουλεύειν...τὸν ἔνα μισήσει καὶ τὸν ἔτερον ἀγαπήσει...οὐ-δύνασθε Θεῷ δουλεύειν καὶ μαμωνᾳ, Luke xvi. 13: James iv. 4, 8 δίψυχοι.

vi. 29 οὐδὲ Σολόμων ἐν πάση τῆ δύξη περιεβάλετο ὡς ἐν τούτων, Luke xii. 27, 28:

James i. 11.

vi. 33 ζητείτε πρώτον τὴν βασιλείαν τοῦ Θεου καὶ τὴν δικαιοσύνην αὐτοῦ: James i. 20.

*vii. 7, 8 αἰτεῖτε καὶ δοθήσεται ὑμῖν...πᾶς γὰρ ὁ αἰτῶν λαμβάνει. Luke xi. 9, 10 : James i. 5, iv. 3. vii. 11 ό πατὴρ ὑμῶν ὁ ἐν τοῖς οὐρανοῖς δώσει ἀγαθὰ τοῖς αίτο θσιν αθτόν: James i. 17. vii. 13 ή όδὸς ή ἀπάγουσα είς τὴν ἀπώλειαν...ή ἀπάγουσα είς τὴν ζωήν: James

v. 19, 20.

*vii. 16 ἀπὸ τῶν καρπῶν αὐτῶν ἐπιγνώσεσθε αὐτούς μήτι συλλέγουσιν ἀπὸ ἀκανθῶν σταφυλὰς ἢ ἀπὸ τριβόλων σῦκα; οὕτω πᾶν δένδρον ἀγαθὸν καρποὺς καλοὺς ποιεῖ, Luke vi. 44, 45 ἔκαστον δένδρον ἐκ τοῦ ἰδίου καρποῦ γινώσκεται, οὐ γὰρ ἐξ ἀκανθῶν συλλέγουσιν σῦκα οὐδὲ ἐκ βάτου σταφυλὴν τρυγῶσιν. ὁ ἀγαθος ἄνθρωπος ἐκ τοῦ ἀγαθοῦ θησαυροῦ τῆς καρδίας προφέρει τὸ ἀγαθόν, καὶ ὁ πουηρὸς ἐκ τοῦ στοροῦ προφέρει τὸ πουηρόν ἐκ γὰρ περισσεύματος καρδίας λαλεῖ τὸ στόμα αὐτοῦ, Matt. xii. 33, cf. Isa. v. 2 ἔμεινα τοῦ ποιῆσαι σταφυλὴν καὶ ἐποίησεν ἀκάνθας: James iii. 10—13, 18, i. 21.

(2) Gospel and Epistles of St. John.\(^1\)—Though our Epistle does not generally show such a close verbal agreement with the Gospel of St. John as it does with the Synoptic Gospels, yet there is considerable resemblance in respect to such general ideas as the

World, the Truth, the Light, the Glory, the New Birth, the Liberty of Christ. No doubt the writings of St. John exhibit, as we should expect, a far greater depth of thought and a more advanced Christianity than are to be found in our Epistle; but, along with this, there is a general harmony and community of ideas, such as might naturally result from remembrances of a common teaching, or from continued association on the part of the two writers. we come to the conclusion that in some cases this similarity is more easily explained by direct borrowing, it seems to me that the borrower is in all probability St. John. The richness and fulness of expression in such passages as 1 John ii. 15, iii. 9, iii. 17, 21, might easily grow out of the brief hints given in the parallels of St. James, but it is scarcely conceivable that the latter should have deliberately discarded thoughts of such interest and value, if he had had them in writing before him. The same considerations will apply to the parallels to our Epistle which are to be found in the writings of St. Peter and St. Paul. It was easy for the latter, writing from a more advanced standingpoint, to bring out and to emphasize the more distinctively Christian doctrines which were still undeveloped and to some extent latent in St. James. That St. James should deliberately have gone backwards, when those doctrines had once received definite expression, is at any rate less probable. A further consideration is that, if we allow a connexion between our Epistle and those of the other Apostles, it is easier to explain this on the supposition that the latter were acquainted with the manifesto of the President of the Church at Jerusalem, rather than on the supposition that he was acquainted with a variety of writings addressed to distant Churches. It is to be remembered also that these parallels are not confined to the earlier or the more important Epistles of St. Paul, and that some of the most striking parallels appear in what are thought to be the latest writings in the N. T., viz. the Epistles of St. John, probably composed after the death of St. James, and long after the probable date of his Epistle, as deduced from other considerations.

(4) Epistles of St. Paul—

Beside the general considerations mentioned under (2), there are special reasons which make it more probable that St. Paul was acquainted with the Epistle of St. James than St. James with those of St. Paul. We know both from the Epistle to the Galatians (ii. 12) and from the Acts (xv. 1, 5, 24) that the Judaizing opposition to St. Paul at Antioch was encouraged by persons who professed to represent the views of the Church of Jerusalem and of its President in particular. If there were any epistle known to the Syrian Church bearing the name of James, it may be taken for granted that this would have been eagerly read by Paul when he was about to plead in behalf of the freedom of his

Gentile converts before the Church of Jerusalem. More particularly would this be so, if any phrases in the epistle could be turned against his own doctrine of justification by faith, by those who maintained that Jew and Gentile alike could only be justified by the works of the law. It has been justly remarked that the words 'whoever shall keep the whole law and yet offend in one point, he is guilty of all' (James ii. 10) might easily be twisted by the Judaizers so as to represent St. James as insisting on the observance of the whole Mosaic code; and that it is perhaps this misinterpretation which is referred to in the words 'we have heard that certain which went out from us troubled you saying, Ye must be circumcised and keep the law, to whom we gave no such commandment' (Acts xv. 24).1 On the other hand there is much less likelihood of St. Paul's Epistles, addressed to distant churches and dealing so much with personal questions, being brought under the notice of St. James. That there is a connexion between the epistles of the two men, has been the general belief in the Church from the time of Augustine downwards; but this connexion has been usually explained on the supposition that James meant either directly to controvert Paul's own teaching, or at any rate to put forward considerations which might serve to restrain the extravagances of his followers. It has been pointed out however by the more careful students of our Epistle, such as Neander and Bp. Lightfoot, that the argument therein contained on Faith and Works has no bearing on St. Paul's doctrine, its purport being, in the words of John Bunyan, to insist that 'at the Day of Doom, men shall be judged according to their fruit. It will not be said then Did you believe? but, Were you doers or talkers only?' 'For as the body without the soul is but a dead carcase, so saying, if it be alone, is but a dead carcase also '-a doctrine which of course is common to St. Paul, as to every other writer in the N.T.

But it does not follow, as some have maintained, that because our Epistle gives no answer to St. Paul's argument addressed to the Romans, there is therefore no connexion between them. I think it is impossible to read carefully the passages given below, without feeling that the one writer copied from the other; and that, while St. James has no reference to St. Paul, St. Paul on the contrary writes with constant reference to St. James, sometimes borrowing phrases or ideas, sometimes introducing a distinction for the purpose of avoiding ambiguity, at other times distinctly controverting his arguments as liable to be misapplied, though conscious all the while of a general agreement in his conclusions. As examples of borrowing, sometimes with additions and improvements, I will only refer here to Rom. ii. 13, 25, v. 3, vii. 23, xiv. 4, 22. As examples of new distinctions introduced compare James ii. 24 $\epsilon \xi \tilde{\epsilon} \rho \gamma \omega \nu \delta \iota \kappa a \iota o \tilde{\nu} \tau a \iota \tilde{u} \nu \theta \rho \omega \pi o s \kappa a \iota o \tilde{\nu} \kappa \tilde{\kappa} \kappa \pi \iota \sigma \tau \epsilon \omega s$, $\epsilon \tilde{u} \nu \mu \tilde{u} \delta \iota \tilde{u} \kappa \delta \iota$

The controversial matter must be dealt with at greater length. The two main points at issue are (1) the necessity of works, (2) Abraham's justification by faith. James had said over and over again 'Faith without works is dead' (ii. 17, 20, 24, 26); his meaning being (as is plain from ver. 14, and the illustration of a philanthrophy which is limited to words (vv. 15, 16), as well as from the whole tone and argument of the Epistle), not to depreciate faith, which is with him not less than with St. Paul the very foundation of the Christian life (cf. i. 3, 6, ii, 1, v. 15), but to insist that faith, like love, is valueless, if it has no effect on the life, but expends itself in words. St. Paul himself does the same in 1 Thess. i. 3, Gal. v. 6, 1 Cor. xiii. 2, Rom. ii. 6—20, and indeed throughout his Epistles; but in arguing against his Judaizing antagonists, who denied salvation to the Gentiles unless they were circumcised and in all other respects performed the works of the law,' he had maintained that it was impossible for men to be justified by these works, and that it was by faith alone that even the Jews and Abraham himself, no less than Gentiles, must be justified. He therefore challenges the phrase of St. James $\dot{\eta}$ $\pi i \sigma \tau i s$ $\chi \omega \rho i s$ $\tau \hat{\omega} \nu \ \tilde{e} \rho \gamma \omega \nu \ \tilde{e} \rho \gamma \omega \nu \ \tilde{e} \rho \gamma i \nu$, $\nu \epsilon \kappa \rho \dot{\alpha} \ \tilde{e} \sigma \tau i \nu$ by a direct contradiction, λογιζόμεθα γὰρ δικαιοῦσθαι πίστει ἄνθρωπον χωρὶς ἔργων νόμου, in support of which he appeals (1) to Deut. xxvii. 26 'Cursed is every one that continueth not in all things which are written in the book of the law to do them,' as proving the absolute obedience required by the law, Gal. iii. 10, (2) to the confession of the Psalmist (xiv. cxliii. 2, cf. Rom. iii. 20, Gal. iii. 16) that 'by the works of the law shall no flesh be justified,' and to that of the Preacher (iii. 20, cf. Rom. iii. 23) 'there is not a just man upon earth that doeth good and sinneth not.' If the contrary supposition were true; if St. James wrote after St. Paul, must be not, with these passages before him, have either attempted to meet the arguments, if he dissented; or if he agreed with them (as he certainly does in ii. 10, 11 and in iii. 2), would he not have avoided the use of phrases such as $\chi\omega\rho$ is $\tau\hat{\omega}\nu$ $\tilde{\epsilon}\rho\gamma\omega\nu$, which were liable to be misunderstood alike by the followers and the opponents of the Apostle to the Gentiles?

St. Paul goes on to argue that the blessings promised to Abraham and all the families of the earth in him, and the covenant made with Abraham and his seed, are anterior to and irrespective of the law; that the Scripture expressly attributes to Abraham a righteousness, not of works, but of faith, and states generally that 'the just shall live by faith.' To these arguments again no reference is made by St. James, except to the familiar quotation επίστευσεν 'Αβραάμ τῷ θεῷ καὶ ελογίσθη αὐτῶ εἰς δικαιοσύ- $\nu\eta\nu$ (James ii. 21, 22), which was probably in common use among the Jews to prove that orthodoxy of doctrine sufficed for salvation. His answer is that Abraham's faith proved itself by action, when he offered Isaac on the altar: if he had not acted thus, he would not have been accounted righteous, or called the Friend of God. It is interesting to observe how St. Paul deals with this statement, to which he distinctly refers in Rom. iv. 2. St. James had said 'Αβραὰμ ὁ πατὴρ ἡμῶν οὐκ ἐξ ἔργων ἐδικαιώθη; St. Paul replies εί γὰρ 'Αβραὰμ ἐξ ἔργων ἐδικαιώθη, ἔχει καύχημα, but this, as he shows, is inconsistent with the phrase 'reckoned for righteousness,' which, like the similar phrase in Ps. xxxii. 1, 2, implies an act of free grace on the part of God, not a strict legal obligation of wages carned for work done. His second answer is to replace the quotation in its original context (Rom. iv. 16-22), as spoken of the birth, not of the sacrifice of Isaac. Abraham's faith in the promised birth was a settled trust in God, a long-continued hoping against hope: it was this posture of mind, not any immediate action consequent upon it, which was reckoned to him for righteousness (ἐνεδυναμώθη τῆ πίστει δοὺς δόξαν τῷ Θεῷ καὶ πληροφορηθείς ότι δ επήγγελται δυνατός εστιν και ποιήσαι. δι ο έλογίσθη αὐτῷ εἰς δικαιοσύνην). Nor is he content to leave to the Jews the exclusive boast in the fatherhood of Abraham (James ii. 21): all who inherit Abraham's faith are sons of Abraham (Gal. iii. 7, Rom. iv. 12). All this is most apposite in reference to the argument of St. James and the use which might be made of it by Judaizers; but put the case the other way, suppose St. James to have written after St. Paul; and how inconceivable is it that he should have made no attempt to guard his position against such an extremely formidable attack! Again if St James was really opposed to St. Paul and desired to maintain that man was saved, not by grace, but by obedience to the law of Moses, which was incumbent alike on Gentile and on Jew, why has he never uttered a syllable on the subject, but confined himself to the task of proving that a faith which bears no fruits is a dead faith?

As I am on the subject of faith it may be convenient to mention here that the treatment of this subject in the Epistle to the Hebrews is such as to suggest that the writer was acquainted with our Epistle, as well as with the Epistle to the Romans. The language of St. James was liable to be misunderstood because he does not state distinctly what he means by 'faith.' In the eleventh chapter of the Hebrews the author begins with a definition of faith and illustrates its power by a long series of examples. In ver. 6 he explains why it is impossible to please God without faith. vi. 15 Abraham is said to have obtained the promise through his patience (μακροθυμήσας): in xi. 8 his faith is evinced by his obedience to the call to leave his own country and go he knew not where; in ver. 9 by his living as a stranger in the land of promise awaiting the establishment of the City of God. In ver. 11 faith is said to have enabled Sarah to conceive when she was past age. In ver. 17 it is pointed out that the offering up of Isaac by Abraham flowed naturally from his faith, that He who had given the promise 'In Isaac shall thy seed be called' was able even to raise him from the dead. In vv. 13—16 it is said of the patriarchs collectively, that they died in faith not having received the promises but having saluted them afar off, desiring a better country, that is an heavenly. Faith is exhibited throughout the chapter not as in rivalry with works, as might seem to be the case in the writings of St. Paul and St. James, but as the cause and ground of all the noble deeds of the ancient worthies. Thus, though it may be true to say with St. James 'that Rahab was justified by works,' yet it is a higher and deeper truth to say that she was saved by faith, since her works were only the natural outcome and fruit of her faith.

(5) Epistles of St. Peter and St. Jude—

I think no unprejudiced reader can doubt that the resemblances between the Epistle of St. James and the First Epistle of St. Peter, the recurrence in them of the same words and phrases, and their common quotations from the O.T., are such as to prove conclusively that the one borrowed from the other. Nor can there be much doubt as to which of the two was the borrower, if we observe how, in almost every case, the common thought finds fuller expression in St. Peter. Thus both Epistles are addressed to the Diaspora, but in St. Peter we have the distinctive touch εκλεκτοίς παρεπιδήμοις διασποράς. St. James addresses the Twelve Tribes of the Diaspora without limitation; but his letter, as I have argued in the chapter on the Persons Addressed, would probably be circulated mainly among the Jews of the Eastern Dispersion; while St. Peter, writing, as I imagine, during the imprisonment of St. Paul at Rome to the Jews of Asia Minor, with the view of removing their prejudices against his teaching, took the Epistle of St. James as his model, but ingrafted upon it the more advanced Christian doctrine which he shared with St. Paul. If we accept the genuineness of the Second Epistle, we shall find an interesting parallel in the close relation between it and the Epistle of St. Jude. however are of course matters of more or less uncertainty. But the close connexion between James i. 2 and 1 Pet. i. 6, 7 is proved beyond all doubt by the recurrence in both of the phrases ποικίλοις πειρασμοίς and το δοκίμιον ύμων της πίστεως with its unusual order of words. Assuming then, as we must, that one copied from the other, we find the trial of faith illustrated in St. Peter (as in Psa. lxvi. 10, Prov. xvii. 3, Job xxiii. 10, Zech. xiii. 9, Mal. iii. 3) by the trying of the precious metals in the fire: we find also the addition, $\partial \lambda' \gamma \rho \nu \stackrel{\alpha}{\alpha} \rho \tau \iota$, $\epsilon i \stackrel{\beta}{\delta} \epsilon \rho \nu$, $\lambda \nu \pi \eta \theta \stackrel{\epsilon}{\epsilon} \nu \tau \epsilon \varsigma$, which looks as if it were intended to soften down the uncompromising Stoicism of St. James' πᾶσαν χαρὰν ἡγήσασθε. Again comparing James i. 18 and 1 Pet. i. 23, we find the bare 'begat he us with the word of truth' of the former expanded into 'having been begotten again not of corruptible seed, but of incorruptible, through the word of God which liveth and abideth.' So in 1 Pet. ii. 1, 2, the simpler expression of James (i. 21) 'Wherefore putting away all filthiness and overflowing of malice, receive with meekness the implanted word which is able to save your souls' is elaborated into 'Putting away therefore all malice and all guile and hypocrisies and envies and all evil speakings, as newborn babes long for the spiritual (λογικόν) milk which is without guile, that ye may grow thereby unto salvation.' Compare also James i. 12 with 1 Pet. v. 4 where the crown of life' becomes 'the crown of glory which fadeth not away'; James iv. 10 with 1 Pet. v. 6, where 'Humble yourselves in the sight of God and he shall exalt you' becomes 'Humble yourselves under the mighty hand of God that he may exalt you in due time.' In the immediate context the simple 'Resist the devil' of James, becomes 'Your adversary the devil as a roaring lion walketh about seeking whom he may devour; whom resist steadfast in the faith' in Peter. The most important changes are those in which the tone of the New Testament is substituted for that of the Old, as in 1 Pet. ii. 21, where Christ is set before us as our example of patient suffering, in contrast with James v. 10, where the example of the prophets is appealed to. Perhaps under this head may be mentioned the change from $\sigma \tau n \rho i$ ξατε τὰς καρδίας, in James v. 9, to ὁ Θεὸς αὐτὸς στηρίξει in 1 Pet. v. 10; and the employment of the emphatic πρὸ πάντων to enforce the exhortation to brotherly love in 1 Pet. iv. 8, instead of the exhortation to abstain from swearing in James v. 12.

There is a curious difference between the use made of quotations from the Old Testament in the two Epistles. St. James seldom quotes exactly. We can see by his phraseology that he has some passage of the Old Testament in his mind, but he uses it freely to colour his language, applying it to his own immediate purpose without any scrupulous reference to its original context. It is this laxity of quotation which causes the difficulty in James iv. 4-6 and presents what is probably an 'unwritten word' of Christ under two forms in i. 12 and ii. 5. If we turn to the quotations which are common to him and to St. Peter, we often find the inexact and careless reminiscences of the former corrected and supplemented in the latter. Thus there can be little doubt that when St. James used the phrase δοκίμιον πίστεως he had in his mind Prov. xxvii. 21 δοκίμιον άργυρίω καὶ χρυσώ πύρωσις, άνηρ δὲ δοκιμάζεται διὰ στόματος ἐγκωμιαζόντων αὐτόν, and Prov. xvii. 3, which is nearer in meaning though less closely allied in expression, ωσπερ δοκιμάζεται έν καμίνω ἄργυρος καὶ χρυσός, οὕτως έκλεκταὶ καρδίαι παρά Κυρίω, and accordingly we find St. Peter supplying these words (δοκίμιον) πολυτιμότερον χρυσίου τοῦ ἀπολλυμένου διὰ πυρὸς δὲ δοκιμαζομένου. Another quotation appears in James i, 10, 11 (let the rich man boast in his humiliation) ὅτι ὡς ἄνθος γόρτου παρελεύσεται άνέτειλεν γαρ ο ήλιος συν τῷ καύσωνι καὶ έξήρανεν τὸν χόρτον καὶ τὸ ἄνθος αὐτοῦ ἐΞέπεσεν καὶ ή εὐπρέπεια τοῦ προσώπου αὐτοῦ ἀπώλετο· οὕτως καὶ ὁ πλούσιος έν ταίς πορείαις αὐτοῦ μαρανθήσεται. This is evidently taken mainly from Isa. xl. 6, 7, where the perishing nature of man is contrasted with the imperishableness of God's Word. St. James, it will be seen, confines himself to the former branch of the comparison, limiting it indeed to the case of the rich man, and makes no mention here of the Word. But in 1 Pet. i. 23 the new life communicated by the living and abiding Word of God, which St. James treats of in another part of his Epistle, is the subject of the discourse (ἀναγεγεννημένοι...διὰ λόγου ζώντος Θεοῦ καὶ μένοντος); this is then proved by the quotation, given almost literally from Isaiah, as follows: διότι πάσα σάρε ώς χόρτος και πάσα δόξα αὐτῆς ώς ἄνθος χόρτος: ἐΞΗράνθΗ ὁ χόρτος καὶ τὸ ἄνθος ἐΞέπεσεν• τὸ Δὲ ρμμα Κυρίου μένει είς τὸν αἰώνα, the only changes being the insertion of the first ώς, the substitution of αὐτῆς for ἐνθρώπος and of Κυρίου for τος Θεος ήμιων. In the passage of St. James we observe the intermingling of another quotation from the Book of Jonah iv. 8 εγένετο αματφ άνατείλαι τὸν ηλιον καὶ προσέταξεν ό Θεὸς πνεύματι καύσωνι.

In the difficult passage James iv. 4-6 ('whosoever would be a friend of the world becomes thereby an enemy of God. Or think ye that the Scripture saith without meaning, Jealously yearneth the Spirit which he hath implanted in you? But he giveth more grace: wherefore he saith') ὁ Θεὸς ὑπερηφάνοις ἀντιτάσσεται ταπεινοίς δὲ δίδωσιν χάριν, the concluding Greek words are exactly the same as in 1 Pet. v. 5, being taken literally from the LXX. of Prov. iii. 34, except that this latter has Κύριος for δ Θεός. context however in which they occur differs much in the two Epistles. St. Peter uses them to enforce the duty of humility in our intercourse with our fellow-men, 'Ye younger be subject unto the elder: yea all of you gird yourselves with humility for God resisteth the proud, but giveth grace to the humble,' which is probably the original application in the Proverbs; but St. James, as we have seen, seems to make 'the proud' equivalent to 'the friends of the world,' and the 'humble' to be those who submit themselves to

The last quotation is that from the Hebrew (not the LXX.) of Prov. x. 12 'Hatred stirreth up strife, but love covereth all sins,'

It is scarcely necessary to point out how these facts confirm the general evidence as to the priority of our Epistle to that of St. Peter. The language of a Christian writer, in the first century even more than in the nineteenth, was inevitably coloured by his study of the O.T. This fully accounts for the Scriptural quotations and allusions in St. James. It is again perfectly natural that a contemporary of St. James, reviewing his Epistle in order to adapt it for a special class of readers, should, it may be even unconsciously, correct the references to the O.T., sometimes by supplying points which had been overlooked, as in speaking of the trial of faith, sometimes by applying them with more exactness, as in regard to the simile of the fading flower. But surely the converse supposition is most improbable, that the later writer should deliberately misquote and misapply passages which were correctly given in his authority!

(6) Epistle to the Hebrews—

I have given reasons above (4) for supposing that the eleventh chapter of this Epistle was written with a knowledge of St. James' argument on Faith. If I am not mistaken there is a further allusion to St. James in ch. xii. 11, where (as in 1 Pet. i. 6) there seems to be a kind of concession to those who felt themselves unequal to the high-strained appeal $\pi \hat{a} \sigma a \nu \chi a \rho \hat{a} \nu \dot{\gamma} \gamma \dot{\eta} \sigma a \sigma \theta \epsilon$. 'Chastisement,' the writer allows, 'does not seem for the moment to be a ground for rejoicing but for grief, nevertheless afterwards'—it has the effect St. James ascribes to it—'it produces the peaceable fruit of righteousness.' It may be added that the evils of the Jewish Church are more developed, and the threatened judgments more imminent, in this Epistle than in St. James; that persecutions are referred to as matters of the past (x. 32–34), and that in xiii. 7 many have seen an allusion to the martyrdom of St. James himself.

CHAPTER V

THE CONTENTS OF THE EPISTLE

The design of the Epistle is on the one hand to encourage those to whom it is addressed to bear their trials patiently, and on the other hand to warn them against certain errors of doctrine and practice.

- I. Of Trial.—i. 1-18.
- (1) Trial is sent in order to perfect the Christian character. That it may have this effect wisdom is needed; and this wisdom is given in answer to believing prayer.—i. 2-6.
 - A warning against double-mindedness. The believer should recognize the greatness of his calling, and not allow himself to be either elated or depressed by outward circumstances.—i. 7-11.
 - (2) Patient endurance of trial leads to the crown of life, promised to all that love God.—i. 12.
- (3) Though outward trial is appointed by God for our good, we must not imagine that the inner weakness which shows itself under trial is from God. God is perfect goodness, and only sends what is good. The disposition to misuse God's appointments comes from man's own lusts, which, if yielded to, lead to death as their natural consequence.—i. 13–15.
- (4) So far from God's tempting man to evil, it is only by His will, through the regenerating power of His word, that we have been raised to that new and higher life which shall eventually penetrate and renew the whole creation.—i. 16–18.
 - II. How we should receive the Word.—i. 19-27.
 - (1) As humble listeners, not as excited speakers.—i. 19–21.
- (2) Nor is it enough to listen to the word; we must carry it out in action,—i. 22-24.

- (a) Blessing comes to him alone who patiently studies the word, and frames his life in accordance with the law of liberty embodied therein.—i. 25.
- (b) Ritual observance is of no avail unless it helps us to rule the tongue, and practise brotherly kindness and unworldliness.—i. 26, 27.

III. Warning against respect of persons.—ii. 1-13.

- (1) Courtesy to the rich, if combined with discourtesy to the poor, is a sign of weakness of faith, and proves that we are not whole-hearted in the service of Him who is the only glory of believers.—ii. 1-4.
- (2) The poor have more title to our respect than the rich, since they are often rich in faith and heirs of the kingdom; while it is the rich who maltreat the brethren and blaspheme the name of Christ.—ii. 5–7.
- (3) If it is from obedience to the royal law of love that we show courtesy to the rich, it is well: but if we do this only from respect of persons, it is a breach of the law and a defiance of the lawgiver, no less than murder or adultery.—ii. 8-11.
- (4) Remember that we shall all be tried by the law of liberty, which looks to the heart, and not to the outward action only. It is the merciful who obtain mercy.—ii. 12, 13.

IV. Belief and Practice.—ii. 14-26.

- (1) A mere profession of faith without corresponding action is of no avail.—ii. 14.
 - (a) As may be seen in the parallel case of benevolence when it does not go beyond words.—ii. 15-17.
 - (b) Without action we have no evidence of the existence of faith.—ii. 18.
 - (e) The orthodox belief of the Jew is shared by the demons, and only serves to increase their misery.—ii. 19.
- (2) True faith, such as that of Abraham and Rahab, necessarily embodies itself in action.—ii. 20-26.

V. Warnings with regard to the use of the tongue.—iii. 1-12.

- (1) Great responsibility of the office of teacher.—iii. 1.
- (2) Difficulty and importance of controlling the tongue.—iii. 2-8.

- (") In our human microcosm the tongue plays the part of the world, and it is used by the powers of evil for our ruin.—iii. 6.
- (b) Its malign and devastating influence.—iii. 5-8.
- (r) It is like the rudder of a ship: he who can rule it rules the whole life and activity.—iii. 2-4.
- (3) Inconsistency of supposing that we can offer acceptable praise to God as long as we speak evil of man who is made in the image of God,—iii. 9-12.

VI. True and false Wisdom.—iii. 13-18.

- (1) The wisdom which comes from God is simple and straightforward, full of kindness and all good fruits.—iii. 13, 17, 18.
- (2) If there is a wisdom which does not conduce to peace, but is accompanied by bitterness and jealousy, it is not from above, but is earthly, carnal, devilish.—iii. 14-16.

VII. Warning against quarrelsomeness and worldliness.—iv. 1-17.

- (1) The cause of quarrelling is that each man seeks to gratify his own selfish impulses, and to snatch his neighbour's portion of worldly good.—iv. 1, 2.
- (2) No satisfaction can be thus obtained. Even our prayers can give us no satisfaction if they are infected with this worldly spirit.
 —iv. 3.
- (3) God demands the service of the whole heart, and will reveal Himself to none but those who yield up their wills to His.—iv. 4-6.
- (4) Therefore resist the devil, who is the prince of this world, and turn to God in humble repentance.—iv. 7-10.
- (5) Cease to find fault with others. Those who condemn their neighbours condemn the law itself, and usurp the office of Him, the Lord of life and death, who alone has the power and right to judge.—iv. 11, 12.
- (6) Worldliness is also shown in the confident laying-out of plans of life without reference to God,—iv. 13-17.

VIII. Denunciations and Encouragements.—v. 1-11.

(1) Woe to those who have been heaping up money and living in luxury on the very eve of judgment. Woe especially to those who have ground down the poor and murdered the innocent.—v. 1-6.

(2) Let the brethren bear their sufferings patiently, knowing that the Lord is at hand, and that He will make all things turn out for their good. Let them imitate Job and the prophets, and so inherit the blessings pronounced on those that endure.—v. 6-11.

IX. Miscellaneous precepts.—v. 12-20.

- (1) Swear not.—v. 12.
- (2) Let all your feelings of joy and sorrow be sanctified and controlled by religion.—v. 13.
- (3) In sickness let the elders be called in to pray and anoint the sick with a view to his recovery.—v. 14, 15.
- (4) Confess your faults to one another, and pray for one another with all earnestness,—v. 16-18.
- (5) The blessing on one who wins back a sinner from the error of his ways.—v. 19, 20.

Though the letter flows on from point to point without pretending to strict logical sequence, yet it is easy to distinguish certain leading principles on which the whole depends. Thus, in regard to practice, the leading principle is the necessity of whole-heartedness_ in religion. A man may think to serve God and Mammon at once (διψυχία, i. 8, iv. 8), but God insists on the surrender of the whole heart to Him: the love of the world is incompatible with the love of God (iv. 4-7). Most men seek to compromise matters, and their religion thus becomes a ὑπόκρισις. They flatter themselves that they are religious, because they are fluent in speaking on religious subjects (i. 19, iii. 1); or because they find the words of the preacher as a lovely song of one that has a pleasant voice' (i. 19, 22-25); or because they are conscious of genuine indignation at the sight of error in others (i. 19, 20, iii. 14, iv. 11, 12); or because of their punctuality in religious observances (i. 26, 27); or because of a partial obedience to this or that law (ii. 10-12); or because of their orthodoxy of belief (ii. 14-26); but all this is mere self-deception (i. 22, 26, ii. 14, 17, 19, 26, iii. 15). Knowledge not used only entails a heavier punishment (iii. 1, iv. 17). The only religion which is of value in the sight of God is that which influences the whole life and activity (i. 27, 4, 22–25, ii. 12–26, iii. 13, 17, iv. 11, 17). Faith, love, wisdom, religion—all alike are spurious if they fail to produce the fruit of good works.

We will next consider the doctrinal basis of St. James' practical teaching. Man was created in the image of God (iii. 9), the All-Good (i. 13, 17); but he has fallen into sin by yielding to his lower impulses against his sense of right (i. 14, 15, iv. 1-3, 17); and the natural consequence of sin is death, bodily and spiritual (i. 15, v. 3, 5). Not only is man liable to sin; but as a matter of fact we all sin, and that frequently (iii. 2). God of His free bounty has provided a means by which we might conquer sin and rise to a new life, in His word sown in our hearts (i. 18 βουληθείς ἀπεκύησεν ήμᾶς λόγω άληθείας, i. 21 δέξασθε του έμφυτου λόγου του δυυάμενου $\sigma\hat{\omega}\sigma\alpha\iota \tau \dot{\alpha}s \psi \nu \gamma \dot{\alpha}s \dot{\nu}\mu\hat{\omega}\nu$). Our salvation depends on the way in which we receive the word (i. 21). If we have a stedfast faith in God's goodness as revealed to us through our Lord Jesus Christ (i. 13, ii. 1, i. 5-7); if we read, mark, learn, and inwardly digest the word, so as to make it the guiding principle of our life, the law of liberty by which all our words and actions are regulated (i. 25, ii. 12), then our souls are saved from death, we are made inheritors of the kingdom promised to those that love God (i. 12,

But the training by which we are prepared for this crown of life is not pleasant to the natural man. It involves trial and endurance (i. 2-4, 12): it involves constant watchfulness and self-control, and prayer for heavenly wisdom, in order that we may resist the temptations of the world, the flesh and the devil (i. 26, iii. 2-8, 15, iv. 1, iv. 5). Thus faith is exercised; we are enabled to see things as God sees them (ii. 1, 5); to rise above the temporal to the eternal (i. 9-11); to be not simply patient, but to rejoice in affliction (i. 2, v. 7, 8, 10, 11), and exult in the hope set before us (i. 9-12); until at last we grow up to the full stature of a Christian (i. 4, iii. 2), wise with that wisdom which comes from above, the wisdom which is stedfast, unpretending, gentle, considerate, affectionate, full of mercy and good fruits, the parent of righteousness and peace (iii. 17, 18).

But there are many who choose the friendship of the world instead of the friendship of God, so vexing His Holy Spirit, and yielding themselves to the power of the devil; yet even then He does not leave them to themselves, but gives more grace. He hedges in their way in the present, and warns them of further judgment to come (iv. 4-6, v. 1-8). If they humble themselves under His hand and repent truly of their sins, He will lift them up; if they draw nigh to Him, He will draw nigh to them (iv. 7–10). Here, too, we may be helpful to one another by mutual confession, and by prayer for one another. Great is the power of prayer prompted by the Spirit of God (v. 15–20).

It is characteristic of the austere tone of the Epistle that it, alone of the Epistles of the New Testament, contains no attempt to conciliate the favour of the readers by direct words of praise. In it we hear the bracing call of duty uttered by one who speaks with earnest sympathy indeed and without a particle of Pharisaic assumption, but who feels that he has the right to speak and expects to be obeyed.

CHAPTER VI

Persons to whom the Epistle is Addressed, and Place from which it is written

St. James addresses the Twelve Tribes in the Dispersion. For the meaning of this phrase see the note on i. 1. I propose here to sum up briefly the historical facts which it represents.

If we view the history of Israel from the outside, one of its most remarkable characteristics is the long series of compulsory transplantations undergone by this people from the time of Tiglath-Pileser up to the present day. The Assyrian transplantation took place in the latter half of the eighth century B.C. In it, we are told that the tribes of Reuben and Gad and the half-tribe of Manasseh. together with the bulk of the Samaritans and some of the tribe of Judah, were removed to upper Mesopotamia (1 Chron. v. 26, 2 Kings xvii. 4-6, and xviii. 13). In the second transplantation the tribes of Judah and Benjamin were removed to Babylon about the year 600 B.C. (Dan. i. 1, 2, 2 Kings xxiv. 14—16, xxv., Jer. lii.). The extent and importance of the Eastern Dispersion is shown in the Books of Esther and Tobit: Philo, writing shortly after the Christian era, says that Babylonia and the most fertile satrapies beyond the Euphrates were inhabited by Jews (ad Caium M. 2, p. 587); and we learn from Josephus that early in the first century after Christ, Mesopotamia was for some fifteen years under the rule of the Jewish leaders Asidaeus and Anilaeus, and that, after the death of the latter, more than 50,000 Jews were massacred in the city of Seleucia (Ant. xviii, 9, 4-9). A third transplantation was that to Egypt, which commenced as a voluntary emigration in the time of Nebuchadnezzar (2 Kings xxv. 26), but received a great development in the foundation of Alexandria under Alexander and

Ptolemy I. (Jos. B. J. ii. 18. 7, Ant. xii. 1). Ptolemy also planted colonies of Jews in Cyrene and the neighbourhood (Jos. c. Ap. ii. 4, Ant. xiv. 7. 2). In the reign of Ptolemy Philometer (B.C. 180— 145) a temple modelled after that at Jerusalem was built at Leontopolis for the Egyptian Jews, whose number is estimated at not less than one million by Philo (in Flace, M. 2 p. 523). The same reasons which led to the Jews being established by their Macedonian conquerors in Egypt, led to their being established also in the Greek towns founded in the East by the Seleucid dynasty. 'The Jews,' says Mommsen, 'had a conspicuous share in the Hellenizing of the East': they were chosen for this purpose 'from their pliancy and serviceableness on the one hand and from their unyielding tenacity on the other.' 'The Jews of the Greek towns became Greek-speaking Orientals,' 'the use of the Greek language was compulsory,' but, to compensate for this, 'they were allowed up to a certain degree to govern themselves.' 'Mesopotamia was covered with Greek commonwealths,' 'the inhabitants of Palestine were only a portion, and not the most important portion, of the Jews: the Jewish communities of Babylonia, Syria, Asia Minor, and Egypt were far superior to those of Palestine.' (The Provinces, vol. ii. pp. 8, 162-167 Eng. tr.) The most important of the Seleucid cities were the Babylonian Seleucia and the Syrian Antioch, in the latter of which special privileges were granted to the Jews by its founder Seleucus Nicator (Jos. Ant. xii. 3. 1). At a later period Antiochus the Great transported 2,000 Jewish families from Babylonia to Phrygia and Lydia (Jos. Ant. xii. 3. 4).

The capture of Jerusalem by Pompeius in B.C. 63 led to the transplantation of Jews to Rome, where they were settled in the Trans-Tiberine quarter. As early as B.C. 59 Cicero defending L. Flaccus (§ 66) speaks of their numbers and audacity in endeavouring to influence the judges: seis quanta sit manus, quanta concordia, quantum valcat in contionibus.\(^1\) In the same passage he commends Flaccus for having stopped the exportation of the sacred tribute from the Jews in Asia to Jerusalem. Beside these more or less compulsory transplantations, the pursuit of commerce led many Jews to find a home in foreign lands. There is scarcely a place mentioned in the Acts which is without its synagogue or proseucha; and Strabo (up. Jos. Ant. xiv. 7. 2) says that 'it is hard to find a spot in the whole world which is not occupied and dominated by Jews,' the privileges they had enjoyed under their Greek rulers being confirmed and extended by the Roman emperors from the same motives of policy. So Josephus says (c. Ap. ii. 39) 'there is no city, no tribe, whether Greek or barbarian, in which Jewish law and Jewish custom have not taken root.'

It was expected of the members of the Diaspora that they should not only send to the temple their yearly didrachmon, but that they should at least once in their life go up to offer their sacrifice there in person. Among those who listened to Peter's address on the day of Pentecost there were inhabitants of Parthia, Media, Elam, Mesopotomia, Cappadocia, Pontus, Asia, Phrygia, Pamphylia, Egypt, the parts of Libya about Cyrene, Rome, Crete, Those who disputed with Stephen are said to have belonged to the synagogue of the freedmen of Rome, of Cyrene and Alexandria, and of Cilicia and Asia (Acts vi. 9). Philo enumerates the following provinces as inhabited by Jews: Egypt, Phoenicia, Syria, Pamphylia, Cilicia, the greater part of Asia as far as Bithynia and Pontus, Thessalia, Bocotia, Macedonia, Actolia, Attica, Argos, Corinth, the fairest districts of the Peloponnese, Euboea, Cyprus, Crete, not to mention the settlements beyond the Euphrates (Leg. ad Caium M. 2 p. 587). The proselytes who attached themselves to the worship of the synagogues, the εὐσεβείς and $\sigma \epsilon \beta \delta \mu \epsilon \nu o \iota$ of the Acts, as they shared in the persecutions of the Jews (Tac. Ann. ii. 85, Suet. Dom. 12), would doubtless be generally reckoned as belonging to the Diaspora. It was as occasional visitors to Jerusalem that the Jews and Proselytes of the Dispersion would come under the cognizance of the President of the Christian community at Jerusalem. The instructions and warnings contained in his Epistle would naturally be founded on his observation of their special needs and dangers, as well as on his intimate acquaintance with the national character and the general conditions of the time. On this something will be said presently.

It may be asked however whether we are to understand St. James as using the word Diaspora here in its widest sense, or whether he had any special portion of the Diaspora in his eye

St. Peter (i. 1) confines himself to the Diaspora of Asia Minor. His Epistle, as we have seen, was drawn up with a distinct reference to that of St. James, which in some respects served as a model for his own. It seems natural therefore to suppose that one reason why it was addressed to these particular provinces of the Diaspora was that they were less likely to be acquainted with the Epistle of St. James than the provinces omitted. It is also probable that the name Diaspora would be understood to refer, in the first instance, to the original Eastern Diaspora, settled in Babylon and Mesopotamia, and extending as far as the eastern and northern borders of Palestine. Josephus tells us that his History of the Jewish War was first written in Aramaic and addressed τοις ἄνω βαρβάροις, whom he afterwards explains to be the dwellers in Parthia, Babylonia, Arabia, Adiabene, and the countries on the other side of the Euphrates (B. J. Proocm. i. 2), but that subsequently he translated it into Greek for the benefit of the Romans (Ap. i. 9). It is also noticeable that these eastern provinces are the ones first named in the list given of the foreign Jews who were present at the feast of Pentecost (Acts ii. 9—11). We know that there were Christians in Damascus and Antioch at a very early period (Acts ix. 2, 10, 14, 19, 25, xi. 19-21), as well as in Cyprus and Phoenicia (Acts iv. 36, xi. 19, 20). St. Peter writes from Babylon (v. 13), which is probably to be understood literally of the city on the Euphrates and the surrounding An early legend represents a King of Edessa corresponding with our Lord and welcoming the mission of the apostle Thaddaeus (Euseb. H. E. i. 13).

We will now see what more is to be learnt in regard to the readers of the Epistle from the Epistle itself. James writes to them as being himself a servant of Jesus Christ (i. 1), and he assumes that they hold the faith of Christ (ii. 1), and recognize that they are no longer under a yoke of bondage but under the perfect law of liberty (i. 25, ii. 12). They are mixed up however with men who are not only unbelievers but who blaspheme the name of Christ and persecute the believers (ii. 6, 7). The believers themselves are mostly poor (ii. 5); the few rich belonging to their body (i. 10) are in danger of falling away through covetousness, worldliness and pride (iv. 3—6, 13—16). The rich generally appear as persecutors and oppressors, keeping back the hire of their labourers, killing innocent men, themselves the slaves of lust and luxury, fattening themselves in the day of slaughter (ii. 6, 7, v. 3-6). The Church is under the superintendence of Elders, who, or some of whom, are possessed of miraculous gifts of healing; St. James gives instructions as to the use of this gift (v. 14, 15). Their place of meeting is the synagogue, to which strangers are admitted (ii. 2-4). They are exposed to trials of many kinds, especially from their rich oppressors, and it is one main object of the Epistle to encourage them to patient endurance (i. 2, 12, ii. 6, v. 7, 8, 10, 11). There is much however to blame in themselves: their faith is very weak; they are inclined to murmur and complain both against God and against man (i. 6-8, 13, iv. 11, v. 9); their religion and their philanthropy alike are a matter of words and forms, without corresponding feelings and actions (i. 22, 25—27, ii. 14-26); they are deficient in genuine love of man as man; they are haughty to the poor, obsequious to the rich (ii. 1-9, 15, 16). They are censorious, quarrelsome, given to oaths, ambitious, self-confident, eager to set themselves up as teachers, greedy of pleasure, forgetful of God (iii. 1, 6, 9, 14, iv. 1-8, 13, 16, v. 12).

How far do these characteristics agree with what we read elsewhere? First, as to the rich oppressors: I have pointed out, in my note on ii. 6, that these were in all probability Jews. The Gentiles for a long time took no interest in the internal disputes of Jewish sects: they might punish the Christian missionaries as disturbers of the public peace, but they were very unlikely 'to blaspheme Christ' themselves (James ii. 7). Again, if they were Gentiles, why should the rich, rather than the poor, take the trouble to persecute such an insignificant body? In Ephesus and Philippi, it is the rabble who make the loudest outery against the Christians. On the other hand, if we turn to the Jews, we find that the rich were as a fact the leaders in the persecutions. It was the party of the high priest, the wealthy Sadducees (Jos. Ant. xviii. 1.4), who laid hold of the Apostles, as recorded in Acts iv. 1-3; it was with their sanction and that of the Sanhedrin in general, including the Pharisaic section (Acts xxii. 5, xxvi. 10, 12), both being combined against the disciples, as they had been against their Master (Joh. xi. 47, 57, xviii. 3, Matt. xxvi. 3), that Saul, the Pharisee, took the lead in the stoning of Stephen and the ensuing raid on the Church (Acts viii. 1, ix. 1, 2, 21); ¹ at Antioch in Pisidia it was the higher class of proselytes who were stirred up by the Jews to expel Paul out of their coasts (Acts xiii. 50).

It is easy to understand this hostility of the richer and more powerful Jews to the Christians. The prosperous and well-to-do are naturally suspicious of reformers: and Christ and His disciples were reformers of a very thorough-going kind. They preached that the kingdom of heaven was for the poor, that it was easier for a camel to go through the eye of a needle than for a rich man to enter the kingdom of heaven. The rich man who would enter therein must no longer count his riches his own; he must sell all that he had and give to the poor; he must glory no longer in wealth and station, but in having learnt that his superiority only marked him out as intended by God to be the minister and servant of all (James i. 10, Mark x. 43, 44). But there were other and more special grounds for the hatred entertained by the chief priests and Pharisees for the name of Christ. On two separate occasions Christ had openly denounced the buying and selling which was carried on in the Temple under the sanction and for the profit of the worldly-minded and avaricious priests and their partisans: in his parable of the Vineyard and the Husbandmen he had prophesied their speedy overthrow; and St. Luke concludes his narratives of the two incidents in much the same words, 'The chief priests and the scribes and the chief of the people sought to destroy him' (Luke xix. 47, xx. 19, 20). Even more scathing was his denunciation of the intellectual aristocracy, 'Woe unto you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites.' As he had weighed humble poverty in the balance against self-satisfied wealth, so he weighed modest ignorance against self-satisfied learning in the words 'I thank thee, O Father, because thou hast hid these things from the wise and prudent and hast revealed them unto babes'; and even went so far as to declare that the publican and harlot were nearer to the kingdom of God than the self-righteous Pharisee. Yet again, the Sadducees' disbelief in the resurrection was directly challenged by the declaration of the Apostles that they were themselves eyewitnesses of the resurrection of Christ.

^{1 &#}x27;The members of the new sect being strict observers of the law and agreeing with the Pharisees in their opposition to the Saddnees, appeared in a favorable light to at least the more moderate of the former,' until the opposition of the Gospel to Pharisaic Judaism found definite expression in the teaching of the Hellenistic Stephen (Neander, History of the Planting of the Christian Church, Eng. tr. I. 56 foll.).

If further proof were needed to show that the persecutors referred to by St. James were wealthy Jews and not Gentiles, it might be found in the absence of all allusion to Gentiles in our Epistle. Nothing is said as to hardships suffered from them, nothing as to the duty of evangelizing them, or as to the conditions under which they should be received into the Church, nothing as to difficulties of social intercourse, e.g. as regards eating or marriage. There is no reference to that which was the burning question at the Council of Jerusalem (A.D. 51) and on the occasion of St. Paul's later visit to Jerusalem (A.D. 58), viz. the necessity of the rite of circumcision (Acts xv., xxi. 21-25), a question which occupies such an important place in the Epistles to the Galatians and the Romans. It is inconceivable that, if the question were one about which difficulties were generally felt or which was giving rise to practical complications at the time, it could have been passed over in a circular letter addressed to Jewish residents in Gentile lands, especially as the writer inadvertently uses language which, though not itself bearing on this subject, might seem at first sight to have a reference to St. Paul's argument, that circumcision is unnecessary, because faith in Christ is the sole means of justification. We may therefore conclude with considerable probability that it had not yet become a matter of pressing importance. If we compare the First Epistle of St. Peter we find a different state of things; the Gentiles are there distinctly alluded to, as making false charges against the Christians (ii. 12), who are exhorted to submit to the constituted civil authorities and silence their gainsayers by their good behaviour (ii. 13-15). It is further stated that some of the Christians had joined in the immoralities of the Gentiles in their unconverted days, and had subsequently incurred their displeasure by the change in their way of life (iv. 3, 4).

As to the faults of the Christians, the tone of St. James is much more severe than that of St. Peter in his First Epistle, but so far as the latter does specify any charge, it is that of impatience, murmuring, evil-speaking, to which we find many parallels in the plainer spoken Epistle of St. James. St. Paul, as we have seen, in his Epistles to the Galatians and Romans lays stress mainly on the temptation which beset the Jews to substitute legal righteousness, the performance of the works of the law with all its slavish scrupulosity, for the righteousness which is by faith in Christ; but he also takes occasion to warn them against another and no less dangerous error, that an orthodox profession of faith, unaccompanied by the fruits of good living, could suffice for salvation. While the former error forms the subject of the first four chapters of the Galatians, the second is dealt with in the two later chapters. It is not abstract faith which avails, but faith working by love: those who fulfil the works of the flesh shall not inherit the kingdom of God: whatever a man soweth that shall he reap (Gal. v. 14-26). So he insists in his Epistle to the Romans that it is not the hearer but the doer of the law that is justified (ii. 13); that it is vain to profess a knowledge of God and claim to be a guide to the blind, an instructor of the foolish, unless we practise what we preach (ii. 17—23). He warns his readers against laying the blame of their own sins on God (ix. 19 foll.); he urges them to patience in tribulation, to perseverance in prayer, to bless and curse not, to condescend to things that are lowly, to give place to wrath (xii. 12-19), not to judge others, since we shall all stand at the judgment-seat of God, to follow after things which make for peace, and things whereby we may edify one another (xiv. 3, 4, 10-13, 19); and to turn away from those which cause divisions (xvi. 17). The parallels from St. James will be found in a previous chapter (p. 92 foll.).

It has been pointed out above that there is no allusion in this Epistle to the controversy between the Judaizers and the upholders of Gospel freedom, nay, that this controversy is so entirely ignored that the writer is able to use the technical terms of the controversy with a totally different reference. In like manner other controversies or topics which are handled elsewhere by his contemporaries are left unnoticed by him. There is no direct reference to the atoning sacrifice of Christ; none to the Sacraments; none to the details of the Second Coming; none to Church organization, as in the Pastoral Epistles. There is no allusion to incipient gnosticism, as in the Epistle to the Colossians and those to Timothy and Titus and in the writings of St. John. It is assumed that those addressed accept Jesus as the Messiah, that the new law of liberty has been written in their hearts by the indwelling Spirit: but they are still 'zealous for the law,' as St. James describes them in the Acts, they still seem to form one body with their unbelieving compatriots; still, as St. James says again, 'hear Moses read to them every sabbath in the synagogues.' In fact they exhibit an immature stage of Christianity, such as must have continually been found among those who had become believers on the day of Pentecost or through the preaching of some passing evangelist, but were without any regularly organized system of Christian teaching (James iii. I foll.).

The arguments of the Tübingen school, in opposition to the Jewish nationality of those addressed, will be considered in the chapter which follows on the Date of the Epistle. Various incidental expressions have been noticed by editors 1 as bearing on this point. Abraham is called 'our father' in ii. 21, which in this straightforward matter-of-fact Epistle must, by all rules of interpretation, be taken, like the 'Twelve Tribes of the Dispersion,' in its literal sense, unless reason can be shown to the contrary. readers are supposed to be acquainted with the story of Job, Elijah and the prophets (v. 11, 17). The phrase 'Lord of Sabaoth' (v. 4), the reference to Jewish oaths and to the Jewish propensity to curse and swear (iii. 9, v. 12), the term 'synagogue' used for their place of meeting (ii. 1), the high value attributed to the Law and to the confession of the Unity of God-all mark the Jewish nationality of the readers, and would be unmeaning or inappropriate if the Epistle were addressed to Gentiles. The same thing appears from the reference to their avarice and their restless pursuit of wealth (iv. 13—16, v. 1—4).

As regards the place from which the Epistle was written, if we are right in supposing that it was written by the Brother of the Lord, there can be little doubt that it was dated from Jerusalem. This supposition is confirmed by incidental allusions to the early and latter rains (v. 7), to the effect on vegetation of the burning wind (i. 11), to the existence of salt and bitter springs (iii. 11), to the cultivation of figs and olives (iii. 12), and to the neighbourhood of the sea (i. 6, iii. 4).

CHAPTER VII

ON THE DATE OF THE EPISTLE 1

WE have seen in Chapter II. that the Epistle was recognized The general result of the as canonical at the third Council of Carthage (A.D. 397), that it external and internal eviwas included in their lists of Sacred Writings by Athanasius in 367 dence points to the fifth and by Cyril of Jerusalem in 348, that it is quoted by name as decade after thrist as the and by Origen (c. 230) and is by both attributed, though with a certain degree of hesitation, to James, the brother of the Lord; that it is referred to anonymously by Irenaeus, Theophilus, Justin Martyr, the writer of the Epistle to Diognetus, Ignatius, Polycarp, Clement of Alexandria and others, but above all by Hermas during the second century; by Clement of Rome, and the author of the Didaché during the 1st century, also by Barnabas, and the author of the Testaments of the Twelve Patriarchs, who are commonly assigned to the same century. We have seen in Chapter I. that the contents of the Epistle are entirely in harmony with the supposition that it was written by James the brother of the Lord, who was martyred in the year 63 according to Josephus, in 68 according to Hegesippus. It agrees in character with all that we read of James in the Epistles of St. Paul and in the Acts of the Apostles; it agrees in style and diction with the speeches and letter of James literally recorded in the latter book. In Chapter IV. we have seen that it is quoted by several of the writers of the N. T., notably by St. Peter and by St. Paul; by the latter certainly in his Epistle to the Romans written in 58, probably in his two Epistles to the Corinthians (57) and possibly in his first Epistle to the Thessalonians (52).

Epistle.

¹ It is not my aim here, any more than in other chapters, to put forward an independent scheme of chronology of my own; but, assuming the general correctness of the usually accepted chronology, I have endeavoured to determine, with reference to it, the date of the Epistle, supposed to be previously unknown.

This date is confirmed by the absence of any referto the fall of

The results thus obtained are confirmed by a comparison of the Epistle with contemporary history. If it had been written beone either tween the fall of Jerusalem (A.D. 70) and the death of Clement Jerusalem, (usually dated about A.D. 95) it must inevitably have had some reference to the preceding calamity in which so many Jews of the Dispersion had been involved. In our Epistle there is a reference to tribulation, but this arises from the oppression and persecution of the Christians by rich and prosperous Jews, who are compared to beasts fattened for slaughter, and over whom it is said that judgment is already impending: the writer is looking forward, not backward. I need not say how utterly misappropriate such language would be, if addressed to the crushed and broken remnant of the Jews in the years immediately following the utter ruin of their city and temple and nation under Titus. leaders of the persecution, the Sadducean hierarchy, had been exterminated. The wealthier Jews in general, partly from the hatred of their Gentile neighbours, partly from internal animosities, from desire of revenge for past ill-treatment, or from mere greed and envy of the rich on the part of the poor, had been plundered of everything in the reign of terror which prevailed, alike in Jerusalem itself and generally throughout the East, wherever Jews were to be found. If here and there a solitary individual had succeeded in saving some fraction of his former possessions, certainly he had no longer the power to persecute others.

or to the admission of the Church.

A second mark of time in the Epistle is its silence as to the Gentiles into existence of Gentile Christians and the conditions on which Gentiles should be admitted into the Church. If it was written after the violent agitation caused by St. Paul's preaching to the Gentiles and after the decision of the Council of Jerusalem (51), it must surely have contained some reference to these events. It is impossible to suppose that St. James, who was responsible for the compromise agreed to at the Council, and who refers to it subsequently on a later visit of St. Paul to Jerusalem (Acts xxi. 26), would have failed to make use of the opportunity to urge the Jews of the Dispersion to observe the terms of the compact and deal fairly by their Gentile neighbours. Nor does it seem possible to accept Dr. Plummer's suggestion that it may have been written between 53 and 62 (St. James, p. 61), after the controversy on the subject had cooled down; because we have no evidence that the controversy did cool down during that period. On the contrary, the furious assault of the Jews on St. Paul at Jerusalem (A.D. 58) turned on this very question. When he began to speak of his commission to the Gentiles, they burst out, 'Away with such a fellow from the earth' (Acts xxii. 22); and St. James had previously warned him that, among the believing Jews, there were many thousands zealous for the law, who had been informed that he taught the Jews among the Gentiles to forsake Moses and not to circumcise their children (Acts xxi. 20, 21) This was at Jerusalem: how far the excitement was from having cooled down in the provinces, is evident from the Epistle to the Galatians (57). It does not seem that the baptism of Cornelius had aroused anything like the same exasperation, partly no doubt because St. Peter was not suspected as St. Paul was, partly because Cornelius was already a 'proselyte of the gate,' and did not pass at once from heathenism to Christianity like St. Paul's converts. On hearing the explanation of the former 'they of the circumcision' held their peace and glorified God' (Acts xi. 18). There is no reason therefore for throwing back the date of the Epistle to the period before the conversion of Cornelius. But it probably was not much later, for we read shortly afterwards (Acts xi. 20) that the Greeks in Antioch received the word from some of those who had been scattered in the persecution of Stephen, and that Barnabas was sent from Jerusalem to inquire into the circumstances.

Another evidence of the early date of the Epistle may be Theadlusions found in the hints which it lets fall as to Church discipline and order and order. The synagogue is their place of meeting, though it is contained in a synagogue of which Christians have the control. No men- are in accortion is made of 'bishops' or 'deacons,' but only of teachers dance with an early and elders (iii. 1, v. 14). Teaching seems to be still quite unorganized, as in the Church of Corinth (1 Cor. xiv. 26 foll.): it is not confined to regularly ordained church officers: there is no warning (as in 1 Tim. v. 22), to 'lay hands suddenly on no man': all we find is a deprecation of the eagerness on the part of individual members of the congregation to come forward as instructors. The elders, called 'elders of the Church' to distinguish them from the elders of the Jewish community, are supposed either themselves to possess miraculous powers of healing or to control the exercise of such powers on the part of others: they are to pray for the sick and apparently to hear their confession (v. 14, 15); but this does not imply any distinctive spiritual authority, for in the next verse the injunction is made general, 'Confess your sins to one another and pray for one another.' It is interesting to compare the parallel passage in 1 Pet. v. 1-5. There the elders hold a much more important position: they are fellow elders of the Apostle himself, shepherds of the flock of God. who shall receive their reward from the chief Shepherd on his appearance: the younger are to be subject to them. But then follows, as in St. James, the extension of this injunction to all, including the elders themselves; $\pi \acute{a}\nu\tau\epsilon\varsigma$ $\delta\grave{\epsilon}$ $\mathring{a}\lambda\lambda\acute{\eta}\lambda \omicron\iota\varsigma$ $\tau\grave{\eta}\nu$ $\tau a\pi\epsilon\iota\nu \circ$ φροσύνην εγκομβώσασθε, 'yea, all of you gird yourselves (cf. Joh. xiii. 4) with humility towards one another.' Further the means enjoined by St. James for the miraculous healing take us back to the earliest age of the Church. The only other reference in the New Testament to the use of oil for the sick, is in St. Mark's account of the mission of the Twelve, 'They anointed with oil many that were sick and healed them' (vi. 13).

So too is its Judaic tone.

No less confirmatory of an early date is the Judaic tone of the Epistle. The change from a narrow national and ceremonial religion to the universal and spiritual religion promulgated by Christ cannot be made in a moment, even where the old religion is as corrupt and irrational as modern Hinduism; far less where there is so much to satisfy the claims of the reason and conscience, as in the law of Moses. That law was intended as a schoolmaster to bring men to Christ. Those who had been duly prepared by it and 'were waiting for the consolation of Israel' were able at once to welcome Jesus as the expected Messiah, to accept his spiritualization of the Law given on Sinai, and acknowledge their own inability to fulfil the new law of liberty except through the promised help of the Holy Spirit. The sermons reported in the Acts scarcely go beyond this. A few perhaps would be able to make a further advance, and confess the Divinity of Christ and the atonement wrought by Him for the sins of the whole world, but the majority of Jewish Christians between the day of Pentecost and the fall of Jerusalem were probably even less advanced. They did not understand that the former things had passed away, and that from henceforth neither Jews nor Gentiles were bound by the Mosaic Law. The work of James was to lead on men, who were in this stage of religious belief, to higher views, as they were able to bear it. He was especially fitted for this work because he was so much in sympathy with those whom he addressed. By nature slow to move, he had from his childhood loved the Law, as the old psalmists did; the Gospel itself was in his view still the ancient law, revealed at length in its perfect form, and written in the mind and heart of the believer, as Jeremiah had prophesied. We are not of course iustified in assuming that his own belief was limited to what is set down in the Epistle. He wrote doubtless what he believed would be most useful for the majority of those whom he addressed. He could only appeal to motives which would have force with them, and build up his arguments on premisses which they would concede. This perhaps may account for his referring to the example of Job and the prophets rather than of Christ. Supposing, as was probably the case, that our Gospels were not yet in existence, and that the Christian teaching of these Jews of the Dispersion was founded on short collections of logia, containing parables and aphorisms of Christ, it is quite possible that the details of His life may have been less familiar to them than the lessons from the Old Testament read to them in the synagogue every Sabbath day. Still each year must have seen more of the life and teaching of Christ set down in writing; each year must have left its impress on the mind of St. James. One who so strenuously did the Father's will must have learnt more and more of the doctrine, and received ever fuller revelation from the Spirit of truth. So far as this consideration goes, we should be led to assign the Epistle to the earliest possible date after the day of Pentecost.

The considerations on the other side are (1) the position on the other evidently held by the writer; (2) the absence of any reference to an written after immediately preceding conversion of those to whom he writes; (3) the reference to persecutions endured by them. The third consideration would forbid us to assign an earlier date than A.D. 37, the martyrdom of Stephen, which gave the signal for a great persecution against the Church at Jerusalem, and which was followed by the mission of Saul to Damascus (and doubtless by that of other emissaries to other parts of the Diaspora), bearing hand it was a persecu-tion; St. anthority, and the persons addressed were no longer recent eonverts.

letters from the high priest to excite the authorities of the synagogues against the Christians. The tone used by St. James in reference to the trials of the Christians does not imply, as the tone of St. Peter would seem to do, that the persecution was then either at its height or immediately impending (1 Pet. iv. 12), but rather to the sequel of a persecution with its πειρασμοί ποικίλοι of animosities excited and losses endured, of liability to insults and to interference with their religious services, as in Heb. x. 32. If those addressed were still suffering under severe persecutions we should have heard less of their petty rivalries and worldly scheming. As to the position of St. James in the Church of Jerusalem, the first intimation we have of it is in Gal. i. 18, where St. Paul mentions that he saw him and St. Peter on his visit to Jerusalem three years after his conversion. A more certain proof of it may be found in Peter's message, sent to him on the occasion of his escape from prison in 44 A.D. (Acts xii. 17). Lastly the picture given of the Church is not that of one just founded. A circular letter cannot of course take note of the special circumstances of each individual congregation, and it is quite possible and even probable that some of those addressed may have only lately received the Gospel, but it is evident that the majority must have been Christians of some years' standing. account these various considerations we may perhaps name the year 40 A.D., as the earliest, and 50 A.D. as the latest, at which the Epistle could have been written.

The prevailing view at the present time is in favour of an early date.

This is pretty much the conclusion which has been arrived at by the majority of recent editors and others who have treated of the date of the Epistle; so that we may say that it is now generally recognized as being the earliest portion of the New Testament. This is the view of Schneckenburger (Annot. p. 138, Beiträge 200 ff.), Neander (Planting of the Christian Church, Eng. tr. 1842), Von Hofmann, Huther, Beyschlag (Comm. and Theol. Stud. n. Krit. for 1874), Erdmann, Schegg, Alford, Plumptre, Ritschl, Altkatholische Kirche ed. 2, Weiss, Einleitung, 1886, p. 706 foll., P. Ewald, Hauptproblem, 1890, Mangold's edition of Bleek's Einleitung, 1886, pp. 706, 713, Lechler, Apostolic and Post-Apostolic Times (Eng. tr. 1886, vol. i. 290). I venture to think that the grounds for this conclusion have been considerably strengthened by the minute comparison made in a previous Chapter, between the parallel passages in St. James and in the Epistle to the Romans and the First Epistle of St. Peter. If I am not greatly mistaken, that comparison has proved not only that St. James has not copied from the other Epistles, but that these show distinct traces of having been written with reference to his Epistle. The strength however of the general argument is not to be measured by the strength of any one line of proof, however irrefragable we may deem it, but by the cumulative force of many converging probabilities. After having given many years' study to the subject, I am convinced that the more closely it is examined, the more will this hypothesis of the priority of our Epistle be found to meet all difficulties, and explain all the facts of the case.

Those who take a different view suppose that it was either Examination of the written by St. James towards the close of his life, or that it is a grounds on which it has forgery from the hand either of an Ebionite or of a Christian Essene, whether in the first or second century. The former view the close of is maintained by Kern (ed. 2), Wiesinger, Woldemar Schmidt, Bruno Brückner, Wordsworth, and Farrar (Early Days of Christianity, p. 310 foll.).

been assigned to St. James's

The reasons assigned by the last-mentioned writer are (1) 'the (1)' Use of the name prevalence of the name of Christ, instead of the title the Christ.' But the name Christ never occurs by itself in this Epistle, but only in the phrase Ίησοῦς Χριστός, which is found without the article in every book of the New Testament, except the Gospel of St. Luke and the Third Epistle of St. John; whereas the phrase Ingoûs ό Χριστός or ό Χριστὸς 'Ιησοῦς occurs nowhere, except in the Acts (four times) and once in Coloss. ii. 6.

"Christ" without the article.

A second argument is 'the condition and wide dissemination of (2) 'Condithe churches to which it is addressed, which make it necessary to assume that 'many years had elapsed since the day of Pentecost.' As to this, there is nothing to suggest the wide dissemination of the churches to which it is addressed, beyond the phrase 'The Twelve Tribes of the Diaspora, which is no doubt wide enough in conception, but defines nothing as to the actual extent of country occupied. It is consistent with two copies sent, say, to Antioch and to Damascus, or with one hundred copies distributed throughout the East. All that it implies is that the advice contained in the letter is in the opinion of the writer suitable for all or any Jews churches addressed.' of the Dispersion. The argument derived from the 'condition of the churches' is more fully stated in Davidson's Introduction (1868) I. 288, 'Distinctions of places in Christian churches, an ambitious love of preeminence, an unworthy partiality for the rich, are inconsistent with an early period.' Amid the worldly views and arrangements which prevailed in these Christian assemblies early Christian love had grown cold.'

There is no ground for attributing an ideal the primitive Christians.

I have only two faults to find with this argument. It is contradicted, first, by all we know of the facts of the case, and, perfection to secondly, by general experience. All the evidence we have as to the state of the early Church from the baptism of Christ to the last record in the Acts is opposed to these dreams of an ideal perfection. It is unnecessary to refer to 'the ambitious love of preeminence,' the faithlessness, the narrowness, which marked even the greatest of the Apostles during our Lord's lifetime. Let us start with the day of Pentecost. Take the early chapters of the Acts; how long did the state of things described in the fourth chapter continue? How long could it be said that the multitude of them that believed were of one heart and one soul and had all things in common? In the very next chapter we find Ananias and Sapphira lying to the Holy Ghost: in the sixth chapter the Greeian Jews murmur against the Hebrews because their widows were neglected in the daily visitation: in the eighth chapter Simon wishes to purchase spiritual gifts with money: in the fifteenth chapter we read of the jealousy of the Jews towards the Gentiles, which almost proved fatal to the infant Church: in the nineteenth Paul meets with disciples who had not so much as heard 'whether there be any Holy Ghost': in the twentieth he warns the elders of the Church at Ephesus that after his departure 'grievous wolves shall enter in, yea, from among your own selves shall men arise speaking perverse things to draw away the disciples after them': in the twenty-first it seems that Christian Jews joined with others who were zealous for the law, in the attempt to kill Paul. If we turn to the Epistles, we find in Rom. ii. and xiv. many of the faults condemned by St. James. The Corinthians within five years of their conversion are broken up by schisms: they are as much given to vainglory and jealousy and strife and censorious judgments as the churches to which St. James writes. They are more addicted to sins of the flesh; they include to excess even when they meet together for the Lord's Supper; they go to law one with another in the courts of the heathen; their religious meetings are a scene of confusion and disorder from each man's eagerness to get a hearing; they are falling back into idolatry; they even dispute the authority of their spiritual father and deny his apostleship. So the Galatians within ten years of their conversion have departed from the Gospel which Paul preached, and have to be sternly warned against the works of the flesh. Even in his earliest Epistle written to the Thessalonians shortly after their conversion, he bids them be at peace among themselves, admonish the disorderly, encourage the faint-hearted, quench not the Spirit, despise not prophesyings. The Epistles to the Seven Churches in the Apocalypse, the first of St. John, the second of St. Peter, that of St. Jude and that to the Hebrews, give an even less satisfactory picture of the Christian Church than the Epistle of St. James does.

So far as St. Paul himself is concerned, his later Epistles, such as those to the Philippians and Ephesians, describe a nearer approach to a perfect state of things in the churches addressed than is to be found in his earlier Epistles. And this, of course, is what we should naturally expect. A church just converted from Judaism or heathenism will not at once lose the traces of its former condition. The Pharisee, who loved the chief seat in the synagogue and to be called of men Rabbi, will not on the moment of conversion lose his liking for these things, any more than the Corinthian will at once learn reverence and purity. Christian perfection is a plant of slow growth. I have already alluded to the way in which the Jews of the Diaspora would probably have received the Gospel. would have been powerfully affected by hearing St. Peter preach on the day of Pentecost; others might have been baptized by a passing evangelist. To judge of the probable effect, let us take a similar case in the present day. Place before your mind the most successful of modern missions to the heathen, or of revivals at home. Is any one so sanguine as to imagine that congregations thus founded will be at once freed from the dangers of ambition and worldliness for years to come? If there is such a person, let me recommend to him a study of the life of Fox or Wesley, or of any honest missionary journal.

A third argument is 'the sense of delay in the Second Coming,' for which reference is made to ch. v. 7, 8: 'Be patient, belief in the nearness of the Second Coming.

(3) 'Waning therefore, brethren,...for the Coming of the Lord is at hand.' I have myself referred to the same passage, as proving that the writer shared the belief expressed by St. Paul in his earlier Epistles as to the immediate Coming of the Lord. It is in strong contrast with the language used in 2 Peter iii. 3, 8: 'Knowing this, that in the last times mockers shall come...saying Where is the promise of his coming? for from the days that the fathers fell asleep all things continue as they were from the beginning of the creation': 'But forget not this one thing, beloved, that one day is with the Lord as a thousand years, and a thousand years as one day.' It seems to me that the words of St. James, while they prove his own expectation of the speedy appearance of the Lord, do not at all disprove the same expectation on the part of those whom he addresses. man might easily be impatient under continued ill-treatment, even though he believed, as an abstract dogma, that the Judge was soon to appear. St. James urges him to make it a living truth, affecting his daily practice. A fourth argument is that founded on the discussion about faith and works, which Archdeacon Farrar thinks 'finds its most reasonable explanation in the supposition that he is striving to remove the dangerous inferences to which St. Paul's doctrine of justification by faith was liable.' The difficulty as to the absence of any reference to the subject debated in the Council of Jerusalem is got over by the assumption that 'the circumcision question was speedily forgotten.' On these points I have already said all that I think necessary.1

Arguments of Dr. Davidson to prove that it was written by an anonymous Ebionite shortly before the fall of Jerusalem.

I turn now to other arguments adduced by Dr. Davidson. He is of opinion that 'the direction to send for the elders of the Church, and their use of oil with the prayer of faith, sayours of a postapostolic time.' Why? The Apostles made use of oil in healing the sick (Mark vi. 13), and any Jewish community would be under the direction of elders. But 'the office of elder was originally confined to the Church's outer guidance,' and here 'the office of eldership is separated from the members of the Church, a thing which did not exist in primitive Christianity.' The meaning is not very clearly expressed. If certain members of the Church were chosen to hold the office of elder, they were ipso facto separated from the other members of the Church; and spiritual functions are certainly implied in 1 Thess. v. 12-14, 1 Pet. v. 2, and in Acts xx. 17 and 28.

The passage in St. James seems to imply an earlier condition of things, for he there enjoins mutual confession and prayer.

Dr. Davidson goes on to deny the authenticity of the Epistle on the ground (1) that its polemic aspect towards the doctrine of justification by faith alone, assigns it to a post-apostolic period. This argument has, of course, no weight with those who do not recognize any polemic aspect towards St. Paul's doctrine. have shown, in ch. iv., that St. James is attacking that most ancient of all religious heresies, which puts words and professions in the place of deeds and conduct.] (2) The style of writing is too good for James.' Something has been said on this point already in pp. xli. and xlii., and more will be said shortly in the chapter on the Language of the Epistle. (3) 'It is not likely that James, the Lord's brother, would have directly opposed Paul's doctrine...That he should have written against it argues a want of respect for the Apostle of the Gentiles incompatible with James's position.' Quite true; but of no force against those who deny the polemic aspect. (4) 'The essential doctrines of Christianity are wanting in the Epistle...Had James written it, we should naturally expect some mention of Christ's resurrection at least...On the other hand, the Mosaic law, circumcision, &c., are passed over, and the royal law of liberty is exalted... The writer had therefore attained to a subjective standpoint beyond James; to ideas of Christian liberty like the Pauline...Although the statement of Christian doctrines is incomplete as well as imperfect, and the writer's point of view more Jewish than Christian, he occupies a spiritual stage in Jewish Christianity which James the Just scarcely reached.' might be well if the writer of these confused and self-contradictory sentences would take the trouble carefully to compare the teaching of the Sermon on the Mount with that of St. James, and consider how far his remarks are applicable to the former. (5) 'The letter is professedly addressed to all Jewish-Christians out of Palestine. But were there churches composed of such members?...Churches were of a mixed character except in Palestine. Wiesinger therefore may well ask, Where shall we look for the Jewish-Christians out of Palestine which will satisfy the requirements of the Epistle?a question not answered by reference to Acts ii. 5-11, xi. 19, &c., because the passages are far from implying the extensive establishment of Jewish-Christian churches immediately after Pentecost.

The earliest history contains no clear trace of such churches widely scattered through the lands.' In answer we may say that undoubtedly there must have been such churches previously to the admission of Gentiles into the Church, otherwise than as proselytes. It was to persecute such a church that Saul went to Damascus with authority from the high priest. Such were all churches founded before the conversion of Cornelius, and the great majority of churches founded before 51, except those founded by St. Paul. There is just as little point in Dr. Davidson's further remark that the writer does not convey the impression that his knowledge of their condition was minute or specific, for his language is general, such as a late author, writing in his name, would employ." course a circular letter cannot deal with personal relations. Dr. Davidson then states his own conclusion that it was written after James's death, in his name, by a moderate Ebionite, shortly before the destruction of Jerusalem. One does not quite see why the moderate Ebionite should have been capable of writing in 68 the letter which we have been just told it was impossible for St. James to have written six years before. If the moderate Ebionite 'occupied a spiritual stage which James the Just hardly reached,' should we not 'naturally expect some mention of Christ's resurrection at least'! But these men in buckram, who are always at the disposal of our modern critics, are wonderfully Protean in their characteristics as in their powers.

Von Soden's arguments against the genuineness of the Epistle are opposed to facts,

Let us turn, however, from the halting and hesitating disciple, with his intervals of English common-sense, to the uncompromising idealism and superiority to fact of the German school, to whose guidance he has surrendered himself. We may take Von Soden as one of the latest representatives of the school. Here is a summary of his Introduction to our Epistle, so far as it relates to its date and authenticity, which is contained in the Hand-Kommentar zum N.T., brought out under the direction of Professors Holtzmaun, Lipsius, and others, in 1890:—

In thought and expression there is considerable resemblance between our epistle and the writings of Clement of Rome, and especially of Hermas. There is however no reason to suppose any literary connexion between them. They resemble one another, simply because they were produced under the same conditions. This view is confirmed by the fact that no trace of our epistle is to be found throughout the 2nd century. Hegesippus knows nothing of an epistle of James. The supposed reminiscences in Clement of Alexandria are just as likely to be reminiscences of Philo or Peter or Clement of Rome.

Origen is the first to mention the epistle, without however accepting its genuineness, as is evident from his comment on Matthew xiii. 55, in which he gives some account of the Lord's brothers and refers to the epistle of Jude, but not to that of James.

What is to be said when people, who ought to know better, make The Epistle statements of this sort? I can only refer my readers to my chapter on the External Evidence for the Authenticity of the Epistle, and ask whether the quotations there given from Clement of Rome and others are not sufficient evidence that our Epistle was known in the first century; whether the quotations from Ignatius, Polycarp, Justin Martyr, the Ep. ad Diognetum, Irenaeus, above all Hermas, are not such as to prove that our Epistle was studied by these writers in the second century; whether any one with the smallest particle of historical sense or literary feeling could for a moment dream that the author of the Shepherd was prior to, or contemporary with, the writer of our Epistle; whether the fact that Origen, having other things of more interest to tell about St. James, omits to mention that he wrote this Epistle (as he also omits to mention that he presided over the Council at Jerusalem), while he mentions the Epistle of St. Jude, because about St. Jude he has nothing else to tell-whether, I say, this fact gives the slightest ground for supposing that Origen doubted the authority of an Epistle, which he over and over again cites as Scripture, and as written by James, the brother of the Lord.

was well known to many writers of the second century;

Let us hear next what Von Soden has to say on the relation of our Epistle to other books of the New Testament.

The writer is acquainted with the epistle to the Romans and the first epistle to the Corinthians. The tone is similar to that in the Hebrews, though there is no literary connexion between them. On the other hand it is partly copied from the 1st of Peter. The isolated resemblances to the Apocalypse prove nothing. It is closely connected with the Gospel and Acts of Luke, having the same Ebionite leaning, and giving the words of Christ in the same form, while there seems no trace of the special tradition of Matthew, such as we find in section v. 17-vi. 13 of his Gospel (except for the injunction as to swearing). There is however no direct copying from the Gospels. With the writings of John there is no kind of connexion. The writer is acquainted with the LXX., but betrays no knowledge of the Hebrew text of the Old Testament. He is well acquainted with the sapiential books of the Apocrypha and with Philo. There are also signs of his having some knowledge of Greek literature.

Here too the conclusions arrived at seem to me entirely at vari- and it is not ance with the facts, as I think will be apparent to any one who will coher books ponder what has been said in my chapter on the Relation of the Epistle to Contemporary Writings. Some may be surprised to hear that Marcion's favourite gospel is distinguished by Ebionite leanings. It is true however that in some cases, not by any means the majority, the references to the words of Christ which occur in our Epistle approach more nearly to the form in which they are given by St. Luke, than to the form in which they are given by St. Matthew. The quotations in my fourth chapter will show that it is quite a mistake to speak of section v. 17—vi. 13 in the latter, or of the Gospel and Epistles of St. John, as affording no parallels to St. James. Nor is it true that the Epistle betrays no knowledge of the Hebrew. Compare my note on v. 20, where the quotation from Prov. x. 12 has no resemblance to the rendering of the LXX.

The next paragraph of Von Soden treats of the Readers for whom the Epistle was intended. He argues that the address to the Twelve Tribes of the Dispersion is entirely misleading, and possibly a later insertion, as Harnack has suggested. His reasons are as follows:

Von Soden Judaic in the Epistle.

Nothing in the letter suggests Jewish readers. No reference is made to the finds nothing Temple, the Worship, the Law. Instead of this, the one supreme rule of life, by obedience to which man receives the blessing of salvation, is the implanted word, which is styled the perfect law of liberty. But there is no attempt to connect this law with the teaching of the Old Testament; and the prescribed Jewish ritual is not argued against, but simply ignored. It is impossible that monotheism could have been the distinctive article of faith with Jewish Christians: impossible that they could have magnified this faith to the depreciation of works. Nor could works with them ever mean works of love as distinguished from works of the law. [Then follows the argument, already noticed, as to the impossibility of discovering any purely Jewish church in the Diaspora. I have shown above that, previous to the Council of Jerusalem, the great majority of churches must have been of this type.] Von Soden well draws out the impossibility of the burning question, of the admission of Gentiles into the Church, being ignored in an epistle addressed to the Diaspora (if written after this date). He gives us again the old argument, answered above, that we cannot conceive first love cooling down, say, in a period of ten years.

He considers that it was written at a time of degeneracy, when the Jewish element in the Church had lost all significance; that perhaps the title may be after all genuine, because Christians had then learnt to regard themselves as the true Israel, strangers and pilgrims in the world, waiting for the hour of their Lord's appearing. If it had been really intended for Jews, there must have been more of local colouring. The instances alleged for this local colouring are not exclusively applicable to Jews.

The only argument here which seems to call for examination is its teaching founded on the fact that the Jewish Christians are charged with laying too much stress, not on their ritual (the works of the law), belief is just but on their orthodox belief in one God. No doubt there is a what might be expected striking difference between the language of St. James and the from St. James writlanguage of St. Paul on this point; a difference entirely in according to Jews; ance with all we know of the two men. St. James, living among Jews, himself practising the Jewish ritual, saw no objection to Jewish Christians continuing their ritual observances, as long as they ascribed no merit to them. He warns his readers, however, not to suppose that the outward rite could commend them to God (i. 27): the religious service which God approved consisted in charity and unworldliness. Is not this perfectly natural teaching from a Jewish apostle to Jewish believers, who would at once recognize it as a re-publication of the teaching of Isaiah and Micah on the same subject? Does then the improbability consist in the assumption that Jewish Christians were in danger of trusting in their orthodox monotheism to the neglect of the perfect law of love? It is plain at any rate that if there were any people who were likely to pride themselves on this belief, they must have been Jews by birth, not Gentiles. Moreover we know as a matter of fact that Jews did pride themselves just on this point, did believe that their orthodoxy placed them on a pinnacle above all other people, and was of itself efficient to salvation; compare the words of Justin spoken to a Jew (Tryph. p. 370 D), 'You and others like you (i.e. Judaizing Christians) deceive yourselves with words, saying that, though you should be sinners, yet because you know God, the Lord will not impute sin to you,' and see Lightfoot, Gal. pp. 154-164, and the quotations in my note on ii. 19. In the same way they are rebuked by John the Baptist and by our Lord for priding themselves on their descent from Abraham (Matt. iii. 8, 9, vii. 21-23, Luke xiii. 24-30). It would be just as rational to deny that the sapiential books of the Bible and Apocrypha were written for Jews by Jews, as to deny this of the Epistle of St. James.

so too its teaching as

To go now a little more into detail, Von Soden tells us that to the Law. nothing is said of the Temple, the Worship, the Law. have seen that with regard to worship, a most important rule is laid down, which implies the insignificance of the Mosaic ritual no less than our Lord's words 'neither in this mountain nor yet at Jerusalem.' As to the Temple, one does not quite see how it could be introduced in a letter to Jews residing abroad, unless it were to urge them to send contributions more regularly or to come up more frequently to Jerusalem. But trivial details of this sort would be entirely out of place in the exhortations of one who may be best described as the living embodiment of the Sermon on the Mount. As to the Law, how can it be said to be ignored, when there is a distinct reference to the common Jewish error, that you might pick and choose your favourite commandment and confine your attention to that: 'Whoever offends in a single point is guilty of the whole law; for he that said Thou shalt not commit adultery, said also Thou shalt not kill'? and when in iv. 11 the Law appears as the representative of the Lawgiver and Judge? This conception of the Law, as the expression of the mind and will of God, leads at once to its being regarded as a Law of Liberty, the guiding principle of life, not the mere written statute. Von Soden asks why St. James does not point out that such a Law of Liberty was already recognized in the Old The answer is that it was unnecessary, because the very phrase would naturally recall to the minds of his Jewish readers similar expressions in the Old Testament (see note on i. 25), and would also be felt to be in entire accordance with the ethical teaching of Christ, as contained in what we know as the Sermon on the Mount, and probably in the earliest summaries provided for the use of believers.

Meaning of the term 'works' in the Epistle.

Lastly Von Soden asserts that Jewish Christians would never limit the sense of $\tilde{\epsilon}\rho\gamma a$ to 'works of love' but would necessarily include in it St. Paul's 'works of the law.' In the actual passage in question (ii. 14-26) we need not limit $\tilde{\epsilon}\rho\gamma a$ to works of love, strictly speaking: the sacrifice of Isaac (ii. 21) could hardly be described as such. They are ἔργα καλά in the widest sense; though they exhibit no doubt the joint action of faith and love, if there is any meaning in the illustration from almsgiving contained in vv. 15, 16, and any reference to the royal law of ver. 8, or to the pattern of pure religion depicted in i. 27. Is this then an unusual sense of the word $\tilde{\epsilon}\rho\gamma\sigma\nu$ in the New Testament? Does it usually include a reference to strict ceremonial observance? Would it be naturally understood by Jews to include this? In John viii. 39 the works of Abraham (i.e. his hospitality &c., Gen. xviii.) are contrasted with the murderous intentions of the Jews; in Apoc. xx. 12 we read that the dead will be judged κατά $\tau \dot{a} \ \ddot{\epsilon} \rho \gamma a \ a \dot{v} \tau \hat{\omega} v$, meaning of course the same as $\kappa a \tau \dot{a} \ \tau \dot{\eta} v \ \pi \rho \hat{a} \xi \iota v$ αὐτοῦ in Matt. xvi. 27, which is explained of works of love in Matt. xxv. 34-46. So over and over again we find in the Δpocalypse οἶδα τὰ ἔργα σου, referring as the context shows, to moral conduct. St. Paul, writing after St. James, finds it necessary to distinguish the $\tilde{\epsilon}\rho\gamma a$ $\pi i\sigma\tau\epsilon\omega s$ and the $\tilde{\epsilon}\rho\gamma a$ $a\gamma a\pi\eta s$, the natural fruits of faith and love, from the ἔργα νόμον, dead works done from slavish obedience to an external law.

Again Von Soden, like his school in general, exaggerates the negative side of the Epistle: the writer, he says, ignores the ignore the Resurrection. What does he make of the phrase $\tau \hat{\eta}_s \delta \delta \xi \eta_s$ in ii. This surely involves the belief in the Resurrection and Ascension and even in the Divinity of Christ.

Does St. James Resurrection?

The final result of his investigation is that the Epistle was von Soden's written at Rome during the reign of Domitian to Christians generally. Beyschlag well asks, If so, what possible inducement the time of was there for the forger, who was certainly no sectarian, like the inconsistent author of the Clementines, but an orthodox believer, to inscribe his letter with the name of James, rather than of Peter? and if he was determined to choose James, what possible motive could be have for using the modest description 'servant' instead of 'brother' of the Lord Jesus Christ?

theory that it was written in Domitian is with the modest heading,

I will now take the most recent statement of the theory that the W. Brück-ner's theory, Epistle was written in the second century. This is contained in that it was copied from W. Brückner's Die chronologische Reihenfolge der Neutestamentlichen 1 Peter and Briefe, Haarlem, 1890.

therefore cannot have been written before Hadrian.

According to his view the only epistles written during the first century were those to the Romans, Corinthians, Galatians, Philemon, Philippians, Hebrews, and the 1st to the Thessalonians. The first epistle of Peter was written during the persecution under Trajan. As our epistle borrows from it and shows no traces of being written under stress of persecution, the latter cannot be assigned to an earlier period than the reign of Hadrian. The priority of Peter to James is proved as follows. The topics common to both epistles are better expressed and more logically handled, the phrases used are more exact and appropriate in the former than in the latter. For instance the exhortation to rejoice in tribulation is common to both; but in Peter we see that there is real occasion for it—those whom he addresses are actually in the midst of a fiery trial, suffering for righteousness' sake (iii. 14, iv. 12); this persecution is the work of the devil whom they resist by their patient endurance (v. 8, 9); they are bidden to exult, not in their trial itself, but in the glory which is to follow, the salvation ready to be revealed in the last time (i. 5, iv. 13); they are encouraged by the reminder of their high calling (i. 3, ii. 9, 20, 21, iii. 14, &c.), by the example of Christ whose sufferings they share (ii. 21, iii. 18, iy. 13), and by the hope of the promised reward (i. 4, 7). The tone of the epistle is throughout that of hopefulness, and the exultant joy in tribulation is only the issue and climax of this hopefulness. In James it is just the reverse: he borrows the phrase 'manifold temptations,' but there is no special appropriateness in it; those whom he addresses are not suffering persecution from the heathen; so too he borrows the phrase 'resist the devil,' but this is not connected with the general thought of trial; he bids them rejoice in tribulation, but he gives no reason for their doing so; he has not prepared the way for it by the spirit-stirring appeals and encouragements of Peter; if he refers to the future it is only to remind them of the terrible coming of the Judge.

is founded on a superficial and misleading comparison between the two Epistles, in regard (1) to the exhortation to rejoice in trials,

Now to examine this: could any one imagine from Brückner's description that St. James grounds his exhortation to rejoice, on the fact that trial works endurance, and endurance Christian perfection (i. 2-4)? could be imagine that it is James who says, he who endures trial will receive the crown of life, the kingdom promised to all that love God (i. 12, ii. 5)? that it is James who speaks of the profession of Christianity as in itself a patent of nobility (i. 9), and refers to the fact of Christ's being the glory of Christians as annihilating all earthly distinctions (ii. 1)? It is no doubt true that he puts in the fore-front of his Epistle the hightoned, uncompromising summons to rise superior to human weakness, and rejoice in what the world thinks misery. I have elsewhere spoken of this as an instance of the stoicism of St. James, and pointed out how the same demand is softened down by the gentler and more sympathetic Apostle. But it is not more stoical than it is Christ-like: it is a reminiscence, like so much besides, of the actual words of his divine Brother, 'Blessed are ye that weep now; blessed are ye when men shall hate you, and separate you from their company, and cast out your name as evil for the Son of man's sake; rejoice ye in that day and leap for joy.' If Christ did not shrink from this sublime paradox, if paradox was one of the most efficient weapons used by Him as well as by older reformers, by Socrates and the Stoics, to shake men out of their slumbers and rouse them to aim at a new and higher ideal, why are we to dispute St. James's right to use it, as if it could only be ascribed to an unintelligent repetition of St. Peter's language? If Bruckner had paid a little more attention to our Epistle he would have seen that one of its most marked characteristics is the commencement of each paragraph by a statement of the practical maxim, usually a precept or an interrogation, which it is intended to enforce; e.g. i. 19 contains the maxim, 'Let each be swift to hear, slow to speak, and slow to wrath,' which is explained and illustrated in vv. 20-27; the injunction against respect of persons in ii. 1 is explained and illustrated in vv. 2-10; the maxim that faith without works is valueless in ii. 14 is explained and illustrated in vv. 15-26, &c. Again, it is true that there is no reference in our Epistle to persecutions from the heathen; but, if the readers are liable to be dragged before the Jewish courts on a charge of Christianity by their unbelieving countrymen (ii. 6, 7); if they are oppressed by their rich neighbours, who withhold their wages and threaten their life (v. 4-6); it is surely a little absurd to deny that they are έν ποικίλοις πειρασμοίς. It is true again that the devil is not referred to as the cause of these outward $\pi \epsilon \iota \rho a \sigma \mu o i$, but rather as the god of this world, the inspirer of a false wisdom, the instigator of all the evil wrought by means of the tongue (iv. 4-7, iii. 6, 15); which some may perhaps consider to be both a deeper and a wider conception of diabolic activity than that in the parallel passage of St. Peter.

Brückner next compares James i. 18, 21 with 1 Pet. i. 23, ii. 1. The general conception in both is the same, that Christians are born again through the instrumentality of the Word of God; and the practical inference the same, to cast away all that might hinder the reception of the Word; but while all is natural and straightforward in Peter, James shows that he copies without understanding, by his use of the term $\tilde{\epsilon}\mu\dot{\phi}\nu\tau\omega\nu$. In ver. 18 he had said that God ἀπεκύησεν ήμας λόγω ἀληθείας, in ver. 21 he says δέξασθε τὸν ἔμφυτον λόγον, but how can we receive what has been already engrafted?

(2) the doctrine of regeneration.

This is a criticism founded simply on a misapprehension of the meaning of a term, as to which see my note in loco and also (for the force of these verbals in -τος) on ἀπείραστος i. 13.

The next point raised is, that in 1 Pet. v. 1-11 there is a better logical connexion than in the parallel passage James iv. 6-10, and that the former is to resist the therefore the original. The general drift in Peter is as follows:—(vv. 1-4) the elders are admonished to take charge of the flock of Christ, not as having dominion over them, but as setting them an example : by so doing they will receive from the chief Shepherd, on his appearing, the crown of glory which fadeth not away: (vv. 5-7) the admonition is extended to others, 'Likewise ye younger be subject unto the elder; yea, all of you gird yourselves with humility to serve one another, for God resisteth the proud, but giveth grace to the humble: humble yourselves therefore under the mighty hand of God, that he may exalt you in due time, casting all your care upon him because he careth for you. (vv. 8-10) Be sober, be watchful; your adversary, the devil, as a roaring lion, walketh about, seeking whom he may devour; whom withstand, steadfast in the faith, knowing that the same sufferings are accomplished in your brethren who are in the world; and the God of all grace who called you unto His eternal glory in Christ, after that ye have suffered a little while, shall Himself perfect, stablish, strengthen you.'

The order of thought here is the following: the elders are not to lord it over the younger; the younger are to be subject to the elder, or rather all are to serve one another, girding themselves with humility. So far humility is an attitude of man towards man: in what follows it is the attitude of man towards God. God resists the proud, but gives grace to the humble: if we humble ourselves before him, he will exalt us in due time. It would seem from the following clause that this exaltation refers, in the first place, to the deliverance from temporal anxieties. The devil appears in ver. 8 as the cause of these anxieties: he seeks to terrify the Christians into apostasy; but God will stablish and strengthen them after a short period of suffering. It can hardly be said that the logical connexion is very strict in these verses. The admonition to the elders has little to do with withstanding the devil, as the cause of their present auxieties; and humility towards man does not seem quite the same thing as humility towards God.

Now take the parallel passage in James: (iv. 1-3) quarrels come from unsatisfied lusts; you are unsatisfied, because you either do not ask of God, or you ask in a worldly spirit; (ver. 4) the friendship of the world is enmity with God; whoever seeks the world's friendship, thereby becomes the enemy of God; (vv. 5-10) the Spirit of God within us jealously demands the possession of our whole heart, but gives all the more grace (in consequence of that jealousy). Hence the Scripture says, 'God resists the proud (i.e. the worldly), but gives grace to the humble.' Be subject therefore to God, and withstand the devil (the prince of this world), and he will flee from you. Draw nigh to God and he will draw nigh to you. Repent, and humble yourselves in the sight of God, and he will exalt you.

I think no careful reader can fail to see that Brückner has exactly reversed the truth, and that the order of thought is much more logical here than in St. Peter. All falls naturally under the heading 'loyalty to God.' The word 'humility' is used throughout in reference to our attitude towards God. Quarrels arise from an unchastened desire for worldly good. We cannot have peace either in ourselves or with our neighbours until we submit ourselves unreservedly to God, who resists those that aim at worldly success and make a god of self, but gives grace to those that surrender up their wills to His. He who tempted Eve, tempts us also to set up our will against God's will; but, if we refuse to listen, the tempter flies; while any attempt on our part to draw near to God brings Him near to us. The meaning of 'exaltation,' $\dot{\nu}\psi\dot{\omega}\sigma\epsilon\iota$, in the 10th verse is explained by $\tau\hat{\varphi}$ $\ddot{\nu}\psi\epsilon\iota$ in i. 9. It refers to no outward prosperity, but to the moral dignity which belongs to him who has made God his portion.

Brückner refers, as I have done, to the common quotations contained in the two Epistles. I pointed out that it was characteristic quotations, of St. James to quote carelessly, of St. Peter to quote accurately; that the former uses a biblical phrase without reference to its original context, while the latter holds fast to the original context. To me this seemed to favour the supposition that St. Peter was the copyist. Brückner takes the reverse view. I leave it to each man's common-sense to say which is right, after he has compared the contexts of the quotations in the two Epistles.

(4) the common

His next point is that τὸ καλὸν ὄνομα in James ii. 7 has to be (5) the use explained from 1 Pet. iv. 14—16 εὶ ὀνειδίζεσθε ἐν ὀνόματι Χριστοῦ phrases in μακάριοι...εί δὲ ὡς Χριστιανὸς (πάσχει), μὴ αἰσχυνέσθω, δοξαζέτω δὲ τὸν Θεὸν ἐν τῷ ὀνόματι τούτφ. This is a similar case to the preceding. In my view it exhibits St. Peter, as usual, filling up the bare outline of St. James. That the phrase needs no explanation is plain from the parallel passages quoted in my notes in loco and on v. 14 εν τώ ονόματι.

Lastly he thinks that the $\pi\rho\delta$ $\pi\acute{a}\nu\tau\omega\nu$ of James v. 12 has been transferred from its more appropriate context in 1 Pet. iv. 8. my note on v. 12 I have pointed out that πρὸ πάντων must be understood in reference to other manifestations of an impatient spirit, and not as exalting the abstaining from oaths above all other Christian duties. Probably it was a common phrase with the writer. If it was suggested, as I believe, to St. Peter by his acquaintance with our Epistle, he would naturally employ it of a matter of more general importance.

St. James which have to be explained from St. Peter.

Bruckner's conclusion is that the forged by an Essene living at century.

In a later chapter of the same volume Bruckner deals with the Epistles which he assigns to the second century as having been written after the 1st epistle Epistle was of Peter. These are the second to the Thessalonians, and those to the Colossians and Ephesians, belonging to the earlier half of the century; and secondly, the Pastoral Epistles, James, Jude, the second of Peter, and those of John, which Rome in the he considers to have been written subsequently to 150 A.D. With regard to our latter half of Epistle he refers to what he had said before, as to its being copied from 1 Pet, and cites parallels from Romans, Corinthians, Hebrews, Apocalypse and the Gospel of St. Matthew to show that it was written after these. In reply to Beyschlag he asserts that the Judaizing tone of the Epistle is not the naive Judaism of an early Jewish Christian writer, but that it implies a late stage of the doctrinal development, inasmuch as it attacks Paulinism as the seed of an existing Gnosticism. The writer betrays his Essene tendency by his prohibition of swearing, his contempt for riches, his dislike of trade, warning against sins of the tongue, high esteem of poverty, &c. He takes the pseudonym of James, as a contemporary had taken that of Peter; because the traditional reputation of the ascetic president of the Church of Jerusalem seemed likely to give most authority to his teaching. Partly in order to imitate his style, partly to mark his own opposition to all that was characteristic of Paul, he makes use of the simple salutation χαίρειν, which he found in a circular ascribed to James in the Acts. The address to the Twelve Tribes of the Diaspora cannot be taken literally. The true address reveals itself in the phrase 'your synagogue' (ii. 2), by which we are in all probability to understand a little conventicle of Essene Christians at Rome. The phrase 'Diaspora' denotes similar scattered conventicles, in which alone 'the true Israel,' 'the poor,' are to be found. By 'the rich,' who occasionally drop into their conventicles and so cruelly oppress and persecute the brethren, is meant Christians outside of the conventicle. All the warnings of the epistle are meant to preserve this little flock from the snares of Paulinism.

It is difficult for Englishmen to treat these baseless vagaries with becoming seriousness. To us they at once suggest the great Shakespearian Cryptogram, or somebody's attempt to prove that the Christianity. Annals of Tacitus were written by a monk of the Middle Ages. But that we may not be too hasty in assuming that the new criticism has nothing more solid to offer us, we will turn now to a better known name, and examine what Pfleiderer has to tell us in his Urchristenthum, which is an expansion of the Hibbert Lectures delivered by him in 1885.

> He distinguishes two lines of development in post-Paulme Christianity. The one, which he calls Christian Hellenism, is represented by the epistle to the Hebrews, which he assigns to the end of the 1st century, the first epistle of Clement (between 100 and 120 A.D.), the first of Peter (not earlier than Trajan), that of Barnabas (between 120 and 125 A.D.), the epistles to the Colossians and Ephesians and the Gospel of John (about 140 A.D.) The other, which he calls Antignostic Hellenism, marks the period of the Antonines. It is again subdivided into Catholicized Hellenism and Catholicized Paulinism

(p. 845). The former branch is represented by the Johannean and the Pastoral epistles, the epistle of Polycarp to the Philippians, which with Volkmar's expurgations may be regarded as a fairly genuine piece, the Ignatian epistles, together with that of Jude and the second of Peter. The latter branch is represented by the second epistle of Clement, the Shepherd of Hermas, written about the same time as the Gospel of Matthew (that is, towards the middle of the 2nd century), the epistle of James and the Didaché, which last Pfleiderer considers to be later than Hermas and possibly later than Clemens Alexandrinus. This Catholicized Paulinism is characterized by a practical undogmatic tone, reminding one of the Synoptic Gospels.

This brief sketch of Pfleiderer's view of the general development of Christianity was needed in order to enable the reader to appreciate his remarks on James in particular (pp. 865-880).

Pfleidereragrees with Schwegler that our epistle is just the Shepherd stripped Heconsiders of its Apocalyptical imagery. In both writings we have a protest on behalf of the practical piety of the common people against the increasing secularization our Epistle of religion in the wealthy and intellectual circles, which we may compare was a contemporary of with similar protests made by the Waldensians or Minorites in later times. Hermas and Our epistle must evidently belong to the post-Pauline period; otherwise it must have contained some reference to the controversial topics of which St. Paul treats, such as the abrogation of the Mosaic law, circumcision, sabbaths and festivals, the position of Israel as the chosen people, the relation of the Old to the New Covenant, &c. The question then arises, How long after the death of St. Paul must it be placed! We are enabled to answer this partly from the lateness of patristic evidence as to the existence of the epistle, and partly from its dependence on other Christian writings. (1) As to the former our epistle is in a worse position than any other of the books of the N. T. Origen is the first to quote it directly, and he expressly says that it was not generally recognized as canonical. There is no reference to it in Clemens Alexandrinus or Irenaeus or Tertullian, not even in the Clementines. Moreover it is omitted in the Muratorian canon, which recognizes the Shepherd. This silence of the oldest witnesses is inexplicable if it belonged to the Apostolic age. (2) The writer was acquainted with the epistles to the Romans and Galatians, as is apparent from his use of the Pauline formula of 'justification by faith'; also with the epistle to the Hebrews, the Apocalypse (including the most recent portion of the latter, which dates from the time of Hadrian), the 1st epistle of Peter, above all with Hermas, whom Pfleiderer regards as the older writer, because the aphorisms of St. James are there found embedded in a suitable context. In any case the two writings were composed under similar circumstances and without doubt nearly at the same time. These facts prove that the address to the Twelve Tribes of the Diaspora is not to be understood literally. If there were then any pure Jewish churches it could only have been in Judea, which is excluded by the term Diaspora. Besides what reason could there be for confining the exhortation of the epistle to the Jewish Christians? It was not they but the Gentiles who were in danger of trusting in faith without works. We must therefore understand the phrase in reference to the true Israel scattered throughout the world. It is a mistake to lay any stress on the term 'synagogue, 'which is freely used of Christian churches by Hermas and Ignatius.

The aim of the writer is the restoration of a retiring unworldly Christianity of self-renunciation and brotherly kindness: what he especially attacks is the worldliness of the upper classes. His condemnation of a wisdom which he characterizes as earthly, psychical, devilish, reminds us of the words in which Hermas describes the Gnostic teachers and prophets who were to be found at Rome in the middle of the second century, and must probably be understood of these. Jude, too, speaks of the Chostics as ψυχικοί, and charges them with complaining of destiny (v. 16 $\mu\epsilon\mu\psi(\mu\omega\rho\sigma)$), which we may compare with James i. 13, where we read of some who complain of God as tempting them to evil. So we are told of a treatise addressed to the Gnostic Florinus by Irenaeus, in proof that God was not the author of evil. The reference in iv. 11 to those who 'judge the law,' would apply to the attacks of such Gnostics as Cerdon and Marcion on the O. T. Lastly, the degradation of Paul's justifying faith into an unfruitful assent of the intellect was nowhere so likely to be found as among the Gnostics. To this ultra-Pauline Gnosticism James opposes no Judaizing theology, but the simple rules of practical Christianity as understood by the Catholic Church. His polemic does not touch Paul's own doctrine: Paul would never have given the name of faith to this dead intellectual assent; but it does touch the Gnostics who claimed the authority of Paul, and James fails to distinguish between the two views. This is easily explicable from the fact that James himself, like his contemporaries (compare the Ignatian and the Pastoral Epistles), no longer uses faith in its old sense of absolute trust, forming the only foundation of Christian picty, but makes it coordinate with love, patience, obedience, works, &c.

The Soteriology of the Epistle approaches so nearly to that of the Gospels, that it is no wonder some have been tempted to assign it to a very early period. This however has been shown to be impossible by a comparison with other Christian writings; and it is also inconsistent with the absence of all allusion to the apologetic and eschatological topics which so much occupied the attention of the early Church. We find here no attempt to prove that Jesus was the Messiah, and that he would shortly return to reveal the promised salvation. The undogmatic character of the epistle is to be explained, like the dogmatic simplicity of John, not on the supposition that it was written before Christianity had become dogmatic, but that dogma was already securely settled. The Church of Rome, however, with its predominantly practical tendency, rejected those speculative and mystical elements of Paulinism, which were retained and developed by the churches of Asia Minor. And thus it is that the Catholicized Paulinism of the second century approaches so nearly to pre-Christian Hellenism. Monotheism, the Moral Law, Future Retribution, these are the prominent doctrines in both; the only difference being that, in the former, these doctrines are based upon Revelation and propagated by an organized institution.

Pfleiderer abandons some of the positions of his predecessors. It will be seen that on several points Pfleiderer recedes from the ground occupied by his predecessors of the negative school. He allows that our Epistle could not have been written whilst the admission of Gentiles into the Church was still a burning question: he allows that it is not intended as an answer to the Epistle to the Romans, and that in fact St. Paul would have assented to all that is said in it as to the futility of an unfruitful faith. He does not regard the author as an Ebionite or Essene, or suppose him to be addressing some small dissenting body: on the contrary, James is a typical Catholic of the latter half of the second century, and gives expression to the ethical undogmatic Christianity of the time: further, he is addressing the Church of Rome, which he rightly assumes to be representative in its defects of the degeneracy of the Church at large. Pfleiderer ridicules Schwegler's identification of the rich with Gentile, and the poor with Jewish Christians (p. 872): he explains εμφυτον correctly, in opposition to both Schwegler and Brückner (p. 877). On the main point, however. he holds to the Tübingen view, that the Epistle was written in the latter half of the second century, his chief argument being that it bears traces of being written after the Epistle to the Romans, the 1st of St. Peter, and Hermas.

I will not here repeat what I have said before as to the mutual relations of the above-named Epistles, but will simply state the general principles which I think ought to determine our judgment priority of two writers, in this and similar cases. Where it is agreed that there is a direct when the resemblance literary connexion between two writers, A and B, treating of the same subject from apparently opposite points of view, and using the same illustrations, if it shall appear that the argument of B meets in all respects the argument of A, while the argument of A has no direct reference to that of B, the priority lies with A. Again where it is agreed that there is a connexion between two writers, treating of the same subject, on the same scale, from the same point of view, and using the same quotations, it is probable that the writer who gives the thought in its most terse and rugged form, and takes least trouble to be precise in the wording of his quotations is the earlier writer. Using these tests, I venture to think that it has been proved conclusively, that the Epistle of St. James is prior to the first Epistle of St. Peter and to that of St. Paul to the Romans; and this one fact is sufficient to upset the whole house of cards erected by Pfleiderer. Supposing however that the priority of James to Paul were still a matter of doubt, I should not be at all more inclined to admit the possibility of our Epistle having been written at the late date assigned to it by Pfleiderer. None of his arguments seems to me to be of such a nature as we should rely on if it were a question about secular writers. Take for instance his assertion that Hermas was prior to James. From a The suppoliterary point of view, this seems to me on a par with saying that our Epistle was copied Quintus Smyrnaeus is prior to Homer, or Apuleius to Cicero. But Itermas is inon what does he ground the assertion? 'That which occurs in an admissible. aphoristic form in James, is found in its natural context in Principles for determining the is so great as to make it probable that one borrowed from the other.

Hermas' (p. 868). As examples he gives James iv. 7, 'Resist the devil and he will flee from you,' compared with Mand. xii. 5 (abridged), where Hermas says, 'Man desires to keep the commands of God, but the devil is strong and overcomes him.' The angel answers, 'The devil cannot overcome the servants of God who place their hope entirely in Him. If you resist him he will be vanquished and flee away.' On this it may be observed (1) that the saying occurs in three other passages of Hermas (Mand. vii. 2, xii. 2, 4), and that it also occurs thrice in what is probably a much earlier treatise, the Testaments of the Twelve Patriarchs; (2) that every text quoted by a preacher is naturally imbedded in a suitable context, if the preacher knows his business; (3) that St. James's style is confessedly condensed and aphoristic, but this is no evidence of lateness, rather the contrary; (4), that, as has been shown above in answer to Brückner, the saying is quite in its place in our Epistle. His other examples are James iii. 15 (the contrast of earthly and heavenly wisdom) compared with Mand. xi., James i. 27 (on true religion) compared with Mand. viii., James i. 20 ('the wrath of man worketh not the righteousness of God') compared with Mand. v., a passage which would have been more appropriately compared with James iv. 5. As to all these examples I am confident that every unprejudiced reader who takes the trouble to examine them, will agree with me, that it would be as reasonable to say that any modern sermon is older than its text, as to say that these comments are older than the parallels in St. James. There is not even any marked abruptness in the original context to excuse such extraordinary perversity of judgment. And then the fatuity of imagining that a man of such strong individuality, whose every word attests his profound and unshakeable convictions, could condescend to borrow from one so immeasurably his inferior, whose thoughts show about an equal mixture of cleverness and silliness, and whose language, as Dr. Taylor has proved, is little more than a patchwork of old materials, new furbished to avoid detection !

Origen's witness in favour of the canonicity of our Epistle.

As regards Pfleiderer's attempt to prove the lateness of our Epistle from the absence of patristic evidence in its favour, I must refer the reader to my second chapter, where he will find quotations enough to enable him to decide the matter for himself. But as he has made the assertion that Origen expressly says that it was not recognized as canonical (aber ausdrücklich als ungczweifelte Schrift), I will here briefly sum up the evidence of Origen on this point: (1) he never denies the genuineness of the Epistle; (2) he simply uses in one passage (Comm. in Joh. xix. 6, Lomm. ii. 199) the ambiguous phrase ή φερομένη Ἰακώβου ἐπιστολή, which at the outside means that, though the Epistle was in general circulation under that name, yet he did not take upon himself to assert its authenticity; (3) in Rufinus' Latin translation of Origen's writings we find our Epistle referred to as follows: Comm. in ep. ad Rom. iv. 1, in alio Scripturae loco, ib. iv. 8 audi et Jacobum fratrem Domini, ib. ix. 24 Jacobus Apostolus dicit, and frequently; cf. Hom. in Ex. iii. 3, viii. 4, Lev. ii. 4, where it is also called Scriptura divina; (4) these expressions of the Latin, which some have without ground suspected, are borne out by similar expressions in the original Greek; thus in Sel. in Psalm. xxxi. 5 (Lomm. xii. p. 129) the Epistle ($\dot{\omega}_{S}$ $\pi a \rho a$ ' $1 a \kappa \dot{\omega} \beta \phi$) is referred to as $\dot{\eta}$ $\gamma \rho a \phi \dot{\eta}$, and it is quoted as authoritative in Scl. in Exod. xv. 25, Comm. in Joh. xx. 10 and elsewhere (see above, pp. lxiii. foll.); (5) in two distinct passages Origen gives a list of the Sacred Books, and in both of these the Epistle of St. James is included (Hom. in Gen. xxvi. 18, Hom. in Jos. vii. 1; see Westcott, Canon, pp. 406 foll).

I next take the assertion that, if our Epistle had been written true that the before the Council of Jerusalem, it must have contained arguments phenomena to prove that Jesus was the Messiah, such as those we find Epistel are inconsistent ascribed to St. Peter in the Acts, and must also have dwelt more with an early upon the Second Coming. If the writer were addressing unconverted Jews, as St. Peter does in Acts ii., or were endeavouring to recall Jews who were in danger of falling away, as the author of. the Epistle to the Hebrews does, such arguments would no doubt be in place; but as he is writing to believers, who accept Christ as the Lord of Glory and future Judge (James ii. 1, v. 9), such arguments would be out of place in a short letter, directed to the special object of inculcating a practical morality on those who were already believers. Nor can I see why we should expect more to be said about the Second Coming. Is it not enough that we are told 'the Judge stands before the the door,' and 'he that endureth temptation shall receive the crown of life'? Another point is that James has lost the old meaning of faith, and makes it, not the foundation of the Christian life, but merely one among a number of co-ordinate virtues. I do not deny that he at times uses $\pi i \sigma \tau \iota_S$ in the sense of a mere intellectual belief; but when he describes the Christian religion as 'the faith of our Lord Jesus Christ' (ii. 1), when he makes faith the essential condition of all prevailing prayer (i. 6, v. 15), when he ascribes the beginning of spiritual life to our regeneration by the word of truth (i. 18)—and how can we receive that word except through the instrumentality of faith?—he seems to me to rate faith as highly as St. Paul himself. Yet even St. Paul sets faith below love, and goes so far as to say, 'Though I have all faith so as to remove mountains, but have not charity, I am nothing.'

I really cannot see that Pfleiderer has anything else in the way of argument to offer for his view. All that he tells us is that towards the middle of the second century the Catholic Church had very much lost its hold of distinctive doctrine, that it was secular in tone, and was occupied in controversy with the Gnostics, to whom he considers that allusion is made by James, where he condemns a psychical and diabolical wisdom, and speaks against those who judge the law, and who impute to God the blame for their wrong-doing. If it were certain that the epistle dated from this time, we might be justified in supposing such allusions, but as all probability is against it, we have no reason to go so far to explain references which would be applicable in any age. The only difficulty would be in the term $\psi \nu \chi \iota \kappa \acute{o}s$, but this is already used in the first Epistle to the Corinthians.

On the other hand it has some characteristics which are inexplicable on Pileiderer's hypothesis.

Without entering into any discussion as to the correctness of Pfleiderer's estimate of the state of Christianity under the Antonines, and without repeating the positive argument for the early date of James, I will simply mention here some characteristics of the Epistle which seem to me inexplicable on the hypothesis of the date given by Pfleiderer. The first, already noticed by Beyschlag, relates to the heading, 'James the servant of God.' It is quite consistent with the modesty which marks the Epistle throughout, that James himself should adopt this humble title; but is it conceivable that a late writer, wishing to secure a hearing by the adoption of a famous name, should throw away all the distinguishing adjuncts, Apostle, Bishop of Jerusalem, Bishop of Bishops, Brother of the Lord, and call himself plain James, a name which could attract no attention and excite no interest? Would the Church of Rome have submitted patiently to the extremely severe reproofs of this unknown James? Would there be any appropriateness in speaking of the rich, as dragging the believers before the law-courts and blaspheming the noble name by which they were called? Would the thoroughly Hebraic tone of the Epistle the appeal to the example of Elijah, Job and the prophets instead of Christ, the phrase 'Lord of Sabaoth,' the warning against the use of Jewish oaths, the stern censure of landowners who withheld the wages of the reapers, suit the circumstances of the Christians of Rome in that age? Where were the free labourers referred to? The latifundia of Italy were worked by slaves. Lastly, the writer looks for the immediate coming of the Lord to judgment (v. 7-9). Do we find any instance of a like confident expectation in any writer of the latter half of the second century?

Some of my readers may wonder at my spending so much time The question of the genuon the examination of what will strike them as mere arbitrary incress of our Epistle hypothesis. My reason for doing so is (1) that we English are so must be considered conscious of what we owe to German industry and research, that in connexion with we are sometimes tempted to accept without inquiry the latest that of the genuineness theory that hails from Germany. This danger is perhaps less of the other threatening at present in regard to the criticism of the New N.T. Testament, than in regard to some other departments of study, partly from our sense of the seriousness of the practical issues involved, and partly from our trust in the perfect fairness, the exhaustive learning and the sound historical and literary judgment of the great scholar and theologian whom we have recently lost. What Bishop Lightfoot has tested and approved, we believe we may accept as proven, so far as present lights go. But (2) fanciful and one-sided as German criticism often is, it is constantly stimulating and suggestive, bringing to light new facts or putting old facts in a new light. And therefore on both grounds, for the sake of what we may learn from it, as well as to point out its shortcomings and exaggerations, I have thought it worth while to lay its last word before English readers. I have done my best to examine fairly point by point the argument in favour of the late origin of our Epistle; but it is impossible to estimate fully its strength or its weakness, unless we view it in connexion with the general theory, first put foward by F. C. Baur, of which it forms a part. According to that theory the larger portion of the writings of the New Testament are forgeries of the second century. have endeavoured to show the improbability of this theory in the case of one small Epistle. Others have done the same for other books of the New Testament. But the improbability attaching to $_{\rm d-mands~on}^{\rm Large}$ books of the New Testament. But the improbability attaching to the credility the theory as affecting one or another separate book of the New Testament is as nothing in comparison with the combined improbability of one half of the books having been forged in the second century. For consider the demand thus made upon us. We have on the one side a century which beyond all question witnessed the greatest advance in morality and religion which has ever taken place on this earth. If this advance is to be explained by natural causes we must assume the existence of extraordinary powers, spiritual, moral and intellectual, in the men by whom it was brought about. The histories of the time, written by contemporaries, as we believe—at any rate written, as even our opponents admit, within a hundred years, more or less, of the events which they record—tell us that there were such men then living, and depict them so clearly and vividly that we seem to be personally acquainted with them. Again we have letters purporting to be written by some of these men, which so fully answer the expectations excited by the histories and soar so high above the ordinary level of human thought, that they have for some eighteen centuries been regarded by the most enlightened of mankind as containing, along with the histories, a divine ideal and an inspired rule of conduct for the whole human On the other hand we have in the second century an age in which the Christian Church, as far as we can judge from its history and from the undisputed writings of the time, was decidedly wanting in power and ability, not merely in comparison with the first, but in comparison with most of the later centuries. Yet it is in this feeble age that Baur and his followers have sought to find the authors of the books which bear, and in the judgment of united Christendom worthily bear, the great names of James, Peter, Paul, and John. It is not one author of this inspired stamp they are in search of, but four at least; for there is no pretence that any one individual could have produced works so diverse in doctrine, thought and style; nay, their separatist hypotheses make it necessary for them to assume a fifth, a sixth, and even a seventh And yet not a trace of one of them is to be found in the history or literature of the second century. No one is bold enough to name a man whom he considers capable of having written even the least of these works. Would it be at all a wilder hypothesis if one were to assume that half the plays of Shakspeare were written by an anonymous author or authors of the time of Charles the Second?

How are we to account for such extraordinary aberration Their axioms on the part of able and honest men? It seems to me that it is due partly to prejudice and partly to an error of method. First, as to prejudice: they start with two assumptions, (1) that the presumption is always against the truth of tradition; (2) that miracles are impossible. The former prejudice is a natural reaction from the opposite extreme, that tradition is always right; and it falls in with the natural delight in novelty, and the temptation to take the side which affords most scope for new and startling combinations. There is also a natural impatience at the tone of virtuous orthodoxy often assumed by the defenders of tradition, and a generous eagerness to take the side which has suffered most from misrepresentation in the past, and which still finds it necessary at times to resist attempts on the part of the champions of authority to intimidate opponents and stifle discussion; a feeling too that, in order to the final ascertainment of truth, the negative argument is as needful as the positive, and that up to the present century the former has scarcely had justice done to it among Christian writers. The second prejudice naturally leads to the attempt to weaken the force of the evidence adduced in favour of miracles. If the accounts of miracles proceed from eye-witnesses, it is difficult, on this hypothesis, not to condemn them of deliberate falsehood, which our opponents are unwilling to do, not simply because they do not wish to give unnecessary offence, but because they are themselves convinced of the honesty and high tone of the writers. If, however, it can be proved that these writers lived a hundred years after the events they record, then they are simply the mouthpiece of tradition, which, without any deliberate falsification, would spontaneously clothe the bare nucleus of fact with the garment of the supernatural.

Next, as to the error of method. Men assume a priori that the Christian Church and Christian theology must have had such and such a development; that if we find one doctrine especially prominent in a particular writer, he must have been the author of that doctrine, which must therefore have been unknown before him and denied by all but his immediate school; and again, that if we meet with any teaching which seems inconsistent with such a doctrine, it must have proceeded from a controversialist of the opposite school; so that we are guilty, for instance, of an anachronism in assigning to Christ the words, 'Think not that I am come to destroy the law and the prophets,' 'One jot or one tittle shall not pass from the law' (Pfleiderer, page 492 foll.), since they involve the principles of Paulinism and anti-Paulinism. But why cannot we act here as we do in the parallel case of the disciples of Socrates? We do not dispute the genuineness of a Cynic or Cyrenaic or Academic phrase attributed to Socrates, because he did not carry out these different lines of thought to the full extent to which each was carried by his disciples. Yet it is assumed a priori that James, Peter, and John being typical of particular aspects of Christianity, anything in their writings which appears to be inconsistent with that special aspect must be pronounced spurious; that even a man so many-sided and so full of growth as St. Paul must be tied down to the ideas which occupied him during a certain critical period of the Church's development. If we were to impose the same rule on Mr. Gladstone, how little we should leave him of all the books and speeches which now bear witness to his incessant activity and versatility of mind.

But perhaps the most mischievous manifestation of the a priori method is when it seizes on some small side-incident, and makes it the corner-stone of a huge theory, by which all the phenomena are to be explained, or, in the event of a too stubborn resistance, to be exploded. Such an incident is the difference between St. Peter and St. Paul, of which passing mention is made in Galatians ii. 11, 12, and in which Baur finds the key to the whole of the early history of the Church as well as to the Christian literature of the first two centuries. It might really seem as if to some of his followers the main article of the Creed was 'I believe in the quarrel between Peter and Paul, and in the well-meaning but unsuccessful attempts of Luke and others to smooth it over and keep it in the background.'

It may encourage those who are fearful as to the results of the present attack on the integrity of the books of the New Testament, to call to mind the history of the same struggle in regard to the writings of classical authors. There too a narrow a priori dogma-criticism in tism has in times past attempted to deprive us of half the dia logues of Plato and some of the noblest satires of Juvenal; but in the great majority of instances the result of the close examination to which the classical writings have been subjected has only served to establish more firmly the genuineness of the disputed books and passages, and so we cannot doubt it will be with the New Testament. Experience proves the truth of the maxim—Opinionum commenta delet dies, naturae judicia confirmat.

CHAPTER VIII

ON THE GRAMMAR OF ST. JAMES

ORTHOGRAPHY

Instead of the more usual forms we meet with the following:

Consonants.

σσ for ττ is the ordinary use in the Greek Testament, as in πράσσω, φυλάσσω, ταράσσω, and in our Epistle φρίσσουσιν ii. 19, ἀντιτάσσεται iv. 6: see Hort G.T. App. pp. 148, 149, W. Schmid Der Atticismus ii. p. 82, s.v. άρμόττειν.

We find however the following exceptions, according to the readings of the best MS.:

τὸ ἔλαττον Heb. vii. 7, ἔλαττον adv. 1 Tim. v. 9, ἐλαττοῦσθαι John iii. 30, ἢλάττωσας Heb. ii. 7 (from LXX.), ἢλαττωμένον Heb. ii. 9, ἢλαττόνησε 2 Cor. viii. 15 (from LXX.); but ἐλάσσω John ii. 10, ἐλάσσονι Rom. ix. 12 (from LXX.).

ηστημα 1 Cor. vi. 7, Rom. xi. 12, ηστηται 2 Pet. ii. 19, ηστωνται ib. ver. 20; but ησσώθητε 2 Cor. xii. 13, ησσων 1 Cor. xi. 17, ησσον adv. 2 Cor. xii. 15.

κρεῖττον 1 Cor. vii. 9, 1 Pet. iii. 17, 2 Pet. ii. 21 and often in Hebrews; but κρεῖσσον 1 Cor. vii. 38, ib. ix. 17, Phil. i. 23, Heb. vi. 9, x. 34.

[The usage of Josephus varies like that of the N.T. Thus in Ant. xix. (ed. Niese) we find ἔτασσον § 99, but διετάττετο § 325; κρείσσων § 112, but κρειττόνων § 211; ἥσσων § 173, ἡσσώμενοι § 181, but ἔλαττον § 291; ἀπαλλάσσων § 213, but ἐξαλλάττων xvi. 12. The double sigma seems however to be constant in πράσσω.]

In some words the $\sigma\sigma$ is preserved in the later Attic also, as in $\begin{aligned} \begin{aligned} \begin{al$

 ν for $\gamma\nu$ is constant in the N. T. in $\gamma'(\nu)$ ρ and $\gamma(\nu)$ ω σ $\kappa\omega$.

According to Meisterhans, Gr. d. Att. Inschr. p. 141, γίγνομαι is the reading of the Attic inscriptions without exception up to 292 B.C., and γίνομαι, equally without exception, between 290 and 30 B.C.

Vowels.

ι for $\epsilon\iota$ in abstract substantives: see Hort l.c. p. 153, and compare $\dot{\epsilon}\rho\iota\theta\dot{\iota}a(?)$ James iii. 16, $\dot{\iota}a\lambda a\zeta o\nu\dot{\iota}a\iota\varsigma$ iv. 16, $\kappa a\kappa o\pi a\theta\dot{\iota}a\varsigma$ v. 10; but $\pi\epsilon\rho\iota\sigma\sigma\epsilon\dot{\iota}a\nu$ i. 21, $\theta\rho\eta\sigma\kappa\epsilon\dot{\iota}a$ i. 27 ($\dot{\epsilon}\theta\epsilon\lambda o\theta\rho\eta\sigma\kappa\dot{\iota}a$ Col. ii. 23).

πρόϊμος for πρώιμος (v. 7), for which Hort compares χρεοφειλέτης, Στοϊκός.

 $\pi\rho a\ddot{v}\tau\eta_{S}$ for the classical $\pi\rho a\dot{o}\tau\eta_{S}$ i. 21; the forms $\pi\rho a\ddot{v}_{S}$ and $\pi\rho\hat{a}o_{S}$ are both classical, the former being preferred in the feminine and generally in the oblique cases.

Hiatus.

Hiatus is not shunned by the Hellenistic, as it is by the later Attic writers. Thus in i. 4 it occurs six times; and elision is proportionably rare, the only words elided in our Epistle being ἀλλά in ii. 18 ἀλλ' ἐρεῖ τις (but ἀλλὰ ἀπατῶν i. 26, ἀλλὰ ἐπίγειος iii. 15), $\dot{\epsilon}\pi\dot{\iota}$ in ii. 7 $\dot{\epsilon}\phi'$ $\dot{\nu}\mu\hat{a}s$, v. 7 $\dot{\epsilon}\pi'$ $a\dot{\nu}\tau\hat{\omega}$, and v. 14 $\dot{\epsilon}\pi'$ $a\dot{\nu}\tau\dot{\nu}\nu$; ἀπό in ἀφ' ὑμῶν iv. 7, v. 5; παρά in παρ' ὧ i. 17; κατά in καθ' έαυτήν ii. 17, καθ' όμοιωσιν iii. 9, κατ' άλλήλων v. 9. On the other hand we have ὑπό unclided in iii. 4 ὑπὸ ἐλαχίστου: in fact the only word which is uniformly elided in the G.T. is $\pi \alpha \rho \alpha$, but the word is comparatively rare, and does not occur before a proper name beginning with a vowel. Of unelided κατά we find instances in Acts iii. 17 κατὰ ἄγνοιαν, ib. xxii. 3 κατὰ ἀκρίβειαν, Rom. ii. 2 κατὰ ἀλήθειαν, ib. iii. 5, 1 Cor. iii. 3, ix. 8, xv. 32 κατὰ ἄνθρωπον, Rom. xiv. 15 κατὰ ἀγάπην &c. Unelided ἐπί is found in Luke iii. 2 έπὶ Ἰωάννην, ib. v. 36 έπὶ ἰμάτιον, ib. xi. 17 έπὶ οἶκον, ih. xxi. 10 ἐπὶ ἔθνος &c.; unelided ἀπό in Luke viii. 43 ἀπὸ ἐτῶν, ib. xiii. 21 ἀπὸ ἀνατολῶν, ib. xvi. 18 ἀπὸ ἀνδρός; unelided ὑπό in Luke vii. 27 ύπὸ ἀνέμου, ib. xxi. 24 ὑπὸ ἐθνῶν &c. Unelided διά is found in Heb. v. 14 διὰ έξιν, 2 Cor. v. 7 διὰ εἴδους and before proper names. In general we may say that elision takes place before a pronoun or word with which the preposition is habitually joined, but not before a proper name or a word which it is important to make distinct.

Other modes of avoiding hiatus are crasis, $\nu \in \phi \in \lambda \kappa \nu \sigma \tau \iota \kappa \acute{o} \nu$, and final ς in such words as $o \ddot{\nu} \tau \omega \varsigma$.

Of crasis we have two examples, $\kappa \dot{\alpha} \gamma \dot{\omega}$ ii. 18, where see note, and $\kappa \ddot{\alpha} \nu$ for $\kappa \alpha \dot{\iota} \ddot{\alpha} \nu$ (= $\dot{\epsilon} \dot{\alpha} \nu$) v. 15. For this use of $\ddot{\alpha} \nu$ see John xii. 32, xiii. 20, xvi. 23, xx. 23; and for the crasis Mark xvi. 18, Luke xiii. 9, also Winer p. 51.

ν ἐφελκυστικόν and the final ς in οΰτως are constant in St. James as in the rest of the N.T.: 1 cf. i. 6 ἔοικεν κλύδωνι, ii. 12 οὕτως λαλεῖτε.

χαρίσεται Rom. viii. 32, φωτίσει Apoc. xxii. 5 (?), 1 Cor. iv. 5, μετασχηματίσει Phil. iii. 21, χρηματίσει Rom. vii. 3, χρονίσει Heb. x. 37 (?), ἀφορίσει Matt. xxv. 32 (but ἀφοριοῦσιν ib. xiii. 49), κομίσεται Eph. vi. 8, Col. iii. 25 (?) (but κομιεῖσθε 1 Pet. v. 4) The following are examples of the Attic form, παροργιῶ Rom. x. 19, μετοικιῶ Acts vii. 43, καθαριεῖ Heb. ix. 14, διακαθαριεῖ Matt. iii. 12, χρονιεῖ Sirac. vi. 20, ἐλπιοῦμεν Sirac. ix. 19, φωτιοῦσιν Ερ. Jerem. 67, στηριεῖ Sirac. vi. 36 (but στηρίξει, 1 Pet. v. 10 and aor. στηρίξατε James v. 8; on the other hand we find στήρισον Luke xxii. 32), καθιεῖ Job xxxvi. 7, καθιοῦνται Ps. cxxxii. 12, σκορπιεῖ Job xxxiv. 15 (but διασκορπίσει xxxvii. 11), ἀφανιεῖ Job xxxix. 24, θεριοῦσιν Ps. cxxvi. 2, μακαριοῦσιν Luke i. 48, ἐλπιοῦσιν Matt. xii. 21, μετοικιῶ Acts vii. 43.

- (2) κερδαίνω, κερδήσομεν iv. 13 (of which Veitch cites examples from the fragments of Euripides and from an epigram of Menecrates Smyrnaeus) instead of the classical κερδανοῦμεν. The form κερδήσω is related to κερδήσομαι (found in Herodotus and Josephus) as the forms ἀκούσω Matt. xii. 19, ἀμαρτήσω Matt. xviii. 21, ἀπαντήσω Mark xiv. 13, γελάσω Luke vi. 21, διώξω Matt. xxiii. 34, ἐπαινέσω 1 Cor. xi. 21, ἐπιορκήσω Matt. v. 33, κλαύσω Luke vi. 35, κράξω Luke xix. 40, ῥεύσω John vii. 38, σπονδάσω 2 Pet. i. 15, to the middle forms in ordinary use.
- (3) λαμβάνω, λήμψομαι i. 12 (cf. προσωπολημψία ii. 1, προσωπολημπτεῖτε ii. 9), so Herod. λάμψομαι, ελάμφθην.
- (4) ἐσθίω, φάγεται for ἔδεται v. 3, cf. Luke xiv. 15, xvii. 8 φάγεσαι καὶ πίεσαι, Gen. iii. 3 οὐ φάγεσθε, Ps. exxviii. 2, Ecel. iii. 13, Sir. vi. 2, 18, xliii. 21. It seems to be used as a present in Sirac. xxxvi. 23.

B. Aorist.

First aorist used where the 2nd aor. was used by classical writers, e.g. $\beta\lambda a\sigma\tau \acute{a}\nu\omega$, $\dot{\epsilon}\beta\lambda \acute{a}\sigma\tau\eta\sigma a$ (v. 18) instead of $\ddot{\epsilon}\beta\lambda a\sigma\tau o\nu$; so $\kappa a\tau \acute{\epsilon}\lambda \epsilon \iota \psi a$ (Acts vi. 2) for $\kappa a\tau \acute{\epsilon}\lambda \iota \tau o\nu$. We might be tempted to suppose that the 1st aor. was here preferred by St. James, as more suited to the transitive force which he gives to the word; but $\dot{\epsilon}\beta\lambda \acute{a}\sigma\tau\eta\sigma a$ is intransitive in Matt. xiii. 26, Heb. ix. 4, and $\ddot{\epsilon}\beta\lambda a\sigma\tau o\nu$ is transitive in Eurip. fr. inc. 269 Wagner, cited by Veitch, who also gives examples of the use of the 1st aor. from Empedocles, Theophrastus, &c.

y. Perfect.

- (2) οἶδα, οἶδας for οἶσθα John xxi. 15, 1 Cor. vii. 16 and always in N.T., also found in classical authors, e.g. Xen. Mem. iv. 6. 6, Eur. Alc. 780. οἴδαμεν Matt. xxii. 16 and always in N.T., also in classical authors, e.g. Xen. Anab. ii. 4. 6. οἴδατε James iv. 4 and usually in N.T., also in classical writers: ἴστε is however found in i. 19, Heb. xii. 17, perhaps in Eph. v. 5. οἴδασιν Luke xi. 44 and usually in N.T., also in Xen. Occ. xx. 14; but ἴσασιν in Acts xxvi. 4. Cf. Schmid i. pp. 85, 232.
 - (b) Imperative Mood.
- (1) $\eta \tau \omega$ for $\xi \sigma \tau \omega$ v. 12, where see note. Veitch cites Hippocr. viii. 340, Aretaeus i. 2. 79.
 - (2) κάθου for κάθησο ii. 3, see note.

SYNTAX.

The Article.

The simplest use of the article when coupled with a singular noun is to single out, as concerned in the assertion made, one particular member of the class denoted by the noun, which member is supposed to be at once recognized by the reader either from his general knowledge, as $\delta \Theta \epsilon \delta \varsigma$, or from information supplied in the context, as $\tau \dot{\eta} \nu \epsilon \sigma \theta \hat{\eta} \tau a$, $\tau \hat{\omega} \pi \tau \omega \chi \hat{\omega}$ in ii. 3, after previous Thus in ii. 14 μη δύναται ή πίστις σῶσαι αὐτόν; the article marks that the faith spoken of has been already described in the previous words; in ii. $25 \dot{\eta} \pi \delta \rho \nu \eta$ refers to one particular harlot, Rahab, of whom alone the assertion made holds good; in iii. 5 and the following verses $\dot{\eta} \gamma \lambda \hat{\omega} \sigma \sigma a$ refers to the human tongue exclusively; in v. 9 ο κριτής is the Lord who is shortly to appear in judgment, Sometimes the class may consist, in the mind of the speaker, of one member only: c.g. i. 7 παρὰ τοῦ Κυρίου of the one God, i. 11 ο ήλιος...τώ καύσωνι, i. 27 τοῦ κόσμου, v. 18 ο οὐρανός. On the other hand the absence of the article implies that the assertion made about the noun is not more true of one member of the class than of another. This is naturally expressed by the English indefinite article in such passages as i. 6 ἔοικεν κλύδωνι, where the comparison is to a wave generally, not to any particular wave; so in iii. 12 μὴ δύναται συκῆ ἐλαίας ποιῆσαι; and ii. 18 ἐὰν ἀδελφὸς ἢ ἀδελφὸ γυμνοὶ ὑπάρχωσιν, ii. 24 ἐξ ἔργων δικαιοῦται ἄνθρωπος, i. 23 ἐν ἐσόπτρφ.

When the class as a whole is spoken of, the article is used either with the collective noun, as $\hat{\eta}$ ἐκκλησία v. 14; or with the plural of the persons or things composing the class, as οἱ πλούσιοι ii. 6, τῶν ἵππων iii. 3, τοὺς ἀνθρώπους iii. 9; or with one such person or thing, considered as typical or representative of the class (the 'generic' article), e.g. ὁ πλούσιος i. 12, $\hat{\eta}$ πηγ $\hat{\eta}$ iii. 11, $\hat{\delta}$ γεωργός v. 7. If the article is omitted, the plural denotes that some of the class are concerned in the assertion, without saying anything as to the rest of the class, as κᾶν ἀμαρτίας $\hat{\eta}$ πεποιηκώς v. 15, πλ $\hat{\eta}$ θος άμαρτίων v. 20, ἐξ ἔργων δικαιοῦται ἄνθρωπος ii. 24, ἕλκουσιν ὑμᾶς εἰς κριτήρια ii. 6.

If two or more nouns denoting different persons or things are joined by $\kappa a i$, the article is regularly repeated with each, as in iii. 11 $\tau \delta \gamma \lambda \nu \kappa \dot{\nu} \delta \kappa a \lambda \tau \delta \tau \nu \kappa \dot{\nu} \delta \nu \dot{\nu}$; but if the nouns taken together are regarded as denoting or constituting one person or thing, the article is only used with the first, as in iii. $9 \epsilon \dot{\nu} \lambda \delta \gamma \delta \dot{\nu} \mu \epsilon \nu \tau \delta \nu \Theta \epsilon \delta \nu \kappa a \lambda \Pi a \tau \dot{\epsilon} \rho a$.

δικαιούται ἄνθρωπος καὶ οὐκ ἐκ πίστεως μόνον from actions, not from believing. In v. 15 ή εὐχὴ τῆς πίστεως σώσει τὸν κάμνοντα, the article is used with $\epsilon \dot{\nu} \chi \dot{\eta}$ because of the preceding $\pi \rho \rho \sigma \epsilon \nu \xi$ - $\dot{\alpha}\sigma\theta\omega\sigma\alpha\nu$, and $\pi\dot{\alpha}\sigma\epsilon\omega_{S}$ has the article by sympathy, unless we prefer to translate 'Faith's prayer,' giving its full personifying force to the article. It is not necessary however, either in classical or Hellenistic Greek, for the abstract noun always to take the article even in the nominative: thus we have ii. 13 κατακαυγûται ἔλεος κρίσεως, where we might have expected τὸ ἔλεος τῆς κρίσεως κατακαυγάται, but the absence of the article gives a further point to the antithesis, first by bringing together the contrasted words, and second by calling attention to the connotation of the words. So iii. 10 έκ τοῦ αὐτοῦ στόματος ἐξέρχεται εὐλογία καὶ κατάρα 'out of the same mouth proceedeth blessing and cursing, which might of course also be translated 'a blessing and a curse.' Such omission of the article is especially common in proverbs or other familiar and sententious phrases.

We will now consider the case in which the Greek anarthrous noun is represented in English by the noun with definite article. A well-known instance is that of $\beta \alpha \sigma i \lambda \epsilon \dot{\nu}_{S}$ standing for the king of Persia. Here the intermediate stage would be o Baoilevs 'the king par excellence,' as Englishmen were accustomed to speak of 'the Duke' meaning 'the Duke of Wellington'; then after a time βασιλεύς by itself gets to be regarded as a proper name. In our Epistle, we find the article regularly used with $K \dot{\nu} \rho \iota \sigma_{s}$ and $\Theta \dot{\epsilon} \dot{\sigma}_{s}$ in the nominative (e.g. i. 13, ii. 5, 19. iv. 6, 15, v. 11, 15); but the oblique cases sometimes take the article (e.g. iv. 4 $\xi\chi\theta\rho a$ $\tau o\hat{v}$ $\Theta \epsilon o\hat{v}... \xi\chi\theta\rho \delta s$ $\tau o\hat{v}$ $\Theta \epsilon o\hat{v}$, ii. 1 την πίστιν τοῦ Κυρίου, v. 7, 8 ή παρουσία τοῦ Κυρίου bis, ίν. 7 ύποτάγητε τῶ Θεῶ, iv. 8 ἐγγίσατε τῷ Θεῷ, ii. 23 ἐπίστευσεν τῶ Θεῶ, iii. 9 εὐλογοῦμεν τὸν Κύριον, i. 27 παρὰ τῶ $\Theta_{\epsilon\hat{\omega}}$, i. 7 $\pi a \rho \hat{a} \tau o \hat{v} K v \rho (o v)$ and sometimes omit it (e.q. i. 1)Θεοῦ καὶ Κυρίου δοῦλος, i. 20 όργη ἀνδρὸς δικαιοσύνην Θεοῦ οὐκ έργάζεται, iii. 9 καθ' όμοίωσιν Θεοῦ, ii. 23 φίλος Θεοῦ, v. 4 τὰ ώτα Κυρίου, ν. 10 ἐν τῷ ὀνόματι Κυρίου, ν. 11 τὸ τέλος Κυρίου, i. 13 ἀπὸ Θεοῦ πειράζομαι, iv. 10 ἐνώπιον Κυρίου). The practice of St. James in this respect is that of the other writers of the N.T. The nominative $\Theta\epsilon\delta\varsigma$, when it stands as the subject of the sentence. is rarely found without the article: St. Paul uses the anarthrous form twice in Gal. ii. $6\pi\rho\delta\sigma\omega\pi\sigma\nu$ $\Theta\epsilon\delta\varsigma$ $\dot{a}\nu\theta\rho\dot{\omega}\pi\sigma\nu$ $o\dot{v}$ $\lambda a\mu\beta\dot{a}\nu\epsilon\iota$, where the absence of the articles gives a sharper point to the antithesis, and vi. 7 Θεὸς οὐ μυκτηρίζεται: in both cases the absence of the article brings into greater prominence the characteristic quality and connotation of the noun, not so much 'God' simply, but 'He who is God.' The rule is less strict in regard to $K\acute{\nu}\rho\iota\sigma$, because this was freely used without the article in the LXX. for the Sacred Name: so we find it in quotations (Rom. iv. 8, ix. 28; 29, 1 Cor. iii. 20), especially in the phrase $\lambda \acute{\epsilon} \gamma \epsilon \iota K \acute{\nu} \rho \iota \sigma s$ (Acts vii. 49, xv. 17), but also in other passages, as Mark xiii. 20, Acts xii. 11. A similar word is $X \rho \iota \sigma \tau \acute{\sigma} s$, which in the Gospels usually has the article, meaning 'the Anointed One,' but in the Epistles has become a proper name and drops the article. It has been often debated whether $\nu \delta \mu o \varsigma$ is used in a similar way without the article to denote the Mosaic law. It is used of this with the article ii. 10 ὅλον τὸν νόμον τηρήση, ii. 9 ἐλεγχόμενοι ὑπὸ τοῦ νόμου, but without the article in ii. 11 γέγονας παραβάτης νόμου, iv. 11 οὐκ εἶ ποιητὴς νόμου, in both which cases the R. V. has 'the law,' but perhaps the Greek would be more exactly given by a compound, 'law-breaker,' 'law-observer.' So iv. 11 δ καταλαλῶν ἀδελφοῦ...καταλαλεῖ νόμου καὶ κρίνει νόμον, where also R. V. has 'the law,' but perhaps a more correct rendering would be 'speaks against law and judges law,' the absence of the article serving, as in the case of $\Theta_{\epsilon} \acute{o}_{S}$ above, to give prominence to the connotation of the noun. A similar word is $\lambda \acute{o} \gamma o_{S}$, which is found with the article in i. 21 $\tau \delta \nu \ \tilde{\epsilon} \mu \phi \nu \tau \sigma \nu \ \lambda \delta \gamma \sigma \nu$; without it in i. 22 $\pi \sigma \iota \eta \tau a \iota \lambda \delta \gamma \sigma \nu$, 23 $\dot{\alpha} \kappa \rho \sigma a \tau \dot{\eta} s \lambda \delta \dot{\gamma} \sigma \nu$, in both of which the R.V. has 'the word,' but the more strict interpretation would be 'worddoers,' 'word-hearer.'

A noun may be qualified by the addition of an adjective or participle, or of a genitive, or an adverb or adverbial phrase. If the article is used, a noun thus qualified may take one of three forms, either (1) δ $\kappa a \lambda \delta s$ $\pi a \hat{\imath} s$, δ $\tau o \hat{\imath}$ $\delta \nu \delta \rho \delta s$ $\pi a \tau \eta \rho$, or (2) δ $\pi a \hat{\imath} s$ δ $\kappa a \lambda \delta s$, $\tau \eta \nu$ $\delta \iota \kappa a \iota o \sigma \upsilon \nu \eta \nu \tau \eta \nu$ $\delta \iota \kappa \tau o \upsilon$ $\nu \delta \iota \rho o \upsilon$ Rom. x. 5, or (3) the less common $\pi a \hat{\imath} s$ δ $\kappa a \lambda \delta s$, $\delta \nu$ $\pi \delta \sigma \tau \iota \upsilon$ $\tau \hat{\imath} \tau o \upsilon$ $\tau \delta \upsilon$ τ τ phrase. Of (1) we have the following examples: τὸν τίμιον καρπόν ν. 7, της καλης αναστροφης iii. 13, τὸν ἔμφυτον λόγον i. 21; of (2) την έσθητα την λαμπράν ii. 3, τη φύσει τη άνθρωπίνη iii. 7, ό νομοθέτης ό δυνάμενος iv. 12, ταις ταλαιπωρίαις ύμων ταις έπερχομέναις v. 1, ὁ μισθὸς τῶν ἐργατῶν τῶν ἀμησάντων τὰς χώρας, \dot{o} άφυστερημένος v. 4; of (3) άδελφὸς \dot{o} ταπεινός (so B) i. 9, νόμον τέλειον τὸν τῆς έλευθερίας i. 25, ἀτμίς ἐστε ἡ πρὸς ὀλίγον φαινομένη iv. 14, where the article makes the tendency to appear and disappear a quality of the vapour, and not a mere accidental circumstance; so in Heb. vi. 7 γη γαρ ή πιούσα, ix. 2 σκηνή κατεσκευάσθη ή πρώτη; of (4) we have τὰ ἐπιτήδεια τοῦ σώματος ii. 16, τὸν τροχὸν τῆς γενέσεως iii. 6, ἡ φιλία τοῦ κόσμου iv. 4, ή όρμη τοῦ εὐθύνοντος iii. 4. The loose construction (4) is more usual than the compact (1) in St. James and the N.T. generally, especially where a pronoun is concerned, as το ἄνθος αὐτοῦ, ἐν τῷ ὕψει αὐτοῦ (very rarely the compact, as in i. 18 των αὐτοῦ κτισμάτων, Phil. ii. 30 τὸ ὑμῶν ὑστέρημα): sometimes the gen. precedes, as in iii. 3 των ἵππων τοὺς γαλινούς, v. 12 ήτω ύμων τὸ ναὶ ναί, 1 Tim. iv. 14 ἵνα σου ή προκοπή φανερά η. The loose construction also prevails in long or complex phrases, cf. iv. 1 των ήδονων των στρατευομένων εν τοις μέλεσιν, where the more idiomatic form would have been $\tau \hat{\omega} \nu \vec{\epsilon} \nu \tau \hat{\sigma} \hat{\iota} \hat{\iota}$ μέλεσιν στρατευομένων ήδονων, and i. 5 παρά του διδόντος Θεού $\pi \hat{a} \sigma \iota \nu \ \dot{a} \pi \lambda \hat{\omega}_{S}$, where we might have expected either $\pi . \tau o \hat{\nu} \hookrightarrow co \hat{\nu}$ τοῦ πᾶσιν άπλῶς διδόντος, οι π. τοῦ πᾶσιν άπλῶς διδόντος Θεοῦ: so i. 3 το δοκίμιον ύμων της πίστεως might have been more compactly expressed τὸ τῆς πίστεως ὑμῶν δοκίμιον. Classical parallels will be found in the note on i. 5. We find the compact construction however in iii. 9 τοὺς καθ' ὁμοίωσιν Θεοῦ γεγονότας and frequently in both Epistles of Peter, as in the First i. 14 ταῖς πρότερον ἐν τῆ άγνοία ύμῶν ἐπιθυμίαις, ii. 9 τοῦ ἐκ σκότους ύμᾶς καλέσαντος, ii. 15 την των αφρόνων ανθρώπων αγνωσίαν, iii. 2 την έν φόβω άγίαν ἀναστροφην ύμων, ν. 1 ὁ καὶ της μελλούσης ἀποκαλύπτεσθαι δόξης κοινωνός: in the Second i. 4 της εν τώ κόσμω εν τή έπιθυμία φθοράς, ii. 7 της των αθέσμων εν ασελγεία αναστροφής, ii. 10 τους οπίσω σαρκος εν επιθυμία μιασμού πορευομένους.

If we wish to distinguish the shades of meaning attaching to these different modes of qualifying the noun, (1) denotes the final stage of thought by which the subject is combined with its qualification so as to form one new complex subject; (2) gives the definite subject first, and then adds its qualification as a second thought; (3) gives an indefinite subject first, and afterwards defines it by its qualification: this has still more the air of a second thought. Both (2) and (3) may serve a rhetorical purpose by giving prominence to the qualification, which is to some extent merged and lost in (1). The last (4) is the least artistic form, and gives the mental impression in its first rough shape, unmodified by the secondary action of the mind.

In these compound phrases the use of the article is also affected by what may be called the Law of Correlation or Sympathy. If one noun is dependent on another, the article is, in general, used either with both or with neither; and thus, if the one noun can dispense with the article, it is sometimes omitted with the other also, even when, if it stood alone, the latter would naturally have taken the article. Thus we have $\mathring{a}\nu\theta o_{S} \chi\acute{o}\rho\tau o\nu$ i. 10, not $\mathring{a}\nu\theta o_{S} \tau o\mathring{\nu} \chi\acute{o}\rho\tau o\nu$, $\delta o\mathring{\nu}\lambda o_{S} \Theta eo\mathring{\nu}$ i. 1, not $\delta o\mathring{\nu}\lambda o_{S} \tau o\mathring{\nu} \Theta eo\mathring{\nu}$, $\mathring{a}\kappa\rho oa\tau\mathring{\eta}_{S} \lambda\acute{o}\gamma o\nu$ i. 23, not $\mathring{a}\kappa\rho oa\tau\mathring{\eta}_{S} \tau o\mathring{\nu} \lambda\acute{o}\gamma o\nu$, $\mathring{\eta}\mu\acute{e}\rho a \sigma \phi a\gamma\mathring{\eta}_{S}$, not $\mathring{\tau}\mathring{\eta} \mathring{\mu}\acute{e}\rho a \sigma \phi a\gamma\mathring{\eta}_{S}$ or $\mathring{\eta}\mu\acute{e}\rho a \tau\mathring{\eta}_{S} \sigma \phi a\gamma\mathring{\eta}_{S}$, $\nu\acute{o}\mu o\nu \tau \mathring{\nu}\nu \tau\mathring{\eta}_{S} e^{2}\lambda e\nu\theta e\rho \ell a_{S}$ ii. 25, $\delta\iota\grave{a} \nu\acute{o}\mu o\nu$ e $\ell\lambda e\nu\theta e\rho \ell a_{S}$ ii. 12; so $\mathring{e}\rho\gamma a \nu\acute{o}\mu o\nu$ or $\tau \mathring{a} \mathring{e}\rho\gamma a \tauo\mathring{\nu} \nu\acute{o}\mu o\nu$, not $\mathring{e}\rho\gamma a \tauo\mathring{\nu} \nu\acute{o}\mu o\nu$ or $\tau \mathring{a} \mathring{e}\rho\gamma a \nu\acute{o}\mu o\nu$. Apparent exceptions may sometimes be explained (as v. 10 $\mathring{e}\nu \tau\mathring{\mu} \mathring{o}\nu o\mu a\tau\iota$ K $\nu\rho\acute{\iota}o\nu$, v. 11 $\tau\acute{o}\tau\acute{e}\lambda o_{S} \kappa \nu \rho\acute{\iota}o\nu$) by the fact that $\kappa \nu \rho\acute{\iota}o\nu$ is a proper name, the construction being the same as in $\tau \mathring{\eta}\nu \nu \tau \sigma \mu o\nu \nu \nu \nu \nu \iota\acute{o}\theta$.

From the above uses of the article in an attributive phrase we must carefully distinguish its use in predication, of which the type is $\mathring{a}\gamma a \vartheta \mathring{o}s$ \mathring{o} $\mathring{a}\nu \mathring{\eta}\rho$, the subject being known by the presence of the article, the predicate by its absence, as in i. 26 $\tau \mathring{o}\nu \mathring{v} \tau \mathring{o}\nu \mathring{u} \mathring{a}\tau \mathring{a}\iota \mathring{o}s$ $\mathring{\eta} \mathring{\rho} \mathring{\rho} \mathring{\rho} \mathring{\rho} \mathring{e}\sigma \mathring{e}\sigma \mathring{e}\sigma \mathring{e}\sigma \mathring{e}\sigma \mathring{e}\sigma \mathring{e}\sigma \mathring{e}\nu \mathring{e}$. Hence we characterize $\mathring{\mu} \mathring{a}\kappa \mathring{a}\rho \mathring{i}s$ $\mathring{a}\nu \mathring{\eta}\rho$ in i. 12 as a predicate (like $\tau \mathring{e}\lambda \mathring{e}\iota \mathring{o}s$ $\mathring{a}\nu \mathring{\eta}\rho$ in iii. 2), 'He is a blessed man who,' instead of dividing them with the English Version and making $\mathring{a}\nu \mathring{\eta}\rho$ subject, 'Blessed is the man.' The same phrase is shown to be predicative in Rom. iv. 8 ($\mathring{\mu} \mathring{a}\kappa \mathring{a}\rho \iota \mathring{o}s$ $\mathring{a}\nu \mathring{\eta}\rho$ $\mathring{o}s$ $\mathring{o}v$ $\mathring{\mu}$ $\mathring{\mu}$ $\mathring{\mu} \mathring{\nu}$ $\mathring{\nu}$ $\mathring{\nu}$

&c., is pure religion, cf. Acts ix. 15 σκεῦος ἐκλογῆς ἐστί μοι οὖτος, John i. 19 αὕτη ἐστὶν ἡ μαρτυρία Ἰωάννου. We have examples of oblique predication in i. 27 ἄσπιλον ἑαυτὸν τηρεῖν, v. 10 ὑπόδειγμα λάβετε τῆς κακοπαθίας τοὺς προφήτας, and ii. 5 οὐχ ὁ Θεὸς ἐξελέξατο τοὺς πτωχοὺς τῷ κόσμῳ πλουσίους ἐν πίστει; 'has not God chosen the poor to the world (to be) rich in faith?' The article however may be used with the predicative noun when it does not denote a class in which the subject is included, but a concept of equal extension with which it is declared to be identical, as iii. 6 ὁ κόσμος τῆς ἀδικίας ἡ γλῶσσα καθίσταται 'the tongue is (represents) the unrighteous world.'

The English possessive pronoun is expressed in classical Greek by the article alone, except for the sake of clearness or emphasis. So too occasionally in the N.T., e.g. Matt. xxvii. 24 ἀπενίψατο τὰς χεῖρας, Luke v. 13 ἐκτείνας τὴν χεῖρα, James ii. 15 λειπόμενοι τῆς ἐφημέρον τροφῆς 'in lack of their daily food' [or perhaps 'the day's food'], ii. 14 ἐὰν πίστιν λέγη τις ἔχειν, ἔργα δὲ μὴ ἔχη, μὴ δύναται ἡ πίστις σῶσαι αὐτόν; 'can his faith save him?' [But perhaps it is better to take the article simply as referring to the previous πίστις, 'can the faith (spoken of) save him'?], v. 16 ἐξομολογεῖσθε ἀλλήλοις τὰς ἀμαρτίας 'confess your sins to each other,' or perhaps 'confess the sins (spoken of in v. 15)'. The latter however seems here less appropriate, as the sins spoken of in v. 15 were those of the sick man alone.

Generally however in the N.T. the genitive of the demonstrative or personal pronoun is added, e.g. i. 21 τὰς ψυχὰς ὑμῶν, ii. 8 τὸν πλησίον σου, ii. 18 τὴν πίστιν σου.. τῶν ἔργων μου, iii. 6 τοῖς μέλεσιν ὑμῶν, i. 8 ταῖς ὁδοῖς αὐτοῦ, i. 10 τῷ ὕψει αὐτοῦ...τῆ ταπεινώσει αὐτοῦ, i. 11 τὸ ἄνθος αὐτοῦ...τοῦ προσώπου αὐτοῦ...ἐν ταῖς πορείαις αὐτοῦ. Where two nouns are joined the genitive of the pronoun may be stated only once, e.g. iii. 13 δειξάτω ἐκ τῆς καλῆς ἀναστροφῆς (αὐτοῦ) τὰ ἔργα αὐτοῦ, iv. 9 ὁ γέλως ὑμῶν εἰς πένθος μεταστραφήτω καὶ ἡ χαρὰ (ὑμῶν) εἰς κατήφειαν, ii. 18 δείξω ἐκ τῶν ἔργων μου τὴν πίστιν (μου).

Occasionally the article is omitted, and the possessive pronoun alone employed, as in i. 26 μη χαλιναγωγών γλώσσαν έαυτοῦ ἀλλ' ἀπατῶν καρδίαν έαυτοῦ, ii. 2 εἰς συναγωγην ὑμῶν if we translate 'into your synagogue' instead of 'into a synagogue (or 'meeting') of yours,' v. 20 ὁ ἐπιστρέψας ἀμαρ-τωλὸν ἐκ πλάνης ὁδοῦ αὐτοῦ σώσει ψυχὴν αὐτοῦ. This is very common in the LXX., and especially in the Apocrypha, e.g. ἐπὶ καρδίαν ἡμῶν Barueh iii. 7, cf. Sir. ii. 17, v. 2, xiii. 19, Psalm. Sal. vi. 7, μὴ μνησθῆς ἀδικιῶν πατέρων ἡμῶν, ἀλλὰ μνήσθητι χειρός σου Barueh iii. 5, δικαιώματα αὐτοῦ οὐκ ἔγνωσαν οὐδὲ ἐπορεύθησαν ὁδοῖς ἐντολῶν Θεοῦ ib. iv. 13, ἐπὶ τραχήλους αὐτῶν ἐπιβήση, v. 25, 1 Macc. ii. 10 ποῖον ἔθνος οὐκ ἐκληρονόμησε βασιλείαν αὐτῆς; ('her kingdom'), v. 44 ἐν ὀργῆ αὐτῶν 'in their wrath,' v. 70 ἔθαψαν αὐτὸν ἐν τάφοις πατέρων αὐτῶν 'in the sepulchre of their fathers,' Sir. i. 11 ἐν ἡμέρα πελευτῆς αὐτοῦ εὐλογηθήσεται 'in the day of his end,' iii. 5 ἐν ἡμέρα προσευχῆς αὐτοῦ, iii. 10 ἐν ἀτιμία πατρός σου, Psalm. Sal. iv. 18 ἀπὸ κροτάφων αὐτοῦ 'from his temples,' viii. 5 παρελύθη γόνατά μου coming between συνετρίβη ἡ ὀσφύς μου and ἐφοβήθη ἡ καρδία μου. In like manner the article is omitted with the possessive pronoun, c.y. Prov. iii. 5 ἐπὶ σῆ σοφία μὴ ἐπαίρου, v. 21 τήρησον ἐμὴν βουλήν. Sometimes both article and genitive are omitted, as in iv. 8

Sometimes both article and genitive are omitted, as in iv. 8 καθαρίσατε χεῖρας άμαρτωλοὶ καὶ άγνίσατε καρδίας δίψυχοι 'cleanse your hands ye sinners, and purify your hearts ye double-minded.' Probably this is to be explained as a proverbial phrase approaching to a compound, like our 'shake hands,' 'up-stairs.' We may compare Sir. xxxviii. 10 εὔθυνον χεῖρας καὶ ἀπὸ πάοης άμαρτίας καθάρισον καρδίαν, 1 Mace. xii. 39 ἐζήτησε Τρύφων ἐκτεῖναι χεῖρα ἐπὶ 'Αντίοχον.

I will now take in order, with one or two exceptions which will be noted later, the remaining instances in which an anarthrous Greek noun takes the definite article in the R.V. These are i. 10 ώς ἄνθος χόρτου παρελεύσεται 'as the flower of the grass he shall pass away.' I see no objection here to a more literal rendering 'as a flower of grass,' i.e. 'as a wild flower'; in v. 11 we have the article τὸν χόρτον, τὸ ἄνθος because they have been already referred to: i. 20 ὀργὴ ἀνδρὸς δικαιοσύνην Θεοῦ οὐκ ἐργάζεται 'the wrath of man worketh not the righteousness of God' might perhaps be rendered 'a man's wrath worketh not God's righteousness,' but I am disposed to think that the absence of the article (which is facilitated here by the law of correlation, δικαιοσύνην dropping its article in order to conform with the naturally anarthrous Θεοῦ, and the phrase ὀργὴ ἀνδρός being in like manner made conformable to the phrase δ. Θ.) is intended to emphasize the contrast by bringing together the contrasted nouns, as in ii. 13, of which I have spoken above: v. 20 πολύ ἰσχύει δέησις δικαίου ἐνεργουμένη 'the supplication of a righteous man availeth much in its working' might perhaps be better translated 'a righteous man's supplication availeth much when actuated by the Spirit.' iii. 18 καρπὸς δὲ δικαιοσύνης ἐν εἰρήνη σπείρεται, here it is to be noted that καρπ. δικ. is a phrase found in Phil. i. 11, Heb. xii. 11. as well as in Amos vi. 2, Prov. xi. 30, and is therefore liable to the abbreviation which naturally attaches to all proverbial expressions. Possibly also the writer may have felt that the proleptic use of $\kappa a \rho \pi \delta s$ would have acquired additional harshness if the article were prefixed. It would have been natural to say $\tau \dot{\delta}$ $\sigma\pi$ έρμα $\sigma\pi$ είρεται, but καρπός is not that which is sown, but that which it is hoped will spring up. Peaceful sowing results in righteousness as its fruit.

I proceed to the case of anarthrous epithets where the English has the definite article. Such are v. $3 e^{i} e^{i} \sigma \chi \acute{a} \tau a_i s$ $\acute{\eta} \mu \acute{\epsilon} \rho a_i s$ 'in the last days,' which occurs also in 2 Tim. iii. 1: it may be compared with 1 John ii. $18 e^{i} \sigma \chi \acute{a} \tau \eta$ $\acute{\omega} \rho a e^{i} \sigma \tau \acute{u}$, 1 Pet. i. $5 e^{i} \nu \kappa a_i \rho \mathring{\omega} e^{i} \sigma \chi \acute{a} \tau \omega$, Sir. i. $11 e^{i} e^{i} \sigma \tau a_i e^{i} e^{i} \sigma \chi \acute{a} \tau \omega$, and even ii. $3 e^{i} e^{i} e^{i} \sigma \chi \acute{a} \tau \omega$ σου. On the other hand we find $e^{i} \nu \tau a_i s$ $e^{i} \sigma \chi \acute{a} \tau a_i s$ $e^{i} \sigma \chi \acute{a} \tau \omega$ $\sigma \sigma \upsilon$. On the R.V. 'until it receive the early and the latter rain' stands for the Greek $e^{i} \sigma s \lambda \acute{a} \beta \eta \tau \rho \acute{a} \iota \omega \omega$ $\sigma \sigma \iota \omega$. In this last case both article and substantive are dropped by colloquial abbreviation, as we have 'Paul's' in old writers for 'St. Paul's church.'

In English we join the article with the superlative, even when it forms part of the predicate; whereas the Greeks always omitted it in such cases (e.g. $\pi\acute{a}\nu\tau\omega\nu$ $\phi\iota\lambda\omega\mu\alpha\theta\acute{e}\sigma\tau\alpha\tau\sigma\varsigma$ $K\hat{\nu}\rho\sigma\varsigma$ $\hat{\eta}\nu$), and also where the superlative denotes a high degree of any quality, as James iii. 4 $\dot{\nu}\pi\dot{\sigma}$ $\dot{\epsilon}\lambda\alpha\chi\prime\sigma\tau\nu\nu$ $\pi\eta\delta\alpha\lambda\prime\sigma\nu$. Similarly the classical writers omit the article with the ordinal numeral, as Thuc. v. 81 $\tau\acute{\epsilon}\tau\alpha\rho\tau\nu\nu$ $\kappa\alpha\dot{\iota}$ $\delta\acute{\epsilon}\kappa\alpha\tau\nu\nu$ $\check{\epsilon}\tau\sigma\varsigma$ $\tau\hat{\omega}$ $\pi\sigma\lambda\acute{\epsilon}\mu\dot{\omega}$ $\dot{\epsilon}\tau\epsilon\lambda\dot{\epsilon}\dot{\nu}\tau a$, and so, in Matt. xx. 3 and elsewhere, we find expressions like $\pi\epsilon\rho\dot{\iota}$ $\tau\rho\dot{\iota}\tau\eta\nu$ $\delta\dot{\nu}\rho\alpha\nu$. The omission is probably to be accounted for by the wish to shorten familiar expressions where there is no danger of misunderstanding being caused by it, just as we might say '7th Victoria,' or 'Acts seven two.'

I come now to the phrases which I had reserved before: i. 18 $d\pi\epsilon\kappa\dot{\nu}\eta\sigma\epsilon\nu$ $\dot{\eta}\mu\hat{a}s$ $\lambda\dot{\delta}\gamma\omega$ $\dot{a}\lambda\eta\theta\epsilon\dot{a}s$, with which may be compared 2 Cor. vi. 7 $\dot{\epsilon}\nu$ $\lambda\dot{\delta}\gamma\omega$ $\dot{a}\lambda\eta\theta\epsilon\dot{a}s$, $\dot{\epsilon}\nu$ $\delta\nu\nu\dot{a}\mu\epsilon\iota$ Θεοῦ, and Col. i. 5 $\dot{\epsilon}\nu$ $\tau\hat{\omega}$ $\lambda\dot{\delta}\gamma\omega$ $\tau\hat{\eta}s$ $\dot{a}\lambda\eta\theta\epsilon\dot{a}s$ τ οῦ $\dot{\epsilon}\dot{a}a\gamma\gamma\epsilon\lambda\dot{o}\nu$. The meaning in the two latter expressions is the same, but in Colossians it is stated at length, whereas in Corinthians the Apostle just touches it in his rapid enumeration of the different ways in which he showed himself a minister of God. Similarly we have $\lambda\dot{\delta}\gamma\sigma\nu$ ζω $\hat{\eta}s$ Phil. ii. 16. Both $\lambda\dot{\delta}\gamma\sigma$ and $\dot{a}\lambda\dot{\eta}\theta\epsilon\iota a$ belong to the class of abstract words which may either take the article or not, according to the pleasure of the speaker; and if one is made anarthrous, the other will usually be so too by the rule of sympathy or correlation. A precisely similar case is ii. 12 $\delta\iota\dot{a}$ $\nu\dot{\sigma}\mu\sigma\nu$ $\dot{\epsilon}\lambda\epsilon\nu\theta\epsilon\rho\dot{\epsilon}\alpha s$ $\mu\dot{\epsilon}\lambda\lambda\nu\tau\epsilon s$ $\kappa\rho\dot{\epsilon}-\nu\epsilon\sigma\theta a\iota$. In both cases I think the qualifying noun gains additional importance by the omission of the article. In ii. 8 we have the anarthrous adjective $\nu\dot{\sigma}\mu\nu\nu$ $\tau\epsilon\lambda\dot{\epsilon}\iota\tau\epsilon$ $\beta a\sigma\iota\lambda\iota\kappa\dot{\epsilon}\nu$, where the adjective comes in rather as an after-thought to complete the phrase $\nu\dot{\epsilon}\mu\nu\nu$ $\tau\epsilon\lambda\dot{\epsilon}\iota\tau\epsilon$. In my note I have compared $\tau\nu\dot{\epsilon}\nu\mu\mu$ $\dot{a}\gamma\iota\nu$, $\delta\iota a\theta\dot{\eta}\kappa\eta$ $\dot{a}\gamma\dot{\epsilon}a$ Luke i. 72, 1 Macc. i. 15, 73.

It must indeed be confessed that the Hellenistic writers are very lax in their use of the article with a noun qualified by an attributive adjective or genitive. They may be said to have introduced into Greek prose the freedom of Greek poetry, itself a tradition handed down from the Homeric ages, before the use of the article had been developed out of the demonstrative pronoun. This freedom would naturally commend itself to foreigners learning Greek, to whom Greek gender would be as great a stumbling-block as German or French gender is to Englishmen now, and who, as a matter of fact, did often confuse the masculine and neuter gender, see above p. cliv. We find examples in Baruch i. 3 ἐν ὧσι παντὸς τοῦ λαοῦ, where ἐν ὧσι παν be regarded as a prepositional phrase (like ἐκ στόματος λεόντων 1 Macc. ii. 60), Bar. i. 8 τὰ σκεύη οἴκου Κυρίου, where the omission of the article before οἴκου is probably to be explained by its forming a phrase with Κυρίου, Sir. i. 5 ρίζα σοφίας τίνι ἀπεκαλύφθη; ('the root of wisdom'), ver. 9 φόβος Κυρίου καύχημα 'the fear of the Lord is glory,' ver. 16 στέφανος σοφίας φόβος Κυρίου 'the fear of the Lord is the crown of wisdom,' vii. 9 Θεώ ύψίστω 'to the most high God,' xxxi. 13 πνεθμα φοβουμένων Κυρίον ζήσεται, Psalm. Sal. iii. 7 ἀλήθεια τῶν δικαίων παρὰ Θεοῦ the truth of the just comes from God, iii. 16 ή ζωή αὐτῶν ἐν φωτὶ Κυρίου, xiii. 1 δεξιά Κυρίου ἐσκέπασέν με followed by δ βραχίων Κυρίου ἔσωσεν με, Job xxxi. 18 διὰ ἀσέβειαν δώρων ὧν έδέχοντο, ΧΧΧΥΙΙΙ. 17 ἀνοίγονται πύλαι θανάτου, ν. 31 δεσμον Πλειάδος έγνως; xxxix. 1 έγνως καιρον τοκετού τραγελάφων πέτρας; Prov. ιι. 17 ή ἀπολιποῦσα διδασκαλίαν νεότητος καὶ διαθήκην θείαν έπιλελησμένη, ver. 22 όδοι ἀσεβῶν ἐκ γῆς ὀλοῦνται, iii. 33 κατάρα $\Theta \epsilon o \hat{\nu} \epsilon \nu$ olkous $\alpha \sigma \epsilon \beta \hat{\omega} \nu$, 'the curse of God is on the houses of the impious, 2 Sam. xxiv. ἐπάταξε καρδία Δαβίδ αὐτόν, Jonah ii. 4 ἀπέρριψάς με είς βάθη καρδίας θαλάσσης. We also find the article omitted with the participle when used as a substantive, as in Prov. v. 13 οὐκ ἤκουον φωνὴν παιδεύοντός με. For similar omissions in N.T. cf. Luke i. 15 ἐκ κοιλίας μητρὸς αὐτοῦ, v. 17 ἐν πνεύματι καὶ δυνάμει Ἡλία, ἐπιστρέψαι καρδίας πατέρων έπὶ τέκνα καὶ ἀπειθεῖς ἐν φρονήσει δικαίων, ν. 35 δύναμις Ύψίστου ἐπισκιάσει σε, ν. 51 διεσκόρπισεν ύπερηφάνους διανοία καρδίας αὐτῶν, ν. 78 διὰ σπλάγχνα έλέους Θεοῦ ἡμῶν, ii. 9 δόξα Κυρίου, v. 13 πληθος στρατιᾶς οὐρανίου, v. 25 προσδεχόμενος παράκλησιν τοῦ Ἰσραήλ, Heb. iv. 3 ἀπὸ καταβολής κόσμου, v. 13 λόγον δικαιοσύνης, 1 Pet. i. 1 έκλεκτοίς παρεπιδήμοις διασποράς, ν. 23 διὰ λόγου ζώντος Θεοῦ καὶ μένον- τ_{0S} 'by the word of God which liveth and abideth,' iii. 12 $\partial \phi \theta a \lambda$ μοὶ Κυρίου ἐπὶ δικαίους καὶ ὧτα αὐτοῦ εἰς δέησιν αὐτῶν, πρόσωπον δὲ Κυρίου ἐπὶ ποιοῦντας κακά, 2 Pet. ii. 5 ἀρχαίου κόσμου οὐκ έφείσατο...κατακλυσμον κόσμω άσεβων επάξας. It is curious that the Apocalypse in spite of its startling solecisms of construction approaches more nearly to the classical usage as regards the article than many other parts of the N.T.

The use of the article with $\pi \hat{a}_{S}$ and $\delta \lambda o_{S}$ is the same in the N.T. as in ordinary Greek. When $\pi \hat{a}_{S}$ is anarthrous, it is equivalent to the Eng. 'every,' if joined to a common singular noun, as in i. 17 $\pi \hat{a}\nu$ $\delta \omega \rho \eta \mu a$ $\tau \dot{\epsilon} \lambda \epsilon \iota o \nu$, i. 19 $\pi \hat{a}_{S}$ $\check{a}\nu \theta \rho \omega \pi o_{S}$, iii. 7 $\pi \hat{a}\sigma a$ $\phi \dot{\nu} \sigma \iota_{S}$ $\theta \eta \rho \dot{\iota} \omega \nu$, iii. 16 $\pi \hat{a}\nu$ $\phi a \hat{\nu} \lambda o \nu$ $\pi \rho \hat{a}\nu \mu a$: if joined to an abstract noun, which properly denotes only a single subject, it is equivalent to 'all,' as in i. $21 \pi \hat{a} \sigma a \nu \ \hat{\rho} \nu \pi a \rho (a \nu 'all filthiness,' i. <math>2 \pi \hat{a} \sigma a \nu \ \chi a \rho \hat{a} \nu \ \hat{\eta} \gamma \hat{\eta} \sigma a \sigma \theta \epsilon$ 'think it entire joy'; so perhaps $\pi \hat{a} \sigma a \ \delta \hat{o} \sigma \iota s \ \hat{a} \gamma a \theta \hat{\eta}$ 'all good giving' in i. 17; in the phrase $\pi \hat{a} \sigma a \kappa a \hat{\nu} \chi \eta \sigma \iota s \ \tau o \iota a \hat{\nu} \tau \eta$ iv. 16 it may be better to translate 'every such boasting,' because the addition of $\tau o \iota a \hat{\nu} \tau \eta$ splits up the idea of $\kappa a \hat{\nu} \chi \eta \sigma \iota s$, while the absence of the article forbids us to make a new unit, such as would be implied by $\hat{\eta} \tau o \iota a \hat{\nu} \tau \eta \kappa a \hat{\nu} \chi \eta \sigma \iota s$. We find the article in i. 8 $\hat{\epsilon} \nu \pi a \hat{\sigma} a \iota s \tau a \hat{\iota} s \delta \delta o \hat{\iota} s a \hat{\nu} \tau \sigma \hat{\iota}$ 'in all his ways,' and with $\tilde{o} \lambda o s$ in ii. 10 $\tilde{o} \lambda o \nu \tau \hat{o} \nu \nu \hat{o} \mu o \nu$, iii. 2 $\tilde{o} \lambda o \nu \tau \hat{o} \sigma \hat{o} \mu a$. More rarely we find $\tilde{o} \lambda o s$ placed after the article and substantive, as in $\tau \hat{o} \nu \kappa \hat{o} \sigma \mu o \nu \tilde{o} \lambda o \nu Mark viii. 36$. In both these cases $\tilde{o} \lambda o s$ is properly in apposition, and is thus more forcible than when it is placed between the article and substantive, as it sometimes is in classical writings, but never in the N.T. $\Pi \hat{a} s$ however occurs in this order in Acts xx. 18 $\tau \hat{o} \nu \pi \hat{a} \nu \tau a \chi \rho \hat{o} \nu o \nu$, Gal. v. 14 $\delta \pi \hat{a} s \nu \hat{o} \mu o s$, &c.

An adjective or participle may stand by itself as a substantive, if its omitted subject is made sufficiently clear by gender, number, and context, e.g. Θεὸς ὑπερηφάνοις ἀντιτάσσεται iv. 6, εἰδότι καλὸν $\pi o \iota \epsilon \hat{\imath} \nu ... \hat{a} \mu a \rho \tau \ell a \epsilon \sigma \tau \ell \nu$ iv. 17; and such a substantive may be defined by the article like a proper substantive, e.g. i. 6 ὁ διακρινόμενος, i. 11 ο πλούσιος, ii. 16 τὰ ἐπιτήδεια, iii. 11 τὸ γλυκύ, τὸ $\pi \iota \kappa \rho \delta \nu$. In like manner the infinitive, which is used by itself as a substantive in apposition in i. 27 θρησκεία καθαρὰ αὕτη ἐστίν, ἐπισκέπτεσθαι ὀρφανούς, may be defined by the article and thus become capable of inflexion, as in τοῦ μὴ βρέξαι, v. 17. The same holds good of adverbs or any other indeclinable word or phrase, as in v. 12 ήτω ύμῶν τὸ ναὶ ναί, where the article serves to distinguish the first vai, which is subject, from the second vai, which is predicate. It has been stated above that a substantive may be qualified by an adverb interposed between it and the article, as $\dot{\eta}$ $\ddot{a}\nu\omega\theta\epsilon\nu$ $\sigma\sigma\phi(a)$ in iii. 17. If the noun is such as can be easily supplied in thought, from its being part of a common phrase or any other reason, it is often omitted, as in $\dot{\eta}$ $a\ddot{v}\rho\iota\sigma\nu$ ($\dot{\eta}\mu\dot{\epsilon}\rho a$) iv. 14. Again the neuter article is often used with the genitive to express the general conception of the person or thing denoted, and thus we get the phrase τὸ τῆς αὔριον in the verse referred to.

Pronouns.

Demonstrative.

οὖτος used to emphasize the apodosis in i. 23 εἴ τις ἀκροατὴς... οὖτος ἔοικεν ἀνδρί κ.τ.λ., i. 25 ὁ παρακύψας εἰς νόμον τέλειον... οὖτος μακάριος. See Winer, p. 199. As subject, attracted to the gender of the predicative noun, i. 27 θρησκεία καθαρὰ αὕτη ἐστίν, ἐπισκέπτεσθαι ὀρφανούς.

őδε, supposed to be used for δ δε $\hat{\iota}\nu a$, see n. on 13, $\epsilon \hat{\iota}_S$ τ $\hat{\eta}\nu \delta \epsilon$ τ $\hat{\eta}\nu$ π $\delta \lambda \iota \nu$.

αὐτός = Lat. ipsc, emphatic, (a) ordinary use i. 12 ὁ Θεὸς ἀπείραστός ἐστιν, πειράζει δὲ αὐτὸς οὐδένα, ii. 6 (οἱ πλούσιοι) αὐτοὶ ἔλκουσιν ὑμᾶς: (b) special Hellenistic use ii. 7 οὐκ αὐτοὶ βλασφημοῦσιν, see notes on the two verses: (c) the nom. does not seem to be used pleonastically, as by St. Luke in xxiv. 13, 14 δύο ἐξ αὐτῶν ἣσαν πορευόμενοι...καὶ αὐτοὶ ὡμίλουν πρὸς ἀλλήλους.

ό αὐτός iii. 10 ἐκ τοῦ αὐτοῦ στόματος, ver. 11 ἐκ τῆς αὐτῆς ∂πῆς. St. James does not use αὐτὸς ὁ in this sense, as St. Luke does in the phrase αὐτῆς τῆ ὅρα (lit. 'at the very hour'), which occurs in ii. 38, vii. 21, Acts xvi. 18 and elsewhere.

 $a \dot{v} \tau \acute{o} \acute{o} = \text{Lat.} is$, unemphatic in the oblique cases; but gaining a certain emphasis by repetition, as in iii. $9 \dot{\epsilon} v a \dot{v} \tau \hat{\eta} \epsilon \dot{v} \lambda o \gamma o \hat{v} \mu \epsilon v \kappa a \delta \dot{\epsilon} v a \dot{v} \tau \hat{\eta} \kappa a \tau a \rho \dot{\omega} \mu \epsilon \theta a$: or by position as in St. Luke xxiv. $24 a \dot{v} \tau \acute{o} v \delta \dot{\epsilon} o \dot{v} \kappa \epsilon \dot{\epsilon} \delta o v$, ver. $31 a \dot{v} \tau \acute{o} v \delta \dot{\epsilon} \delta \iota \eta v o i \dot{v} \theta \eta \sigma a v o i \dot{o} \theta \theta a \lambda \mu o i$. It is also used pleonastically, not only in the genitive with the article, as in the cases mentioned above; but when occurring in apposition to the noun, or participle equivalent to noun, as in iv. $17 \epsilon i \delta \acute{o} \tau \iota \kappa a \lambda \mu \dot{\eta} \pi o \iota o \hat{v} v \tau \iota \dot{u} \mu a \rho \tau \iota a a \dot{v} \tau \dot{\omega} \dot{\epsilon} \sigma \tau \iota v$.

αὐτοῦ instead of ἐαυτοῦ,¹ in i. 18 ἀπεκύησεν ἡμᾶς εἰς τὸ εἶναι ἡμᾶς ἀπαρχὴν τῶν αὐτοῦ κτισμάτων (ΛCP have ἐαυτοῦ); i. 26 Tregelles and Tischendorf read (with Sin. ΛΚL &c.) μὴ χαλιναγωγῶν γλῶσσαν αὐτοῦ ἀλλὰ ἀπατῶν καρδίαν αὐτοῦ, where I have followed WH. in reading (with B+) ἑαυτοῦ. See also note on v. 20, where some of the latest editors read ψυχὴν αὐτοῦ.

έαυτοῦ is used for σεαυτοῦ in i. 22 γίνεσθε ποιηταὶ καὶ μη ἀκροαταὶ μόνον παραλογιζόμενοι έαυτούς, ii. 4 διεκρίθητε ἐν ἐαυτοῦς. We find however σεαυτόν in ii. 8.

The use of the article with the demonstrative pronoun is the same as in classical writers, cf. i. 7 δ $\mathring{a}\nu\theta\rho\omega\pi\sigma\sigma$ $\mathring{\epsilon}\kappa\epsilon\hat{\iota}\nu\sigma\sigma$, iii. 15 $a\mathring{v}\tau\eta$ $\mathring{\eta}$ $\sigma\sigma\phi\acute{\iota}a$, iv. 13 $\tau\mathring{\eta}\nu\delta\epsilon$ $\tau\mathring{\eta}\nu$ $\pi\acute{o}\lambda\iota\nu$.

Relative.

Attracted ii. 5 κληρονόμους τῆς βασιλείας ἦς ἐπηγγείλατο. Indefinite (with ἐάν for ἄν) iv. 4 ὸς ἐὰν βουληθῆ φίλος εἶναι τοῦ κόσμου; ii. 10 ὅστις ὅλον τὸν νόμον τηρήση, iv. 13 (οἱ λέγοντες...κερδήσομεν) οἴτινες οὐκ ἐπίστασθε τὸ τῆς αὕριον, 'whereas ye know not,' see note.

Interrogative.

τίς introducing hypothetical clause iii. 13 τίς σοφὸς ἐν ὑμῖν; δειξάτω; with pregnant force iv. 12 σὰ τίς εἶ; 'how weak and ignorant?'

ποία ή ζωή; iv. 14: dependent i. 24 ἐπελάθετο ὁποῖος ἦν. Double question iii. 5 ἡλίκον πῦρ ἡλίκην ὕλην ἀνάπτει.

Number and Gender.

A singular noun is used for a plural in iii. 14 εἰ ἐριθίαν ἔχετε ἐν τῆ καρδία ὑμῶν, in contrast with v. 5 ἐθρέψατε τὰς καρδίας ὑμῶν, and v. 8 στηρίξατε τὰς καρδίας ὑμῶν.

A singular verb precedes two subjects joined by κai : iii. 10 $\epsilon \kappa$ τοῦ αὐτοῦ στόματος εξέρχεται εὐλογία καὶ κατάρα.

First plural of verb used in courtesy: iii. 1 μεῖζον κρίμα λημψόμεθα, iii. 9 ἐν αὐτῆ εὐλογοῦμεν καὶ ἐν αὐτῆ καταρῶμεν.

A plural verb and adjective follow a subject consisting of two nouns joined by a disjunctive conjunction in ii. 15 $\dot{\epsilon} \dot{a} \nu \dot{a} \delta \epsilon \lambda \phi \dot{a} \delta \delta \delta \dot{a} \delta \dot{a} \delta \delta \dot{a} \delta \dot{a} \delta \delta \dot{a} \delta$

A plural verb follows a singular indefinite pronoun : ii. 16 $\epsilon \acute{a}\nu$ $\tau\iota\varsigma$ $\dot{\epsilon}\xi$ $\dot{\nu}\mu\hat{\omega}\nu$ $\epsilon \ddot{\iota}\pi\eta...\mu\hat{\gamma}$ $\delta\hat{\omega}\tau\epsilon$ $\delta\dot{\epsilon}$.

The imperative $\mathring{a}\gamma\epsilon$ is used as an exclamation with a plural in iv. 13 $\mathring{a}\gamma\epsilon$ $\nu\hat{v}\nu$ of $\lambda\dot{\epsilon}\gamma\sigma\nu\tau\epsilon$ s, and v. 1 $\mathring{a}\gamma\epsilon$ $\nu\hat{v}\nu$ of $\pi\lambda\sigma\dot{\sigma}\iota\sigma\iota$.

The neuter plural referring to persons is used with a plural verb in ii. 19 τὰ δαιμόνια πιστεύουσιν.

Cases.

(1) Nominative.

There is a tendency in the Hellenistic writings, notably in the Apocalypse, to put the noun of apposition into the nominative, even where the original noun is oblique; thus we have in iii. 8 $\tau \dot{\eta} \nu$ γλώσσαν οὐδεὶς δαμάσαι δύναται followed by ἀκατάστατον κακόν, $\mu\epsilon\sigma\tau\dot{\eta}$ lov, which we can here explain as a new sentence with the subject $\dot{\eta} \gamma \lambda \hat{\omega} \sigma \sigma \dot{\alpha} \dot{\epsilon} \sigma \tau \iota \nu$ understood; but such an explanation fails in Apoc. iii. 12 γράψω ἐπ' αὐτὸν τὸ ὄνομα τῆς καινῆς Ἱερουσαλήμ, ή καταβαίνουσα ἀπὸ τοῦ Θεοῦ μου, καὶ τὸ ὄνομά μου τὸ καινόν, and in other passages referred to in my note. We have however many examples of the ordinary apposition, as in the nom. i. 1 Ίάκωβος δούλος, ver. 8 ό ἄνθρωπος ἐκεῖνος...ἀνὴρ δίψυχος, ii. 21 'Αβραὰμ ὁ πατὴρ ἡμῶν, ii. 25 'Ραὰβ ἡ πόρνη, i. 27 θρησκεία καθαρὰ αΰτη ἐστίν, ἐπισκέπτεσθαι ὀρφανούς, where αΰτη is in apposition to the following infinitive: in the gen. i. 1 Κυρίου Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ, and the harsh use in ii. $2 \tau \dot{\eta} \nu \pi i \sigma \tau i \nu \tau o \hat{v} K \nu \rho i o \nu \dot{\eta} \mu \hat{\omega} \nu \dot{I} \eta \sigma o \hat{v}$ $X \rho \iota \sigma \tau o \hat{v}$, $\tau \hat{\eta} s \delta \delta \xi \eta s$, where see note; in the acc. ii. 21 Ίσαἀκ τὸν υίον αὐτοῦ: not to mention such cases as i. 1 ταῖς δώδεκα φυλαῖς ταις έν τη διασπορά, iii. 6 ή γλώσσα ή σπιλούσα, v. 4 ό μισθός ό άφυστερημένος, which are treated of under the article.

- (2) Accusative. See Prepositions.
- Of Duration, v. 17 οὐκ ἔβρεξεν ἐνιαυτοὺς τρεῖς.

Adverbial (defining the extent of the action), i. $6 \mu \eta \delta \hat{\epsilon} \nu \delta \iota \alpha \kappa \rho \iota - \nu \delta \mu \epsilon \nu \delta \rho_{s}$, iii. $2 \pi \delta \lambda \lambda \hat{\alpha} \pi \tau \alpha i \epsilon \iota \nu$.

(3) Genitive. See Prepositions and Infinitive.

With substantives, (a) possessive, (a_1) objective, (a_2) subjective, (b) of quality, (c) of material.

(a₁) i. 22 ποιητής λόγον, iv. 11 ποιητής νόμου, i. 25 ποιητής ἔργου, iv. 4 φίλος τοῦ κόσμου, ii. 1 τὴν πίστιν τοῦ Κυρίου (representing the verbal phrase πιστεύω Κυρίω or εἰς Κ.).

- (a_2) i. 20 ὀργὴ ἀνδρός, δικαιοσύνη Θεοῦ, v. 11 τὸ τέλος Κυρίου, v. 15 ἡ εὐχὴ τῆς πίστεως.
- (b) i. 25 and ii. 12 νόμος ἐλευθερίας, i. 25 ἀκροατὴς ἐπιλησμονῆς, ii. 4 κριταὶ διαλογίσμων πονηρῶν, iii. 6 ὁ κόσμος τῆς ἀδικίας, and (unless these two had better be classed as 'possessive,' γένεσις and τροπή being personified) i. 23 τὸ πρόσωπον τῆς γενέσεως αὐτοῦ, i. 17 τροπῆς ἀποσκίασμα.
- (e) i. 12 $\tau \delta \nu \ \sigma \tau \epsilon \phi a \nu o \nu \ \tau \hat{\eta} s \ \zeta \omega \hat{\eta} s$ 'the crown which consists in life eternal,' iii. 18 $\kappa a \rho \pi \delta s \ \delta \iota \kappa a \iota o \sigma \acute{\nu} \nu \eta s$ 'the fruit which consists in justice.'

With adjectives, (a) of possession and privation, (b) defining the sphere.

- (a) iii. 8 μεστη ιοῦ, iii. 17 μεστη ελέους.
- (b) i. 13 ἀπείραστος κακῶν, ii. 10 πάντων ἔνοχος (the latter would come under the smaller category of judicial words).

With verbs, (a) of attainment or its opposite, (b) of aim with infinitive, (c) compounded with $\kappa a \tau \acute{a}$.

- (α) i. 5 λείπεται σοφίας, ii. 15 λειπόμενοι τροφής.
- (b) v. 17 προσηύξατο τοῦ μὴ βρέξαι.
- (e) ii. 6 καταδυναστεύουσιν ύμῶν, ii. 13 κατακαυχᾶται κρίσεως, iv. 11 καταλαλεῖ νόμου, ἀλλήλων.

(4) Dative. See Prepositions.

General of Indirect Object, with transitive verbs (a), with intransitive or passive verbs or adjectives (b).

- (a) ii. 5 ἐπηγγείλατο, iv. 6 δίδωσιν.
- (b) i. 6 ἔοικεν κλύδωνι, i. 23 ἔοικεν ἀνδρί, iv. 6 ὑπερηφάνοις ἀντιτάσσεται, iii. 3 εἰς τὸ πείθεσθαι αὐτοὺς ἡμῖν, iv. 7 ὑποτάγητε τῷ Θεῷ, ἀντίστητε τῷ διαβόλω, iv. 8 ἐγγίσατε τῷ Θεῷ, v. 17 ὁμοιοπαθὴς ἡμῖν.

Special Uses, expressing (a) contact, (b) person possessing, (e) person to whose judgment or estimate reference is made, (d) agent.

- (α) i. 2 περιπίπτειν πειρασμοῖς.
- (b) v. 3 ὁ ἰὸς εἰς μαρτύριον ὑμῖν ἔσται, iv. 17 ἁμαρτία αὐτῷ ἐστίν.

- (e) ii. 5 τοὺς πτωχοὺς τῷ κόσμῳ.
- (d) iii. 7 πάσα φύσις δαμάζεται τῆ φύσει, iii. 18 καρπὸς σπείρεται τοῖς ποιοῦσιν εἰρήνην.

Instrumental.

i. 18 ἀπεκύησεν λόγφ, ii. 25 ἐτέρα ὁδῷ ἐκβαλοῦσα, v. 14 ἀλείψαντες ἐλαίφ, v. 17 προσευχŷ προσηύξατο with intensive force, see note.

Prepositions.

διά. expressing the ground, iv. 2 οὐκ ἔχετε διὰ τὸ μὴ αἰτεῖσθαι. εἰς. of place, i. 25 παρακύψας εἰς νόμον, ii. 6 εἰς κριτήρια ἕλκειν, iv. 13 πορευσόμεθα εἰς τὴν πόλιν: of reference, i. 19 βραδὺς εἰς ὀργήν, ταχὺς εἰς τὸ ἀκοῦσαι: of result and purpose, iv. 9 ὁ γέλως εἰς πένθος μεταστραφήτω, i. 18 ἀπεκύησεν ἡμᾶς εἰς τὸ εἶναι ἡμᾶς ἀπαρχήν, v. 3 ὁ ἰὸς εἰς μαρτύριον ἔσται, cf. Mark xiv. 55 ἐζήτουν μαρτυρίαν εἰς τὸ θανατῶσαι, Acts vii. 19 ποιεῖν τὰ βρέφη ἔκθετα εἰς τὸ μὴ ζωογονεῖσθαι, found especially in St. Paul's Epistles, but also, though rarely, in classical authors, e.g. Xen. Mcm. iii. 6. 2 εἰς τὸ ἐθελῆσαι ἀκούειν, and Kühner's n. on Anab. viii. 8. 20. The use in ii. 23 ἐλογίσθη εἰς δικαιοσύνην is unclassical.

έπί. of place, ii. 21 ἀνενέγκας Ἰσαὰκ ἐπὶ τὸ θυσιαστήριον, ii. 3 ἐπιβλέπειν ἐπὶ τὸν φοροῦντα, v. 14 προσευξάσθωσαν ἐπ' αὐτόν, iii. 7 τὸ ὄνομα τὸ ἐπικληθὲν ἐφ' ὑμᾶς.

κατά. 'according to,' iii. 9 καθ' όμοίωσιν Θεοῦ γεγονότας, ii. 8 κατὰ τὴν γραφήν, ii. 17 νεκρά ἐστιν καθ' ἑαυτήν ('taken by itself'). πρός. of time, iv. 14 πρὸς ὀλίγον φαινομένη (unclassical): 'in accordance with, iv. 5 $\pi\rho\delta\varsigma$ $\phi\theta\delta\nu\nu\nu$ $\epsilon\pi\iota\pi\sigma\theta\epsilon\hat{\iota}$ ('jealously'), see examples of adverbial use in Schmid Atticismus ii. p. 242.

ύπό. 'below' (i.e. 'on a lower level than'), ii. 3 ύπὸ τὸ ὑποπόδιον: 'under' (tropical), v. 12 ὑπὸ κρίσιν πεσεῖν, cf. Dem. 56.59 τὰ μέγιστα ὑπὸ τὴν τῶν δικαστηρίων ἔρχεται ψῆφον.

ἀντί. 'instead of,' iv. 15 οἱ λέγοντες Σήμερον πορευσόμεθα... ἀντὶ τοῦ λέγειν ὑμᾶς 'Εὰν κ.τ.λ., cf. Xen. Hier. v. 1 ἀντὶ τοῦ ἄγασθαι φοβοῦνται, Μεπ. Ι. 2. 64 ἀντὶ τοῦ μὴ νομίζειν θεούς, φανερὸς ἡν θεραπεύων.

 $\dot{a}\pi\dot{o}$. (a) motion from, (b) separation, (c) origin and cause.

- (a) i. 17 καταβαίνον ἀπὸ τοῦ Πατρός, iv. 7 φεύξεται ἀφ' ὑμῶν, v. 19 πλανᾶσθαι ἀπὸ τῆς ἀληθείας.
- (b) i. 27 ἄσπιλον ἐαυτὸν τηρεῖν ἀπὸ τοῦ κόσμου, where ἀπό belongs to both τηρεῖν and ἄσπιλον, or rather to their joint effect (cf. Luke xii. 15 φυλάσσεσθε ἀπὸ πλεονεξίας, Acts xx. 26 καθαρὸς ἀπὸ τοῦ αἴματος).
- (c) i. 13 ἀπὸ Θεοῦ πειράζομαι, v. 4 ὁ μισθὸς ὁ ἀφυστερημένος ἀφ' ὑμῶν.

διά. = instrumental dative, ii. 12 διὰ νόμου ἐλευθερίας κρίνεσθαι (cf. Rom. ii. 12 διὰ νόμου κριθήσονται).

ένωπιον (Hellenistic). iv. 10 ταπεινώθητε ένωπιον Κυρίου.

έξ. local, iii. 10 ἐκ στόματος ἐξέρχεται εὐλογία, iii. 11 ἐκ τῆς ὀπῆς βρύει τὸ γλυκύ: partitive, ii. 16 τίς ἐξ ὑμῶν; causal, ii. 21, 24, 25 ἐξ ἔργων ἐδικαιώθη, iv. i. ἐκ τῶν ἡδονῶν μάχαι, ii. 22 ἐκ τῶν ἔργων ἡ πίστις ἐτελειώθη, ii. 18 δείξω ἐκ τῶν ἔργων μον τὴν πίστιν, iii. 18 δειξάτω ἐκ τῆς καλῆς ἀναστροφῆς τὰ ἔργα. (In the last three examples the force is nearly that of the instrumental dative.)

έπί. locul, v. 17 οὐκ ἔβρεξεν ἐπὶ τῆς γῆς.

παρά. i. 5 αἰτεῖν παρὰ Θεοῦ, i. 7 λήμψεται παρὰ τοῦ Κυρίου.

πρό. local, v. 9 πρὸ τῶν θυρῶν ἔστηκεν: tropical, v. 12 πρὸ πάντων μὴ ὀμνύετε.

ύπέρ. v. 16 εὔχεσθε ὑπὲρ ἀλλήλων.

ύπό. expressing the agent (used of inanimate things and abstractions), i. 14 ὑπὸ τῆς ἐπιθυμίας πειράζεται, iii. 4 ὑπὸ ἀνέμων ἐλαυνόμενα, ὑπὸ πηδαλίου μετάγεται, iii. 6 φλογιζομένη ὑπὸ γεέννης, ii. 9 ἐλεγχόμενοι ὑπὸ τοῦ νόμου.

χωρίς. ii. 18 χωρίς τῶν ἔργων, ib. 20, 26.

With Dative.

- $\dot{\epsilon}\nu$. (a) of place, 'in,' 'among,' hence of clothing, (b) of circumstances and accompaniments of action, (c) of time, (d) of the sphere, (e) of mental state, (f) of ground or cause, (g) of instrument:
- (a) iii. 6 ή γλώσσα καθίσταται έν τοις μέλεσιν, i. 23 κατανοείν τὸ πρόσωπον εν εσόπτρω (here it approximates to use g), iii. 14

εριθίαν έχετε εν τῆ καρδία, iv. Ι πόθεν μάχαι εν ύμιν; v. 13 τίς εν ύμιν; v. 14 ἀσθενει τις εν ύμιν; ii. 4 διεκρίθητε εν έαυτοις, ii. 2 πτωχὸς εν εσθητι ρυπαρά.

- (b) i. 8 ἀκατάστατος ἐν ταῖς ὁδοῖς, i. 11 ἐν ταῖς πορείαις μαρανθήσεται, i. 27 ἐπισκέπτεσθαι χήρας ἐν τἢ θλίψει αὐτῶν, v. 10 ἐλάλησαν ἐν τῷ ὀνόματι Κυρίου, v. 14 ἀλείψαντες ἐν τῷ ὀνόματι (the action is accompanied by the use of the Name).
 - (c) v. 4 εν εσχάταις ήμέραις.
- (d) i. 4 ἐν μηδενὶ λειπόμενοι, i. 25 μακάριος ἐν τῆ ποιήσει, ii. 5 πλούσιος ἐν πίστει, ii. 10, iii. 2 ἐν ἐνί, ἐν λόγιο πταίειν.
- (e) i. 21 ἐν πραΰτητι δέξασθε τὸν λόγον, iii. 13 δειξάτω τὰ ἔργα αὐτοῦ ἐν πραΰτητι σοφίας, ii. 1 ἐν προσωπολημψίαις τὴν πίστιν ἔχετε, ii. 16 ὑπάγετε ἐν εἰρήνη, iii. 18 ἐν εἰρήνη σπείρεται, i. 6 αἰτεῖν ἐν πίστει, iv. 16 καυχάσθω èν ταῖς ἀλαζονίαις αὐτοῦ.
- (f) i. 9 καυχάσθω $\vec{\epsilon}\nu$ τ $\hat{\omega}$ ὕψει, i. 10 κ. $\vec{\epsilon}\nu$ τ $\hat{\eta}$ ταπεινώσει, iv. 3 $\vec{\epsilon}\nu$ τα $\hat{\imath}$ ς $\hat{\eta}$ δόναις δαπαν $\hat{\alpha}\nu$.
 - (g) iii. 9 ἐν τῆ γλώσση εὐλογοῦμεν τὸν Κύριον, cf. i. 23.
- In i. 17 we find $\check{\epsilon}\nu\iota$ used for $\check{\epsilon}\nu\epsilon\sigma\tau\iota$, $\pi a\rho$, $\mathring{\phi}$ où κ $\check{\epsilon}\nu\iota$ $\pi a\rho a\lambda\lambda a\gamma\acute{\eta}$, see note.
 - $\epsilon\pi i$. (a) ground, (b) the object of any emotion.
 - (α) ν. 1 ολολύζοντες έπὶ ταῖς ταλαιπωρίαις.
 - (b) v. 7 μακροθυμῶν ἐπ' αὐτῷ (i.e. the crop).

- (α) i. 17 παρ' δ οὐκ ἔνι παραλλαγή.
- (b) i. 27 θρησκεία καθαρὰ παρὰ τῷ Θεῷ αὕτη ἐστίν.
- σύν. i. 11 ἀνέτειλεν σὺν τῷ καύσωνι.

VERB.

Voices.

Active and Middle combined iii. 3, 4, 5 ίδε τῶν ἵππων τοὺς χαλινοὺς εἰς τὰ στόματα βάλλομεν,...ἰδο ὺ καὶ τὰ πλοῖα μετάγεται ὑπὸ πηδαλίου...ἰδο ὺ ἡλίκον πῦρ ἡλίκην ὕλην ἀνάπτει, iv. 2, 3 οὐκ ἔχετε διὰ τὸ μὴ αἰτεῖ σθαι ὑμᾶς αἰτεῖτε καὶ οὐ λαμβάνετε διότι κακῶς αἰτεῖ σθε.

Passive used impersonally, iv. 15 καν άμαρτίας ή πεποιηκώς άφεθήσεται αὐτώ.

Doubt whether Passive or Middle, i. 6 διακρινόμενος, iii. 6 and iv. 4 καθίσταται, ii. 16 θερμαίνεσθε καὶ χορτάζεσθε, v. 16 ἐνεργουμένη.

Under this head we may place the use of Intransitive Verbs in a Transitive sense, e.g. $\beta\rho\dot{\nu}\omega$ iii. 11 where see note, $\beta\lambda a\sigma\tau\dot{\alpha}\nu\omega$ aor. $\dot{\epsilon}\beta\lambda\dot{\alpha}\sigma\tau\eta\sigma a$ v. 18, but intr. in Matt., Mark., Heb.

Tenses.

Present (a) pruesens historicum in connexion with aorist to express a continued state, v. 6 έφονεύσατε τὸν δίκαιον· οὐκ ἀντιτάσσεται ὑμῖν (= οὐκ ἀντιτασσόμενον).

(b) in connexion with perfect to strengthen an assertion, iii. 17 πᾶσα φύσις δαμάζεται καὶ δεδάμασται. Compare examples in Schmid Atticismus ii. p. 276, J. E. B. Mayor in J. of Phil. vol. xx. p. 265.

Future, for imperative, ii. 8 $\dot{a}\gamma a\pi \dot{\eta}\sigma\epsilon\iota\varsigma$ $\tau \dot{o}\nu$ $\pi\lambda\eta\sigma\dot{\iota}o\nu$ $\sigma o\nu$: for opt. with $\dot{a}\nu$, ii. 18 $\dot{a}\lambda\lambda$ ' $\dot{\epsilon}\rho\epsilon\hat{\iota}$ $\tau\iota\varsigma$.

Aorist (a) gnomic, i. 11 ἀνέτειλεν, ἐξήρανεν, ἐξέπεσεν, ἀπώλετο, i. 24 κατενόησεν, ἐπελάθετο.

- (b) referring to a point of time implied but not stated, i. 12 $\dot{\epsilon}\pi\eta\gamma\gamma\epsilon\dot{i}\lambda\alpha\tau_0$, ii. 6 $\dot{\eta}\tau\iota\mu\dot{a}\sigma\alpha\tau\epsilon$.
- (e) answering to Eng. perfect and so translated in R.V., v. 11 ὑπομονὴν Ἰωβ ἢκούσατε καὶ εἴδετε, v. 3 ἐθησαυρίσατε, v. 5 ἐτρυφήσατε, ἐσπαταλήσατε, ἐθρέψατε, v. 6 κατεδικάσατε, ἐφονεύσατε. See Dr. Weymouth in Classical Review v. 267 foll.

Perfect (a) denoting immediate sequence, i. 24 κατενόησε καὶ ἀπελήλυθεν, ii. 10 ὅστις πταίση γέγονεν ἔνοχος, ii. 11 εἰ φονεύεις γέγονας παραβάτης.

(b) prophetic, v. 2, 3 σέσηπεν, γέγονεν, κατίωται.

The periphrastic tense so common in St. Luke (cf. xxiv. 13 $\mathring{\eta}\sigma a\nu$ πορευόμενοι εἰς κώμην, ver. 32 $\mathring{\eta}$ καρδία καιομένη $\mathring{\eta}\nu$) is found by some in James i. 17, iii. 15 where see notes.

Moods.

Imperative present used thirty-one times, agrist twenty-eight times; the latter used to express urgency without implying a more momentary action, i. 2 πᾶσαν χαρὰν ἡγήσασθε, v. 7 μακροθυμήσατε ἔως τῆς παρουσίας τοῦ Κυρίου (cf. Winer p. 395).

Subjunctive (a) hypothetical after $\epsilon \acute{a}\nu$ ii. 2, 14, 15, 16, 17, iv. 15, v. 19, after $\kappa \acute{a}\nu$ v. 16; (b) of time after $\~{o}\tau a\nu$ i. 2, $\~{e}\omega$ s v. 7; (c) of purpose after $\~{v}\nu a$ i. 4, v. 9, 13, after $\~{o}\tau \omega$ s v. 16; (d) indefinite after $\~{o}s$ $\epsilon \acute{a}\nu$ iv. 4, after $\~{o}\sigma\tau \iota s$ ii. 10; (e) of a rist with prohibitive force ii. 11 $\mu \grave{\eta}$ $\mu \iota \iota \iota \iota s$

Optative not used.

Infinitive.

- (u) Without article. Besides the ordinary use after δύναμαι, δυνατός, θ έλω, χ ρή, μ έλλω, we find the infinitive after εἰδότι iv. 17, the epistolary χ αίρειν depending on λ έγω understood i. 1, and ϵ πισκέπτεσ θ αι used in apposition to the subject of the sentence in i. 27.
- (b) With urticle (1) after preposition i. 18 ἀπεκύησεν ήμᾶς εἰς τὸ εἶναι ήμᾶς ἀπαρχήν, i. 19 ταχὺς εἰς τὸ ἀκοῦσαι, βραδὺς εἰς τὸ λαλῆσαι, iii. 3 χαλινοὺς εἰς τὰ στόματα βάλλομεν εἰς τὸ πείθεσθαι, iv. 3 οὐκ ἔχετε διὰ τὸ μὴ αἰτεῖσθαι, iv. 15 ἄγε νῦν οἱ λέγοντες Κερδήσομεν...ἀντὶ τοῦ λέγειν κ.τ.λ.; (2) in the genitive expressive of aim, v. 17 προσηύξατο τοῦ μὴ βρέξαι, not used for simple infin. as in Luke xxiv. 25 βραδεῖς τοῦ πιστεύειν.

PARTICIPLE.

(a) Without article.

Present, (1) describing a noun, either as attribute, e.g. i. 7 ἔοι-κεν κλύδωνι ἀνεμιζομένω καὶ ριπιζομένω, i. 23 ἔοικεν ἀνδρὶ κατα-νοοῦντι τὸ πρόσωπον, v. 16 ἰσχύει δέησις ἐνεργουμένη (that is if we take this to mean 'an inspired prayer'; if we translate 'prayer is of might if urgent,' it will come under a different head); or as predicate, e.g. ii. 15 ἐὰν ὑπάρχωσιν λειπόμενοι, iii. 15 ἔστιν αὕτη ἡ σοφία ἄνωθεν κατερχομένη: (2) standing for a noun iv. 17 εἰδότι καλὸν ποιεῖν καὶ μὴ ποιοῦντι ἀμαρτία ἐστίν 'to one knowing how to do right and not doing it there is sin,' where in classical Greek we should at least have had τῷ μὴ ποιοῦντι, if not τὸ μὴ ποιεῖν: (3) explaining a preceding adjective i. 4 ὁλόκληρος, ἐν μηδενὶ λειπόμενος: (4) explaining a preceding adverb or adverbial phrase i. 17 πᾶν δώρημα ἄνωθέν ἐστιν, καταβαῖνον ἀπὸ τοῦ Πατρός, i. 6 ἐν πίστει, μηδὲν διακρινόμενος, ii. 12 οὕτως λαλεῖτε ὡς μέλλοντες κρίνεσθαι: (4) qualifying a verb, either by describing its mode of action, as i. 14 πειράζεται ὑπὸ τῆς ἐπιθυμίας ἐξελκόμενος καὶ δελεαζόμενος, v. 1 κλαύσατε ὀλολύζοντες, v. 7 ἐκδέχεται τὸν καρπὸν μακροθυμῶν; or by introducing some new consideration, which may be causal, as i. 2 πᾶσαν χαρὰν ἡγήσασθε γινώσκοντες κ.τ.λ., iii. 1 μὴ γίνεσθε διδάσκαλοι εἰδότες κ.τ.λ.; or concessive, as iii. 3 τὰ πλοῖα τηλικαῦτα ὄντα καὶ ὑπὸ ἀνέμων σκληρῶν ἐλαυι όμενα μετάγεται ('though so great'); or may describe the circumstances under which the action takes place, as i. 13 μηδείς πειραζόμενος λεγέτω i. 26 εἴ τις δοκεῖ θρησκὸς εἶναι μὴ χαλιναγωγῶν γλῶσσαν ἀλλ' ἀπατῶν καρδίαν; or even denote the consequence, as ii. 9 ἀμαρτίαν ἐργάζεσθε ἐλεγχόμενοι ὑπὸ τοῦ νόμον, i. 22 μὴ γίνεσθε ἀκροαταὶ μόνον παραλογιζόμενοι ἑαντούς ('ye commit sin and are convicted,' be not hearers only and thus deceive yourselves').

Aorist expresses priority of time, e.g. i. 12 δόκιμος γενόμενος λήμψεται τὸν στέφανον ('after being tried'), i. 15 ή ἐπιθυμία συλλαβοῦσα τίκτει ἀμαρτίαν, ἡ δὲ ἀμαρτία ἀποτελεσθεῖσα ἀποκυεῖ θάνατον ('when it has conceived,' 'when it has come to maturity'); when joined with an imperative the aorist denotes that the action expressed by it must be done before the action expressed by the imperative, e.g. i. 21 ἀποθέμενοι ῥυπαρίαν δέξασθε τὸν λόγον ('lay aside filthiness and receive the word'), v. 14 προσευξάσθωσαν ἀλείψαντες ('let them anoint and pray'). The prior action may be the cause of what follows, e.g. i. 18 βουληθεὶς ἀπεκύησεν ἡμᾶς. It may also explain a preceding adverbial phrase, e.g. ii. 21 ἐξ ἔργων ἐδικαιώθη ἀνενέγκας Ἰσαάκ, ii. 25 ἐξ ἔργων ἐδικαιώθη ὑποδεξαμένη τοὺς ἀγγέλους.

Future does not occur. Instead we have the periphrastic μέλλων κρίνεσθαι ii. 12.

(b) With article.

Present as attributive adjective i. 5 παρὰ τοῦ διδόντος Θεοῦ πᾶσιν ἀπλῶς, i. 21, ii. 3, iii. 6, iv. 1, v. 1; as substantive iii. 4 ὅπου ἡ ὁρμὴ τοῦ εὐθύνοντος βούλεται, v. 15 ἡ εὐχὴ σώσει τὸν κάμνοντα, i. 6, 12, ii. 3, 5, iii. 18, iv. 11, 12. Often the reference is not confined to present time, but is equally applicable to past and future, as in the examples quoted.

Aorist. Always used of something which precedes the main action: as attribute in ii. $7 \tau \delta$ ὅνομα τὸ ἐπικληθέν, v. $4 \tau \delta \nu$ ἐργατοῦν τῶν ἀμησάντων; as subject i. 25δ παρακύψας εἰς νόμον, ii. 13, v. 11, v. 20.

Perfect as attribute iii. 9 τοὺς ἀνθρώπους τοὺς γεγονότας, v. 4 ὁ μισθὸς ὁ ἀφυστερημένος.

Compound Sentence.

- (1) Substantival Clauses.
- (a) Indirect statement. This is never expressed in this Epistle by the infinitive, but only by $\tilde{\sigma}\iota\iota$ with indicative.

ὅτι follows γινώσκω i. 3, ii. 20, v. 20; οἶδα iii. 1, iv. 1; ὁράω ii. 24, v. ii.; βλέπω ii. 22; δοκέω ix. 5; οἴομαι i. 7; πιστεύω, ii. 19.

(b) Indirect question. i. 24 ἐπελάθετο ὁποῖος ἦν.

[The direct statement is frequently used in quotations by St. James, being introduced once by a pleonastic $\delta\tau\iota$ in i. 13 $\lambda\epsilon\gamma\epsilon\tau\omega$ $\delta\tau\iota$ $\pi\epsilon\iota\rho\dot{\alpha}\xi o\mu\alpha\iota$; but generally appended immediately to the verb of saying, as in ii. 3, 11, 23, 18, iv. 5, 13, 15, or to the noun $\gamma\rho\alpha\phi\dot{\eta}$, as in ii. 8.]

- (2) Adjectival clauses introduced by relative pronouns.
- i. 12 his, i. 17, ii. 5, iv. 5, 13, v. 10.
- (3) Adverbial clauses.
- (a) Causal clause.
- i. 10 καυχάσθω...ὅτι παρελεύσεται, i. 12 μακάριος...ὅτι λήμψεται, i. 22, 23 γίνεσθε ποιηταὶ...ὅτι ἔοικεν, v. 8 στηρίξατε καρδίας ὅτι ἤγγικεν, iv. 3 οὐ λαμβάνετε διότι κακῶς αἰτεῖσθε.
 - (b) Temporal (a), Local (β), and Modal (γ) clauses.
- (a) i. 2 χαρὰν ἡγήσασθε ὅταν περιπέσητε, v. 7, μακροθυμῶν ἔως λάβη. (β) iii. 4 μετάγεται ὅπου ἡ ὁρμὴ βούλεται, iii. 16 ὅπου ζῆλος, ἐκεῖ ἀκαταστασία. (γ) ii. 26 ὥσπερ τὸ σῶμα νεκρόν, οὕτως καὶ ἡ πίστις.
 - (c) Final clause.

i. 5 αἰτείτω παρὰ τοῦ διδόντος Θεοῦ πᾶσιν καὶ μὴ ὀνειδίζοντος. Here we might suppose μή to be used with the participle because the principal verb is imperative, as in Luke iii. 11 ὁ ἔχων δυὸ χιτῶνας μεταδότω τῷ μὴ ἔχοντι (but this too is better explained as generic, not huic qui non habet, but ci qui non habeat), ih. xix. 27 τοὺς ἐχθρούς μου τούτους τοὺς μὴ θελήσαντάς με βασιλεῦσαι ἀγάγετε ὧδε (but here too I should rather take it as a clause in apposition, referring τούτους to a certain type of men, 'the fellows that would not have me reign over them,' not simply 'these men who would not'); but I think it is better explained as in 2 Corv. 21 τὸν μὴ γνόντα άμαρτίαν ὑπὲρ ἡμῶν άμαρτίαν ἐποίησεν εμπ qui non nosset peccatum pro nohis peccatum fecit, 'one whose characteristic was sinlessness he made sin'; so here, 'let him ask of God whose characteristic it is to give to all without upbraiding.'

OTHER ADVERBS AND PARTICLES.

 \dot{a} λλ \dot{a} . In four passages it has its ordinary force of contrasting a positive with a negative conception, as in i. 25 οὐκ ἀκροατὴς... ἀλλὰ ποιητής, i. 26, iii. 15, iv. 11. In the remaining passage, ii. 18 ἀλλ' ἐρεῖ τις, it appears to have the unusual force of the Latin immo, adding emphasis to what has been already said; cf. 1 Pet. iii. 14 ἀλλ' εἰ καὶ πάσχοιτε διὰ δικαιοσύνην, μακάριοι, and see note in loco.

αν (see above under subjunctive and compound sentences) is not used by our author with the past indicative, though this is common enough in other books of the N.T. e.g. Heb. xi. 2, 9, Gal. iv. 15, Matt. xi. 21, or with the optative, a construction which is found only in Luke and Acts. It is omitted with ιστις before a subjunctive in ii. 10, and likewise with εσις in v. 7. The former construction is very rare in the N.T. but is found occasionally in classical Greek, both verse and prose: the latter is not uncommon in the N.T. and is found in classical poetry and in Aristotle. Instead of ιστις we find εσις used with the relative in classical Greek as well as in the N.T., see note on ισς εσις iv. 4.

 $\tilde{\epsilon} \pi \epsilon \iota \tau a$ used, as in classical authors, after $\pi \rho \hat{\omega} \tau o \nu \mu \acute{\epsilon} \nu$ without an accompanying $\delta \acute{\epsilon}$ in iii. 17.

ο ὕ τως, generally used with reference to a preceding comparison, as in i. 11, ii. 17, but in ii. 12 explained by what follows, οὕτως λαλεῖτε ὡς μέλλοντες κρίνεσθαι, seemingly pleonastic in iii. 10, where see note.

 $\delta \delta \epsilon$ is used, as in the N.T. generally and in Theocritus and the post-classical writers, of place,¹ for the classical $\epsilon \nu \tau a \hat{\nu} \theta a$ or $\epsilon \nu \theta a \delta \epsilon$, of which the former is not found in the N.T. and the latter only in Luke (including Acts) and John.

Of substantive depending on previous substantive: v. 14 ἐν τῷ ονόματι (τοῦ Κυρίου), see note.

Of subject to verb: i. 12 δν ἐπηγγείλατο (ὁ Κύριος) τοῖς ἀγαπῶσιν αὐτόν, iv. 6 διὸ λέγει (ὁ Θεός), ii. 23 ἐλογίσθη αὐτῷ εἰς δικαιοσύνην (τὸ πιστεύειν understood from previous clause), iii. 8 quoted below

Of verb governing infinitive: iii. 12 μη δύναται συκη έλαίας ποίησαι; οὔτε άλυκὸν γλυκὸ (δύναται) ποιῆσαι [or is ποιήσει the right reading here?]

PLEONASM.

Ο ΄΄ ἀν ή ρ, with δίψυχος i. 8 (as in Herm. Mand. ix. 6), μακάριος i. 12, κατανοοῦντι i. 23, χρυσοδακτύλιος ii. 2, cf. Luke xxiv. 19 (Ἰησοῦς) ἐγένετο ἀνὴρ προφήτης.

Of $\ddot{a} \nu \theta \rho \omega \pi \sigma s$, with $\epsilon \kappa \epsilon \hat{\imath} \nu \sigma s$ i. 7, with $\pi \hat{a} s$ i. 19.

Of the subject of the infinitive: iii. $3 \tau \delta \nu$ ἵππων τοὺς χαλινοὺς εἰς τὰ στόματα βάλλομεν εἰς τὸ πείθεσθαι αὐτοὺς ἡμῖν, iv. 4 οὐκ ἔχετε διὰ τὸ μὴ αἰτεῖσθαι ὑμᾶς, iv. 13-15 ἄγε νῦν οἱ λέγοντες...ἀντὶ τοῦ λέγειν ὑμᾶς.

Of the possessive pronoun or its equivalents: iv. $\mathbf{1}$ ἐκ τῶν ἡδονῶν ὑ μῶν τῶν στρατευομένων ἐν τοῖς μέλεσιν ὑμῶν, see above, under Article.

Of the demonstrative pronoun, added immediately before or after the verb, in apposition with a remote noun, for the sake of clearness or emphasis: i. 23 εἴ τις ἀκροατής ἐστιν...οὖτος ἔοικεν: or introducing an explanatory phrase or noun in apposition: i. 27 θρησκεία καθαρά ἐστιν αὕτη ἐπισκέπτεσθαι ὀρφανούς.

Of αὐτός in other cases beside the genitive: iii. 17 εἰδότι καὶ μὴ ποιοῦντι άμαρτία αὐτῷ ἐστίν.

Of φύσις with yen: iii. 7 πᾶσα φύσις θηρίων δαμάζεται, common in the Stoic writings, see note in loco.

ORDER OF WORDS.

- (1) of substantive and attribute; (2) of governing and governed nouns; (3) of subject and predicate; (4) of governing verb and case.
- (1) The adjective generally follows immediately on its substantive, as in i. 4 ἔργον τέλειον, i. 8 ἀνὴρ δίψυχος, ii. 2 ἀνὴρ χρυσοδακτύλιος, ii. 2 ἐσθῆτι λαμπρᾳ, but we find also the adjective preceding in i. 12 μακάριος ἀνήρ, iii. 2 τέλειος ἀνὴρ, ii. 2 ῥυπαρᾳ ἐσθῆτι, &c., and always in the case of πᾶς. It is unusual for the substantive to be separated from the adjective by an intervening verb, as in i. 2 ὅταν πειρασμοῖς περιπέσητε ποικίλοις, iv. 6 μείζονα δίδωσιν χάριν, iii. 13 γλυκὺ ποιῆσαι ὕδωρ, iv. 12 εἶς ἔστιν νομοθέτης, v. 17 Ἡλείας ἄνθρωπος ἦν ὁμοιοπαθῆς ἡμῖν [here, however, it is possible to make a pause between ἄνθρωπος and ὁμοιοπαθῆς 'Elijah was a man, of like passions with us']. In these cases the adjective is made more prominent by separation, though it is probable that a feeling of rhythm had a good deal to do with the departure from the usual order.
- (2) Omitting the genitive of the pronoun, which has been already dealt with, we find the genitive placed immediately after the governing noun in 50 cases as compared with three in which it precedes, the latter being i. $1 \Theta \epsilon o \hat{v} \delta o \hat{v} \lambda o s$, iii. $3 \tau \hat{\omega} v \tilde{l} \pi \pi \omega v \tau o \hat{v} s \chi a \lambda \iota v o \hat{v} s$, i. $17 \tau \rho o \pi \hat{\eta} s \hat{l} \pi o \sigma \kappa \hat{l} a \sigma \mu a$. In one instance the governing noun is separated by an intervening verb from the governed, $\tau \hat{\eta} v \gamma \lambda \hat{\omega} \sigma \sigma a v \hat{v} \delta \hat{\epsilon} \hat{l} s \delta a \mu \hat{u} \sigma a i \delta \hat{v} v a \tau a i \hat{u} v \theta \rho \hat{\omega} \pi \omega v$, where greater emphasis is given to $\hat{u} v \theta \rho \hat{\omega} \pi \omega v$ by its position.
- (3) Where the subject (not being a relative pronoun) is expressed, it precedes the predicative verb in about 55 cases, and follows it in about 20. When the predicate is expressed by the substantive verb and complement, the subject precedes the verb in about 16 cases and follows in about 8. I do not here take note of cases in which the verb is omitted, for which see Ellipsis above. As a rule the subject precedes the complement (predicative substantive or adjective), but we have the following exceptions: i. 26 μάταιος ή θρησκεία, i. 27 θρησκεία καθαρὰ αὕτη ἐστίν, ii. 19 εἶς ἐστὶν ὁ Θεός, iii. 6 ὁ κόσμος τῆς ἀδικίας ἡ γλῶσσα καθίσταται, v. 11 πολύσπλαγχνός ἐστιν ὁ Κύριος. In oblique predication, where subject and complement come under the government of a causative verb, we find the predicative noun preceding in i. 27 ἄσπιλον ἐαυτὸν τηρεῖν, v. 10 ὑπόδειγμα λάβετε τῆς κακοπαθίας τοὺς προφήτας: the subject precedes in ii. 5 ὁ Θεὸς ἐξελέξατο τοὺς πτωχοὺς τῷ κόσμῷ πλουσίους ἐν πίστει, and in i. 18 ἀπεκύησεν ἡμᾶς εἰς τὸ εἶναι ἡμᾶς ἀπαρχήν. Sometimes an adverbial phrase supplies the place of an oblique subject, as in i. 2 χαρὰν ἡγήσασθε ὅταν πειρασμοῖς περιπέσητε, which might have been expressed χ. ἡγ. πειρασμούς οι τὸ πειρασμοῖς περιπεσεῖν: sometimes of an oblique predicate, as in ii. 1 μὴ ἐν προσωπολημψίαις ἔχετε τὴν πίστιν, which might have been expressed μὴ προσωπολημπτοῦσαν ἔχ. τ. π.

(4) The verb usually precedes the case it governs unless the speaker intends the substantive to be emphatic, as in ii. 14 $\tau \ell$ $\delta \phi \epsilon \lambda \delta s$ $\epsilon \delta \lambda \nu \pi \ell \delta \tau \iota \nu \lambda \epsilon \gamma \eta \tau \iota s$ $\epsilon \chi \epsilon \iota \nu$, $\epsilon \rho \gamma a \delta \epsilon \lambda \nu \eta$, where $\lambda \epsilon \gamma \eta \tau \iota s$ intervening between $\pi \ell \delta \tau \iota \nu$ and its verb gives additional force to the former. In this Epistle the verb precedes in 88 cases and

CHAPTER IX

On the Style of St. James

The last chapter contained a survey of the grammatical usages of our Epistle. In the present chapter I propose to consider what conclusions may be drawn from that survey, as well as from an examination of the vocabulary of the Epistle, from its use of rhetorical figures, rhythm and arrangement of words, in reference to the Author's command over the resources of the Greek language and the distinctive qualities of his style.

To deal first with any peculiarities of Inflexion, he adheres to classical usage with the majority of the writers of the N.T. as regards the gender of $\pi\lambda o\hat{v}\tau os$ and $\zeta\hat{\eta}\lambda os$, which are sometimes made neuter by St. Paul.

As regards the Future, the reading κερδήσομεν is not quite certain in iv. 13. It is not found elsewhere in the Bible, but the only trace of the Attic κερδανῶ is the doubtful reading in 1 Cor. ix. 21, while the aor. ἐκέρδησα is common. Again, φάγομαι in v. 3 is the only future of ἐσθίω employed in the N.T. In the LXX. ἔδομαι and φάγομαι are both common, and are sometimes used in the same passage without any difference of meaning, e.g. Numb. xviii. 10 φάγομαι, ver. 11 ἔδομαι, Deut. xii. 20 and 24 φάγομαι, ver. 22 ἔδεται, so too καταφάγομαι and κατέδομαι.

As to the Perfect, we find parallels to $\epsilon l \sigma \epsilon \lambda \eta \lambda \nu \theta a \nu$ in John, Luke, Paul, and Laconian inscriptions. As there is no instance of the 3rd pl. either of the imperfect or 2nd aor. in our Epistle, there is no evidence to show whether James would have used such barbarous forms as $\epsilon l \chi o \sigma a \nu$ with John, or $\pi a \rho \epsilon \lambda \dot{a} \beta o \sigma a \nu$ with Paul, see Hort Appendix, p. 165.

As to the Imperative, $\eta \tau \omega$ occurs twice in the LXX, and only in one other place of the N.T. (1 Cor. xvi. 22). It is also found in inscriptions from Asia Minor. $\kappa \dot{\alpha} \theta o v$ occurs elsewhere in the N.T. only in quotations from the LXX.: it is said to have been used by Aristophanes and Menander, but does not occur in their existing remains. See below, notes on ii. 3, v. 12.

I go on now to Syntactical Uses.

The Article. We found James omitting this, contrary to classical usage, where the noun was defined by a possessive pronoun, as in i. 26 χαλιναγωγῶν γλῶσσαν ἑαυτοῦ, ἀπατῶν καρδίαν ἑαυτοῦ, v. 20 σώσει ψυχὴν αὐτοῦ. This license, common in LXX., is very rare in the other books of the N.T. except in the first two chapters of St. Luke and in quotations from the LXX., cf. Matt. xix. 28 ἐπὶ θρόνου δόξης αὐτοῦ, Luke i. 15 ἐκ κοιλίας μητρὸς αὐτοῦ, ver. 25 ἀφελεῖν ὄνειδός μου, ver. 51 ἐν βραχίονι αὐτοῦ...διανοία καρδίας αὐτῶν, Heb. x. 16 ἐπὶ καρδίας αὐτῶν (fr. LXX.), Jude 14 ἐν ἀγίαις μυριάσιν αὐτοῦ. See above, p. clxii. foll.

A similar license found in our Epistle is the omission of the article when the noun is defined by a genitive other than a pronoun, as in i. 18 ἀπεκύησεν ἡμᾶς λόγω ἀληθείας, ii. 12 διὰ νόμου ἐλευθερίας κρίνεσθαι, i. 20 ὀργὴ ἀνδρὸς δικαιοσύνην Θεοῦ οὖκ ἐργάζεται. This is very common in the LXX. and occurs, I think, in all the books of the N.T., especially after a preposition, e.g. 1 Cor. i. 1 διὰ θελήματος Θεοῦ, ih. ii. 15 τίς ἔγνω νοῦν Κυρίου, vi. 9 Θεοῦ βασιλείαν, x. 21 ποτήριον Κυρίου, Heb. x. 39 εἰς περιποίησιν ψυχῆς, x. 28 ἀθετήσας νόμον Μωυσέως, xii. 22 πόλει Θεοῦ ζῶντος, ἐκκλησία πρωτοτόκων ἀπογεγραμμένων ἐν οὐρανοῖς. The omission of the article with the attribute, as in ii. 8 νόμον βασιλικόν, is less frequent except in the combination πνεῦμα ἄγιον: we find it however in 1 Pet. i. 23 διὰ λόγου ζῶντος, 2 Pet. ii. 5 ἀρχαίου κόσμου οὐκ ἐφείσατο, ver. 8 ψυχὴν δικαίαν ἐβασάνιζεν, ver. 15 καταλείποντες εὐθεῖαν όδόν. See above p. clxiv. foll.

St. James' use of the Pronoun is more idiomatic than is usual in the N.T. I cannot call to mind any other example of $\tau\iota\varsigma$ used, like quidam, to soften what might seem a harsh or exaggerated expression, as in i. 18 $d\pi a\rho\chi\dot{\eta}\nu$ $\tau\iota\nu a$. We have also the double interrogative $\dot{\eta}\lambda\dot{\iota}\kappa\rho\nu$ $\dot{\eta}\dot{\nu}\dot{\iota}\kappa\rho\nu$ $\dot{\eta}\dot{\nu}\lambda\rho\nu$ $\dot{u}\dot{\nu}\dot{u}\dot{\tau}\tau\epsilon\iota$; and the pregnant use of $\ddot{\delta}\sigma\tau\iota\varsigma = \dot{\tau}$ whereas' in iv. 13, for which compare Acts xvii. 11 $\dot{\delta}\dot{\nu}\tau\iota\iota$ $\dot{\eta}\dot{\nu}a\nu$ $\dot{\epsilon}\dot{\nu}\gamma\epsilon\nu\dot{\epsilon}\sigma\tau\epsilon\rho\iota\iota$ $\dot{\tau}\dot{\epsilon}\nu$ $\dot{\epsilon}\nu$ $\Theta\epsilon\sigma\alpha\iota\lambda\nu\iota\dot{\kappa}\eta$, $\ddot{\delta}\iota\tau\iota\nu\epsilon\varsigma$ $\dot{\epsilon}\dot{\delta}\dot{\epsilon}\xi a\nu\tau\upsilon$ $\dot{\tau}\dot{\nu}\nu$ $\dot{\lambda}\dot{\epsilon}\gamma\rho\nu$ $\kappa.\tau.\lambda$. 'in that they received the word,' ib, vii. 53, Rom. i. 25, Phil. iv. 3 with Lightfoot's note, Winer p. 209 n., and for examples from classical, writers Isaeus vi. 43 $\dot{\epsilon}\dot{\iota}\varsigma$ $\tau\dot{\nu}\upsilon\tau\dot{\upsilon}$ $\dot{\epsilon}\dot{\nu}\dot{\epsilon}\dot{\epsilon}\dot{\epsilon}\dot{\epsilon}\varsigma$ ἥκουσιν ὅστε διεμαρτύρουν τἀναντία οἶς αὐτοὶ ἔπραξαν, οἵτινες ἀπέγραψαν αὐτοὺς κ.τ.λ., Xen. Ages. i. 36 ἄξιον ἄγασθαι αὐτοῦ, ὅστις ὑπ' οὐδενὸς ἐκρατήθη, Ellendt, Lex. Soph. s.v. ii. 3. The only unclassical use is the modified Hellenistic emphasis on αὐτοὶ in ii. 7 = is it not they who'? We do not find St. Luke's αὐτὸς ὁ for ὁ αὐτός, nor ὅς nor ποῖος for τίς, as seems to be the case in Matt. xxvi. 50, xxiv. 43, Acts xxiii. 34.

None of the examples mentioned under Number and Gender are contrary to elassical usage, while some are idiomatic, e.g. $\mathring{a}\gamma\epsilon$ $v\hat{v}\nu$ with plural verb, a use of $\mathring{a}\gamma\epsilon$ which is not found elsewhere in the N.T.

Cases—The use of the Nom. in apposition to an oblique case (iii. $8 \tau \dot{\eta} \nu \gamma \lambda \hat{\omega} \sigma \sigma a \nu ... \mu \epsilon \sigma \tau \dot{\eta} io\hat{v}$) is certainly harsh, but admits of some explanation, which distinguishes it from the solecisms quoted in the note from St. Mark and the Apocalypse.

Perhaps the point in which our Epistle departs most from classical usage is in regard to the Genitive of Quality, such as ἀκροατὴς ἐπιλησμονῆς i. 25, κριταὶ διαλογισμῶν πονηρῶν ii. 4, ὁ κόσμος τῆς ἀδικίας iii. 6. Vorst explains this by the comparative paucity of adjectives in the Hebrew language (Hebr. pp. 244 foll.), comparing Acts ix. 15 σκεῦος ἐκλογῆς, Heb. i. 9 ἡ ῥάβδος τῆς εὐθύτητος, Hosea xii. 7 where the Heb. 'balance of deceit' is expressed by ζυγὸς ἀδικίας of the LXX., but in Prov. xx. 23 by ζυγὸς δόλιος.

The only use of the Dative which seems to call for notice here is the Hebraistic use of the cognate with intensive force in v. 17 $\pi\rho\sigma\sigma\epsilon\nu\chi\hat{\eta}$ $\pi\rho\sigma\sigma\eta\nu\xi\alpha\tau\sigma$. This is found in several books of the N. T. but apparently not in St. Paul's writings.

Prepositions.—The constructions ὁ ἰὸς εἰς μαρτύριον ἔσται, and ἐλογίσθη εἰς δικαιοσύνην are Hebraistic and not found in classical authors, though common in the N.T., see notes on ii. 23, v. 3. The distinction between εἰς and ἐν is never lost in St. James, as it is in some of the writers of the N.T.

ἐπί: used with acc. where we might have expected either the simple dat. or dat. with ἐπί, e.g. iii. 7 after ἐπικαλεῖν (cf. 2 Chron. vii. 14 ἐφ' οὺς ἐπικέκληται τὸ ὄνομά μου, Acts xix. 13 ὀνομάζειν ἐπὶ τοὺς ἔχοντας τὰ πνεύματα τὸ ὄνομα τοῦ Κυρίου, but Plato Tim. 60 ῷ γένει κέραμον ἐπωνομάκαμεν, Rep. vi. 493 ὀνομάζειν ταῦτα πάντα ἐπὶ ταῖς τοῦ μεγάλου ζώου δόξαις, Stallb. on Rep.

v. 470); v. 14 after προσεύχομαι (cf. Mark xvi. 18 ἐπὶ ἀρρώστους χεῖρας ἐπιθήσουσιν, Acts viii. 17, Acts ix. 17, but more usually with dat, as in Mark v. 23, vii. 30).

 $\pi\rho\delta_S$: for the post-classical phrase $\pi\rho\delta_S$ δλίγον iv. 14, cf. Plut. Mor. 116 A, Justin M. Apol. i. 12 οὐκ ἄν τις τὴν κακίαν $\pi\rho\delta_S$ δλίγον ἡρεῖτο. There is only one instance of $\pi\rho\delta_S$ with gen. in N.T. (Acts xxviii. 34), and six with the dat.; but the ace is sometimes used where we might have expected $\pi\alpha\rho\delta$ with dat., as in Matt. xiii. 56 ai ἀδελφαὶ $\pi\rho\delta_S$ ἡμᾶς εἰσίν.

Tenses and Moods.—We have examples of the idiomatic use of these in the gnomic aorist, i. 11, 24, and the juxtaposition of aor. and perf. in i. 24 $\kappa \alpha \tau \epsilon \nu \delta \eta \sigma \epsilon \kappa \alpha i \ \alpha \pi \epsilon \lambda \dot{\eta} \lambda \nu \theta \epsilon \nu$ and of the pres. and perf. in iii. 17 δαμάζεται καὶ δεδάμασται. The use of the moods also conforms to the classical standard except that the optative is absent, as it is also in Matthew, Mark, the Gospel and Epistles of John, and the Epistle to the Hebrews and the Apocalypse. We have no instance in our Epistle of such constructions as "va followed by a fut. ind., which we find in John xvii. 2 "να δώσει, 1 Pet. iii. 1 ίνα κερδηθήσονται, and frequently in the Apocalypse; still less of $\tilde{l}\nu a$ with pres. ind. as in 1 Cor. iv. 6 $\tilde{l}\nu a$ $\phi \nu \sigma \iota o \hat{\nu} \sigma \theta \epsilon$, Gal. iv. 17 "να ζηλοῦτε, though it is possible that these forms may be used by mistake either for pres. subj. or fut. ind. (Winer p. 363). A similar license is the use of $\epsilon \dot{\alpha} \nu$ with indic. in 1 Thess. iii. 8 $\epsilon \dot{\alpha} \nu$ ύμεις στήκετε, Acts viii. 31 έὰν μή τις όδηγήσει, Luke xix. 40 έὰν οὖτοι σιωπήσουσιν, 1 John v. 15 ἐὰν οἴδαμεν; of ὅταν with indic. Αρος. iv. 9 ὅταν δώσουσιν, Mark xi. 19 ὅταν ἐγένετο, ver. 25 ὅταν στήκετε, Mark iii. 11 ὅταν ἐθεώρουν. Again, St. James affords no instance of unclassical uses of the infinitive, such as εγένετο... $\hat{\epsilon}\lambda\theta\hat{\epsilon}\hat{\imath}\nu$, so common in Luke; nor of the gen. of the article with inf. instead of the simple inf. as in Luke xvii. 1 ἀνένδεκτόν ἐστιν τοῦ τὰ σκάνδαλα μὴ ἐλθεῖν, Acts iii. 11 πεποιηκόσι τοῦ περιπατεῖν; nor of "va with subj. instead of simple inf. as in Matt. xviii. 6 συμφέρει αὐτῶ ἵνα κρεμασθη λίθος, John iv. 34 ἐμὸν βρῶμά ἐστιν ἴνα ποιῶ τὸ θέλημα, Luke i. 43 πόθεν μοι τοῦτο ἵνα ἔλθη ἡ μήτηρ, 1 Cor. iv. 3 ἐμοὶ εἰς ἐλάχιστόν ἐστιν ἵνα ὑφ᾽ ὑμῶν ἀνακριθῶ, or instead of the inf. with art. explaining the purport of what precedes, as in Phil. i. 9 τοῦτο προσεύχομαι, ἵνα ἡ ἀγάπη περισσεύση, 1 John iv. 17 ἐν τούτω τετελείωται ἡ ἀγάπη, ἵνα παρρησίαν ἔχωμεν, or where we should have expected the inf. with ὥστε, e.g. Gal. v. 17 ταῦτα ἀλλήλοις ἀντίκειται, ἵνα μὴ ἃ ἐὰν θέλητε ποιῆτε, 1 Th. v. 4 οὐκ ἐστὲ ἐν σκότει, ἵνα ἡ ἡμέρα ὑμᾶς ὡς κλέπτας καταλάβη.

On the whole I should be inclined to rate the Greek of this Epistle as approaching more nearly to the standard of classical purity than that of any other book of the N.T., with the exception perhaps of the Epistle to the Hebrews. The author of the latter has no doubt greater copiousness, and more variety of constructions; he is also occasionally very idiomatic, as in the phrase $\xi\mu\alpha\theta\epsilon\nu$ $\dot{\alpha}\phi$ $\mathring{\omega}\nu$ $\mathring{\epsilon}\pi a\theta \epsilon \nu$ v. 8; but while the distinction between $\mu \acute{\eta}$ and $ο \grave{v}$ is carefully preserved in our Epistle, we find in the Hebrews $\mu\dot{\eta}$ used incorrectly after έπεί ix. 17 έπεὶ μὴ τότε (ul. μήποτε) ἰσχύει, ὅτε $\xi \hat{\eta}$ $\delta \delta \iota a \theta \epsilon \mu \epsilon \nu o s$, and with the participle xi. 8 $\epsilon \xi \hat{\eta} \lambda \theta \epsilon \nu \mu \hat{\eta} \epsilon \pi \iota \sigma \tau \hat{u}$ μενος, ver. 13 κατὰ πίστιν ἀπέθανον μὴ κομίσαντες, ver. 27 πίστει κατέλιπεν Αίγυπτον μη φοβηθείς τον θυμον του βασιλέως (in contrast with James i. 25). Again, the latter writer is less accurate in his use of the moods and tenses than our author. Thus we find the aor. with $o \ddot{v} \pi \omega$ in xii. 4, where a classical writer would have used the perfect, οὔπω μέχρις αἵματος ἀντικατέστητε...καὶ ἐκλέλησθε τῆς $\pi a \rho a \kappa \lambda \eta \sigma \epsilon \omega s$: we find $\ddot{\sigma} \tau a \nu$ with the aor, subj. followed by pres. ind. in i. 6 όταν πάλιν εἰσαγάγη τὸν πρωτότοκον εἰς τὴν οἰκουμένην λέγει, where ὅταν ἐξαγάγη seems to be equivalent to εἰσάγων: we find irregular uses of the inf. in ii. 3 ἀρχὴν λαβοῦσα λαλεῖσθαι, ii. 15 διὰ παντὸς τοῦ ζῆν, ix. 24 εἰς οὐρανὸν εἰσῆλθεν νῦν ἐμφανισθῆναι τῶ προσώπω τοῦ Θεοῦ, vi. 10 οὐ γὰρ ἄδικος ὁ Θεὸς ἐπιλαθέσθαι τοῦ ἔργου: we find post-classical uses of the prepositions, e.g. παρὰ after the comparative in i. 4, iii. 3 and elsewhere; els used with persons, ii. $3 \epsilon i s \eta \mu \hat{a} s \epsilon \beta \epsilon \beta a \iota \omega \theta \eta$, $\epsilon i s \tau \delta$ used of the consequence χί. 3 πίστει νοούμεν κατηρτίσθαι τοὺς αἰῶνας ρήματι Θεοῦ εἰς τὸ μη έκ φαινομένων γεγονέναι; ἀπό used where a classical writer would have written διά with acc. v. 7 είσακουσθείς ἀπὸ τῆς εὐλα- $\beta \epsilon as$; not to mention the use of such a Pauline anacoluthon as xiii. 5 αφιλάργυρος ό τρόπος, αρκούμενοι τοῖς παροῦσιν.

I do not of course assert that St. James writes with the same facility as St. Paul. The former was evidently a slow and careful writer, while the latter speaks as he is moved, without regard to accuracy or ornament, in the provincial Greek which was familiar to him from childhood. Nor again is it meant that the Greek of our Epistle is such as could be mistaken for that of a classical writer. There are undoubtedly harsh phrases, such as i. 17 τροπης ἀπο- σκίασμα, i. 23 τὸ πρόσωπον τῆς γενέσεως, ii. 4 κριταὶ διαλογισμῶν $\pi o \nu n \rho \hat{\omega} \nu$, and awkward and obscure sentences, such as ii. 1 $\mu \hat{\eta} = \hat{\epsilon} \nu$ προσωπολημψίαις έχετε την πίστιν τοῦ Κυρίου ήμῶν Ἰησοῦ Χριστου της δόξης, iii. 6 ό κόσμος της άδικίας ή γλώσσα καθίσταται έν τοις μέλεσιν ήμων ή . . . φλογίζουσα τον τροχον της γενέσεως, iii. 12 μη δύναται συκή έλαίας ποιήσαι; ούτε άλυκον γλυκύ ποιησαι ΰδωρ, also iv. 5, 6, 17. But Schleiermacher and Dr. S. Davidson are entirely mistaken when they allege as proofs that 'the author was not accustomed to write Greek,' such thoroughly idiomatic phrases as i. 2 όταν πειρασμοίς περιπέσητε ποικίλοις. and the admirably energetic $\beta o \nu \lambda \eta \theta \epsilon i s$ in i. 18 $(\beta o \nu \lambda \eta \theta \epsilon i s)$ ἀπεκύησεν ήμᾶς λόγω ἀληθείας). Nor can I see that there is any ground for stumbling in the use of πορείαις in i. 11 or of ἀπεκύησεν in i. 18. The latter, it is true, is not a classical word, but the question is not, of course, about classical, but about post-classical Greek, in which this word was of general use. If it is objected that St. James uses, in the sense of 'begetting,' a word which properly means 'to bring forth,' the answer is that both here and in i. 15 the word is used metaphorically, and that in the Hebrew Scriptures terms properly employed of the mother are used to denote God's relation towards mankind.

I proceed now to examine the vocabulary of St. James, giving lists (1) of the words which are apparently used for the first time by him, (2) of words used by him alone among biblical writers, (3) of LXX, words employed by him alone among the writers of the N.T. It might be useful to draw up similar lists showing the percentage of classical and post-classical words employed by each of the N.T. writers.

 $^{^{-1}}$ In making this list I have been materially assisted by the lists given in Thayer's Lexicon and in Studia Biblica, i. p. 149.

ON THE STYLE OF ST. JAMES

Thirteen words are apparently used for the first time by St. James: see notes in loco. ἀνέλεος ii. 13 not found elsewhere; ανεμιζόμενος i. 6 only found in Hesychius, Schol. to Homer and Joannes Moschus, 620 A.D.; ἀπείραστος i. 13 used by Clem. Al. and other fathers in the same sense, probably with reference to St. James, by Josephus in a different sense; ἀποσκίασμα i. 17 used by Basil (vol. i. p. 17 in Migne P. G.), where he speaks of the world as ἀποσκίασμα της δυνάμεως τοῦ Θεοῦ, and Cyril Alex. i. 189 πτηνῶν ἀποσκίασμα volucrum adumbratam formum; δαιμονιώδης iii. 15 only found in Schol. to Arist. Ranue and Symmachus' version of the Psalms; δίψυχος i. 1 and iv. 8, found in the Didarhe, and quoted from an unknown apocryphal writing by Clem. Rom., used by the latter and by Hermas and subsequent writers with evident reference to St. James; θρησκός i. 26 only found in Theognostus Can. (fl. 820); πολύσπλαγχνος v. 11 only found elsewhere in Hermas; προσωπολημπτεῖν ii. 9 only found elsewhere in Orig. Proverb. c. 19; προσωπολημψία ii. 1 used also by St. Paul and by Polycarp; ρυπαρία i. 21 found also in Plutarch, &c.; χαλιναγωγείν i. 27, iii. 2, used also by Polycarp, Hermas, and Lucian; χρυσοδακτύλιος ii. 2, not found elsewhere.

Besides these there are six words used by St. James which do not occur either in the LXX. (including the Apocrypha) or in the N.T.: βρύω iii. 11 used intransitively by classical writers, transitively, as here, by some of the Fathers; ἐνάλιος, iii. 7 classical; εὐπειθής iii. 17, cl. and Philo, εὐπειθέω and εὐπείθεια occur in 4 Macc.; ἐψήμερος ii. 15 post-classical; κατήφεια iv. 9 classical and Philo; ριπίζωι i. 6 cl. and Philo.

One word σητόβρωτος (v. 2) is found elsewhere only in LXX., Job. xiii. 28, and in Sibyll. Orac. quoted in note.

The following occur in the LXX. but not in the rest of the N.T.: ἀδιάκριτος iii. 17, post-classical and rare in this sense, has a different sense in Prov. xxv. 1; ἀκατάστατος i. 8, iii. 8, classical, Isa. liv. 11; ἀλυκός iii. 12 cl., and in Numb. iii. 12, Deut. iii. 17; ἀμάω v. 4 cl. and in Lev. xxv. 11, Deut. xxiv. 19, Isa. xvii. 5; ἀπλῶς i. 5, cl., Prov. x. 10; ἀποκυέω post-cl. and in Philo and 4 Macc. xv. 14; ἀφυστερέω v. 4, post-cl., Polyb., Diod., Neh. ix. 10, Sir. xiv. 14; βοή v. 4, cl., Ex. ii. 23; ἐξέλκω i. 14, cl. Gen. xxxvii. 28; ἐπιτήδειος ii. 16 cl., and in 1 Macc. iv. 46, Wisdom iv. 5; ἐπι-

λησμονή i. 25, only found besides in Sir. xi. 25; ἐπιστήμων iii, 13, cl., Deut. i. 13, &c.; γέλως iv. 9 cl., Gen. xxi. 6; ξοικε i. 6, 23, cl., atq Job. vi. 25; ἔμφυτος i. 21 cl., Wisdom xii. 10; εὐπρέπεια i. 11, cl., Ps. I. 2; θανατήφορος iii. 8, el., Numb. xviii. 22; κακοπαθία ν. 10//μν cl., Mal. i. 13; κατιόω v. 3, post-cl., Lam. iv. 1; κατοικίζω iv. 5 cl., Exod. ii. 21 + ; κενῶς iv. 5, el., Isa. xlix. 4; μαραίνω i. [1], cl., Job xv. 30; μετάγω iii. 3, 4, cl., 1 Kings viii. 48 + ; μεγαλαυχέω (οι μεγάλα αὐχέω) iii. 5, cl., Ezek. xvi. 50+ (the simple αὐχέω is class., but does not occur in LXX.); νομοθέτης iv. 12, Ps. ix. 20; ολολύζω v. 1, cl., Joel i. 5+; οψιμος v. 7, cl., Deut, xi. 14+; παραλλαγή i. 17, cl., 2 K. ix. 20; πρόϊμος γ. 7, el., Deut. xi. 14; σήπω v. 2, cl., Job. xl. 7; ταλαιπωρέω iv. 9, cl., Mic. ii. 4+; τροπή i. ¼, cl., Deut. xxxiii. 1++; τροχος iji. 6, cl., Ps. lxxxiii. 13 +; τρυφάω, v. 5, cl., Neh. ix. 25 +; φλογίζω, fii. 6,, cl., Ps. xevi. 3; φρίσσω ji. 19, cl., Job iv. 14+; όμοτωσις iii. 9, cl., Gen. i. 26+: πικρός fir. 11, 14, cl., Gen. xxvii. 34+; ποίησις i. 25, cl., Sir. xix. 18; ταχύς i. 19, cl., Prov. xxix. 20+; ΰλη iii. 5, cl., Isa. x. $17 + \frac{1}{3} \phi \iota \lambda \dot{\iota} \underline{a} \text{ iv. 4, cl., Prov. xix. } 7 + .$

Of the unusual words mentioned above it is, to be noted that some are of a technical nature, connected with fishing, as ἀνεμίζω, ριπίζω, ἐνάλιος, ἐξέλκω, πηδάλιον, άλυκόν. Possibly the last may have been a local expression for a salt spring. Others are connected with husbandry, as ἀμάω, βρύω, ἐπιτήδειά, κατιόω, μαραίνω, ὄψιμος, πρόϊμος, σέσηπε, σητόβρωτος. Others however are perfectly general, as ἀνέλεος, πολύσπλαγχνος, ἀπείραστος, θρησκός, $\epsilon \dot{v}\pi\epsilon \iota\theta \dot{\eta}s$. Then there are others, very common in classical writers, twhich we wonder not to find used in the other parts of the N.T., such as χρή, γέλως, έοικε, ύλη, άπλως, πικρός, ταχύς, λείπεσθαι to be wanting in.' In some cases this absence may be due to accident, since we find other forms of the same stem commonly used. Thus we have many instances of $\partial \nu \tau \dot{a} \chi \epsilon \iota$, and we find also ταχινός, ταχέως, ταχύ, τάχιον, τάχιστα. In like manner wo find πικρία, πικραίνω, πικρώς, γελάν and καταγελάν, άπλους and $\alpha\pi\lambda\delta\tau\eta_S$. There is no mention of forests in the N.T. except in St. James, which accounts for $\mathring{v}\lambda\eta$ not being found: but $\chi\rho\dot{\eta}$ and $\mathring{e}o\iota\kappa\epsilon$ stand on another footing. For the latter we always have ""

\[\tilde{\pi}\] uoi\(\delta\) \, \[\lambda\] $\dot{\epsilon}\sigma\tau\iota$ in the other books; and for the former either $\delta\epsilon\hat{\iota}$ (used sometimes where a classical writer would certainly have preferred $\chi\rho\dot{\eta}$) or δφείλω. It appears then that, so far as the use of these two words is concerned, St. James is more idiomatic than the other canonical writers, and for the rest that he uses with freedom rare words and compounds, all of them correctly formed and some of them possibly formed by himself. He is however a purist in regard to those combinations of prepositions and adverbs which are so marked a feature of late Greek, e.g. $\dot{\nu}\pi\epsilon\rho\lambda\dot{a}\nu$ 2 Cor. xi. 5, $\dot{\epsilon}\phi\dot{a}\pi a\xi$ Heb. vii. 27, $\dot{\epsilon}\kappa\pi\dot{a}\lambda a\iota$ 2 Pet. ii. 3, $\dot{a}\pi\dot{o}$ $\tau\dot{o}\tau\epsilon$ Matt. iv. 17, $\dot{a}\pi\dot{o}$ $\pi\dot{\epsilon}\rho\nu\sigma\iota$ 2 Cor. viii. 10, cf. Winer, p. 525.

Another point deserving notice in St. James, which might seem to denote limited acquaintance with the language, is his use of general instead of special terms; though, as regards ποιεῖν and διδόναι, Vorst (Hebr. pp. 158—163, 167, 59) considers that this extended use is derived from the corresponding Hebrew words.

ποιε $\hat{\imath}$ ν. ἔλεος ii. 13, εἰρήνην iii. 18, άμαρτίαν v. 15, συκη έλαίας οὐ ποιε îii. 12, άλυκὸν οὐ δύναται γλυκὸ ποιῆσαι ὕδωρ iii. 12, ποιήσομεν ἐκε ἐνιαυτόν iv. 13, ποιε ιν καλόν iv. 17, π. καλῶς ii. 8, 19, ef. ποιητης λόγου i. 22, ποιητης νόμου iv. 11, ποιητης ἔργου i. 25.

ἔ χ ε ι ν. ἡ ὑπομονὴ ἔργον τέλειον ἐχέτω i. 4, μὴ ἐν προσωπολημψίαις ἔχετε τὴν πίστιν ii. 1, πίστιν, ἔργα ἔχει τις ii. 14, 18, πίστις ἔχει ἔργα ii. 17 (cf. Clem. R. ii. 6, 9 ἔργα ἔχοντες), ζῆλον ἔχετε ἐν τῆ καρδία iii. 14, ἐπιθυμεῖτε καὶ οὐκ ἔχετε iv. 2.

I go on now to speak of the style of the Epistle, as exhibited in the writer's use of rhetorical figures and of rhythm. Though we do not find here the oratorical power of the epistle to the Hebrews or the rapid and impassioned eloquence of St. Paul; though there is no attempt to build up a number of subordinate clauses into elaborate periods; yet there is something too of rhetorical skill, and at times of idiomatic phraseology which is very telling. The sentences are short, simple, direct, conveying weighty thoughts in weighty words, and giving the impression of a strong and serious individuality as well as of a poetic imagination.

Use of metaphor and simile:

- (1) derived from rural life, i. 10 the transitory nature of earthly prosperity is illustrated by the flower which withers away and loses all its beauty under the burning sun and wind; iii. 11 the right use of speech is illustrated by the spring which only gives forth sweet water, by the tree which produces only its own proper fruit; iii. 18 righteousness is a fruit whose seed is sown in peace; iv. 14 man's life is like a shifting mist; v. 7 patience under persecution is inculcated by the example of the husbandman who waits patiently for the rains which shall bring the crop to perfection; iii. 5 a careless word is compared to the spark which sets on fire a forest; iii. 3 as the horse is turned by the bridle, so man's activity is controlled by putting a check on the tongue; iii. 8 the tongue is like the deaf adder which refuses to hear the voice of the charmer.
- (2) derived from sea and stars, i. 6 a man who cannot make up his mind is compared to a wave driven by the wind and tossed; iii. 4 the control which a man is enabled to exert over his actions by learning to bridle his tongue is compared to the steering of a ship by the rudder; i. 17 God the source of all light is compared to a sun which never suffers obscuration or change.
- (3) derived from domestic life, i. 15 the development of sin is compared to conception, birth, growth and death; i. 18 the renewal of man's nature by the reception of the Divine Word is compared to conception and birth; i. 23 a careless listener is compared to one who gives a hasty glance at a mirror; ii. 26 the relation between the acceptance of a dogma and practical goodness is compared to that between the body and the animating spirit of life; iv. 4 unfaithfulness to God is compared to adultery; v. 2 the decay and rust to which stored up wealth is liable is a symbol of the disease which eats away the unjust and covetous soul.
- (4) derived from public life, i. 12 the future happiness of the righteous is described as 'the crown of life,' iv. 1 pleasures are like a hostile army encamped in our body, v. 4 wages which are kept back cry to God for justice.

(1) It is a marked feature of the writer's style to link together clauses and sentences by the repetition of the leading word or some of its cognates: compare i. 3-6 τὸ δοκίμιον της πίστεως κατεργάζεται ύπομονήν ή δε ύπομονή έργον τέλειον έχέτω, ίνα ήτε τέλειοι έν μηδενί λειπόμενοι εί δέ τις λείπεται σοφίας, αἰτείτω...αἰτείτω δὲ έν πίστει μηδέν διακρινόμενος ο γάρ διακρινόμενος κ.τ.λ.; i. 13-15 μηδείς πειραζόμενος λεγέτω ὅτι ἀπὸ Θεοῦ πειράζομαι ὁ γὰρ Θεὸς ἀπείραστός ἐστιν κακών, πειράζει δὲ αὐτὸς οὐδένα εκαστος δὲ πειράζεται ύπὸ τῆς ἰδίας ἐπιθυμίας εἶτα ἡ ἐπιθυμία τίκτει άμαρτίαν, ή δὲ άμαρτία ἀποκυεί θάνατον; i. 19, 20 Βραδύς είς τὸ ἀκοῦσαι, βραδύς είς ὀργήν ὀργή γὰρ άνδρὸς Θεοῦ δικαιοσύνην οὐκ ἐργάζεται; i. 21-25 δέξασθε τὸν ἔμφυτον λόγον...γίνεσθε δὲ ποιηταὶ λόγου καὶ μὴ άκροαταὶ μόνον...ὅτι εἴ τις ἀκροατης λόγου ἐστὶν καὶ οὐ ποιητής...οὐκ ἀκροατής ἐπιλησμονής γενόμενος ἀλλὰ ποιητής ἔργου, οὐτος μακάριος ἐν τῆ ποιήσει αὐτοῦ ἔσται; i. 26, 27 εἴ τις δοκεί θρησκὸς εἶναι...τούτου μάταιος ή θρησκεία θρησκεία καθαρά αΰτη ἐστίν κ.τ.λ.; ii. 2-7 ἐὰν εισέλθη άνηρ χρυσοδακτύλιος έν έσθητι λαμπρά, είσέλθη δὲ καὶ πτωχὸς ἐν ρυπαρᾶ ἐσθῆτι, ἐπιβλέψητε δὲ έπι τὸν φορούντα τὴν ἐσθῆτα τὴν λαμπρὰν...και τῷ πτωχώ εἴπητε κ.τ.λ....οὐχό Θεὸς έξελέξατο τοὺς πτωχούς ... ύμεις δε ητιμάσατε τον π τ ω χ ό ν...οί πλούσιοι α ὐ τ ο ὶ έλκουσιν ... $a \dot{v} \tau o \lambda \beta \lambda a \sigma \phi \eta \mu o \hat{v} \sigma \iota \nu$; ii. 8-12 the word $\nu \dot{o} \mu o \varsigma$ occurs in each of these verses; ii. 12 ο ὕ τ ως λαλείτε καὶ ο ὕ τ ως ποιείτε; ii. 13 ή κρίσις ἀνέλεος τῷ μὴ ποιήσαντι ἔλεος, κατακαυχᾶται έλεος κρίσεως; in ii. 14-26 τί ο φελος begins 14 and ends 16, the phrase πίστιν ἔχειν occurs twice, ἔργα ἔχειν thrice, έξ ἔργων δικαιοῦσθαι occurs thrice and ἐκ πίστεως $\delta \iota \kappa \alpha \iota \circ \hat{\nu} \sigma \theta \alpha \iota$ once, $\pi \iota \sigma \tau \iota \varsigma$ is found eight times, and $\tilde{\epsilon} \rho \gamma \alpha$ five times in other collocations, πιστεύω thrice, χωρὶς ἔργων twice, $(\dot{\eta} \pi i \sigma \tau i \varsigma) \nu \epsilon \kappa \rho \dot{\alpha} \dot{\epsilon} \sigma \tau i \nu$ twice, we have also $\tau \dot{\delta} \sigma \hat{\omega} \mu a$ χωρίς πνεύματος νεκρόν and δείξόν μοι την πίστιν σου...κάγώ σοι δείξω κ.τ.λ.; iii. 2-4 πολλά πταίομεν

¹ I use this term in the loose sense in which it is employed by Schmid in his Atticismus, to express the repetition of the same word or root.

I have quoted all the examples of the recurrence of a word or stem under one head for convenience sake; but it will be easily seen that the recurrence is not always due to the same cause. It is partly owing to the preference for short sentences, which require the noun to be repeated for the sake of clearness; whereas in a complex sentence the relative pronoun or some connecting particle might have answered the purpose. But it is plain that the repetition is often intended to give emphasis, as in i. 19 $\beta\rho\alpha\delta\dot{\nu}$, ii. 6, $7 a\dot{\nu}\tau o\dot{l}$, iii. 6 $\phi\lambda\sigma\gamma\dot{l}\zeta\sigma\nu\sigma\alpha-\phi\lambda\sigma\gamma\dot{l}\zeta\sigma\mu\dot{e}\nu\eta$, iii. 7 $\delta\alpha\mu\dot{\alpha}\zeta\epsilon\tau\alpha\iota$ $\kappa\alpha\dot{l}$ $\delta\epsilon\delta\dot{\alpha}\mu\alpha\sigma\tau\alpha\iota$, iii. 9 $\dot{\epsilon}\nu$ $\alpha\dot{\nu}\tau\dot{\eta}$, iv. 1 $\pi\dot{\epsilon}\theta\epsilon\nu$, iv. 12 $\dot{\alpha}\delta\epsilon\lambda\dot{\phi}\dot{\kappa}$ and $\nu\dot{\epsilon}\mu\kappa\dot{\kappa}$, v. 17 $\pi\rho\sigma\sigma\epsilon\nu\chi\dot{\eta}$ $\pi\rho\sigma\sigma\eta\dot{\nu}\xi\alpha\tau\sigma$. It is probable however, as we may judge from the following section, that the recurrence of the same sound was in itself pleasing to the writer and contributed, along with his love of definiteness, to produce repetition where there is no special reason to be found in the circumstances of the case.

Alliteration and Homocotcleuta:

With the letter d:

- i. 1 δοῦλος ταῖς δώδεκα φυλαῖς ταῖς ἐν τῆ διασπορᾶ.
- i. 6 αἰτείτω δὲ μηδὲν διακρινόμενος, ό γὰρ διακρινομενος ἔοικε κλύδωνι.
- ii. 16 μη δώτε δὲ τὰ ἐπίτηδεια.
- iii. 8 την δὲ γλῶσσαν οὐδεὶς δαμάσαι δύναται.
- d and p: i. 21 διὸ ἀποθέμενοι πᾶσαν ρυπαρίαν καὶ περισσείαν κακίας ἐν πραΐτητι δέξασθε τὸν ἔμφυτον λόγον τὸν δυνάμενον κ.τ.λ.
 - p: i. 2 πάσαν χαρὰν ἡγήσασθε ὅταν πειρασμοῖς περιπέσητε ποικίλοις.
 - i. 17 πᾶσα δόσις ἀγαθὴ καὶ πᾶν δώρημα τέλειον...ἀπὸ τοῦ πατρὸς τῶν φώτων, παρ' ὧ οὐκ ἔνι παραλλαγὴ ἢ τροπῆς ἀποσκίασμα, cf. also i. 3, 11, 22, iii. 2.

111. 4 πλοία τηλικαῦτα... ὑπὸ ἀνέμων σκληρῶν ἐλαυνόμενα μετάγεται ὑπὸ ἐλαχίστου πηδαλίου ὅπου...

k: i. 26, 27 δοκεί θρησκὸς εἶναι, χαλιναγωγών γλώσσαν ... καρδίαν. θρησκεία καθαρὰ ... ἐπισκέπτεσθαι χήρας...ἄσπιλον έαυτὸν τηρεῖν ἀπὸ τοῦ κόσμου.

iv. 8 καθαρίσατε χειρας...άγνίσατε καρδίας.

n and o: ii. 10 ὅστις γὰρ ὅλον τὸν νόμον τηρήση, πταίση δὲ ἐνὶ γέγονεν πάντων ἔνοχος.

Alliteration is the more marked when it affects the prominent words as in i. 21 $\delta \iota \delta \ldots \delta \epsilon \xi a \sigma \theta \epsilon \ldots \delta \upsilon \nu \dot{\alpha} \mu \epsilon \nu o \nu$.

Sometimes we have the recurrence not of one letter only but of a syllable, as in v. 2 ό πλοῦτος σέσηπεν, τὰ ἰμάτια σητόβρωτα γέγονεν, ii. 4 οὐ διεκρίθητε καὶ ἐγένεσθε κριταὶ διαλογισμών, i. 24 cited above; or of several syllables (ὁμοιοτέλευτα) as i. 7 ἀνεμιζομένω καὶ ριπιζομένω, i. 14 έξελκόμενος καὶ δελεαζόμενος, ii. 16 θερμαίνεσθε καὶ χορτάζεσθε, ii. 19 πιστεύουσιν καὶ φρίσσουσιν, iv. 9 ταλαιπωρήσατε καὶ πενθήσατε καὶ κλαύσατε, v. 5 έτρυφήσατε καὶ ἐσπαταλήσατε, ν. 6 κατεδικάσατε, ἐφονεύσατε, iii. 17 άδιάκριτος, άνυπόκριτος, ν. 4 των άμησάντων...των θερισάντων, ii. 12 ούτως λαλείτε καὶ ούτως ποιείτε. Sometimes there is a recurrence of the same preposition in compounds, as $a\pi \delta$ in i. 15, and i. 18 ἀπεκύησεν...ἀπαρχήν, παρά in i. 25 ὁ δὲ παρακύψας είς νόμον καὶ παραμείνας, and i. 17 παρ' δ...παραλλαγή. This similarity of sound is often used to mark a correspondence or give point to an antithesis, as in i. 10, 11 where the former sentence ends with παρελεύσεται, the latter with μαρανθήσεται, v. 2, 3 ό π λοῦτος ὑμῶν...ὁ χρυσὸς ὑμῶν. Often this is combined with balancing of clauses (ἰσόκωλα) as in i. 19 ταχὺς εἰς τὸ ἀκοῦσαι, βραδύς είς τὸ λαλησαι, iv. 7 ύποτάγητε τῷ Θεφ, ἀντίστητε δὲ τῷ διαβόλφ, iv. 8 καθαρίσατε χείρας άμαρτωλοί και άγνίσατε καρδίας δίψυχοι, ί. 15 ή ἐπιθυμία συλλαβοῦσα τίκτει άμαρτίαν, ή δὲ άμαρτία ἀποτελεσθεῖσα ἀποκυεῖ θάνατον, iv. 13 $\pi \circ \rho \in \upsilon \sigma \circ \mu \in \theta a$ els $\tau \eta \nu \delta \varepsilon \tau \eta \nu$ $\pi \circ \lambda \iota \nu$ $\kappa a \iota \tau \circ \iota \eta \sigma \circ \mu \in \nu$ $\varepsilon \kappa \varepsilon \iota \varepsilon \iota \iota \iota \tau \circ \nu \kappa a \iota \varepsilon \iota \mu \pi \circ \rho \in \upsilon \sigma \circ \mu \in \theta a$ $\kappa a \iota \iota \kappa \varepsilon \rho \delta \eta \sigma \circ \mu \varepsilon \nu$. The frequency of these parallels in St. James does not require us to suppose that he had been trained in the use of their figures of speech by the Greek rhetoricians, but is probably to be traced to his familiarity with Hebrew poetry, which is founded on the principle of parallelism. 1

Asyndeton:

This figure is most commonly used in enumeration (1) and antithesis (2). Of the former we have examples in iii. 15 οὐκ έστιν αΰτη ή σοφία ἄνωθεν κατερχομένη, ἀλλὰ ἐπίγειος, ψυχική, δαι μονιώδης, and 17 ή ἄνωθεν σοφία πρώτον μεν άγνή έστιν, έπειτα είρηνική, έπιεικής, εὐπειθής, μεστη έλέους καὶ καρπῶν ἀγαθῶν, ἀδιάκριτος, ἀνυπόκριτος, ἱ. 19 βραδὺς είς τὸ λαλησαι, βραδύς είς ὀργην, ν. 6 κατεδικάσατε, ἐφονεύ- $\sigma \alpha \tau \epsilon \tau \delta \nu \delta i \kappa \alpha i \sigma \nu$. Of the latter we have an example in the verse last quoted, εφονεύσατε τον δίκαιον being followed by οὐκ ἀντιτάσσεται ὑμῖν, where it would have been more usual to insert ὁ δέ before οὐκ; also in i. 19 ταχὺς εἰς τὸ ἀκοῦσαι, βραδύς είς το λαλήσαι, i. 27 ἐπισκέπτεσθαι ὀρφανούς καὶ χήρας, ἄ σ π ι λ ο ν έαυτὸν τηρείν, ii. 13 ή γὰρ κρίσις ἀνέλεος τῷ μἡ ποιήσαντι έλεος κατακαυχ âται έλεος κρίσεως, where again we might have expected τὸ δὲ ἔλεος κατακαυγᾶται. But the writer also uses asyndeton to express a result, iv. 2 οὐκ ἔχετε· φονεύετε (or $\phi\theta o\nu \epsilon i\tau \epsilon$ if that is the true reading)... $o\dot{v}$ $\delta v\nu a\sigma\theta \epsilon$ $\dot{\epsilon}\pi \iota\tau v\gamma \epsilon i\nu$. μάγεσθε.

Rhythm:

 $^{^1}$ See Jebb's Sacred Literature, Lond. 1820, in which James i. 9, 10, 15, 17, 22, 25, iii. 1–12, iv. 6–10, v. 1–6, are analysed as specimens of parallelism.

 $\kappa.\tau.\lambda$. contains, it is true, an anacoluthon, but the mind is not kept in suspense; each clause is intelligible in itself. On the other hand, we find sentences of ten lines in the 1st epistle of Peter, of twelve lines in the epistle to the Hebrews, and of more than twenty in the epistle to the Ephesians. The complexity of the sentences in these epistles and in St. Paul's writings generally arises from the accumulation (1) of relative clauses, one depending on another, as in Col. i. 24-29 ύπερ τοῦ σώματος αὐτοῦ, ὅ ἐστιν ή έκκλησία, ής έγενόμην διάκονος ... τοις άγίοις αὐτοῦ, ηθέλησεν ο Κύριος γνωρίσαι τί το πλοῦτος της δόξης... ο εστιν Χριστὸς... δν ήμεῖς καταγγέλλομεν...εἰς δ καὶ κοπιῶ, (2) of · participles, including genitives absolute, as in Heb. ix. 6-10 τούτων . δὲ οὕτως κατεσκευασμένων...εἰσίασιν οἱ ἱερεῖς τὰς λατρείας έπιτελοῦντες...τοῦτο δηλοῦντος τοῦ πνεύματος... ἔτι τῆς πρώτης σκηνής έχούσης τάξιν...καθ' ην θυσίαι προσφέρονται μη δυνάμεναι τελειωσαι τον λατρεύοντα, Col. ii. 13-15 συνεζωυποίησεν ήμας αὐτῷ, χαρισάμενος τὰ παραπτώματα, ἐξαλείψας τὸ καθ' ήμων χειρόγραφον...καὶ αὐτο ἦρκεν ἐκ τοῦ μέσου προσηλώσας... άπεκδυσάμενος ... καὶ έδειγμάτισεν ... θριαμβεύσας αὐτούς, (3) of prepositional phrases, as in Eph. i. 3 εὐλογητὸς ὁ Θεὸς ... ὁ εὐλογήσας ήμας εν πάση εὐλογία εν τοις επουρανίοις εν Χριστώ καθώς έξελέξατο ήμας έν αὐτώ πρὸ καταβολής κόσμου, είναι ήμας άμώμους κατενώπιον αὐτοῦ ἐν ἀγάπη, προορίσας ἡμᾶς εἰς υίοθεσίαν διὰ Ἰησοῦ εἰς αὐτόν, κατὰ τὴν εὐδοκίαν...εἰς έπαινον της χάριτος ης έχαρίτωσεν ημάς έν τω ηγαπημένω, έν ώ έχομεν την άπολύτρωσιν δι à τοῦ αίματος αὐτοῦ, την ἄφεσιν τῶν παραπτωμάτων, κατὰ τὸ πλοῦτος τῆς χάριτος αὐτοῦ, ῆς έπερίσσευσεν είς ήμας έν πάση σοφία... γνωρίσας το μυστήριον ...κατὰ τὴν εὐδοκίαν αὐτοῦ ἣν προέθετο ἐν αὐτῷ εἰς οἰκονομίαν ... ἀνακεφαλαιώσασθαι τὰ πάντα ἐν τῷ Χριστῷ, τὰ ἐπὶ τοῖς ουρανοίς καὶ τὰ ἐπὶ τῆς γῆς ἐν αὐτῶ, ἐν ὧ κ.τ.λ. This sentence may stand as an epitome of the other ways in which St. Paul fills out his sentences: e.g. (4) with nouns in apposition, as $\tau \dot{\gamma} \nu \, \ddot{a} \phi \epsilon \sigma \iota \nu$; (5) with epexegetic infinitive, as είναι ήμας, ανακεφαλαιώσασθαι. St. James, on the other hand, never doubles the relative, never uses genitive absolute, does not accumulate prepositions, or use the epexegetic infinitive—in a word, never allows his principal sentence to be lost in the rank luxuriance of the subordinate clauses. This appears plainly from the following statistics. The number of simple sentences, i.e. sentences having no subordinate finite verb, in the Epistle is 140 according to my reckoning. I include in this all co-ordinate clauses. The number of sentences with a single subordinate clause is 42. I include here subordinate clauses of direct narration; but, where a subordinate clause contains two or more verbs under the same government, as ii. 10 ὅστις τηρήση $\dots \pi \tau a i \sigma \eta \delta \epsilon$, Lonly reckon one clause. The number of sentences with two subordinate clauses is 7. They are the following: i. 2, 3 χαράν ἡγήσασθε, ὅταν περιπέσητε...γινώσκοντες ὅτι τὸ δοκίμιον κατεργάζεται ύπομονήν, ii. 2-4 έὰν εἰσέλθη...καὶ εἴπητε Σὺ κάθου...οὐ διεκρίθητε; ii. 8 εἰ νόμον τελεῖτε κατὰ τὴν γραφὴν 'Αγαπήσεις . . . καλώς ποιείτε, ii. 15, 16 έὰν . . . εἴπη τις 'Υπάγετε . . . τί ὄφελος; iv. 3 οὐ λαμβάνετε διότι κακῶς αἰτεῖσθε, ἵνα... δαπανήσητε, ν. 19 εάν τις πλανηθή ... γινώσκετε ὅτι σώσει ψυχήν. The following three sentences have three or more subordinate clauses: i. 12 μακάριος δς ύπομένει... ὅτι λήμψεται τὸν στέφανον ου ἐπηγγείλατο, iv. 5, 6 δοκείτε ὅτι κενῶς λέγει Πρὸς Φθόνον έπιποθεί τὸ πνεῦμα ὁ κατώκισεν ἐν ἡμῖν; iv. 13-15 ἄγε νῦν οί λέγοντες Σήμερον πορευσόμεθα... οἵτινες οὐκ ἐπίστασθε τὰ τῆς αύριον... ἀντὶ τοῦ λέγειν Ἐὰν ὁ Κύριος θέλη ζήσομεν.

Short however as are the sentences of St. James, they are, I think, better formed and more rhythmical than are to be found elsewhere in the N.T. except in the 15th chapter of the 1st epistle to the Corinthians. To my ear there is something of the Miltonic 'organ-voice' in sentences such as i. 11 ἀνέτειλεν γὰρ ο ήλιος σὺν τῷ καύσωνι καὶ ἐξήρανεν τὸν χόρτον καὶ τὸ ἄνθος αὐτοῦ ἐξέπεσεν καὶ ἡ εὐπρέπεια τοῦ προσώπου αὐτοῦ ἀπώλετο! ούτως καὶ ὁ πλούσιος |ἐν ταῖς πορείαις αὐτοῦ | μαρανθήσεται |, 13 μηδεὶς | πειραζόμενος | λεγέτω | (ὅτι) ἀπὸ Θεοῦ | πειράζομαι || ό γὰρ Θεὸς | ἀπείραστός έστιν κακῶν | πειράζει δὲ αὐτὸς | οὐδένα |, iii. 17 ή δὲ ἄνωθεν σοφία | πρώτον μὲν άγνή ἐστιν | ἔπειτα εἰρηνική | έπιεικής | εὐπειθής | μεστὴ ἐλέους καὶ καρπῶν ἀγαθῶν | ἀδιάκριτος | άνυπόκριτος |, i. 21, 25-27, iii. 6-9, 15, 17, 18, iv. 13, 14, v. 1-6. The weight and harmony of the rhythm seem to depend partly on the balance of clauses, partly on the recurrence of sounds, partly on the length of syllables, as in καύσωνι, έξήρανεν, προσώ- $\pi o v$, $\dot{\alpha} \pi \epsilon i \rho a \sigma \tau o s$, and partly on the careful selection of the closing words, cf. μαρανθήσεται, πειράζομαι above, δελεαζόμενος i. 14, ἀποσκίασμα i. 17, μάταιος ή θρησκεία i. 26, ἐπηγγείλατο τοῖς ἀγαπῶσιν αὐτόν (where observe the alliteration in g and p) ii. 5, μεστή loû θανατηφόρου iii. 8, ἐπίγειος, ψυχική, δαιμονιώδης iii. 15, ἀφανιζομένη iv. 14, Κυρίου Σαβαὼθ εἰσελήλυθαν v. 4.

St. James employs this strong weighty rhythm in poetical and prophetical passages, such as we find chiefly in the 1st and 3rd chapters and the beginning of ch. v. In argumentative or colloquial passages, such as we find in chapters ii. and iv. and the latter part of chapter v., the rhythm employed is very different, generally plain and unlaboured, and often erisp, sharp, abrupt, running much into interrogations, as in ii. 14 τί ὅφελος ἀδελφοί μου ἐὰν πίστιν λέγη τις ἔχειν, ἔργα δὲ μὴ ἔχη; μὴ δύναται ἡ πίστις σῶσαι αὐτόν; v. 13 κακοπαθεῖ τις ἐν ὑμῖν; προσευχέσθω· εὐθυμεῖ τις; ψαλλέτω.

If we are asked to characterize in a few words the more general qualities of St. James' style, as they impress themselves on the attentive reader, perhaps these would be best summed up in the terms, energy, vivacity, and, as conducive to both, vividness of representation. By the last I mean that dislike of mere abstractions, that delight in throwing everything into picturesque and dramatic forms, which is so marked a feature in our Epistle. is seen partly in the use of metaphorical expressions of which I have spoken above. Thus the thought of an undecided character calls up the image of some light object tossing on the surface of the wave; the development of sin in the heart and life takes the form of the birth and growth of a living creature; the conviction produced by the Word is figured by the reflexion of the face in the mirror and so on. And often the figure becomes more realistic by the way in which it is introduced, as an actual narrative of a past event: so in i. 11 of the withering of the flower, in i. 24 of the man looking into the mirror, 'he beheld himself, and is gone, and straightway forgot what manner of man he was.' In like manner, abstract qualities are exhibited in concrete shape. Is it respect of persons, or an unreal profession of philanthropy which calls for rebuke? St. James at once dramatizes the scene; particularizing the place—the synagogue; the persons—the rich with his fine clothes and gold ring, the poor in his shabby attire; the opposite treatment of the two—the fawning on the rich σὺ κάθου ὧδε καλῶς, the supercilious neglect of the poor σὺ στῆθι ἐκεῖ ἡ κάθου ὑπὸ τὸ ὑποπόδιόν μου. With a similar fine irony he paints the behaviour of the soi-disant philanthropist, 'If a brother or sister be naked and in lack of daily food, and one of you say to them, Go in peace, be ye warmed and filled, and yet ye give them not the things needful to the body; what does it profit?' Even error of doctrine receives the same dramatic treatment, e.g. i. 13 'Let no man say when he is tempted $\delta \tau \iota \ \dot{\alpha} \pi \dot{\delta} \ \Theta \epsilon o \hat{\nu} \ \pi \epsilon \iota \rho \dot{\alpha} \zeta o \mu a \iota'$; and so in ii. 18 foll, where the vanity of faith without works is exposed; and iv. 13 foll. where the worldly feeling on one side, and the religious feeling on the other, are embodied in the contrasted speeches, 'To-day or to-morrow we will go to this city, and spend a year there, and trade and get gain,' and again 'If the Lord will, we shall live and do this or that.' In further illustration of what I understand by the quality of vividness I will only instance the frequent reference to examples, such as Abraham, Rahab, Job, Elijah; and the personification of the Law in iv. 11, of the Tongue in iii. 1-8. Suffice it to say that it pervades the whole of the Epistle, and is markedly seen in the detailed particularity of the descriptions, such as that of the oppression of the rich in v. 1—6. All this tends to give vivacity and energy to the style. Other causes of vivacity are the appealing $\frac{\partial \delta \epsilon \lambda \phi o i}{\partial \delta \epsilon \lambda \phi o i}$ mood. It is scarcely worth while to quote, but I will just refer to v. 13 'Is any among you suffering? let him pray. Is any cheerful? let him sing praise. Is any among you sick? let him call for the elders of the church': for the imperative, compare i. 2 and following verses, $\pi \hat{a} \sigma a \nu \chi \alpha \rho \hat{a} \nu \dot{\gamma} \gamma \dot{\gamma} \sigma a \sigma \theta \epsilon - \dot{\gamma}$ δè $\dot{\nu} \pi o \mu o \nu \dot{\gamma}$ έργον $\dot{\tau} \dot{\epsilon} \lambda \epsilon \iota o \nu \dot{\epsilon} \chi \dot{\epsilon} \tau \omega - a \iota \tau \epsilon \dot{\iota} \tau \omega - \mu \dot{\gamma}$ ο $\iota \dot{\epsilon} \sigma \theta \omega - \kappa a \nu \chi \dot{\alpha} \sigma \theta \omega$. Compare too the sudden apostrophes, $\mu \dot{\eta} \pi \lambda a \nu \hat{a} \sigma \theta \epsilon - i \sigma \tau \epsilon - i \alpha \kappa o \nu \sigma a \tau \epsilon - \theta \epsilon \lambda \epsilon i s$ $\delta \dot{\epsilon} \gamma \nu \hat{\omega} \nu a i - \beta \lambda \dot{\epsilon} \pi \epsilon i s - i \rho \hat{a} \tau \epsilon - i \delta \epsilon - i \delta o \nu - i \gamma \epsilon \nu \nu \nu$.

In specifying energy as the prominent feature of St. James' style, I mean that, whatever he says, he says forcibly, with the tone of one who is entirely convinced both of the truth and of the importance of the message which he has to deliver. He wastes no words; he uses no circumlocution; at times, as in ii. I, he even becomes obscure from over-condensation; he pays no more regard to the persons of men than did Elijah or John the Baptist. We feel, as we read, that we are in the presence of a strong, stern, immovable personality, a true pillar and bulwark of the Church, one in whom an originally proud and passionate nature, richly endowed with a high poetical imagination and all a prophet's indignation against wrong-doing and hypocrisy, is now softened and controlled by the gentler influences of the wisdom Still in its rugged abruptness, in the which cometh from above. pregnant brevity of its phrases, in the austerity of its demand upon the reader, in concentrated irony and scorn, this Epistle stands alone among the Epistles of the New Testament. Take for instance the language used of those who place their reliance in the holding of an orthodox creed, σὺ πιστεύεις ὅτι εἶς ἐστὶν ὁ Θεός· καλῶς ποιεῖς· καὶ τὰ δαιμόνια πιστεύουσιν καὶ φρίσσουσιν: compare this, not with the writings of a weakling like Hermas, whom some have ventured to name in the same breath with St. James, but with the writings of St. Paul himself. The flashes of irony, which break through St. Paul's splendid vindication of his apostolic authority in the Second Epistle to the Corinthians, seem passionless and pale, contrasted with the volcanic energy which glows beneath the denunciations of St. James. Or take the woes pronounced on the rich in the fifth chapter of our Epistle: would it be possible to find anywhere a nobler example—I will not say of Demosthenic, but of Hebraic δεινότης, than where the rust of the unused coin is first made to witness to the defrauding of the labourer, and then avenges his ill usage by eating away the heart of his oppressor? And what energy there is in the pathetic close, κατεδικάσατε, έφονεύσατε τὸν δίκαιον οὐκ ἀντιτάσσεται ὑμῖν!

CHAPTER X

DID St. James write in Greek or in Aramaic?

In the First Series of Studia Biblica, p. 144 foll., Bishop John Wordsworth adduces the following arguments to show that our Epistle was probably written in Aramaic: 1—(1) This was the language usually spoken by our Lord. (2) It was used by St. Paul in his address to the mob of Jerusalem. (3) We are told by Papias that the Gospel of St. Matthew was originally written in Hebrew (i.e. Aramaic) and interpreted by each as he was able.² (4) Papias also states that St. Mark acted as interpreter to St. Peter, and Glaucias, claimed by the Gnostics as the teacher of Basilides, is named as another interpreter of the same Apostle.³ Jerome takes it for granted that the Epistles of St. Peter were not originally written in Greek, and thinks that the difference between them was due to the employment of different men as interpreters.4 (5) Some of the Fathers supposed the Epistle to the Hebrews to have been written in Hebrew. Josephus wrote his book on the Wars of the Jews in 'his national language' and sent it to the 'upper barbarians,' whom he explains to be the Jews beyond the Euphrates, &c.; he afterwards made a translation into Greek, χρησάμενός τισι πρὸς τὴν Ἑλληνίδα φωνὴν συνέργοις.¹

The Bishop considers that these parallels make it probable a priori that the Epistle was written in Aramaic. He supports this conclusion by the assumption that St. James could not have written such Greek as that in which the Epistle has come down to us, containing, as it does, many words with classical rather than biblical associations, and implying a wide range of classical reading.²

'This rich vocabulary is not unlike that which may have been possessed by a professional interpreter, but is very remarkable if we attribute it to an unlearned Jew writing perhaps the earliest book of the N.T.'

Lastly the hypothesis of an Aramaic original is supported by a comparison between our present Greek text and that which must have been the parent of the Corbey version (pp. 136-144). The most remarkable of these divergences are the omission of $\tau \hat{\eta}_s$ $\pi i \sigma \tau \epsilon \omega_S$ in i. 3; the translation of $\tau \rho o \pi \hat{\eta}_S$ $\hat{a} \pi o \sigma \kappa i a \sigma \mu a$ by 'modicum obumbrationis' (= ροπη ἀποσκιάσματος) in i. 17; blasphemant in bono nomine for βλασφημοῦσι τὸ καλὸν ὄνομα ii. 7, which Bp. W. compares with v. 10 and v. 15, where the genitives $\tau \hat{\eta} \hat{s} \kappa \alpha \kappa \sigma \pi \alpha \theta i \alpha \hat{s}$ and $\tau \hat{\eta} \hat{s} \pi i \sigma \tau \epsilon \omega \hat{s}$ are also expressed by prepositional phrases, de malis passionibus, in fide, such as might be used in Hebrew or Syriac; exploratores for τους άγγελους ii. 25 as in the Syriac and other versions; et lingua ignis seculi iniquitatis for $\kappa a i \dot{\eta} \gamma \lambda \hat{\omega} \sigma \sigma a \pi \hat{v} \rho \dot{o} \kappa \dot{o} \sigma \mu o_S \tau \hat{\eta}_S \dot{a} \delta \iota \kappa \dot{\iota} a_S iii. 6, where the$ Peshitto has 'the tongue is a fire; the world of iniquity is as it were a wood'; fornicatores for μοιχαλίδες iv. 4 agrees with the Peshitto; inconstans for ἀκαταστασία iii. 16, and frater for ἀδελφοί iv. 11, are said to be easily explicable as renderings of the same Hebrew word. Qui araverunt for των άμησάντων v. 4. frequens for $\epsilon \nu \epsilon \rho \gamma o \nu \mu \epsilon \nu \eta$ v. 16, the omission of $\kappa \epsilon \nu \hat{\omega}_{S}$, and the translation of $\epsilon m \iota m o \theta \epsilon \hat{\iota}$ by convalescit in iv. 5, are also cited as evidences of a different original.

Before dealing with these arguments it may be well to turn to the Greek text itself and see whether it reads like an original or a translation. It must be granted that this is not altogether an easy matter to decide. There are no doubt many translations which tell their character at once; translations from Oriental languages, which seem to make it their aim to exhibit in the crudest colours the contrast of eastern and western thought and speech; translations from the German, which faithfully preserve the heavy prolixity of the original; or translations which betray a different origin by their affectation of French elegance and lightness. The case however even here would be complicated, if it were a question whether a particular book were an original, written, say, by an Anglicized German, or a translation from the German by an Englishman; and this is really the question before us; for all that could be claimed for our Epistle, supposing it not to be a translation from the Aramaic, is that it was written by a Greekspeaking Jew. So much is plain from the style and vocabulary, even if we were entirely in the dark as to the writer. There is however nothing in it of the scrupulous anxiety of a translator cautiously treading in the footsteps of his author. On the contrary, it is written in strong, simple Greek, used with no slight rhetorical skill by one who has something of his own to say, and says it with perfect freedom. If a translation, it is a translation of the stamp of our authorized English version, or of Luther's German version, which have become the recognized standards and models of excellence in their respective languages. But the frequent use of the different figures of speech, alliteration, homoeoteleuton, &c., to which attention has been called in a previous chapter, is an ornament which a translator is hardly likely to venture upon for himself, and which it will often be impossible to reproduce in a different language. If we compare $\chi \alpha i \rho \epsilon i \nu$ and $\chi \alpha \rho \dot{\alpha} \nu^{\perp}$ in i. 1, 2, with the Vulgate salutem and gandium, or πειρασμοίς περιπέσητε ποικίλοις with the Vulgate in tentationes varias incideritis, none could doubt that the former in each case was the original. A still stronger argument will be supplied if we hold with Ewald that i. 17 πασα δόσις αγαθή και παν δώρημα τέλειον is a quotation from a hexameter poem. Another test of a translation is the obscurity arising from a misapprehension of the meaning of the original. Examples of this may be found even where the translator has a consummate mastery of his own language, e.g. Ps. xlix. 5 (P.B.) 'Wherefore should I fear when the wickedness of my heels compasseth me about, ib. lix. 8 'Or ever your pots be made hot with thorns, so let indignation vex him even as a thing which is raw,' which have at last been made intelligible to English readers in the R.V. Compare also 1 Tim. vi. 5, 'supposing that gain is godliness' where the R.V. has 'supposing that godliness is a way of gain,' or in our Epistle i. 21 'superfluity of naughtiness' where the RV. has 'overflowing of wickedness.' When we meet with an unmeaning or difficult expression of this kind in a translation, we naturally turn to the original to see how it arose. The question is then: Do we meet with any difficulty in our Epistle such as might suggest that it is due to the misunderstanding of an assumed original? Perhaps there are two passages as to which, if they occurred in an undoubted translation, we should be curious to know what was the original intended by them. The first is the phrase φλογίζουσα τὸν τροχὸν τῆς γενέσεως in iii. 6, and the second προς φθόνον ἐπιποθεῖ τὸ πνεῦμα ὁ κατώκισεν ἐν ὑμῖν. hardly seems likely that St. James would have used the obscure phrase 'wheel of existence' if it sounded as strange to those whom he was addressing as it sounds to us now. The more probable supposition is that it had got into familiar use among Greekspeaking Jews. And this is confirmed by the parallel passages quoted in my note. The second difficulty turns simply on the use of the phrase $\pi\rho\delta s$ $\phi\theta\delta\nu\delta\nu$ for 'jealously,' to which no precise parallel has been adduced; but $\phi\theta\dot{\phi}\nu\sigma$ and $\phi\theta\sigma\nu\dot{\epsilon}\omega$ being sometimes used of jealousy rather than envy, there seems no insuperable objection to a similar use of the adverbial phrase. In any case the difficulty would not be lessened by the supposition of its being a translation from Aramaic. On the whole we may safely say that the general impression produced by a study of the Greek is much in favour of its being an original.

But can we suppose that the son of a Galilean earpenter would have been capable of writing such idiomatic Greek? We have seen above (p. xli.) that Galilee was studded with Greek towns. and that it was certainly in the power of any Galilean to gain a knowledge of Greek; even if he were, as Prof. Neubauer holds. brought up in ignorance of any language but Aramaic, and not, as Prof. T. K. Abbott is inclined to believe, speaking Greek as freely as Aramaic. We know also that the neighbouring town of Gadara was celebrated as an important seat of Greek learning and literature, and that the Author of our Epistle shows an acquaintance with ideas and phrases which were probably derived, mediately or immediately, from the Stoic philosophers.2 If we call to mind further that he seems to have paid particular attention to the sapiential books, both canonical and apoeryphal, and that a main point in these is to encourage the study of 'the dark savings of the wise'; that the wisdom of Edom and Teman is noted as famous by some of the prophets,3 and that the interlocutors in the book of Job are assigned with probability to this and neighbouring regions:—taking into account all these considerations, we may reasonably suppose that our author would not have scrupled to avail himself of the opportunities within his reach, so as to master the Greek language, and learn something of Greek philosophy. This would be natural, even if we think of James as impelled only by a desire to gain wisdom and knowledge for himself, but if we think of him also as the principal teacher of the Jewish believers, many of whom were Hellenists, instructed in the wisdom of Alexandria, then the natural bent would take the shape of duty: he would be a student of Greek in order that he might be a more effective instructor to his own people. The use of rare compounds, to which the Bishop calls attention, is certainly remarkable; but I am not sure that it is most easily explained by his supposition of the employment of a professional interpreter. A man of ability, who has to express himself in a foreign tongue, which he has learnt partly from books, is not unlikely to be insensible to the distinction between the language of poetry and prose, and to eke out his limited resources by combining familiar roots. I think this might be illustrated from the style of the Book of Wisdom, and from the English writings of foreigners, e.g. Kossuth's Speeches.

It appears to me then (1) that the phenomena of the Greek epistle, which goes under the name of St. James, are strongly against its being a translation; (2) that the writer was acquainted with the Greek books of the Apocrypha and with the principles of the Stoic philosophy; (3) that the balance of probability is in favour of St. James having been able to write Greek, but that this need not preclude us from supposing that he may have availed himself of the assistance of a Hellenist 'brother' in revising his Epistle. A fourth reason which indisposes me to accept the hypothesis of an Aramaic original is the fact of its disappearance without leaving any trace behind. The existing Syriac version of St. James is generally supposed to be a translation from the Greek; and 'it is significant that the Edessene scribes do not seem to recognize any tradition that the Epistle was written in any language but Greek. As far as I know, they content themselves with the title "Epistle of James the Apostle." One ancient MS. however in the Brit. Mus. adds to the subscription "which he wrote from Jerusalem" (G. H. Gwilliam).

With regard to the inferences drawn from the peculiarities of the Corbey version, it may be worth while to compare the variations in the Peshitto, whether regarded as witnessing to the contents of an original Greek or an original Aramaic text. I quote the Latin translation given in Leusden and Schaaf's Nov. Test. Syr. 1717.

- i. 3 κατεργάζεται ὑπομονήν, facit vos possidere patientiam.
- i. 4 ή δè ὑπομονὴ ἔργον τέλειον ἐχέτω, ipsi autem patientiae erit opus perfectum.

 - i. 14 έξελκόμενος καὶ δελεαζόμενος, et cupit et attrahitur.
- i. 17 πᾶσα δόσις ἀγαθὴ καὶ πᾶν δώρημα τέλειον, omnis donatio bonu et completa.
 - i. 18 είς τὸ εἶναι ἡμᾶς ἀπαρχήν τινα, ut essemus primitiae.
- i. 19 ἴστε ἀδελφοί μου ἀγαπητοί ἔστω δὲ πᾶς ἄνθρωπος ταχύς, et vos fratres mei dilecti, quisque ex volis sit velox.
 - i. 21 περισσείαν κακίας, multitudinem malitiae.
- i. 25 ἀκροατὴς ἐπιλησμονῆς auditor auditionis quae oblivioni traditur. [Here the Peshitto gives a more exact parallel to the corresponding clause (implying as the Greek original ἀκροατὴς ἀκοῆς in contrast with ποιητὴς ἔργου). Is this to be regarded as an explanatory addition?]
- ii. 4 κριταὶ διαλογισμῶν πονηρῶν, interpretes cogitationum malarum.
 - ii. S μέντοι, et.
 - ii. 13 κατακαυχάται έλεος κρίσεως, exultalimini supra judicium.1
- iii. 2 χαλιναγωγήσαι, in servitute continere [destroying the connexion with the χαλινούς of the following verse].²
- ¹ 'The Syriac is a little vague perhaps, but I have no doubt that the present is the tense intended.'—G. H. G.
- ² 'The connexion of the verses is however maintained by the use of the same verb in different conjugations: ver. 2 "who is able to subjugate all his body"; ver. 3 "that the horses may subjugate themselves to us." The metaphor is also lost in i. 26, where the Peshitto has "hold" (not "bridle") "his tongue." —G. H. G.

- iii. 4 ύπὸ ἐλαχίστου πηδαλίου, a ligno exiguo.
- iii. 5 ίδού, etium.
- iii. 6 καὶ ἡ γλῶσσα πῦρ, ὁ κόσμος τῆς ἀδικίας ἡ γλῶσσα καθίσταται ἐν τοῖς μέλεσιν ἡμῶν, ἡ σπιλοῦσα ὅλον τὸ σῶμα καὶ φλογίζουσα τὸν τροχὸν τῆς γενέσεως, καὶ φλογίζομένη ὑπὸ τῆς γεέννης, et lingua ignis est, et mundus peceuti veluti silva est, et ipsa lingua, eum sit inter membra nostra, maculat totum corpus nostrum et incendit series generationum nostrarum quae currunt veluti rotae, ac incenditur ipsa igne. [On the interpolation veluti silva I have said something in my note. The interpretation of the phrase φλογίζουσα...τῆς γενέσεως seems to be an explanatory paraphrase, like that in i. 25.]
 - iii. 17 ἀνυπόκριτος, vultum non accipit.2
- iv. 9 ταλαιπωρήσατε καὶ πενθήσατε καὶ κλαύσατε, humiliate vos et lugete.
- iv. 16 πάσα καύχησις τοιαύτη πονηρά έστιν, omnis gloriatio quae est ejus modi a mulo est.
 - v. $2 \sigma \epsilon \sigma \eta \pi \epsilon \nu$, corrupta sunt et fetuerunt.
 - v. 6 οὐκ ἀντιτάσσεται, et non restitit.

In these variations I do not see that there is anything to suggest that the Peshitto represents more truly than the Greek the thought of the original author. On the contrary we find that the force of the Greek is often lost or blurred by the disappearance of a metaphor, as in i. 14, i. 26, iii. 2, or by the substitution of a weaker for a more vigorous phrase, as in i. 6, i. 17, i. 21, ii. 8, iii. 6, v. 6. The variations of the Corbey Latin seem to me to belong generally to the same category; and to be due either to want of ability or want of conscientiousness on the part of the translator. Where they appear to be confirmed by the variations of the Peshitto, it is possible, as Prof. Rendel Harris has shown in his brilliant study on the Codex Bezae, that the Latin was directly influenced by the Syriac. 'The Syriasms found in the Latin text of several ancient MSS, exceed in harshness the Syriasms of the Greek text.' He considers that the Latin text of the Codex Bezae dates from the second century and arranges its constituents (prior to the end of that century) in the following order:

1 'The relative quae here refers to series.'—G. H. G.

^{2 &#}x27;This is the regular Syriac rendering of δποκριτήs and its cognates.'—G. H. G.

DID ST. JAMES WRITE IN GREEK OR ARAMAIC? cexiii

- (1) Original Greek Text.
- (2) Original Latin Text.
- (3) Poetical Glosses interpolated from the popular Homeric centos which had been used to dress up the Gospel narrative.
- (4) Primitive Syriac version.
- (5) Montanist Glosses.

If this at all represents the true state of the case, it is evident that these early possibilities of corruption make it extremely precarious to argue from the minute particularities of any existing form of the Latin text to the actual original of the Epistle as it left the hands of the author.

CHAPTER XII

APPARATUS CRITICUS¹

GREEK MANUSCRIPTS

I. Manuscripts written in large capitals (Uncials)

Fourth Century

B. Codex Vaticanus. No. 1209 in the Vatican Library at Rome. Written continuously without breathings or accents. Stops are rare, but a full stop is sometimes represented by a vacant space. Probably contained all the canonical books of the Old and New Testament; but almost the whole of Genesis, part of the Psalms, the later chapters of Hebrews, the Pastoral Epistles, Philemon and the Apocalypse are now wanting. It is generally regarded as the most valuable of all the MSS, containing a pure Pre-Syrian text (W.H. Intr. p. 150) and is not unfrequently followed by Westcott and Hort against the other chief MSS, compare i. 9, 22, ii. 3, 19, 26, iv. 8, 9, 14, v. 7, 14, 20. Errors from itacism are frequent, especially the confusion of $\alpha \iota$ and ϵ (as in ii. 14 κατακαυχατε, 24 όραται Β', iv. 6 άντιτασσετε, iv. 8 φευξετε Β1, ν. 7 εκδεχετε Β1, ν. 16 εξομολογεισθαι Β1, προσευχεσθαι Β1) and the writing of ει for ι (as in i. 6 διακρεινομένος, ρειπιζομένω, ii. 6 ήτειμασατε, iii. 7 ἀνθρωπεινη, iv. 8 ύμειν, iv. 14 ἀτμεις, v. 3 είος B^1 , v. 7 $\tau \epsilon \iota \mu \iota \rho \nu$). The codex has at length been made accessible to all by the beautiful photographic reproduction brought out under the direction of Signor Cozza-Luzi, the Librarian of the Vatican. Sin. (or 8). Codex Sinaiticus, discovered by Tischendorf in the convent at Mount Sinai on Feb. 4, 1859, and published by him in 1862. It is now in the library at St. Petersburg. It is written continuously without stops or breathings. Contained originally the whole of the Old Testament, including the Apocrypha (of this a large portion is now wanting); the New Testament (still entire); the Epistle of Barnabas and the Shepherd of Hermas (of this last a large part is lost). Errors from itacism, such as the confusion of $\alpha \iota$ and ϵ , $\epsilon \iota$ and ι , are frequent. We stoott and Hort consider it the most valuable MS. after B, giving in the main a Pre-Syrian text but to a certain extent corrupted by Western and Alexandrian readings. Tischendorf, as was natural, codicem suum re vera praestantissimum fortasse plus aequo miratus est (C. R. Gregory Prol. to Tischendorf's N.T. p. 353), and has in some instances been thus induced to prefer what seems to me an inferior reading. See especially iii. 5, 6, where his text is ίδοῦ ήλίκον πῦρ ήλίκην ὕλην ἀνάπτει ή γλώσσα. πῦρ, ὁ κόσμος τῆς ἀδικίας, ή γλώσσα καθίσταται έν τοις μέλεσιν ήμων, και σπιλούσα όλον το σωμα και φλογιζομένη κ.τ.λ., iv. 2 μάχεσθε καὶ πολεμεῖτε. καὶ οὐκ ἔχετε διὰ τὸ μὴ αἰτεῖσθαι ὑμᾶς αἰτεῖτε κ.τ.λ.

Fifth Century.

- A. Codex Alexandrinus in the British Museum. Contains the Old and New Testaments, together with two epistles of Clement. It is written continuously with occasional stops and, very rarely, a breathing or accent. A photographic facsimile of the N.T. was brought out by the authorities of the British Museum in 1879.
- C. Codex Ephraemi. No. 9 in the Library at Paris. This is a palimpsest containing fragments of the Old and New Testaments, over which were written in the 12th century some treatises of Ephraem the Syrian. About three-fifths of the N.T. are preserved. The writing is continuous, with occasional stops, and spaces left at the end of a paragraph. It was printed by Tischendorf in 1843. The end of St. James (iv. 3 to v. 20) is wanting.

Ninth Century.

- K. (also marked K₂, to distinguish it from Codex Cyprius the K of the Gospels). Codex Mosquensis in the Library of the Holy Synod at Moscow. Contains the Catholic Epistles with a catena and St. Paul's Epistles with the scholia of Damascenus. The text is written in square uncials with breathings, accents and stops, the comment in round letters. Collated by Matthaei for his edition of the Catholic Epistles published in 1782.
- L. (L₂). Codex Angelicus Romanus in the Angelican Library of the Augustinian monks at Rome. Contains part of the Acts, the Epistles of St. Paul, and the whole of the Catholic Epistles. Collated by Tregelles and Tischendorf.
- P. (P₂). Codex Porfirianus, a palimpsest belonging to Bishop Porfirius of St. Petersburg: first printed by Tischendorf in Mon. Sucr. Incd. vol. 5, 1865, written in a slovenly hand with accents, breathings and stops. Contains the Acts, Catholic Epistles, Epistles of St. Paul, the Apocalypse. Wanting in St. James ii. 13—21.

Besides the above uncial MSS., C. R. Gregory describes three which have not yet been collated (Tischendorf's N.T. vol. iii. p. 445 foll.).

- □ Vatic. Gr. 2061 (= Cod. Patiriensis), of the 5th century, containing James iv. 14—v. 20. Shortly to be published by Batiffol.
- Ψ. Athous Laurae, of the 8th or 9th century, containing James i. ii. iii.
- S. Athous Laurae, of the 8th or 9th century, contains all the Catholic Epistles.
 - II. Manuscripts written in cursive letters (Minuscules).
- C. R. Gregory (Tisch. N.T. Proleg. p. 617—652) gives a list of 416 MSS, of the Acts and Catholic Epistles belonging to this class, the greater part being still uncollated. They range from the 9th to the 16th century. They are usually referred to by their number, but Serivener in the appendix to his edition of the Codex Augiensis denoted a certain number by the use of small letters a, b, c, to p, 1 and has been followed in this by Tischendorf. Those of most value appear to be 13 (see W.H. Intr. p. 192), 9, 29, 36, 40, 46, 61, 66 69, 73, 78, 133, 137.

III. Lectionaries.

These are books containing the lessons read in church, mostly from the Gospels. C. R. Gregory (Tisch. Proleg. pp. 778—791) gives a list of 265 Lectionarii Apostoli containing lessons from the Acts and Epistles, some in uncials, some in cursives, ranging from the 9th to the 17th century. They are referred to as lect. &c.

Ancient Versions.

[As may be seen from the Latin versions which follow, the resemblance between the ancient versions and the original is often so close as to represent not simply the words, but even the order in which the words occur; they are therefore of the greatest value in determining the readings of the Greek text.¹]

A. Latin.

- I. Pre-Hieronymian, or Old Latin.
- 1. Corb. (ft). The Corbey MS. of the Old Latin Version of St. James now in the Imperial Library at St. Petersburg, collated by Prof. V. Jernstedt in 1884 and printed with the original spelling and punctuation, accompanied by the valuable notes of Bishop John Wordsworth, in pp. 115—123 of Studia Biblica, 1885. Compare, too, the paper by Professor Sanday in the same volume, pp. 233—263. The transcript given below is from Sabatier's Bibliorum Sacrorum Latinae Versiones Antiquae, 1749. I have not thought it necessary to adhere strictly to his spelling or punctuation, but any other divergence is mentioned in the notes. I have also stated where Sabatier's reading is unsupported by the MS., and on one or two occasions have noticed the punctuation of the MS., which is however in general too capricious to build upon.²

² Tischendorf mentions the Vienna Codex Bobicnsis of the fifth century, as containing the following fragments of St. James: i. 1-5, iii. 13-18, iv. 1, 2, v. 19, 20. This must be distinguished from k, the Cod. Bob. at Turin, which contains the Gospels of

- 2. Speculum (m). This is a common-place book of texts arranged under different heads, wrongly ascribed to St. Augustine. First printed by Cardinal Mai in the Nova Patrum Bibliotheca vol. i. pt. 2. The latest edition is that by Weihrich in the Corp. Scr. Eccl. Lat. Vienna, 1887, from which the transcript below is taken. Prof. Sanday in his review of Weihrich (Class. Rev. iv. 414 foll.) notices the close resemblance between the readings in the Speculum and those in the writings of Priscillian edited in the same series by Schepss in 1889 from a MS. of the 6th century. I have therefore placed in the same column with the quotations from the Speculum those from
- 3. Priscillian (died 385 A.D.). Dr. Sanday is of opinion that the Speculum 'was put together somewhere in the eircle in which Priscillian moved, and from a copy of the Bible, which, if not exactly his, was yet closely related to it.' I have distinguished the quotations from those in the Speculum by inclosing them in square brackets. Dr. Schepss (p. 17) had already compared Priscillian's version of James v. 1 foll, with that given in the Speculum.

II. Vulgate (Vulg.).

1 Codex Amiatinus. Written probably at Jarrow about the end of the seventh century, and sent as a present to Rome by Ceolfrid in 716 A.D.; printed by Tischendorf in 1850 and 1854. Contains the whole Latin Bible with the exception of the book of Baruch. In the notes I have mentioned where it differs from the Codex Fuldensis, written in the same century, and from the genuine Speculum of St. Augustine, edited with the other Speculum by Weihrich.

Latt. denotes the consensus of the Latin versions.

B. Syriac.

1. Pesh. The Peshitto (i.e. 'simple') version contains the whole Bible with the exception of the 2nd epistle of Peter, 2nd and 3rd

St. Matthew and St. Mark, and is transcribed by Tischendorf in the 'Anzeige-Blatt' to the Wiener Jahrbücher of 1847, 8, 9.—1 have not been able to see any transcript of the fragments from St. James, which Tischendorf denotes by the letter (s); but it would seem from his critical notes that it is generally in agreement with the Vulgate against Corb. and Spec. [Since the above was written, I have been enabled, through the kindness of Prof. Sanday, to make a copy of Belsheim's transcript of this Codex. See postscript below.]

1 See Studia Biblica ii, p. 273 foll, of John, Jude and the Apocalypse. It is ascribed to the 2nd century, but was probably revised in the 4th century.

2 Syr. The recension by Thomas of Harkel in the 7th century of the version made by Polycarp, a Chorepiscopus, in 508 A.D., for Philoxenus, bishop of Hierapolis.

Syrr. denotes the consensus of the Syriac versions.

- C. Egyptian Versions.
- 1. Copt. Coptic or Memphitic, the version of Lower Egypt, made probably not later than the 2nd century, contains the whole of the N.T.
- 2. Sah. The Sahidic or Thebaic, the version of Upper Egypt, of about the same antiquity, also contained the entire N.T.
 - D. Acthiopic Version. Assigned to the 4th century.

Acth^{rom} denotes the text as given in the Roman edition of 1548. Acth^{pp} the text in Pell Platt's edition 1826—30.

E. Armenian Version.

Arm. made early in the 5th century.

[P.S.—I print below a copy of Batiffol's collation of the Codex Patiriensis, and of Belsheim's Codex Bobiensis, for both of which I am indebted to Prof. Sanday.

CODEX BOBIENSIS.

In the Imperial Library of Vienna there is a MS, volume, numbered 46 in the Catalogue, which contains, among a variety of other treatises, fragments of a pre-Hieronymian Latin version of the Acts, the Epistle of St. James, and the First Epistle of St. Peter written on palimpsest. The volume originally belonged to the Monastery of Bobbio, founded by Columban, and was brought from Naples to Vienna in 1717. The fragments were partially published by Tischendorf in the Anxingthat to the Wiener Jahrbücher der Literatur of 1847, and more completely by J. Belsheim, Christiania, 1886. The text of the Epistles, not of the Acts, approaches very nearly to the Vulgate. It is difficult to read, and in some passages (here printed in italies) could not be determined with certainty. I have preserved the capitals and punctuation of the original.

QUOTATIONS IN EARLY WRITERS.

On the importance of these quotations compare especially West-cott and Hort, Intr., pp. 83, 87-89, 112-115, 159-162, Resch's Agrapha § 3. Bishop Wordsworth states that the Epistle of St. James is not cited at all by Tertullian or Cyprian, and rarely cited by Latin writers before the time of Jerome and Augustine, the former of whom has 123 quotations, the latter 389 (Stud. Bibl., pp. 128, 129).

The following writers are referred to in the critical notes. The exact references will be found in Tischendorf:—

Aug. Augustine, 4th century. Cass. Cassiodorius, 6th. Cyr. Cyril of Alexandria, 5th. Dam. Joannes Damascenus, 8th. Did. Didynus of Alexandria, 4th.

Eph. Ephraem Syrus, 4th.

Epiph. Epiphanius, 4th century.
Jer. Jerome, 4th.
Oec. Occumentus, 11th.
Orig. Origen, 3rd.
Thl. Theophylact, 11th.
Zig. Euthymius Zigabenus 12th

THE CATHOLIC EPISTLES.

Though the word $\kappa a \theta o \lambda \iota \kappa \dot{\eta}$ does not form part of the Title of the Epistle of St. James in any of the older MSS., yet the fact that this Epistle was included from an early period in the collection known as the Catholic Epistles, which followed the Acts and preceded the Epistles of St. Paul, seems to call for a short note on the history and meaning of the term.

Eusebius is the first to mention the fact in the words τοιαῦτα τὰ κατὰ τὸν Ἰάκωβον, οὖ ή πρώτη τῶν ὀνομαζομένων καθολικῶν $\epsilon \pi \iota \sigma \tau \circ \lambda \hat{\omega} \nu = \epsilon \hat{\iota} \nu a \iota \lambda \epsilon \gamma \epsilon \tau a \iota (H.E. ii. 23)$, and we find the same asserted in the Catalogues of the Canonical Books ratified by the Councils of Laodicea and of Carthage, as well as in the lists given by Cyril of Jerusalem, Athanasius, Gregory Nazianzen, and Amphilochius before the end of the fourth century. Earlier uses of the term may be found in Clement of Alexandria (Strom. iv. 15, p. 605 P), where, in speaking of the Epistle put forth by the Apostolic Council recorded in Acts xv., he says κατὰ τὴν ἐπιστολήν την καθολικήν τῶν ἀποστόλων ἀπάντων; and in Origen, with reference to the Epistle of Barnabas (c. Cels. i. 63) γέγραπται έν $\tau \hat{\eta} \ \text{Ba} \rho \nu \alpha \beta a \ \kappa a \theta o \lambda \iota \kappa \hat{\eta} \ \hat{\epsilon} \pi \iota \sigma \tau o \lambda \hat{\eta}$, as well as to the Epistles of St. John, St. Peter, and St. Jude.² Apollonius (c. 210 A.D.) reproached Themison the Montanist with writing a catholic epistle in imitation of the Apostle (St. John).3

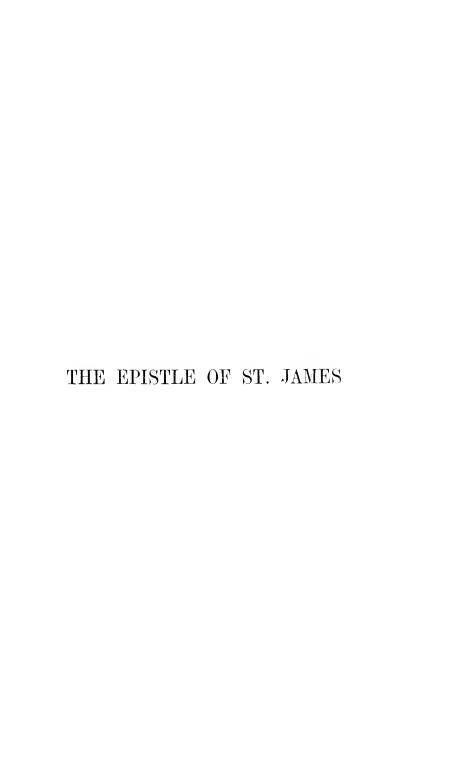

The meaning of the term is thus stated by Oecumenius in his Preface to our Epistle: καθολικαὶ λέγονται αὐται οίονεὶ ἐγκύκλιοι οὐ γὰρ ἀφωρισμένως ἔθνει ένὶ ἢ πόλει, ώς ὁ θεῖος Παῦλος τοις 'Ρωμαίοις ή Κορινθίοις προσφωνεί ταύτας τὰς ἐπιστολὰς ὁ τῶν τοιούτων τοῦ Κυρίου μαθητῶν θίασος, ἀλλὰ καθόλου τοῖς πιστοίς ήτοι Ἰουδαίοις τοίς έν τη διασπορά, ώς καὶ ὁ Πέτρος, ή καὶ πᾶσι τοῖς ὑπὸ τὴν αὐτὴν πίστιν Χριστιανοῖς τελοῦσιν. Thus understood, the term is not properly applicable to the 2nd and 3rd Epistles of St. John, which would, however, naturally be regarded as appendages to the First Epistle.

A secondary and later meaning of the term is derived from its use in reference to the Church. An epistle came to be called catholic as being catholic in spirit and accepted by the Catholic Church: hence it is sometimes equivalent to 'canonical.'

I have compared the readings of the Codex Fuldensis (Ranke's ed. 1868) and also those of the genuine Speculum Augustini (edited by Weihrieh, along with the spurious Speculum, which follows in the 3rd col.). The genuine Speculum is usually so close to the Vulgate that it has been thought that Augustine himself only gave the references, and that the passages were copied from the Vulgate by a later scribe.

NOTES

Ver. 1. Ιάκωβος.] See Introduction.

Θεοῦ και Κυρίου Ίησοῦ Χριστοῦ δοῦλος. It is only here and in the epistle of St. Jude that we find the writer announcing himself as simply δούλος. St. Paul joins ἀπόστολος with δούλος in Rom. i. 1, Tit. i. 1; more commonly he styles himself simply ἀπόστολος 'I. X., as in 1 Cor. i. 1, 2 Cor. i. 1, Gal. i. 1 (here διὰ 'Î. X.), Eph. i. 1, Col. i. 1, and in both epistles to Timothy; in Philemon i. I he is δέσμιος Χ. Ί.; in his earliest epistles (1 Th. i. 1, 2 Th. i. 1), where he joins Silvanus and Timothy with himself, he makes use of no distinctive title; in Phil. i. I he speaks of himself and Timothy as δοῦλοι Χ. 'I. St. Peter styles himself ἀπόστολος 'I. X. in his 1st, δοῦλος καὶ ἀπ. 'I. X. in his 2nd epistle. St. John's 1st epistle is anonymous; in the 2nd and 3rd he calls himself ὁ πρεσβύτερος. So far as it goes, this peculiarity of the epistles of the two brothers, James and Jude, is (1) in favour of the view that neither of them was included in the number of the Twelve; (2) it shows that the writer of this epistle was so well known that it was unnecessary alike for him and for his brother to add any special title to distinguish him from others who bore the same name; (3) if we hold, as there seems every reason for doing, that the writer is the James whom St. Paul speaks of as the brother of the Lord, we find here an example of the refusal 'to know Christ after the fiesh' which appears in ii. 1; the same willingness to put himself on a level with others which appears in iii. 1, 2. The phrase δοῦλος Θεοῦ is used of Moses (Dan. ix. 11, Mal. iv. 4), who is also called θεράπων (Ex. xiv. 31, Numb. xii. 7, Jos. i. 2) and παι̂ς (Jos. xi. 12, xii. 6). Δοιλος is also used generally of the prophets (Jer. vii. 25, Dan. ix. 10, Apoc. x. 7, &c.).

ταις δώδεκα φυλαις.] The chosen people are still regarded as constituting twelve tribes by the writers of the N.T. So St. Paul (Acts xxvi. 7) speaks of τὸ δωδεκάφυλον ἡμῶν waiting for the promised kingdom; and in Matt. xix. 28 it is said that the twelve apostles shall hereafter 'sit on twelve thrones judging the twelve tribes of Israel': comp. also Rev. vii. 4 foll. The prophets looked forward to the reunion of Israel and Judah (Isa. xi. 12, 13, Jerem. iii. 18), and under Hezekiah and Josiah many of the remnant of the Ten Tribes came up to worship at Jerusalem (2 Chr. xxix. 24, xxx. 1, xxxiv. 9). So twelve goats were offered as a sin-offering for the twelve tribes at the dedication of the second Temple (Ezra vi. 17). There would be no reason for keeping up the old feud between the tribes in the captivity; and while it is probable that some of those who were carried away by Shalmanezer may have adopted the manners and religion of the neighbouring heathen, many would no doubt attach themselves to the later captives from Judah, and either return with the minority of these to Judaca, or continue to live in Assyria with the majority. The book Tobit professes to give the story of a religious captive of the tribe of Naphtali; and Anna (Luke ii. 36) is an instance of a resident in Judah belonging to the tribe of Asher. See D. of B. under Captivities. This form of address is one among many indications of an early date for the epistle, the Christian Jews not being yet definitely marked off from their unbelieving countrymen. [Hermas (Sim. ix. 17) however includes all the nations under heaven in his Twelve Tribes.

εν τῆ διασπορᾶ.] See Introduction on the readers to whom the epistle is addressed, and cf. 1 Pet. i. 1 ἐκλεκτοῖς παρεπιδήμοις διασπορᾶς Πόττον, Γαλατίας, Καππαδοκίας, 'Ασίας καὶ Βιθυτίας (if St. James, as is probable, is here addressing the Jews of the eastern dispersion, this may have suggested to St. Peter his letter to the western dispersion), John vii. 35 εἰς τὴν διασπορὰν τῶν 'Ελλήνων, Deut. xxviii. 25 ἔση διασπορὰ ἐν πάσαις βασιλείαις τῆς γῆς, ib. xxx. 4, Ps. exlvii. 2 τὰς διασπορὰς τοῦ 'Ισραὴλ ἐπισυτάξει, Isa. xlix. 6, Jer. xv. 7, Neh. i. 9, Tobit xiii. 3, Judith v. 19 ἐπιστρέψαντες ἐπὶ τὸν Θεὸν αὐτῶν ἀνέβησαν ἐκ τῆς διασπορᾶς οὖ διεσπάρησαν, 2 Macc. i. 27; and Westcott, art. on Dispersion in χαίρειν. $\chi a \hat{i} \rho \epsilon$ is the regular form of Greek salutation, as in Luke i. 28, 2 John 10; like salve in Latin. In letters it takes the form χαίρειν (λέγει), like salutem (dicit). Horace (Ep. i. 8, 1 and 15) uses the more literal translation gaudere et bene rem gerere (χαίρειν καὶ εἶν πράτ- $\tau \epsilon w$). It is said to have been first used by Cleon in sending news of the capture of Pylos (Luc. Laps. inter Salut. 3, Suidas s.v.). Aristophanes in his latest play speaks of it as already old-fashioned, Plut. 322 χαίρειν μεν έμας έστιν, ἄνδρες δημόται, άρχαιον ήδη προσαγορεύειν και σαπρόν $\dot{a}\sigma\pi\dot{a}\zeta\rho\mu\alpha\iota\delta'$. Plato is said to have preferred the phrase $\epsilon\hat{v}$ $\pi\rho\dot{a}\tau\tau\epsilon\nu$ in writing to his intimates (Pl. Ep. 3, p. 315). The Pythagoreans used ίγιαίναι (see Menage on Diog. L. iii. 61). In the N.T. the epistolary χαίρων is only found here and in Acts xxiii. 26 (the letter of Lysias to Felix) and xv. 23 (the letter, probably drawn up by St. James, from the Church at Jerusalem to the brethren in Antioch, Syria and Cilicia). In 2 Macc. ix. 19 we find the above forms of salutation combined, τοις χρηστοις 'Ιουδαίοις τοις πολίταις πολλά χαίρειν καὶ ύγιαίνειν καὶ εὖ πράττειν βασιλεὺς καὶ στρατηγὸς 'Αντίοχος. The ancient Hebrew salutation was 'Peace' (which the Peshitto gives here), as in Gen. xliii. 23, and (epistolary) in Ezra iv. 17, v. 7. In 2 Macc. i. 1 we have the Greek and Hebrew joined, χαίρειν καὶ εἰρήνην ἀγαθήν. As a spoken salutation we have examples of εἰρήνη in Luke x. 5, xxiv. 36 (cf. Jas. ii. 16): the epistolary use is found in 3 John 15 εἰρήνη σοι, 1 Pet. v. 14. In the other epistles these simple greetings are further developed, as χάρις καὶ εἰρήνη (Rom. i. 7, 1 Cor. i. 3, 2 Cor. i. 2, Gal. i. 3, Eph. i. 2, Phil. i. 2, Col. i. 2, 1 and 2 Thess., Philemon 3, Apoc. i. 4, 1 Pet. i. 2, 2 Pet. i. 2); in the pastoral epistles and in 2 John we have the fuller form χάρις έλεος εἰρήνη; Jude has έλεος καὶ εἰρήνη καὶ ἀγάπη. There is no preliminary salutation in Hebrews, 1 John, 3 John. We meet with the final salutation $\hat{\eta}_{\chi}$ áρις τοῦ Κυρίου Ἰ. Χ. $\mu\epsilon\theta$ ' ὑμῶν in many of the epistles. Another final salutation is $\ddot{\epsilon}\rho\dot{\rho}\omega\sigma\theta\dot{\epsilon} = \text{Lat. valete (Acts xv. 29): see}$ Heisen Nov. Hyp. pp. 95-144. The use of the form χαίρειν naturally suggests the identity of the writer of this epistle with the writer of the circular in the Acts, and is at any rate a strong argument against the view that our epistle was written towards the close of the first century. Is it conceivable that, after the introduction of the fuller Christian salutation, any one professing to write in the name of the most honoured member of the church at Jerusalem would have fallen back on the comparatively cold and formal χαίρευ:?

2. πâσαν. This does not mean strictly totality of joy, as though there were no joy besides, but merely denotes a superior degree to μεγάλην or πολλήν. Possibly the expression originated in an attraction from $\pi \hat{a} \nu \epsilon \hat{i} \nu a \iota \chi a \rho \hat{a} \nu$, and is thus equivalent to 'entire, unmixed joy.' Phil. ii. 29 μετὰ πάσης χαρᾶς, 1 Pet. ii. 18 ἐν παντὶ φόβω, 1 Tim. ii. 2 ἐν πάση εὐσεβεία, ib. ii. 11 ἐν πάση ὑποταγῆ, Tit. ii. 10, 15, iii. 2, Acts xvii. 11 εδέξαντο τον λόγον μετά πάσης προθυμίας, ib. xxiii. 1 πάση συνειδήσει $\dot{a}\gamma a\theta \hat{\eta}$. The same use is found in classical authors, e.g. Soph. Phil. 618 & πῦρ σὰ καὶ πᾶν δεῖμα, ib. El. 293, Eur. Med. 453 πᾶν κέρδος ἡγοῦ ζημιουμένη φυγή, Epiet. 3. 5 χάριν σοι έχω πᾶσαν, and in Latin, e.g. Čic. N.D. ii. 56 omnis ordo, where other instances are quoted in my note. The language is more measured in 1 Pet. i. 6, and Heb. xii. 11 πᾶσα μὲν παιδεία πρὸς μὲν τὸ παρὸν οὐ δοκεῖ χαρᾶς εἶιαι ἀλλὰ λύπης, ὕστερον δὲ καρπὸν εἰρηνικὸν τοις δι' αὐτης γεγυμνασμένοις ἀποδίδωσιν δικαιωσύτης. But neither does St. James say that trial is all joy; he bids us count it joy, that is, look at it from the bright side, as capable of being turned to our highest χαρὰν ἡγήσασθε.] The word χαρά echoes the preceding χαίρειν according to the wont of the writer. See ὑπομονή, τέλειον, λειπόμενοι just below, and the Essay on Grammar and Style. Χαρά is here ground of rejoicing, as in Luke ii. 10. The salutation might sound like a mockery to those who were suffering under various trials, but St. James proceeds to show that these very trials are a ground for joy. For the same realization of what was often a mere phrase of courtesy cf. Eur. Hec. 426 ΠΟΛ. χαῖρ' ὧ τεκοῦσα, χαῖρε Κασσάνδρα τέ μοι. ΈΚ. χαίρουσιν ἄλλοι, μητρὶ δ' οὐκ ἔστιν τόδε. For the thought cf. Matt. v. 10–15, 1 Pet. iv. 12–14 μὴ ξενίζεσθε (at your trials) ὧs ξένον ὑμὲν συμβαίνοντος, it is not strange or foreign to your Christian life, but a part of your

ήγήσασθε] We might have expected the present tense, like ἡγεῖσθε in 1 Pet. iii. 15 and below $\lambda a\lambda εῖτε$ ii. 12, as the additional is used rather of a single act than of a continuous state; but it is here employed in reference to each separate temptation as it occurs, perhaps also as more urgent, like $\mu a\kappa \rho a\theta e\mu \acute{\eta} \sigma a\tau \epsilon$ in v. 7. [The additional is used as the authoritative imperative in 2 Tim. i. 8, 14, ii. 3, 15, &c. A.]: cf. Winer tr. p. 393 foll.

ἀδελφοί μου.] In the O.T. the word is used of Israelites generally (Lev. xxv. 46, Deut. xv. 3), denoting, as Philo says (Carit. M. 2 p. 388), οὐ μότον τὸν ἐκ τῶν αὐτῶν φύντα γονέων ἀλλὰ καὶ ὃς ἄν ἀστὸς ἢ ὑμότον λος ἢ: so also in N.T. (Acts ii. 29, Rom. ix. 3); but here it is more commonly used of the spiritual Israel (Matt. xxiii. 8, xxv. 40, Acts ix. 30, 1 Cor. v. 11), equivalent to the later 'Christians' (see below v. 9 and ii. 15). St. James frequently makes use of this appealing address (ii. 1, 14, iii. 1, 10, 12, v. 12, 19), sometimes without μον (iv. 11, v. 7, 9, 10), sometimes with the addition of ἀγαπητοί (i. 16, 19, ii. 5). The simple ἀδελφοί is the most frequent in St. Paul's epistles. In the two epistles of St. Peter and the other catholic epistles ἀγαπητοί is often used by itself.

πειρασμοίς.] Here used of outward trial, as in the parallel passage in 1 Pet. i. 6 èr ὁ ἀγαλλιᾶσθε, ὀλίγον ἄρτι εἰ δέον λυπηθέντες ἐν ποικίλοις πειρασμοῖς, ἵνα τὸ ὀοκίμιον ὑμῶν τῆς πίστεως...εὑρεθῆ εἰς ἔπαινον κ.τ.λ. The inner trial (temptation) is expressed below (v. 13) by the verb πειράζω. Dr. Hatch (Essays in Biblical Greek, p. 71 foll.) seems to me to restrict the sense too much to one kind of trial, viz. affliction. Riches, as we see from ver. 10 and 1 Tim. vi. 9, are as much a πειρασμός as poverty; and the temptation of Christ in the wilderness (Luke iv. 13) was not an appeal to fear but rather to hope and desire. See Comment on περιπέσητε.] The word brings out the externality of the temptation in opposition to the internal temptation arising from ίδια ἐπιθυμία (v. 14). Cf. Luke x. 30 λησταῖς περίεπεσεν, Plato Legy. ix. 877 C. π. συμφοραῖς, Μ. Ant. ii. 11 τοῖς μὲν κατ' ἀλήθειαν κακοῖς ἵτα μὴ περιπίπτη ὁ ἄνθρωπος, ἐπ' αὐτῷ τὸ πᾶν ἔθειτο. Heisen gives many examples.

ποικίλοις.] Also used of diseases and lusts (2 Tim. iii. 6, Matt. iv. 24), to which answers ποικίλη χάρις Θεοῦ (1 Pet. iv. 10). It is a common word in Philo. For examples of various trials see 2 Cor. vi. 4, 5, xi.

3. γινόσκοντες] In iii. 1, as in Rom. v. 3, we have the more usual εἰδότες, but γιν. is found Rom. vi. 6, Heb. x. 34, 2 Pet. i. 20, ib. iii. 3. Bishop Lightfoot thus distinguishes them (Gal. iv. 9): "whilst οἶδα, 'I know,' refers to the knowledge of facts absolutely, γινόσκω, 'I recognize,' being relative, gives prominence either to the attainment or the manifestation of knowledge." It may be questioned however whether fine distinctions of this sort were always observed in the Hellenistic use.

τὸ δοκίμιον ὑμῶν τῆς πίστεως.] On the order of the words, which is the same in 1 Pet. i. 6 quoted above, see below ver. 5 and the Essay on Grammar and Style. $\Delta o\kappa i\mu \omega \sigma$ is here the instrument or means by which a man is tested (δοκιμάζεται) and proved (δόκιμος), as in Prov. xxvii. 21 δοκίμιον ἀργυρίφ καὶ χρυσφ πύρωσις, ἀνηρ δὲ δοκιμάζεται διὰ στόματος έγκωμιαζόντων αὐτόν, Herodian ii. 10. 12 δοκίμιον στρατιωτών κάματος (Wetst.), Plut. Mor. p. 230 ηρώτησεν εί δοκίμιον έχει τίνι τρόπω πειράζεται δ πολύφιλος...ἀτυχία, εἶπεν. The word δοκιμή is used in the same sense by St. Paul 2 Cor. viii. 2 ἐν πολλη δοκιμη θλίψεως ή περισσεία της χαρας αὐτῶν κ.τ.λ., ib. xiii. 3, but in Rom. v. 4 it is used of the result of endurance, tried and proved virtue, much as δοκίμιον in 1 Pet. i. 6. is assumed here that $\pi \epsilon \iota \rho a \sigma \mu \delta s$ is the $\delta \delta \kappa i \mu \iota \delta \sigma \tau \epsilon \omega s$. Compare with the whole passage Sir. ii. I foll, εἰ προσέρχη δουλεύειν Κυρίω ετοίμασον την ψυχήν σου είς πειρασμόν εἴθυνον την καρδίαν σου καὶ καρτέρησον...παν δ έὰν ἐπαχθή σοι δέξαι καὶ ἐν ἀλλάγμασι ταπεινώσεώς σου μακροθύμησον ὅτι ἐν πυρί δοκιμάζεται χρυσός καὶ ἄνθρωποι δεκτοὶ ἐν καμίνω ταπεινώσεως. πίστευσον αὐτῷ καὶ ἀντιλήψεταί σου, Luke viii. 13 οὖτοι ρίζαν οὐκ ἔχουσιν οἱ πρὸς καιρὸν πιστεύουσιν καὶ ἐν καιρῷ περασμοῦ ἀφίστανται...τὸ δὲ ἐν τῆ καλῆ γῆ οῦτοι, οἵτινες...τὸν λόγον κατέχουσιν καὶ καρποφοροῦσιν ἐν ὑπομονῆ. Seneca insists much on the use of adversity, Prov. 2. 2 omnia adversa exercitationes putet vir fortis; ib. 6 patrium deus habet adversus bonos viros animum et illos fortiter amat; 'operibus,' inquit, 'doloribus, damnis exagitentur ut verum colligant robur.' Just below (3. 3) he quotes from Demetrius nihil mihi videtur infelicius eo cui nihil umquam evenit adversi, non licuit enim se experiri. There is a reminiscence of the text in Hermas Vis. iv. 3 ώσπερ τὸ χρυσίον δοκιμάζεται...οὕτως καὶ ὑμεῖς δοκιμάζεσθε οἱ κατοικοῦττες ἐν αὐτῷ (τῷ κόσμῳ). $\,\,\,\,$ οἱ οὖν μείναντες καὶ πυρωθέντες $\,\,$ ύπ' αὐτοῦ καθαρισθήσεσθε.

τῆς πίστεως.] That St. James no less than St. Paul regarded faith as the very foundation of religion is evident from this verse as well as κατεργάζεται.] An emphatic form of $\epsilon \rho \gamma \dot{\alpha} \zeta \epsilon \tau \alpha \iota$, 'works out,' often found in the epistle to the Romans; cf. especially v. $3 \dot{\eta} \theta \lambda \dot{\iota} \psi \iota s \dot{\nu} \pi \iota \rho \iota \rho \dot{\gamma} \dot{\nu} \kappa \alpha \tau \epsilon \rho \gamma \dot{\alpha} \zeta \epsilon \tau \alpha \iota$, and see below on $\kappa \alpha \tau \alpha \kappa \alpha \nu \chi \dot{\alpha} \sigma \theta \epsilon$ iii. 14. The simple verb is similarly used below i. 20, ii. 9 $\delta\mu a\rho\tau \ell a\nu \ \epsilon\rho\gamma \dot{a}\zeta\epsilon\sigma\theta\epsilon$.

ύπομονήν.] Used (1) for the act of endurance (2 Cor. i. 6, vi. 4), and (2) for the temper of endurance, as here and in the parallel passages Rom. v. 3 and 2 Thess. i. 4. The verb is found below, ver. 12, Matt. xxiv. 13 δ ὁπομείνας εἰς τέλος σωθήσεται, Rom. xii. 12 τἢ ἐλπίδι χαίροντες, τἢ θλίψει ὑπομένοντες, τἢ προσευχἢ προσκαρτεροῦντες (where we find joy, endurance and prayer joined as in the text), Didaché xvi. 5 οἱ ὑπομείναντες ἐν τἢ πίστει αὐτῶν σωθήσονται. It corresponds generally to the Aristotelian καρτερία (cf. Heb. xi. 27 τὸν γὰρ ἀόραταν ὡς ὁρῶν ἐκαρτέρησεν) and to the Latin patientia, thus defined by Cic. Invent. ii. 54. 163 patientia est honestatis ant utilitatis causa rerum arduarum ac difficilium voluntaria ac diuturna perpessio; but its distinctively Christian quality is shown in Didymus' comment on Job vi. 5 quoted by Suicer οὐκ διαίσθητον εἶναι δεῖ τὸν δίκαιον κῶν κιρτερῶς φέρη τὰ θλίβονται αἴτη γὰρ ἀρετή ἐστιν, ὅταν αἴσθησιν τῶν ἐπιπόνων δεχόριενός τις ἑπερφρονῆ τῶν ἀλγηδόιων δαὶ τὸν Θιόν. Plut. (Cons. ad Apoll. 117) quotes from Eurip. τὰ προσπεισόιτα δ' ἄστις εἶν φέρει βροτῶν, ἄριστος εἶναι σωφρονεῖν τέ μοι δοκεῖ. Philo (Cong. Erad. Grat. M. 1. 524), followed by Chrysostom (ap. Suic. s.v.), calls ἐπορονή the queen of virtues, and says it is typitical by Rebecca. Bp. Lightfoot distinguishes it from μακροθυμία (Col. i. 12): see below on v. 7.

τργον τέλειον ἐχέτω.] Let it have its full effect, 'attain its end.' Alf. translates 'let it have a perfect work,' but this does not quite represent the force of the original, which in colloquial English would be rather 'make a complete job of it' = $\tau \epsilon \lambda \epsilon \omega s$ ἐκργοίτω. In classical Greek we should probably have had τὸ ἔργον, but the omission of the article emphasizes the first point, that endurance shall be active not passive, as well as the second, that its activity shall not cease till it has accomplished its end. Cf. for the thought $\pi a \rho a \mu \epsilon \dot{\alpha} a s$ below ver. 25, Heb. x. 36, xii. 1 foll. δε ὑπομονῆς τρέχωμεν τὸν προκείμενον ἡμῖν ἀγῶνα, v. 5 ὅτα μὴ κάρητε ταῖς ψυχαῖς ὑμῶν ἐκλνόμενοι κ.τ.λ., Clem. Al. Str. 4, p. 570 P. τελείωσην τὸ μαρτύριον καλοῦμεν ὅτι τέλειον ἔργον ἀγάπης ἀνεδείξατο.

τέλων.] Not 'perfect' in the strict sense of the term, since πολλά πταίομεν ἄπαντες (below iii. 2), though all are bidden to aim at perfection, (Matt. v. 48, Eph. iii. 19). The word occurs again below iii. 2. It is used of animals which are full grown (cf. Herod. i. 83, where $\tau \dot{a}$ $\tau \dot{\epsilon} \lambda \epsilon a \tau \hat{\omega} v \pi \rho o \beta \dot{\alpha} \tau \omega v$ are opposed to $\gamma a \lambda a \theta \eta v \dot{a}$, Thuc. v. 47), and hence in this and other passages of Christians who have attained maturity of character and understanding (Phil. iii. 15, where see Lightfoot's note, Col. i. 28, iv. 12, esp. 1 Cor. xiv. 20, Heb. v. 12-14). Thus it becomes almost synonymous with πρευματικός and γρωστικός. Philo contrasts it with ἀσκητικός and προκόπτων Μ. 1. p. 551 τοιαθτα ύφηγείται τώ ἀσκητικώ ή ὑπομονή, 552 τὸν ἀσκητικὸν τρόπον, καὶ νέον παρὰ τὸν τέλειον, καὶ φιλίας άξων είναι τίθεμεν. 169 αι τέλειαι άρεται μόνου του τελείου κτήματα, 582, 689 : cf. the Stoic use (Stob. Ecl. ii. 198) πάντα δὲ τὸν καλὸν καὶ άγαθον ἄνδρα τέλειον είναι λέγουσι διὰ τὸ μηδεμιᾶς ἀπολείπεσθαι ἀρετής. The word ἄρτιος is used in the same sense in 2 Tim. iii. 17 ữa ἄρτως ἢ ὁ τοῦ Θεοῦ ἄνθρωπος πρὸς πῶν ἔργον ἀγαθὸν ἐξηρτισμένος, cf. 1 Pet. ν. 10 δ δε Θεός... δλίγον παθόντας αντός καταρτίσαι ύμας. In Heb. ii. 10 Christ himself is said to have been made perfect through sufferings. The word $\tau \dot{\epsilon} \lambda \epsilon \omega s$ is often used by later writers of the baptized, as by Clem. Al. Paed. i. 6. p. 113 P. αναγεννηθέντες εὐθέως τὸ τέλειον ἀπειλήφαμεν εφωτίσθημεν γάρ το δε έστιν επιγνώναι Θεόν. οἴκουν ἀτελης ο έγνωκως το τέλειον.

δλόκληροι.] Ounibus anmeris absoluti. Used of a victim which is without blemish, complete in all its parts (integer), Jos. Ant. Jud. iii. 12. 2 τὰ ἱερεῖα θέουσιν ὁλόκληρα καὶ κατὰ μηδὲν λελωβημένα, also of the priest Philo M. 2, p. 225 παντελή καὶ δλόκληρον εἶναι τὸν ἱερέα προστέτακται, of the initiated Plato Phaedr. 250. 'Ολοκληρία is used of the lame man who was healed, Acts iii. 16. Hence, metaphorically, Philo M. 1. 190 τὰ δ' ἄλλα, ὅσα ψυχὴν δλόκληρον κατὰ πάντα τὰ μέλη παρέχεται, δλοκαυτοῦν Θεῷ, ib. M. 2. p. 265 δεῖ τὸν μέλλοντα θύειν σκέπτεσθαι, μὴ εἰ τὸ ἱερεῖον ἄμωρον, ἀλλ' εἰ ἡ διάνοια δλόκληρος αὐτῷ καὶ παντελὴς καθέστηκε, Herm. Mand. v. 2. 3 πίστις δλόκληρος, Polyb. 18. 28. 9 εὔκλεια δλόκληρος, Wisd. xv. 3 τὸ γὰρ ἐπίστασθαί σε ὁλόκληρος δικαισσύνη, 1 Thess. v. 23. It is often joined with τέλειος, as in Plut. Mor. p. 1066 F. τέλειον ἐκ τούτων καὶ ὁλόκληρον ζοντο συμπληροῦν βίον, and in Philo. See on both words Heisen pp. 299–371. In this passage it would be contrasted with a partial keeping of the law such as we read of in ii. 9, 10.

έν μηδενὶ λειπόμενοι.] The preceding positive expression (ὁλόκληρος) is supported by the corresponding negative, as in ver. 6 ἐν πίστει μηδὲν διακρινόμενος. The only passages in the N.T. where the passive is used (as in Plato Legg. 9. 881 Β δεῖ τὰς ἐνθάδε κολάσεις μηδὲν τῶν ἐν Αίδοῦ λείπεσθαι) are this and the following verse and ii. 15. Strictly it means 'being left behind by another.' It is used with the gen. both of person and thing, rarely of both together. More usually the thing is expressed by the dat. or acc., or with a preposition, εἴς τι, κατά τι, πρός τι, ἔν τιν. The active occurs with much the same sense in classical Greek, Arist. Gen. An. iv. 1. 36 οἱ εὐνοῦχοι μικρὸν λείπουσι τοῦ θήλεος τὴν ἰδέαν ('fall short of'), and is also used of the thing with dat. of the person, Luke xviii. 22 ἕν σοι λείπει ('is lacking'). We may compare 1 Cor. 7 μὴ ὑστερεῖσθαι ἐν μηδενὶ χαρίσματι. Μηδενί is required as it is a negative in a final clause, cf. Phil. iii. 9 ἵνα Χριστὸν κερδήσω...μὴ ἔχων ἐμὴν δικαιοσύνην, and Winer, p. 598.

There is a close resemblance between the scale here given of Christian growth and that in Rom. v. 4. After speaking of the Christian exulting (καυχώμεθα ver. 9 below) in the hope of the glory of God, nay even $\dot{\epsilon}v$ $\tau a is$ $\theta \lambda i \psi \epsilon \sigma i v$, St. Paul continues $\epsilon i \delta \delta \tau \epsilon s$ $\delta \tau i$ $\delta \gamma i$ $\theta \lambda i \psi i s$ (= $\tau \delta$ δοκίμιον της πίστεως or πειρασμός here) υπομονήν κατεργάζεται. These two stages may be considered the same as those given here: but the third seems inconsistent. Here endurance leads to the perfection of the Christian character; there the words ή δε ὑπομονὴ δοκιμήν apparently reverse the first step of St. James. The word δοκιμή however is not there used in the same sense as our δοκίμιον, of which it is rather the result; and this, the tried and tested character, is not very different from St. James' 'perfection,' of which we may consider the two following stages in St. Paul (ή δε δοκιμή ελπίδα, ή δε ελπίς οὐ καταισχύνει, ὅτι ἡ ἀγάπη τοῦ Θεοῦ ἐκκέχυται) to be marks or elements. There is a similar chain, including ὑπομονή, in 2 Pet. i. 5 foll., where however there seems no attempt to give a natural or chronological order.

5. εὶ δέ τις λείπεται σοφίας.] The preceding λειπόμενοι is caught up like τέλειος and ὑπομονή before. The thought omitted is thus supplied by Bede: si quis vestrum non potest intellegere utilitatem tentationum quae fidelibus probandi causa eveniunt, postulet a Deo tribui sibi sensum quo dignoscere valeat quanta pietate Pater castigat filios ('how am I to see trial in this light, and make this use of it? it needs a higher wisdom'). The ideas of wisdom and perfection are often joined, as in 1 Cor. ii. 7

σοφίαν λαλούμεν έν τοῦς τελείοις, Col. i. 28 διδάσκοντες πάντα άνθρωπον ει πάση σοφία ήνα παραστήσωμεν πάντα ἄνθρωπον τέλειον εν Χριστώ, Wisd. ix. 6 και γάρ τις ή τέλειος εν νίοις ανθρώπων της από σου σοφίας ἀπούσης εἰς οὐδὲι λογισθήσεται. Hence Eulogius (#. 590 A.D.), quoted by Heisen p. 377, speaks of ή τελειόποιος σοφία θεοῦ. On the true nature of wisdom see below iii. 13. To St. James, as to the writer of the book of Job (where the necessity of wisdom to understand the use of trial is much insisted on) and of the other sapiential books, wisdom is 'the principal thing,' to which he gives the same prominence as St. Paul to faith, St. John to love, St. Peter to hope. Not that wisdom is neglected in the other books of the N.T.: cf. Luke ii. 40, vii. 35, xi. 49, 1 Cor. i. 17 foll. (where true and false wisdom are contrasted), Col. i. 9 αἰτούμετοι ίνα πληρώθητε την επίγνωσην του θελήματος αυτού εν πάση σοφία και συνέσει πιευματική, where see Lightfoot's note, Eph. i. 17 ίνα ὁ Θεὸς δώη ὑμῶν πυεθμα σοφίας και αποκαλύψεως εν επιγνώσει αθτοθ, πεφωτισμένους τοθς οφθαλμούς της καρδίας είς το είδειαι ύμας τίς έστιν ή έλπις της κλήσεως αὐτοῦ, τίς ὁ πλοῦτος τῆς δόξης τῆς κληρονομίας κ.τ.λ., which may serve as a commentary on the whole of this passage, esp. on vers. 10 and 12. The prayer for wisdom takes a more definitely Christian form in St. Paul's prayer for the Spirit. Compare Plut. Mor. 351 C. πάιτα μὲν δεί τάγαθὰ τοὺς νοῦν ἔγοντας αἰτείσθαι παρὰ τῶν θεῶν μάλιστα δὲ τῆς περὶ αὐτῶν ἐπιστήμης, ὅσον ἐφικτόν ἐστιν ἀνθρώποις, μετιόντες εὐχόμεθα τυγχάνειν παρ' αὐτῶν ἐκείνων, ὡς οὐδὲν ἀνθρώπω λαβείν μείζον, οὐ χαρίσασθαι Θεώ σεμνότερον άληθείας.

αιτείτω παρά τοῦ διδόντος Θεοῦ πᾶσιν άπλῶς.] The great example is Solomon: cf. I Kings iii. 9-12, Prov. ii. 3, Wisdom vii. 7 foll., ix. 4 foll., Sir. i. 1 foll., li. 13 foll., Barnabas xxi. 5 ὁ Θεὸς δῷη ἔμᾶν σοφίων ἐν $i\pi \sigma \rho \sigma \hat{\eta}$, below iii. 17 $\hat{\eta}$ $\tilde{a}r\omega\theta\epsilon r$ $\sigma \sigma \phi ia$. The more natural order of the words would have been $\pi a \rho a \tau o v \pi a \sigma w a \pi \lambda \omega s \delta$. Θ ., or with article repeated π , $\tau \circ \hat{v} \Theta \in \hat{v}$, $\tau \circ \hat{v} \pi$, \hat{a} , $\hat{b} \cdot \hat{b} \circ \hat{v} \tau \circ \hat{v}$: cf. for the hyperbaton 2 Pet. iii. 2 μεησθήναι των προειρημένων δημάτων έπο των άγίων προφητών, Acts xxvi. 6 έπ' έλπίδι της είς τους πατέρας ημών έπαγγελίας γενομένης ύπο του Θεού, Rom. viii. 18 την μέλλουσαν δόξαν ἀποκαλυφθήναι είς ήμας, Matt. xxv. 34 την ήτοιμασμένην έρειν βασιλείαν άπο καταβολής κόσμου. We occasionally find the same thing in classical authors, when the qualifying clause between the article and substantive is itself further qualified or supplemented, as by a prepositional phrase (Xen. Anab. vi. 6, 19 δ ἀφαιρεθεὶς ανηρ επο 'Αγασίου, Thue. i. 18 μετά την των τυράντων κατάλυσιν έκ της Έλλάδος, see Krueger 50, 9, n. 8, 9; 10, 1, 2, 3), or by the object (Dem. Cor. 301 δ κατειληφώς κίνδενος την πόλιν, Epict. Diss. i. 1 χρηστική δύναμις ται̂s φαιτασίαιs. Here the unusual position gives a special prominence to πάσιν άπλως.

There are two ways in which $\delta\pi\lambda\hat{\omega}_{S}$ (only here in N.T.) is taken, (1) in a logical sense, 'simply,' unconditionally,' 'without bargaining,' which may be said most truly of Him who makes his sun to rise on the evil and the good (Matt. v. 45): cf. Herm. Mand. ii. $4\pi\hat{\omega}_{S}$ is $4\pi\hat{\omega}_{S}$ in $4\pi\hat{\omega}_{S}$ in $4\pi\hat{\omega}_{S}$ in $4\pi\hat{\omega}_{S}$ in $4\pi\hat{\omega}_{S}$ is explained by $\mu\eta\theta\hat{\omega}_{S}$ $\pi\hat{\omega}_{S}$ in $\pi\hat{\omega}_{S}$ in a moral sense, 'generously.' The latter is more in accordance with the use of

αἰτείτω δὲ ἐν πίστει.] Again catching up the preceding verb. (f. εὐχὴ)

 $\tau \hat{\eta}_S \pi i \sigma \tau \epsilon \omega_S$ below v. 15, and for $a i \tau$ iv. 3, where also there is a limitation on the prayer which is sure of an answer. For the meaning of

μηδέν διακρινόμενος.] The simple sense of the active is to 'divide,' often contrasted, as in Plato and Aristotle, with συγκράνων: so in the system of Empedocles (Diels p. 478) τὰ στοιχεία ποτέ μὲν ὑπὸ τῆς φιλίας συγκρινόμενα, ποτε δε ύπο του νείκους διακρινόμενα κ.τ.λ. In 1 Cor. iv. 7 ($\tau i s \sigma \epsilon \delta \iota \alpha \kappa \rho i r \alpha$;) it means to separate from others as superior. Similarly in the passive, as Philo M. I. p. 584 (a veil is interposed) ὅπως διακρίτηται τῶν εἴσω τὰ ἔξω. Hence it is used of quarrelling, Herod. 9. 58 μαχή διακριθήναι πρός τιτα, Acts xi. 2 διεκρίτοντο πρός αὐτὸν λέγοντες ('disputed'), Jude 9 τῷ διαβόλω διακρινόμενος, and in ver. 23 ελέγχετε διακρινομένους (Alf.), Jerem. xv. 10 δικαζόμενον καὶ διακρινόμενον πάση τη γη, Ezek, xx. 35, 36 διακριθήσομαι πρὸς ('I will plead, contend, with you') ον τρόπον διεκρίθην πρὸς τοὺς πατέρας ὑμῶν. In the N.T. it is frequently used of internal division, like διαμερίζομαι (Luke xi. 18 έφ' έαυτον διεμερίσθη, cf. Virg. Aen. iv. 285 animum nunc huc celerem nunc dividit illuc); and contrasted with faith, Matt. xxi. 21 ἐὰν ἔχητε πίστιν καὶ μὴ διακριθητε, Mark xi. 23 δς αν είπη...καὶ μη διακριθη έν τη καρδία άλλα πιστεύση ... ἔσται αὐτῶ ὁ ἐὰν εἴπη, Rom. iv. 20 εἰς τὴν ἐπαγγελίαν τοῦ Θεοῦ οὐ διεκρίθη τη ἀπιστια ἀλλ' ἐνεδυναμώθη τη πίστει, below ii. 4 οὐ διεκρίθητε ἐν ἐαυτοις; Arts x. 20 πορεύου μηδεν διακρινόμενος, Rom. xiv. 23 δ διακρινόμενος έλν φαγή κατακέκριται ὅτι οὐκ ἐκ πίστεως. This use is apparently confined to the N.T. and later Christian writings, e.g. Protev. Jac. 11 p. 216 T. ακούσασα δε Μαριάμ διεκρίθη εν έαυτή λέγουσα εί εγώ συλλήψομαι, ώς πασα γυνή γεινά; Clem. Hom. ii. 40 περί τοῦ μόνου Θεοῦ διακριθήναι οὐκ δφείλεις, Socr. H.E. iii. 9 διεκρίνετο κοινωνείν Εὐσεβίω. The act. is also used in the sense of distinguishing, discerno, Matt. xvi. 3, Acts xv. 9 οὐδὲν διέκρινεν μεταξὺ ήμῶν τε καὶ αὐτῶν, xi. 12 μηδὲν διακρίναντα (making no distinction), 1 Cor. xi. 29 μη διακρίνων τὸ σῶμα (not distinguishing the body of Christ from common food), xvi. 29 (discerning of spirits), so Herm. Mand. ii. 6 quoted on åπλως: also of deciding (judging) 1 Cor. vi. 5 ἀνὰ μέσον τοῦ ἀδελφοῦ, Ez. xxxiv. 17 προβάτου καὶ προβάτου, and with acc. of person 1 Cor. xi. 31, as in Psa. xlix. 4 διακρίναι τὸν λαὸν αὐτοῦ, Prov. xxxi. 9, Zach. iii. 7.1 The force of the word here may be illustrated by iv. 4 below and by Matt. vi. 24. Hermas paraphrases it by αἰτοῦ ἀδιστάκτως Mand. ix., a passage full of reminiscences of St. James. $M\eta\delta\acute{\epsilon}\nu$ is required by the imperative, see Winer, p. 598.

ἔοικε κλύδωνι.] Like a cork floating on the wave, now carried towards the shore, now away from it; opposite to those who have 'hope as an anchor of the soul, sure and steadfast, and which entereth within the veil,' Heb. vi. 19. For the figure cf. Eph. iv. 14, where we have opposed to the άνηρ τέλειος of v. 13, νήπιοι κλυδωνιζόμενοι καὶ περιφερόμενοι παντί ἀνέμω της διδασκαλίας, Sir. xxxiii. 2 ὁ ὑποκριι όμενος έν νόμω ως έν καταιγίδι πλοίον. In Isa. lvii. 20 the sea is used as a type of restlessness, cf. Jude 13. For a similar figurative use of the name 'Euripus' see my note on Uic. N.D. iii. 24. So Matt. xi. 7 κάλαμον ὑπὸ ἀνέμου σαλευόμενον, Virg. Aen. xii. 487 vario πεημίσμαπ fluctuat aestu, Hor. Ep. i. 1. 99 aestuat et vitae disconvenit ordine toto, Seneca Ep. 95. 57 non contingit tranquillitas nisi immutabile certumque julicium adeptis: ceteri decidunt subinde et reponuntur et inter intermissa appetitaque alternis fluctuantur. Κλύδων is only found in the sing., cf. Luke viii. 24 ἐπετίμησεν τῷ ἀνέμω καὶ τῷ κλύδωνι τοῦ ἴδατος, and see Essay on Style. The word ἔοικε only here and below ver. 23 in the N.T.

ἀνεμίζομένω.] = classical ἀνεμόω. Perhaps coined by the writer. The only other examples quoted in Thayer are Schol. on Od. xii. 336, Hesych. s.v. ἀναψύξαι, Joan. Moschus ἀνεμίζοντος τοῦ πλοίου. Heisen notices (p. 441) that St. James has a fondness for verbs in τζω, e.g. ὀνειδίζω, ἡιπίζω, παραλογίζομαι, φλογίζω, ἐγγίζω, καθαρίζω, ἀγνίζω, ἀφανίζω,

ριπίζομένω.] From ρίπίς, 'a fan'; most often used of fanning a flame. Only found here in N.T. Cf. Philo Incorr. Mund. M. ii. p. 511 εἰ μὴ πρὸς ἀνέμων ριπίζοιτο τὸ ἔδωρ...ὑφ' ἡσυχίας νεκροῦται, and a comic fragment in Dio Chr. 32. p. 368 δῆμος ἄστατον κακόν, | καὶ θαλάσση πάνθ' ὅμοιον ὑπ' ἀνέμον ριπίζεται, Aristoph. Ran. 360, Philo Gig. M. 1. p. 269 ἰδών τις τὸν ἐν ταῖς ψυχαῖς ἄλεκτον καὶ βαρὺν χειμῶνα, ὡς ὑπὸ βιαιστάτης φορᾶς τῶν κατὰ βίον πραγμάτων ἀναρριπίζεται, τεθαύμακεν εἰκότως εἶ τις ἐν κλύδωνι κυμαινούσης θαλάσσης γαλήνην ἄγειν δύναται: Epictetus i. 4. 19 has a similar use of μεταρριπίζεσθαι.

7. μὴ γὰρ οἰέσθω.] This is the only passage in N.T. where the verb occurs, except οἶμαι John xxi. 25, οἰόμενοι Phil. i. 17. Οἴησις is often used in Philo in a bad sense = δόξα, as opposed to ἐπιστήμη. Fides non opinatur says Bengel on this passage, echoing the Stoic μὴ δοξάσειν τὸν σοφόν. Γάρ here, like the preceding, gives the reason for αἰτείτω ἐν πίστει.

τοῦ Κυρίου.] Here and below iv. 15, v. 10, 11 used of God: of Christ in i. 1, ii. 1 certainly, and v. 8, 14, 15 probably.

8. ἀνὴρ δίψιχος.] St. James commonly uses ἀνήρ with some characteristic word, as μακάριος i. 12, κατανοῶν i. 23, χρυσοδακτύλιος ii. 2, τέλειος iii. 2, keeping ἄνθρωπος for more general expressions, ἐκεῖνος, πᾶς, οὐδείς, &c. This agrees fairly with the use in the LXX. and Gospels: in the other epistles ἀνήρ is almost exclusively used in opposition to γυνή. Apparently the word δίψ. (only found here and below iv. 8 in N.T.) is here used for the first time: the thought is found in Psa. xii. 2 'with a double heart (ἐν καρδία καὶ ἐν καρδία) do they speak¹, ⁷ I Chron, xii. 33, I Kings xviii. 21, Sirac, i. 25 μη ἀπειθήσης φόβω Κυρίου καὶ μὴ προσέλθης αὐτῷ ἐν καρδία δισσή, ib. ii. 12 οὐαὶ άμαρτωλώ ἐπιβαίνοντι ἐπὶ δύο τρίβους...οὐαὶ ὑμίν τοῖς ἀπολωλεκόσι τὴν ὑπομοτήν. It is the opposite to Deut. iv. 29 ζητήσετε ἐκεῖ Κύριον τον Θεον ύμων και ευρήσετε αὐτον όταν εκζητήσετε αὐτον εξ όλης της καρδίας σου καὶ έξ όλης της ψυχής σου έν τη θλίψει σου, and to Wisd. i. 1 ἐν ἀπλότητι καρδίας² ζητήσατε (τὸν Κύριον) ὅτι εὐρίσκεται τοῖς μὴ πειράζουσιν αὐτόν, ἐμφανίζεται δὲ τοῖς μὴ ἀπιστοῖσιν αὐτῷ. St. Paul describes n διψυχία in Rom. vii.: ef. below iv. 4, Philo M. 1. p. 230 πέφυκε γὰρ δ ἄφρων, ἀεὶ περὶ τὸν ὀρθὸν λόγον κινούμενος, ἢρεμία καὶ ἀναπαύσει δυσμενὴς είναι καὶ ἐπὶ μηδενὸς ἐστάναι παγίως καὶ ἐρηρεῖσθαι δόγματος, κ.τ.λ. Though seemingly introduced by St. James, the word was quickly taken up by subsequent writers: it occurs about forty times in Hermas, e.g. Mand. ix. 4. 5 foll. αἰτοῦ παρὰ τοῦ Κυρίου καὶ ἀπολήψη πάντα...ἐὰν δὲ διστάσης ἐν τή καρδίο σου, οὐδὲν οὐ μὴ λήψη τῶν αἰτημάτων σου οἱ γὰρ διστάζοιτες, οὖτεί είσιν οι δίψυχοι...πας γαρ δίψυχος ανήρ έαν μή μεταιοήση δυσκόλως σωθήσεται: the whole chapter is a comment on our text, and full of reminiscences of this epistle; thus ή πίστις ἄνωθέν ἐστι παρά τοῦ Κυρίου καὶ ἔχει δύναμιν μεγάλην ή δε διψυχία επίγειον πνεθμά εστι παρά τοθ διαβόλου, δέναμαν μή έχουσα is an echo of James iii. 15; οὐκ ἔστι γὰρ ὁ Θεὸς ὡς οἱ ἄνθρωποι οἱ μνησικακοῦντες reminds one of μη ὀνειδίζοντος just above. In the space of thirty lines we find fifteen instances of the use of δίψυχος and its derivatives. So Clem. Rom. i. c. 11 (Lot's wife is a warning) ότι οἱ δίψυχοι καὶ οἱ διστάζοντες περὶ τῆς τοῦ Θεοῦ δυνάμεως εἰς κρίμα... γίνοιται, 23 (the Father bestows his favour on all that come to him) άπλη διανοία διο μη διψυχωμεν...πόρρω γενέσθω άφ' ήμων ή γραφη αυτη οπου λέγει Ταλαίπωροί 3 είσιν οἱ δίψυχοι, οἰ διστάζοντες την ψυχήν κ.τ.λ., Clem. ¹ See Taylor's Gospel in the Low, p. 336 foll.; he considers that St. James here quotes from Prov. xxi. 8.

² The phrase occurs also Eph. vi. 5, Col. iii. 22.

WII. make dr. δίψ. subject of $\lambda \eta \mu \psi \epsilon \tau ai$, but I prefer to take it with B (which puts a stop before $d\nu \eta \rho$), the Peshitto, Wiesinger, Huther, &c., in apposition to the subject of $\delta \epsilon \sigma \theta \omega$, like iii. 2 $\delta \nu \nu a \tau \delta s$ χαλιναγωγησαι after $\tau \epsilon \lambda \epsilon \iota \omega s$ απόν possible that the apposition is irregular, see note), iv. 12 $\delta \delta \nu \nu \alpha \mu \omega \omega s$ after κριτής. The other way of taking it seems to me to lack the energy of St. James, appealing less directly to the person addressed and weakening the force and rhythm of the following clause. The Vulg., followed by Schneck., Hofmann, Schegg, &c., makes ver. 8 an entire sentence, $\nu ir du \rho lex in constans est$; but, as Alford says, it is hardly possible that the writer could have introduced a hitherto unknown, or at any rate a very unusual word in this casual way; Alford himself makes it a new predicate to $\delta \alpha \tau \theta \rho$, $\epsilon \kappa$. 'he is a man with two minds,' but the construction is certainly easier if we take it in apposition to the subject: it will then sum up in one pregnant word the substance of the two preceding verses.

άκατάστατος.] Only here and below iii. 8 in N.T.: 'unsettled,' 'unstable' (cf. οὐκ ἔχουσι ρίζαν Mark iv. 17); once in LXX. Isa. liv. 11 ταπεινή καὶ ἀκατάστατος ('tossed with tempest,' A.V. and R.V.); Herm. Mand. 2 ἀκατάστατον δαιμόνιον: it is used by classical writers, e.g. Dem. F.L. 383 δ μεν δημός εστιν ασταθμητότατον πράγμα των πάντων καὶ άσυνθετώτατον, ὥσπερ ἐν θαλάσση κῦμα ἀκατάστατον, ὡς ἂν τύχη κινούμενον, where see Shilleto; the verb occurs Tob. i. 15 ai δδοὶ ἡκαταστάτησαν ('were disturbed') καὶ οὐκέτι ἡδυνάσθην πορευθήναι εἰς τὴν Μηδίαν, Herm. Mand. 5. 2. 7 ἀκαταστατεῖ ἐν πάση πράξει αὐτοῦ, id. Sim. 6. 3. 5 ἀκαταστατοῦντες ταις βουλαις...λέγουσιν έαυτοὺς μὴ εὐοδοῦσθαι ἐν ταις πράξεσιν αὐτῶν καὶ...αἰτιῶνται τὸν Κύριον. 'Ακαταστασία, 'unsettlement,' 'restlessness,' occurs iii. 16 (where A.V. and R.V. have 'confusion'). It is found also in 1 Cor. xiv. 33 opposed to $\epsilon i\rho \dot{\eta} r\eta$, and in pl. Luke xxi. 9. 2. Cor. vi. 5, xii. 20 (where A.V. and R.V. have 'tumults'), Herm. Mand. 6. 3. 4: Polybius uses it both of political disturbance and of individual character, see iv. 5. 8 την ακαταστασίαν καὶ μανίαν τοῦ μειρακίου.

έν πάσαις ταῖς ὁδοῖς.] 'In the whole course of his life': cf. below v. 20, Rom. iii. 16. It is a Hebraism for ἐν πᾶστι or ἄπαιτα. The same comparison of life to a journey is implied in the words πορεύομαι, περιπατεῖν: see Vorst Hebr. p. 194 foll.

9. $\kappa \alpha \nu \chi \dot{\alpha} \sigma \theta \omega$.] Repeats the note of $\pi \dot{\alpha} \sigma \alpha \nu \chi \alpha \rho \dot{\alpha} \nu$ ver. 2: it stands first in order to emphasize the opposition to $\delta u \psi \nu \chi \dot{\alpha} \omega$. Far from being thus undecided and unsettled, the Christian should exult in his profession. If in low estate, he should glory in the church, where all are brothers and there is no respect of persons; he should realize his own dignity as a member of Christ, a child of God, an heir of heaven: if rich, he should cease to pride himself on wealth or rank, and rejoice that he has learnt the emptiness of all worldly distinctions and been taught that they are only valuable when they are regarded as a trust to be used for the service of God and good of man. Cf. Philo Jos. M. 2, 61 ταπειròs εἶ ταῖς τέχαις: ἀλλὰ τὸ φρόνημα μὴ καταπιπτέτω. πάντα σοι κατὰ νοῦν χωρεί : μεταβολήν εὐλαβοῦ. Sirac. 10. 21 πλούσιος καὶ ἔνδοξος καὶ πτωχός, τὸ καύχημα αὐτῶν φόβος Κυρίου, Jer. ix. 23 μη καυχάσθω ὁ σοφὸς ἐν τῆ σοφία αὐτοῦ...καὶ μη καυχάσθω ὁ πλούσιος ἐν τῷ πλούτῳ αὐτοῦ, 'but let him that glorieth glory in this, that he understandeth and knoweth me...saith the Lord, Rom. i. 16, 1 Pet. iv. 16, 1 Cor. vii. 22 & &v Κυρίω κληθείς δούλος, ἀπελεύθερος Κυρίου ἐστίν ὁμοίως καὶ ὁ ἐλεύθερος κληθείς, δούλος έστι Χριστού, ib. vii. 29, Phil. iv. 12 οίδα ταπεινούσθαι, οίδα καὶ περισσεύειν εν παντὶ καὶ εν πάσιν μεμύημαι καὶ χορτάζεσθαι καὶ πεινάν, καὶ περισσείτειν καὶ ὑστερείσθαι. The word καυχ. is much used by St. Paul, generally in a good sense: the Christian's boast is in God (Rom. v. 11), in Christ (Rom. xv. 17, 1 Cor. i. 31, 2 Cor. x. 17, Gal. vi. 14, Phil. iii. 3 κανχώμενοι εν Χριστῷ Ἰησοῦ καὶ οὐκ εν σαρκὶ πεποιθότες), in the hope of salvation (Rom. v. 2): St. Paul glories in his converts (2 Cor. vii. 14, ix. 2, 3, 2 Thess. i. 4, Phil. ii. 16), in afflictions (Rom. v. 3), in infirmities (2 Cor. xii, 9): he apologises for boasting in self-justification (2 Cor. xi., xii.). There may be a wrong boasting in God and in the law (Rom. ii. 17, 23), a boasting of self-righteousness towards God (Rom. iii. 27, iv. 2, 1 Cor. i. 29, iv. 7), an actual boasting in sin (1 Cor. v. 6), or on the ground of mere carnal advantages (2 Cor. xi. 18, Gal. vi. 13). It is used below of blamable self-confidence (iv. 16).

ὁ ἀδελφὸς ὁ ταπεινός.] WH. bracket the former δ, which is omitted in B. This would leave no doubt that ἀδελφός was a general term applying to both πλούσιος and ταπεινός. Even with the article this is the natural way of taking it. The objections will be considered below. Ταπ. here refers to outward condition as in Luke i. 52 καθείλε δυναστάς ... τψωσε ταπεινούς, Rom. xii. 16 μὴ τὰ ὑψηλὰ φρονοῦντες ἀλλὰ τοῦς ταπεινοῦς συναπαγόμενοι, cf. below ii. 5; in iv. 6 ταπ. refers to the character.

10. ὁ δε πλούσιος ἐν τῆ ταπεινώσει αὐτοῦ.] 'Let the rich brother glory in his humiliation as a Christian': cf. Sir. 3. 18 ὄσφ μέγας εἶ τοσούτφ ταπεινου σεαυτόν καὶ εναντι Κυρίου ευρήσει χάριν, 1 Tim. vi. 17 charge them who are rich in this world μη ψηλοφρονείν μηδε ηλπικέναι έπι πλούτου άδηλότητι, Luke xvi. 15 τὸ ἐν ἀνθρώποις ὑψηλὸν βδέλυγμα ἐνώπιον τοῦ Θεοῦ, Matt. xviii. 4 οστις ταπεινώσει έαυτον...ούτος έσται ο μείζων εν τῆ βασιλείμ των ουρανών, ib. xxiii. 12, 2 Cor. xi. 7 έμαυτον ταπεινών ίνα ύμεις ύψώθητε, also below iv. 10, Philo M. 1. p. 577 ταπεινώθητι ύπὸ τὰς χείρας αὐτης (sc. of Sarah = virtue) καλην ταπείνωσιν, φρονήματος αλόγου καθαίρεσιν έχουσαν, Xen. R. Lac. 8. 2 έν τη Σπάρτη οι κράτιστοι...τῷ ταπεινοί είναι μεγαλύτουται. We might understand ταπ, with reference to the loss of position, the scorn which one who became a Christian would have to suffer from his unbelieving fellow-countrymen (1 Cor. iv. 10-13); but it seems better to refer it, like ivos above, to the intrinsic effect of Christianity in changing our view of life. As the despised poor learns self-respect, so the proud rich learns self-abasement, cf. Luke xxii. 26 ο ήγούματος ώς ο διακοτών. Alf., after Bede, Pott, Huther and others, distinguishes ὁ πλούσιος from ὁ ἀδελφός on the ground (1) that the rich in this epistle are always spoken of in terms of great severity (ii. 6, v.1 foll.);

(2) that παρελεύσεται and μαρανθήσεται are not appropriate if spoken of He therefore supplies $\kappa a v \chi \hat{a} \tau a i$, not $\kappa a v \chi \hat{a} \sigma \theta \omega$, after $\delta \pi \lambda o \hat{v}$ σιος, with the sense 'whereas the rich man glories in his debasement,' and illustrates it from Phil. iii. 19 ὧν ἡ δόξα ἐν τῆ αἰσχύνη αὐτῶν. Βατ ταπείνωous never bears this sense in the Hellenistic writers. It and its cognates are used either in a good sense morelly (as below iv. 6, 10), or of mere outward humiliation (as in Luke i. 48 ἐπέβλεψεν ἐπὶ τὴν ταπείνωσιν τῆς δούλης αὐτοῦ, Sir. 2.5 ἄνθρωποι λεκτοὶ δοκιμάζονται ἐν καμίνω ταπεινώσεως, ib. xi. 13, xx. 10, Psa. exix. 50, 67, 71, 1 Macc. iii. 51, 2 Sam. xvi. 12, Neh. ix. 9). In the next place such a change of mood in the verb to be supplied is extremely harsh, and I think Alf. stands alone in supposing Equally impossible is the supposition of Occumenius, Grotius and others that some such word as αἰσχυνέσθω οτ ταπεινούσθω should be supplied. However we understand πλούσιος, no interpretation is admissible which does not supply the imperative $\kappa a v \chi \acute{a} \sigma \theta \omega$. Bede, followed by Huther and Beyschlag, has attempted to reconcile this with the idea of πλούσιος, as an unbeliever, by giving it a sarcastic force, 'let the rich man, if he will, glory in his degradation.' It must be allowed that such bitterness of sarcasm is not impossible in the writer of ii. 19, iv. 4, v. 1-6; but could be so early in his letter, in cold blood so to speak, have thus anathematized the rich as a class, when we know from iv. 13-16 that some of those to whom he writes were wealthy traders? How could one who had known Nicodemus and Mary of Bethany, Joseph of Arimathaea and Barnabas, have thus denied to the rich the privilege of Christian membership? According to the correct interpretation all that he does is to repeat his Master's warning in Matt. vi. 19 foll., xvi. 26, Mark x. 24, Luke xii. 15-21, xvi. 9-31; so St. Paul 1 Cor. vii. 29-31, cf. Herm. Sim. ii. 4 foll.

ότι ώς άνθος χόρτου παρελεύσεται.] A quotation (given more fully in 1 Pet. i. 24) from Isa. xl. 6 πᾶσα σὰρξ χόρτος καὶ πᾶσα δόξα ἀνθρώπου ὡς ἄνθος χόρτον ἐξηράνθη ὁ χόρτος καὶ τὸ ἄνθος ἐξέπεσεν: cf. Psa. lxxxix. 6, ciii. 15. It is evident that this is not a special threat intended only for the rich, but a general truth applicable to all, though more likely to be kept out of sight by the rich than by others. 'Let him glory in that which the world holds to be humiliation, but which is indeed the commencement of everlasting glory, because he must soon pass away from earth and leave behind the riches in which he is now tempted to glory.' Pliny N.H. 21. 1 has the same comparison, Flores odoresque in diem gignit (natura) magna admonitione hominum, quae spectatissime floreant celerrime marcescere.

παρελεύσεται.] Used in this sense, as well in common, as in Hellenistic Greek: ef. Mark xiii. 31 δ οὐρανὸς καὶ ἡ γῆ παρελεύσεται. It is not necessary to understand a new subject πλοῦτος from πλούσιος, though it is possible that the equivalent phrase in the LXX. δόξα ἀνθρώπου may have been in the writer's mind; but the rich man as such, whether believer or unbeliever, must quickly disappear, and, like the flower, lose τὴν εὖπρέπεων τοῦ προσώπου.

11. ἀνέτειλεν γὰρ ὁ ἥλιος.] Gnomic agrist, as in the original Isa. xl. 7, and below ver. 24, cf. Winer, p. 347 note, Krueger, Gr. § 53. 10.

σὺν τῷ καύσωνι. It is questioned whether κ. here means 'heat' simply, or a special burning wind blowing from the eastern desert over Palestine and from the south over Egypt. It is used of wind in the following: Jonah iv. 8 έγένετο άμα τω άνατείλαι τον ήλιον καλ προσέταξεν ό Θεὸς πτείματι καίσωτι, Ezek. xvii. 10 (of a vine) σεχὶ ἄμα τῷ ἄψασθαι αὐτης ἄτεμον τὸν καύσωνα ξηρανθήσεται, on which Jerome says Austro flante qui Graece καύσων interpretatur, Ez. xix. 10, Hos. xii. 1, Jer. xviii. 17. Hos. xiii. 15 επάξει καύσωνα άνεμον Κύριος εκ της ερήμου επ' αὐτόν: and the destructive effect of the wind generally on vegetation is referred to Psa, ciii, 16, Gen, xli, 6, Virg. Ecl. ii, 58 floribus Austrum immisi, Prop. iv. 5, 59 vidi ego odorati victura rosaria Paesti sub matutino cocta jactere noto. There are however passages in which κ seems more naturally understood of heat, e.g. Luke xii. 55 (when ye see) νότον πνέοντα λέγετε ότι καύσων έσται, Matt. xx. 12 ίσους τοις βαστάσασι τὸ βάρος της ημέρας και τον καύσωνα, Sirac. 18. 15 οὐχὶ καύσωνα ἀναπαύσει δρόσος, and Schegg is disposed to take κ. always in this sense, except where it is accompanied by $\tilde{a}r\epsilon\mu\sigma$ or $\pi r\epsilon \hat{v}\mu\alpha$. I think that the addition of the article (Corbey 'cum aestu suo,' Schegg' its heat,' but in Hellenistic Greek we should have expected $\tau \hat{\varphi} \kappa$. $a \hat{v} \tau o \hat{v}$) and the resemblance to Jonah iv. 8 are in favour of the interpretation 'wind' here; so Bp. Middleton On the Article p. 422. Compare also Wetzstein's note on Job xxvii, 21 in Delitzsch's ed.: 'The name Sirocco, by which the E. wind is known, means literally der von Sonnenaufgang her wehende: it is not uncommon in spring, when it withers up all the young vegetation.' Other passages where the meaning of the word is doubtful are Sir. xxxi. 16, xliii. 22, Isa. xlix. 10, Judith viii. 3, Athenaeus iii. 2 καύσωνος ώρα ψυκτικώτατοι μελιλώτινοι στέφανοι. For the metaphor cf. Job xxvii. 21 ἀναλήψεται δε αὐτὸν (the rich) καύσων καὶ ἀπελεύσεται, ib. xxiv. 24 πολλούς εκάκωσε το ύψωμα αὐτοῦ, εμαράνθη δε ώσπερ μολόχη εν καύματι η ωσπερ στάχυς ἀπὸ καλάμης αὐτόματος ἀποπεσών, Psa. xxxvii. 2, xeii. 7.

χόρτον. Properly = hortus 'inclosure,' then used for a paddock, then for grass and fodder, from whence comes the use of χορτάζομαι = edo ii. 16. Here we may understand it loosely of wild flowers mixed

έξέπεσε.] Used of flowers falling from the calyx in Isa. xl. 6, xxviii. 1, 4, Job xiv. 2, xv. 33: not found in this sense in classical writers.

εὐπρέπεια τοῦ προσώπου αὐτοῦ.] 'Grace of its countenance.' εἰπ. only here in N.T. In Sir. 24, 14 we have εὐπρεπής ἐλαία, Psa. 1, 2 ἐκ Σιὸν ἢ εὐπρέπεια τῆς ὁραιότητος αὐτοῦ, Psa. xeii, I εὐπρέπειαν ἐνεδύσατο, Aeschin. p. 18 τῆν τοῦ σώματος εὐπρέπειαν, Ps. Demosth. 1402, 1404. For thought cf. Matt. vi. 28 foll. Vorst Hell. Lex. p. 342 foll. regards προσ. as a Hebraistic pleonasm: others more correctly take it in the general sense of outward appearance, like facies.

ό πλούσιος.] The rich man qua rich, with no special reference to the

èν ταῖς πορέ(αις.] It seems best to take this here in the literal sense, as in the only other passage in which it occurs in the N.T. (Luke xiii. 22), referring to the journeyings and voyages of the merchants: cf. below iv. 13 foll. For the redundant αὐτοῦ cf. Winer, p. 179.

μαρανθήσεται.] Used on account of preceding simile (here only in N.T.): cf. Philo M. 2. p. 258 μήτ' ἐπὶ πλούτω, μήτ' ἐπὶ δόξη, μήθ' ἡγεμονία...σεμνυτθῆς, λογισάμενος ὅτι...ὀξεῖαν ἔχει τὴν μεταβολὴν μαραινόμενα τρόπον τινὰ πρὶν ἀνθῆσαι βεβαίως, Plut. Qu. Conv. 674 Α ἀνθρώπον ἐκλιπόντος καὶ μαραινομένον, Herm. Vis. iii. 11. 2, Sim. ix. 23. 2.

12. μακάριος ἀνήρ.] See n. on ver. 8. The same phrase occurs in Rom. iv. 8 (a quotation from Psa. xxxii. 2); Psa. i. 1, xxxiv. 8, xl. 4, lxxxiv. 5; Prov. xxviii. 14, &c. See below v. 11. The absence of the article shows that ἀνήρ is part of the predicate. In Psa. xciv. 12 and Jer. xvii. 7 we have the more natural construction μακάριος (εὐλογημένος) ὁ ἄνθρωπος. For the classical way of expressing a similar sentiment cf. Pind. Ol. v. 61 μακάριος ὃς ἔχεις λόγων φερτάτων μναμῆον, Soph. Ant. 578 εὐδαίμονες οἶσι κακῶν ἄγενστος αἰών. The pleonastic ἀνήρ is often found, as below iii. 2 τέλειος ἀνήρ, with άμαρτωλός Luke v. 8, προφήτης ib. xxiv. 19, φονεύς Acts iii. 14. This blessing is referred to below v. 11.

δς ὑπομένει πειρασμόν.] So we have μακ. δς φάγεται Luke xiv. 15, but more commonly the subject is expressed by the participle, as Apoc. i. 3 μακάριος δ ἀταγινώσκων. This verse limits the general exhortation of ver. 2 to rejoice in trial. It is only he who endures that is blessed. There may be another result of trial, as is shown in the following verses. Cf. Herm. Vis. ii. 2, 7 μακάριοι ὑμεῖς ὅσοι ὑπομένετε τὴν θλύψν κ.τ.λ.

τον στέφανον. The word is used (1) for the wreath of victory in the games (1 Cor. ix. 25, 2 Tim. ii. 5); (2) as a festal ornament (Prov. i. 9, iv. 9, Cant. iii. 11, Herm. Sim. viii. 2, Isa. xxviii. 1, Wisd. ii. 8 στεψώμεθα ρόδων κάλυξι πρίν η μαρανθήναι, Judith xv. 13 έστεφανώσαντο τὴν ἐλαίαν); (3) as a public honour granted for distinguished service or private worth, as a golden crown was granted to Demosthenes (see his speech on the subject) and Zeno (Diog. L. vii. 10 στεφανωσαι χρυσώ στεφάνω άρετης ένεκα καὶ σωφροσύνης): references to these are very common in inscriptions; (4) as a symbol of royal or priestly dignity. The last is denied by Trench (N.T. Syn. p. 90, στέφανος 'is never, any more than corona in Latin, the emblem of royalty'), but see 2 Sam. xii. 30 'David took their king's crown (στέφαιοι) from off his head, the weight of which was a talent of gold with the precious stones, Psa. xxi. 1 foll. 'the king shall joy in thy strength...thou settest a crown (στέφανον) of pure gold on his head, Zech. vi. 11 λήψη ἀργύριον καὶ χρυσίον καὶ ποιήσεις στεφάνους καὶ ἐπιθήσεις ἐπὶ τὴν κεφαλὴν Ἰησοῦ τοῦ ἱερέως τοῦ μεγάλου, Αρος. iv. 4 ἐπὶ τοὺς θρόνους είδον είκοσι τέσσαρας πρεσβυτέρους καθημένους...καὶ ἐπὶ τὰς κεφαλὰς αὐτῶν στεφάνους χρυσούς: in ch. v. 10 the same elders praise the Lamb for making kings and priests to God out of every nation: ib. xiv. 14 one like the Son of Man sat on the cloud έχων ἐπὶ τῆς κεφαλῆς αὐτοῦ στέφανον χρυσοῦν: lastly, in the mocking of our Lord (Matt. xxvii. 29) there surely can be no doubt that the στέφανος and κάλαμος stand for the erown and sceptre. Virgil speaks of regni coronam, Aen. 8, 505. Tronch however is right in saying that διάδημα is more commonly used in this sense, e.g. Isa. lxii. 3 έση στέφανος κάλλους έν χειρί Κυρίου καὶ διάδημα βασιλείας εν χειρί Θεού σου. The question then is, from which of these uses is the metaphor here derived. Comparing ii. 5, where what is here said of the crown is repeated of the kingdom, it would seem natural to take the word as implying sovereignty, and this would agree with Wisd. v. 16 δίκαιοι λήψονται το βασίλειον της εθπρεπείας καὶ το διάδημα τοῦ κάλλους ἐκ χειρὸς Κυρίου, ib. iii. 8, Dan. vii. 27 the kingdom was given to the saints of the Most High,' Apoc. i. 6, 1 Pet. ii. 9 vues Βασίλειον ίεράτευμα, Rom. v. 17 οί την περισσείαν της χάριτος λαμβάνοντες έν ζωή βασιλείσουση, Luke xii. 32 'it is my Father's good pleasure to give you the kingdom, ib. xxii. 28 'I appoint unto you a kingdom, and we shall sit on thrones judging the twelve tribes of Israel,' 2 Tim. ii. 12 εἰ ἐπομένομεν καὶ συμβασιλεύσομεν, which reminds one of Zech. vi. 14 δ στέφονος έσται τοις επομένουσι, following immediately after κατάρξει έπὶ τοῦ θρόνου αὐτοῦ; so the Stoic paradox supiens rex. The nearest parallels to our passage are Apoc. ii. 10 γίνου πιστὸς ἄχρι θανάτου καὶ δώσω σοι τον στέφανον της ζωής, 2 Tim. iv. 8 αποκείται μοι ο της δικαιοσύτης στέφανος δ άποδώσει μοι δ Κύριος έν έκείνη τῆ ἡμέρα...καὶ πασι τοῖς ηγαπηκώτε την επεφάνειαν αντού, 1 Pet. v. 4 φανερωθέντος του άρχιποιμένος κομιείσθε τὸν ἀμαράντινον τῆς δόξης στέφονον. The use of the article in all these seems to imply some well-known saying or a very definite expectation. On the other hand, the idea of a kingly crown seems less appropriate in them than that of a crown of merit or victory. Rabbins talk of three crowns (Pirke Aboth iv. 19). Probably the metaphorical use would be coloured by all the literal uses. Other instances are Sir. 1, 16, vi. 30, xv. 6, Acta Matt. Tisch. p. 169 éyyés έστιν της επομονής σου ο στέφανος, Philo Legg. All. M. p. 86 σπούδασον στεφανωθήναι κατά τής τους άλλους άπαντας νικώσης ήδονής καλον καὶ εὐκλεά στέφανον δη οδδεμία πανήγυρις άνθρώπων έχώρησε.

τῆς ζωῆς.] Gen. of definition, as in the parallels quoted in the last n.: the crown which consists in life eternal. Cf. I John ii. 25 αἔτη ἐστὰν ἡ ἐπαγγελάα ἡν αὐτὸς ἐπηγγείλατο ἑμᾶν, τὴν ζωὴν τὴν αἰόναον, I Pet. iii. 7. This is contrasted with the fading away of earthly prosperity. Zeller and Hilgenfeld (Ztschr. f. wiss. Theol. 1873, p. 93 and p. 10) consider that the expression is borrowed from Apoc. ii. 10, this being the promise referred to below. [Wisdom promises a crown and life, Prov.

īv. 9, iii, 18, Aboth vi. - C.T.]

δν ἐπηγγείλατο τοῖς ἀγαπῶσιν ἀὐτόν.] Κύριος οι Θεός is inserted in some MSS, but in AB Sin, &c. the subject is omitted, as in Heb. iv. 3 καθῶς εἴρηκεν, and often in introducing a quotation; cf. iv. 6, Eph. iv. 8, Gal. iii. 16, 1 Cor. vi. 16, Heb. x. 5, and Winer p. 735. Putting on one side Apoc. ii. 10, which was probably written subsequently to this epistle, we do not find the precise words τὸν στέφανον τῆς ζωῆς in any particular passage of the Bible. It is a question therefore whether they constitute an unwritten word, a record of oral teaching, such as we have in Acts xx. 35, and of which others have been preserved by early Christian writers; ¹ or whether it is an instance of

They are collected in Resch's Agrapha. Leipzig. 1889. Besides this verse (on which he compares 18a, xxii, 17–21 and Acta Philippi, p. 147 T.) he includes i. 17 $\pi \tilde{a} \sigma a - \delta \tilde{a} \sigma s - \tilde{a} \gamma \alpha \theta \tilde{b}$, iv. 5 $\pi \rho \tilde{b} s - \phi \theta \tilde{a} v \rho v - \tilde{\epsilon} \pi \iota \pi \sigma \theta \tilde{\epsilon} \tilde{\epsilon}$, iv. 17 $\tilde{\epsilon} \tilde{\iota} \delta \tilde{b} \tilde{\iota} \tau - \tilde{b} \tilde{v} v \kappa \alpha \lambda \tilde{b} v - \pi \sigma \iota \tilde{\epsilon} \tilde{v} v$, v. 20 loose quotation, representing some of the verses cited above on $\sigma\tau\epsilon\phi aros$, such as we find below iv. 5. For the latter view it may be said that it is apparently the same quotation which is repeated in different words below ii. 5. For the former, that the undoubted references to the Sermon on the Mount which occur in this epistle are in all probability actual reminiscences of spoken words, not copied from the written Gospel; and secondly, that it seems easier to explain the coincidence between St. James and the writer of the Apocalypse on this than on any other supposition. Promises to those that love God are found in Exod. xx. 6, Deut. vii. 9, ib. xxx. 16, 20, Jud. v. 30, Psa. v. 11, 2 Tim. iv. 8, 1 Cor. ii. 9 (a quotation from Isa. lxiv. 4, where however the LXX, has $\tau o \hat{s} \delta \pi o \mu \acute{e} rov \sigma w \ \acute{e} \lambda \epsilon o r$ for St. Paul's $\tau o \hat{s} \delta \gamma \mu \pi \acute{o} \sigma w \ a v \tau \acute{o} r$).

άπὸ Θεοῦ πειράζομαι.] 'Από expresses the remoter, as contrasted with the nearer cause expressed by $\delta\pi\delta$ (Winer, p. 463 foll.). Eve was the immediate cause of Adam's transgression, but Adam tried to make God the ultimate cause in the words 'whom thou gavest to be with me.' So the fault is often laid on hereditary disjosition, on unfavourable circumstances, on sudden and overpowering $\pi \epsilon i \rho a \sigma \mu \delta s$. The same plea is noticed in both Jewish and heathen writers: cf. Prov. xix. 3 ἀφροσύνη ἀνδρὸς λυμαίνεται τὰς ὁδοὺς αὐτοῦ, τὸν δὲ Θεὸν αἰτιαται τῆ καρδία αὐτοῦ, Sir. xv. 11-20 μη είπης ὅτι διὰ Κύριον ἀπέστην ὰ γὰρ ἐμίσησεν οὐ πουήσεις· μη είπης ότι αὐτός με ἐπλάνησεν...πῶν βδέλυγμα ἐμίσησεν ὁ Κύριος, καὶ οὐκ ἔστιν ἀγαπητὸν τοῖς φοβουμένοις αὐτὸν αὐτὸς ἐξ ἀρχῆς ἐποίησεν ἄνθρωπον καὶ ἀφήκεν αὐτὸν ἐν χειρὶ διαβουλίου οὐτοῦ...ἔναντι ἀνθρώπων ἡ ζωή καὶ ὁ θάνατος κ.τ. λ., Rom. ix. 19 τί ἔτι μέμφεται ; τῷ γὰρ βουλήματι αὐτοῦ τίς ἀνθέστηκε ; Clem. ἀπείραστός έστι κακών.] 'Untemptable of evil': not found elsewhere in N.T. or LNX.1 The verb πειράζω, from which it is formed, is not used by the Attic writers. It could not be formed from παράω, as the perf. and aor, passive are without the σ (πεπείραμαι, ἐπειράθην), but πειράζω being sometimes used in the sense to attempt' (e.g. Acts xvi. 7 ἐπείραζον κατά τὴν Βιθυνίαν πορεύεσθαι), ἀπείραστος might be equivalent to ἀπείρατος from πειράω. The usual force of the verbal in -τος is seen in ἀδέκαστος 'unbribable,' ἀτήκεστος 'incurable,' ἀβίωτος (βίος) 'intolerable, ἀμετάβλητος unchangeable, ἄρρηκτος infrangible, Many of these verbals have the force of a perfect part, pass, (intentatus as well as intentabilis), and even an active force, like απταιστος, άφύλακτος: cf. Lat. penetrabilis and Winer, p. 120. Hence a wide difference between commentators as to the force of ἀπείραστος here. Beyschlag says 'bei den Kirchenvätern wird Gott öfters einfach der Unversuchbare genannt,' but the only instances cited are Pseudo-Ignatius De Baptismo ad Philipp.2 \$ 11 (Lightfoot vol. 3 p. 783) πως πειράζεις τον ἀπείραστον; and Photius c. Manichaeos iv. p. 25 (Migne Patrol. Gr. cii. col. 234) τοις Σαδδουκαίοις πειράζειν επιχειρήσασι τον απείραστον (written in the 9th cent.). The former is quoted in connexion with Matt. iv. 7, which leaves no doubt as to the sense in which ἀπείραστος is used. It is used in the same sense by Clem. Al. Strom. vii. p. 858 P. αὐστηρὸς οὐκ εἰς τὸ ἀδιάφθορον μόνον, ἀλλὰ καὶ εἰς τὸ ἀπείραυτον οὐδαμῆ γὰρ ἐνδόσιμον οὐδὲ ἁλώσιμον ἡδονῆ τε καὶ λύπη τὴν ψυχὴν παρίστησιν, ib. p. 874 P. ἐκεῖνος ἄνδρας νικᾳ ὁ γάμφ καὶ παιδοποιία... έγγυμυησάμενος...πάσης κατεξανιστάμενος πείρας της δια τέκνων και γυναικός ...τῷ δὲ ἀοίκῳ τὰ πολλὰ εἶναι συμβέβηκεν ἀπειράστω. In Const. Apost. ii. 8 λέγει ή γραφή ἀνηρ ἀδόκιμος ἀπείραστος παρὰ Θεῷ (which must apparently mean 'one who is without trial is unapproved in the sight of God'3) there is probably an allusion to our ver. 12 and to Heb. xii. 8. It is used in a different sense in Jos. B.J. vii. 8 οἱ σικάριοι τῆς παρανομίας ήρξαντο μήτε λόγον άρρητον είς "βριν μήτ' έργον απείραστον (facinus intentatum) είς ὅλεθρον παραλείποντες. In this sense the form ἀπείρατος (from παράω) is more common, e.g. Demosth. 310, οἔτ' ἀπόνοια Σωσικλέους οἴτε συκοφαιτία Φιλοκράτους...οἴτ αλλο οὐδεν ἀπείρατον ἢν τούτοις κατ εμού, Demad. p. 180 πρότερον ἀπείρατος ὧν πολεμίας σάλπιγγος ('having had no experience of'), Diod. i. 1 ή διὰ της ιστορίας περιγινομένη σύνεσις τῶν άλλοτρίων ἀποτευγμάτων... ἀπείρατον κακών έχει διδασκαλίαν, Plut. Mor. p. 119 F (of early death) εὐποτμότερος διὰ τοῦτο καὶ κακῶν ἀπείρατός ἐστιν, and in Jos. J. B. iii. 7. 32 έμειναν δε οὐδε Σαμαρείς ἀπείρατοι συμφορών, ib. ν. 9. 3 γινώσκειν την Υωμαίων Ισχύν άνυπόστατον, καὶ τὸ δουλεύειν τούτοις

In accordance with the use of $\frac{\partial \pi}{\partial t} = \frac{\partial \pi}{\partial t} = \frac{\partial \pi}{\partial t}$ Alford translates 'universed in things evil'; so Hofmann ('Bösem fremd oder vom Uebeln unbetroffen, auf keinem Fall aber von Bösem oder zu Bösem unversucht oder unversuchbar'), Brückner, Erdmann. Others (Vulg. Aeth. Luther) give it an active sense, 'God is not one who tempts to evil.' interpretation would make the next clause (πειράζει δέ) mere tautology, and it has now no defenders. It seems to me that the case is equally strong against the former interpretation. The meaning of the rare word ἀπείραστος must be determined from the general force of πειράζω in the N.T., and especially from the following clause, which is evidently intended to be its exact correlative in the active voice $(a\pi\epsilon i\rho a\sigma$ τος: πειράζει δὲ αὐτός). The relation of the two clauses would have been more clearly marked if $\mu \grave{\epsilon} \nu$ had been added after $\mathring{a}\pi$.: compare for its omission Jelf § 767, and below ii. 2, 11. Further it is impossible to read this sentence without being reminded of very similar phrases used about God by Philo and other post-Aristotelian philosophers, cf. Philo Μ. 1. p. 154 God is ἀκοινώνητος κακῶν, ib. 563 (ὁ λόγος) ἀμέτοχος καὶ άπαράδεκτος παντός είναι πέφυκεν άμαρτήματος, ib. M. 2. p. 280 God is μόνος εὐδαίμων καὶ μακάριος, πάντων μὲν ἀμέτοχος κακῶν, πλήρης δὲ ἀγαθῶν τελείων, μᾶλλον δὲ αὐτὸς ὢν τὸ ἀγαθόν, δς οὐρανῷ καὶ γῆ τὰ κατὰ μέρος ωμβρισεν άγαθά, Plut. Mor. 1102 F πάντων πατηρ καλων ὁ Θεός έστιν καὶ φαῦλον οὐδὲν ποιεῖν αὐτῷ θέμις, ὥσπερ οὐδὲ πάσχειν κ.τ.λ., Μ. Ant. 6. 1 οὐδεμίαν ἐν ἑαυτῷ αἰτίαν ἔχει τοῦ κακοποιεῖν κακίαν γὰρ οὐκ ἔχει, οὐδέ τι κακῶς ποιεί, see Gataker's note there and on ii. 11, Sext. Emp. Math. ix. 91 τὸ τέλειον καὶ ἄριστον...παντὸς κακοῦ ἀναπόδεκτον, Seneca Ira 2. 27 di nec volunt obesse nec possunt. Natura enim mitis et placida est, tam remota ab aliena injuria quam a sua; ib. Epist. 95. 49 nec accipere injuriam queunt nec facere: laedere enim laedique conjunctum est: summa illa ac pulcherrima omnium natura quos periculo exemit ne periculosos quidem fecit. The original source seems to be the maxim of Epicurus, Diog. L. χ. 138 τὸ μακάριον καὶ ἄφθαρτον οὕτε αὐτὸ πράγματα ἔχει οὕτε ἄλλω παρέχει, which is compared here by Occumenius; see my note on Cic. N.D. i. 45. For the gen. κακῶν, which is perhaps more easily explained as meaning 'to evil' than 'by evil,' see Xen. Cyrop. iii. 3. 55 ἀπαίδευτος ἀρετῆς, Winer, p. 242, who compares 2 Pet. ii. 14 καρδίαν γεγυμνασμένην πλεονεξίας, Soph. Ant. 848 ἄκλαυτος φίλων. I think these are best classed under the head of 'Genitive of the Sphere,' an extension of the Inclusive ('Partitive') genitive, 'untemptable in regard of evil things,' just as it might be said of one who was wholly evil that he was ἀπείραστος ἀγαθῶν. We have still to consider an objection drawn from the context: 'there is no question here of God being tempted, but of God tempting,' Alf. This is sufficiently met by the passages cited above from Philo, Plutarch, and Antoninus: God is incapable of tempting others to evil, because He is Himself absolutely unsusceptible

to evil, i.e. our belief in God's own character, His perfect purity and holiness, makes it in possible for us to suppose that it is from Him

πειράζει δὲ αὐτὸς οὐδένα.] The δὲ with αὐτός contains an opposition to dπείραστος: 'so far from himself tempting others to evil, which would imply a delight in evil, he is by his own nature incapable of being even solicited to evil.' For the difficulties connected with this subject see comment on Temptation below.

14. εκαστος δε πειράζεται ύπο της ίδιας επιθυμίας.] Wetst. quotes Menachoth f. 99. b (slightly shortened) caro et sanguis seducit a viis vitae ad vias mortis: Dens a viis mortis ad vias vitae. We may compare the famous words of Plato αἰτία ἐλομένου Θεὸς ἀναίτιος Rep. x. 617; also Phaedr. 238 (ἐπιθυμίας ἀλόγως έλκούσης ἐπὶ ήδονὰς και ἀρξάσης) this tyranny of lust was called εβρις, Cleanthes (Stob. Ecl. i. 2. 12) οὐδέ τι γίγνεται ἔργον ἐπὶ χθονὶ σοῦ δίχα, δαῖμον, πλην ὁπόσα ῥέζουσι κακοί σφετέρησιν ἀνοίαις...αὐτοὶ δ' αὖθ' ὁρμῶσιν ἄνευ καλοῦ ἄλλος ἐπ' ἄλλα κ.τ.λ., Chrysippus ap. Gell. 6, 2, 12; above all the discussion on the voluntary nature of virtue and vice in Arist. Eth. iii. 5. See also Philo M. 2. p. 349 τὸ ἀψευδῶς ἂν λεχθὲν ἀρχέκακον πάθος ἐστὶν ἐπιθυμία, ib. 208 άδικημάτων πηγή ἐπιθυμία ἀφ' ής ρέουσιν αι παρανομώταται πράξεις, ib. M. 2. p. 204 (in contrast with other affections which may be deemed involuntary) μόνη ἐπιθυμία τὴν ἀρχὴν ἐξ ἡμῶν λαμβάνει καὶ ἐστὶν ἑκούσιος. It is these ἐπιθυμίαι σαρκός, as they are frequently called, which constitute 'the law in our members' (Rom. vii. 23). St. James describes them below (iv. 1) as ήδοιαι 'warring in our members.' As ἐπιθυμία is here personified, there is no question about the use of $i\pi \delta$, on which see below iii. 4 n. For ιδίας cf. 2 Tim. iv. 3, 2 Pet. iii. 2, Jude 18, 19.

έξελκόμενος και δελεαζόμενος.] Abstractus a recto itinere et illectus in malum, Bede. $\Delta \epsilon \lambda \epsilon a \rho$ and its cognates (used first of the arts of the hunter and then of those of the harlot) are often found in this connexion, see 2 Pet. ii. 14, 18, Philo M. 1, p. 604 ἐπιθυμιῶν δελέασιν άγκιστρεύσασθαι, pp. 265-267, ib. It is often found combined with έλκω or its cognates: Philo M. 2. p. 474 τὸ σύνηθες ὁλκὸν καὶ δελεάσαι δυνατώτατον, ib. M. 1. p. 316 εν γὰρ οὐδὲν ἔστιν ὃ μὴ πρὸς ἡδονῆς δελεασθὲν εἴλκυσται, ib. M. 2. p. 61 αισθησις δελεαζομένη θεάμασι...συνεφέλκεται καὶ τὴν ὅλην ψυχήν, ib. Μ. 1. p. 512 ἐπιθυμία δλκὸν ἔχουσα δύναμιν τὸ ποθούμενον διώκειν ἀναγκάζει, ib. p. 238 ήδοιτης δλκοῦ δελέαστρα, Epiet. frag. 112 πάσης κακίας οἶόν τι δέλεαρ ήδονή προβληθεῖσα εὐκόλως τὰς λιχνοτέρας ψυχὰς έπὶ τὸ ἄγκιστρον τῆς ἀπωλείας ἐφέλκεται, Plut. Mor. 1093 C (the pleasures of geometry) δριμώ καὶ ποικίλον έχουσαι τὸ δέλεαρ οὐδενὸς τῶν ἀγωγίμων άποδέουσιν, έλκουσαι καθάπερ ζυγξι τοις διαγράμμασιν, ib. 547 C. The relation between the two words has been wrongly illustrated from Herod. ii. 70 έπεὰν νῶτον ὑὸς δελεάση περὶ ἄγκιστρον...ὁ κροκόδειλος ἐντυχὼν τῷ νώτῳ καταπίνει, οἱ δὲ ἔλκουσιν ἐπεὰν δὲ ἐξελκυσ $\theta\hat{\eta}$ ἐς γ $\hat{\eta}$ ν κ.τ.λ. This would make a ἔστερον πρότερον in our text, where the drawing is previous to the actual catching at the particular bait. Heisen cites a number of lines of Oppian in which ξλκω and its compounds are used, as here, of the first drawing of the fish out from its original retreat, e.g. iii. 316 the bait ἐφέλκεται ἰχθύας εἴσω, iv. 359; cf. Xen. Cyrop. viii. 1. 32 εγκράτειαν οίτω μάλιστ' αν φετο ασκείσθαι εί αὐτὸς επιδεικνύοι έαυτὸν μη ύπο των παραυτίκα ήδονων έλκόμενον ἀπο των ἀγαθων, ib. Mem. iii. 11. 18. In like manner the first effect of $\epsilon \pi i \theta v \mu i a$ is to draw the man out of his original repose, the second to allure him to a definite bait. Heisen illustrates this from the temptation of Eve, first moved from her secure trust in God by the words of the tempter (Gen. iii. 1-5), then attracted by the fruit itself (v. 6).1 Another way of distinguishing between the two words is to suppose that ἐξέλκω implies the violence, δελ. the charm of passion, as in Philo M. 2, p. 470 πρὸς ἐπιθυμίας έλαύνεται η ύφ' ήδονης δελεάζεται, 'driven by passion or solicited by pleasure, but I prefer the former explanation.

15. συλλαβοῦσα τίκτει άμαρτίαν.] For the metaphor cf. Psa. vii. 14 ώδίνησεν άδικίαν, συνέλαβε πόνον καὶ έτεκεν άνομίαν, Philo M. 1. 40 οἶα έταιρὶς καὶ μάχλος οὖσα ήδοινη γλίχεται τυχεῖν έραστοῦ, ib. 149 ὅταν ὁ ἐν ἡμῖν νοῦς - κεκλήσθω δὲ 'Αδάμ - ἐντυχων αἰσθήσει - καλείται δὲ Εἴα - συνουσίας όρεχθεὶς πλησιάση, ἥδε συλλαμβάνει...ἐγκύμων τε γίνεται καὶ εὐθυς ὧδίνει καὶ τίκτει κακῶν ψυχῆς τὸ μέγιστον, οἴησιν, ib. 183 ώσπερ ταῖς γυναιξὶ πρὸς ζώων γένεσιν οἰκειότατον μέρος ή φύσις έδωκε μήτραν, οὕτω πρὸς γένεσιν πραγμάτων ωρισεν εν ψυχή δύναμιν, δι' ής κυοφορεί καὶ ωδίνει καὶ ἀποτίκτει πολλά διάνοια των δε άποκυσμένων νοημάτων τὰ μεν άρρενα, τὰ δε θηλέα, Justin M. Trypho 327 C παρθένος οὖσα Εἴα τὸν λόγον τὸν ἀπὸ τοῦ ὄφεος συλλαβοῦσα παρακοὴν καὶ θάνατον ἔτεκε, and in classical writers Theognis 153 τίκτει γὰρ κόρος "βριν, and Aesch. Ag. 727 foll. Sin is the result of the surrender of the will to the soliciting of ἐπιθυμία instead of the guidance of reason. In itself, ἐπιθυμία may be natural and innocent: it is when the man resolves to gratify it against what he feels to be the higher law of duty, that he becomes guilty of sin even before he carries out his resolve in act.

ή δὲ ἁμαρτία ἀποτελεσθεῖσα ἀποκυεῖ θάνατον.] ή δὲ ἁμαρτία takes up the preceding ἁμαρτίαν as ἡ δὲ ὑπομονή takes up ὑπομονήν in v. 4. Sin when full-grown, when it has become a fixed habit determining the character of the man, brings forth death. Cf. below ii. 22 ἐκ τῶν ἔργων ἡ πίστις ἐτελειώθη, and τέλειος above v. 4, Philo M. 1. p. 94 τῆς κακίας ἡ μὲν ἐν σχέσει ἡ δὲ ἐν κινήσει θεωρεῖται νεύει δὲ πρὸς τὰς τῶν ἀποτελεσμάτων έκπληρώσεις ή ἐν τῷ κινεῖσθαι διὸ καὶ χείρων, ib. 74 sensation (αἴσθησις) itself is passive, it becomes active when the reason (νοῦς) attaches itself to it, then you may see its old potential existence (δίναμιν καθ' ἔξιν ἢρεμοῦσαν) changed into an ἀποτέλεσμα and ἐνέργειαν, Philo M. 1. p. 211 (the thought of murder constitutes guilt) τῆς γνώμης ἴσον τῷ τελείω δυναμένης. ἔως μὲν γὰρ τὰ αἰσχρὰ μόνον ἐννοοῦμεν κατὰ ψιλὴν τοῦ νοῦ ψαιντασίαν, τότε τῆς διανοίας ἐσμὲν ὕποχοι δύναται γὰρ καὶ ἀκουσίως ἡ ψυχὴ τρέπεσθαι ὅταν δὲ προσγένηται τοῖς βουλευθεῖσιν ἡ πρᾶξις, ὑπαίτιον γίνεται καὶ τὸ βουλεύσασθαι τὸ γὰρ ἑκουσίως διαμαρτάνειν ταύτη μάλιστα διαγνωρίζεται, Hermas Mand. iv. 2 ἡ ἐνθύμησις αὕτη Θεοῦ δούλῳ ἀμαρτία μεγάλη: ἐὰν δὲ τις ἐργάσηται τὸ ἔργον τὸ ποιγρὸν τοῦτο, θάνατον ἑαυτῷ κατεργάζεται, Arist. φανερωτέρας έν αὐτοῖς.

The verb $\kappa \dot{\nu} \omega$ or $\kappa \dot{\nu} \dot{\epsilon} \omega$, in the sense of to be or to become pregnant, is common in older Greek, e.g. Il. ψ. 266 κυέουσων, Plato Theaet, 151 B (in reference to the Socratic μαιευτική) ὑποπτεύων σε ωδίνειν τι κυοιντα ένδον. The agrist of the shorter form is used transitively (meaning 'to impregnate') in Aesch. fr. 38 ομβρος έκυσε yalar, and in the middle (meaning 'to conceive') Hes. Theog. 405. Hence Hermann wished to limit the use of κύω to the male, κυέω to the female, but Lobeck (Aj. p. 182 foll., Paral. p. 556) shows that this distinction is not borne out by MSS, or grammarians. Eustathius even states the opposite κύειν τὸ κατὰ γαστρὸς ἔχειν, κυῶ δὲ τὸ γεννῶ, ὅθεν οἱ κυήτορες, καὶ ἐκύει ήγουν ἐγέννησε (p. 1548. 20, cited by Lob. Aj. 182). The compound is only found here and below, ver. 18, in N.T. It is used metaphorically in 4 Macc. 15. 14 & μόνη γυνη την εὐσέβειαν δλόκληρον ἀποκυήσασα, 'having given birth to piety in perfection.' It is common in Philo, Plutarch and the later authors generally. For the force of ἀπό (denoting cessation) cf. ἀπαλγέω, ἀπελπίζω, ἀποπονέω. thought cf. Rom. vi. 21-23, viii. 6, Matt. vii. 13-14, where the parallel between the two ways leading to death and life (the δύο δδοί of the Didaché and of Barnabas, 18, 1) is similarly brought out. The issue of sin is seen most plainly in sins of the body leading to bodily disease, but also in the deterioration of mind and character which accompanies every kind of sin, till the man is said to be νεκρὸς τοῖς παραπτώμασιν (Eph. ii. 1).

16. μἡ πλανᾶσθε ἀδελφοί μου.] 'Be not mistaken: not temptation but all that is good comes from God.' Cf. Matt. xxii. 29 πλανᾶσθε μὴ εἰδότες τὰς γραφάς. Luke xxi. 8 βλέπετε μὴ πλανηθῆτε. St. Paul uses the phrase μὴ πλανᾶσθε, 1 Cor. vi. 9, 15. 33, Gal. vi. 7. Here its earnestness is softened by the addition ἀδελφοί as in Ignat. Philad. 3, Eph. 16.

17. πάσα δόσις ἀγαθὴ καὶ πὰν δώρημα τέλειον.] 'All good giving and every perfect gift' (descend from Him who gives to all liberally). The stress is laid on ἀγαθή and τέλειον. Beyschlag and Erdmann with others have assigned to πᾶσα the same meaning as it bore in v. 2, but this use is rarely found except in reference to abstract qualities, not to acts or things. No doubt such a rendering would give a more exact logical contradiction. 'All good comes from God' does not necessarily exclude the possibility of evil also coming from But practically the opposition is sufficient, 'God does not tempt to evil: it is good, good of every kind, which comes from Him'; and if we are right in supposing the verse to be a quotation, there is the less reason to ask for an exact logical antithesis (cf. below, ii. 5). For the thought see Plato Rep. ii. 379 oid apa 5 Θεὸς πάντων ἂν εἴη αἴτιος...ἀλλ' ὀλίγων μεν τοῖς ἀνθρώποις αἴτιος πολλῶν δὲ ἀναίτιος πολὺ γὰρ ἐλάττω τάγαθὰ τῶν κακῶν ἡμίν καὶ τῶν μὲν ἀγαθῶν οὐδένα ἄλλον αἰτιατέον, τῶν δὲ κακῶν ἄλλ' ἄττα δεῖ ζητεῖν τὰ αἴτια, ἀλλ' οὐ τὸν Θεόν, Dio Chr. Or. 32, p. 365 M. τοῦτο πείσθητε βεβαίως ὅτι τὰ συμβαίνοντα τοις άνθρώποις έπ' άγαθῷ πάνθ' ὁμοίως ἐστὶ δαιμόνια κ.τ.λ., Philo M. 1, p. 53 Θεοῦ σπείροντος καὶ φυτεύοντος ἐν ψυχῆ τὰ καλὰ ὁ λέγων νοῦς ὅτι, ἐγὼ φυτεύω, ἀσεβεῖ, Μ. 2. p. 208 Θεὸς μόνων ἀγαθῶν αἴτιος κακοῦ δὲ οὐδενός, ib. Μ. 1. p. 432, 174 οὐδέν ἐστι τῶν καλῶν ὃ μὴ Θεοῦ τε καὶ θείον, ib. M. 2. p. 245 God is spoken of as άμιγη κακών τὰ άγαθὰ δωρού- $\mu \in \nu \circ \nu$, and above on ver 5.

It will be observed that the words make a hexameter line, with a short syllable lengthened by the metrical stress. I think Ewald is right in considering it to be a quotation from some Hellenistic poem. The authority of a familiar line would add persuasion to the writer's words, and account for the somewhat subtle distinction between δοσ. άγ. and δω. τελ. Other examples of verse quotations in the N.T. are Tit. i. 12 Κρῆτες ἀεὶ ψεῦσται κακὰ θηρία γαστέρες ἀργαί, 1 Cor. xv. 33 φθείρουσιν ἤθη χρῆσθ' ὁμιλίαι κακαί, which follows a μὴ πλανᾶσθε, as here, without any mark of quotation, Acts xvii. 28 τοῦ γὰρ καὶ γένος ἐσμέν. More doubtful examples are John iv. 35 οὐχ ὑμεῖς λέγετε ὅτι ἔτι ὁ τετράμηνός ἐστι καὶ ὁ (χὼ) θερισμὸς ἔρχεται, Heb. xii. 13 καὶ τροχιὰς ὀρθὰς ποιήσατε (al. ποιεῖτε) τοῖς ποσὶν ὑμῶν, where the source of the quotation (Prov. iv. 26 ὀρθὰς τροχιὰς ποίει τοῖς ποσίν) seems to have been altered for the purpose of versification. Dr. E. L. Hicks considers that traces of verse may be

The distinction between δόσις and δώρημα is illustrated in Heisen 541-592 from Philo Cher. M. 1. p. 154 (a comment on Numbers xxviii. 2 τὰ δῶρά μου, δόματά μου) τῶν ὄντων τὰ μεν χάριτος μέσης ἠξίωται, ἡ καλείται δόσις, τὰ δὲ ἀμείνονος, ης ὄνομα οἰκεῖον δωρεά, id. Leg. All. M. 1. p. 126 δῶρα δομάτων διαφέρουσι τὰ μὲν γὰρ ἔμφασιν μεγέθους τελείων ἆγαθῶν δηλοῦσιν, ἃ τοῖς τελείοις χαρίζεται ὁ Θεός, τὰ δὲ εἰς βραχύτατον ἔσταλται, ων μετέχουσιν οἱ εὐφυεῖς ἀσκηταί, οἱ προκόπτοντες, ill. M. 1. 240 δωρεαὶ αἱ τοῦ Θεοῦ καλαὶ πᾶσαι, id. M. 1. p. 102 δωρεὰ καὶ εὐεργεσία καὶ χάρισμα Θεοῦ τὰ πάντα ὅσα ἐν κόσμω καὶ αὐτὸς ὁ κόσμος ἐστί. The two words are found together in Dan. ii. 6 δόματα καὶ δωρεὰς καὶ τιμὴν πολλὴν λήψεσθε παρ' έμοῦ, ib. v. 17 τὰ δόματά σου σοὶ ἔστω, καὶ τὴν δωρεὰν τῆς οικίας σου έτερω δός, where there is the same difference between the corresponding words in the Hebrew; also in 2 Chron. xxxii. 23 ἔφερον δῶρα τῷ Κυρίῳ εἰς Ἱερουσαλὴμ καὶ δόματα τῷ Ἐζεκίᾳ βασιλεῖ. similar peculiarity about the use of the verbs δίδωμι and δωρέομαι, e.g. in Philo M. 2. p. 183 ὁ γὰρ πρὸς τὸ ζῆν ἀφθονίαν δοὺς καὶ τὰς πρὸς τὸ εὖ ζην ἀφορμὰς ἐδωρείτο, the former expresses the simple act, the latter implies the accompanying generosity of spirit. Dr. Taylor notes (J. ofPhilology, vol. xviii. p. 299 foll.) that Hermas has borrowed the word δώρημα (Mand. 2 and Sim. ii. 7). Philo's distinction is further borne out by the fact that δώρημα in the only other passage in which it occurs in N.T. (Rom. v. 16) is used of a gift of God, and so δωρεά, wherever it occurs (John iv. 10, Acts ii. 13, viii. 20, x. 45, xi. 17, Rom. v. 15, 17, 2 Cor. ix. 11, Eph. iii. 7, iv. 7, Heb. vi. 4); δῶρον is mostly used of offerings to God. Again δόμα is always used of human gifts except in a quotation from LXX. ἔδωκε δόματα τοῖς ἀνθρώποις (Eph. iv. 8); but δόσις, which, like πούησις below, v. 25, strictly means the act (as in Phil. iv. 15, the only other passage in N.T. είς λόγον δόσεως καὶ λήμψεως, Sirac. 32. 9 ἐν πάση δόσει ἱλάρωσον τὸ πρόσωπόν σου, ib. 20. 9), is used equally of God in Sir. 1. 8 Κύριος έξέχεεν σοφίαν κατά την δόσιν αὐτοῦ, ib. v. 15 δόσις Κυρίου παραμένει εὐσεβέσι, ib. 32. 10 δὸς Υψίστω κατὰ τὴν δόστιν αὐτοῦ. Thus δωρεά and δώρημα are always used in the higher sense, δόμα (with one exception) in the lower, while δόσις may have either sense. We might take as examples of δόσις here, the gradual instilling of wisdom, of δώρημα, the final crown of life. The choice of the epithets $\dot{a}\gamma a\theta \dot{\gamma}$ and $\tau \dot{\epsilon}\lambda ao\nu$ is also in agreement with Philo's distinction; compare for the latter Clem. Al. Paed. 1.6, p. 113 τέλειος ων τέλεια χαριείται δήπουθεν, Philo M. 1, p. 173 δλήκληροι καὶ παντελείς αἱ τοῦ άγεννήτου δωρεαί πασαι.

WII., Ewald, Bouman, Hofmann, agree with the άνωθέν έστιν. Vulg. desursum est, descendens a patre luminum in separating ἐστίν from καταβαίνον. Alf., with the majority of commentators, takes them together (= καταβαίνει), referring to iii. 15 οὐκ ἔστιν αὕτη ἡ σοφία ἄνωθεν κατερχομένη, on which see n. There is no doubt that the Hellenistie usage admits of their being taken together, cf. Mark xiii. 25, where of ἀστέρες ἔσονται πίπτοντες = πεσούνται Matt. xxiv. 29; Luke ix. 14, where έν τῷ εἶναι προσευχόμενον = έν τῷ προσεύχεσθαι v. 27; ib. v. 16 αὐτὸς ἦν ύποχωρών εν τοις ερήμοις, v. 17, ην διδάσκων. For this extension of the periphrastic tense, itself merely an instance of the analytic tendency which marks the later stage of language, see Winer, p. 437, A. Buttmann, p. 264 foll., where many cases are given; Arist. Met. iv. 7 οὐδὲν διαφέρει τὸ ἄτθρωπος βαδίζων ἐστὶν τοῦ ἄνθρωπος βαδίζει. On the whole I think the rhythm and balance of the sentence is better preserved by separating ἐστι from καταβαίνον. The construction will then be the same as is found in John viii. 23 ύμεις έκ τῶν κάτω ἐστέ' ἐγὼ δὲ ἐκ τῶν ἄνω εἰμί, and implied below iii. 17 ή δὲ ἄτωθεν σοφία άγνή ἐστιν. For ἄτωθεν cf. John 3. 31, where it is equivalent to ἐκ τοῦ οὐρανοῦ immediately afterwards, Χου. Symp. vi. 7 (οἱ θεοὶ) ἄνωθεν μὲν ἴοντες ὡφελοῦσιν, ἄνωθεν δὲ φῶς παρέχουσιν, Philo M. 1, p. 645 Ίσαὰκ διὰ τὰς δμβρηθείσας ἄνωθεν δωρεὰς άγαθὸς καὶ τέλειος ἐξ ἀρχῆς ἐγένετο.

καταβαίνον ἀπὸ τοῦ πατρὸς τῶν φώτων.] Explains ἄνωθεν, just as ἐκ τῶν ἡδονῶν explains ἀντεῖθεν in iv. 1 below. The comparison of God to the sun, and of his influence to light, is found both in Jewish and in classical writers: for (1) see Malachi iv. 2 ἀτατελεῖ ὑμῖν τοῖς φοβουμένοις τὸ ὄνομά μου ἥλιος δικαιοσύνης. Psa. xxxv. 9, Isa. lx. 1, 19, 20, 1 John i. 5, Apoc. xxi. 23, Wisd. vii. 26 (σοφία) ἀπαίγασμά ἐστι φωτὸς ἀϊδίον, τῶν φώτων.] Refers in the first place to the heavenly bodies (Gen. i. 3, 14—18, Psa. cxxxv. 7, Jer. xxxi. 35, Sir. xliii. 1–12); which, according to Ewald, were by the Jews identified with the angels or hosts of God (Job xxxviii. 7, where they are expressly called 'sons of God'); but secondly to intellectual and spiritual light, which is more connected with the general meaning of the passage, though the remainder of this verse continues the metaphor drawn from light in the literal sense. Compare Matt. v. 14 ὑμεῖς ἐστὲ τὸ φῶς τοῦ κόσμου, Luke xvi. 8 νίοὶ τοῦ φωτός, John v. 35 (John was) ὁ λύχτος ὁ καιόμενος καὶ φαίνων, and you were willing for a time to rejoice ἐν τῷ φωτὶ αὐτοῦ, Psa. cxix. 105 λύχνος τοῖς ποσί μου ὁ νόμος σου, καὶ φῶς τοῖς τρίβοις μου, and for plural Psa. cxxxvi. 7 τῷ ποιήσαντι φῶτα μεγάλα, Jer. iv. 23 ἐπέβλεψα εἰς τὸν οὖρανόν, καὶ οὖκ ἦν τὰ φῶτα αὐτοῦ, Philipp. ii. 16, Philo M. i. 108 τὸν ἐγκύμονα θείων φώτων λόγον.

For the word πατήρ compare Eph. i. 17 ὁ πατήρ τῆς δόξης, 2 Cor. i. 3 ὁ πατήρ τῶν οἰκτιρμῶν, Job xxxviii. 28 πατήρ ὑετοῦ, John viii. 44, Philo M. 1. p. 631 μὴ θαυμάσης εἰ ὁ ἥλιος κατὰ τοὺς ἀλληγορίας κανόνας ἐξομοιοῦται τῷ πατρὶ καὶ ἡγεμόνι τῶν συμπάντων κ.τ.λ., and a little below (after citing Psa. xxvii. 1 Κύριος φῶς μου) οὐ μόνον φῶς ἀλλὰ καὶ παντὸς ἐτέρου φωτὸς ἀρχέτυπον, μᾶλλον δὲ ἀρχετύπου πρεσβύτερον καὶ ἀνώτερον, ib. Μ, 2. p. 254 ὁ Θεὸς καὶ νόμων ἐστὶ παράδειγμα ἀρχέτυπον καὶ ἡλίον ἥλιος, νοητὸς αἰσθητοῦ, παρέχων ἐκ τῶν ἀοράτων πηγῶν ὁρατὰ φέγγη τῷ βλεπομένω. Philo constantly uses the phrase ὁ πατὴρ τῶν δλων for the Creator.

παρ' $\hat{\omega}$ οὐκ ἔνι παραλλαγή.] For this somewhat rare use of παρά denoting an attribute or quality cf. Eph. vi. 9 προσωπολημψία οὐκ ἔστιν παρ' αὐτ $\hat{\omega}$, Rom. ii. 11, ib. ix. 14 μὴ ἀδικία παρὰ τ $\hat{\omega}$ Θε $\hat{\omega}$; Job. xii. 13 παρ' αὐτ $\hat{\omega}$ σοφία καὶ δύναμις, Dem. Coron. p. 318 εἰ δ' οὖν ἐστὶ καὶ παρ' ἐμοί τις ἐμπειρία, Winer p. 492. For οὐκ ἔτι cf. Gal. iii. 28 ὅσοι εἰς Χριστὸν ἐβαπτίσθητε...οὐκ ἔνι Ἰονδαῖος οὐδὲ Ἦλλην, where Lightfoot translates 'there is no place for,' and notes that 'not the fact only, but the possibility' is negatived. He approves Buttman's view (given by Winer, p. 96) that ἔνι 'is not a contraction from ἔνεστι, but the preposition ἐν, ἐνί, strengthened by a more vigorous accent, like ἔπι, π $i\rho a$, and used with an ellipsis of the substantive verb.' In 1 Cor. vi. 5 $o\dot{v}\kappa$ $\check{\epsilon}r\iota$ $\dot{\epsilon}r$ $\dot{\nu}\mu \hat{\nu}r$ $o\dot{\nu}\delta \hat{\epsilon}$ is $\sigma o\phi \hat{\sigma}s$ the word has a weaker force, as often in Plato, Xen., we.

παραλλαγή.] Only here in N.T.; used of mental aberration in LXX. $\epsilon_{V} \pi a p a \lambda \lambda a \gamma \hat{\eta}$ 'furiously' 2 Kings ix. 20; of the succession of beaconlights. Agam. 490. Its general sense is the same as that of the v. παραλλάσσω, denoting variation from a set course, rule or pattern, as in Plut. Mor. 1039 B, Epiet. Diss. i. 14 (referring to the changes of the seasons) πόθεν πρὸς τὴν αι ξησιν καὶ μείωσιν τῆς σελήνης καὶ τὴν τοῦ ήλίου πρόσοδον καὶ ἄφοδον τοσαύτη παραλλαγή καὶ ἐπὶ τὰ ἐναντία μεταβολή $\tau \hat{\omega} v \epsilon \pi i \gamma \epsilon i \omega v \theta \epsilon \omega \rho \epsilon i \tau a i$; hence it is used for difference, as ib. ii. 23. 32 μηδεμίαν είναι παραλλαγήν κάλλους πρός αίσχος. Some commentators have thought it to be a vox technica of astronomy = $\pi a \rho \dot{a} \lambda \lambda a \xi \iota s$, our 'parallax,' but no instance of such a use is quoted. It is true it is a favourite word with the astronomer Geminus (contained in Petavius' Uranologion), but he uses it quite generally of the varying length of the day, &c.; cf. p. 26 B ἀκολουθεί δὲ τούτω καὶ παραλλαγήν των ήμερων μεγάλην γίνεσθαι διά την των τμημάτων ύπεροχην ων φέρεται ο ηλιος ύπερ γην (i.e. the length of the day varies according to the sun's elevation). Other instances are cited by Gebser p. 83. We may therefore take the word to express the contrast between the natural sun, which varies its position in the sky from hour to hour and month to month, and the eternal Source of all light. A similar contrast is found in Epict. Diss. 14. 10 άλλα φωτίζειν μεν οδός τε έστιν ὁ ήλιος τηλικοῦτον μέρος τοῦ παντὸς, ὀλίγον δὲ τὸ ἀφώτιστον ἀπολιπεῖν, ὅσον οἶόν τ' ἐπέχεσθαι ὑπὸ σκιᾶς ην η γη ποιεί ο δε και τον ηλιον αυτον πεποιηκώς και περιάγων, μέρος οντ' αὐτοῦ μικρὸν, ὡς πρὸς τὸ ὅλον, οὖτος δ' οὐ δύναται πάντων αἰσθάνεσθαι; τροπῆς ἀποσκίασμα.] The A.V. 'shadow of turning,' though supported by the Old Latin modicum obumbrationis and by the Greek commentators and lexicographers and by Ewald in modern times, is undoubtedly wrong. The simple word σκιά may take this colloquial sense, as in Philo M.-1. p. 606 πεπιστευκὸς ἴχνος ἢ σκιὰν ἢ ὄραν ἀπιστίας δέχεται, Demosth. 552. 7 εἶ γε εἶχε στιγμὴν ἢ σκιὰν τούτων, but it is impossible that this should be the case with a ἄπ. λεγ. like ἀποσκίασμα. The cognate ἀποσκιασμός occurs Plut. Periol. 6 γνωμόνων ἀποσκιασμούς of the shadows thrown on the dial, and ἀποσκιάζω Plato Rep. vii. 532 C. Taking the word by itself we naturally understand it of an eclipse, where the sun is hidden by the shadow thrown off from the moon. Denying this of God is in effect equivalent to 1 John i. 5 ὁ Θεὸς φῶς ἐστὶ καὶ σκοτία ἐν αὐτῷ οὐκ ἔστιν

The word τροπή is only found here in N.T.; it is used of the heavenly movements in LXX. Deut. xxxiii. 14 καθ' ὅραν γεινημάτων ἡλίου τροπῶν, Job. xxxviii. 33 ἐπίστασαι τροπὰς οὐρανοῦ, also in Wisd. vii. 18 (God gave me to know) σύστασιν κόσμου καὶ ἐνέργειαν στοιχείων, τροπῶν ἀλλαγὰς καὶ μεταβολὰς καιρῶν, ἐνιαντοῦ κύκλους καὶ ἀστέρων θέσεις, where it has its usual technical meaning 'solstices.' The R.V., in agreement with Gebser, Wiesinger, Alf., Beyschlag, Erdmann, translates 'shadow that is east by turning,' which Alf. explains as referring to 'the revolution in which the heavens are ever found, by means of which the moon turns her dark side to us is eclipsed by the shadow of the earth, and the sun by the body of the moon.' But what a singular way of describing this to say that it is an overshadowing which comes from turning or change of position! 'Overshadowing of one another,' άλλήλων ἀποσκίασμα, would have been what we should have expected. Accordingly Schneckenburger and De Wette (Brückner) have rightly felt that $\tau \rho o \pi \eta$ must be taken here in another and far more usual sense, that of 'change in general' (like τύχης τροπαί Plut. Mor. p. 611, γνώμης $\tau \rho o \pi \eta$ ib. Vit. 410 F), since, as the latter says, 'schwierig ist damit (i.e. with the idea of revolution) ἀποσκίασμα in Verbindung zu bringen.' The liability of all that is created to change (Anton. vi. 23 $\tau \dot{a}$ οντα εν μυρίαις τροπαίς, και σχεδον οὐδεν εστός, ίδ. viii. 6 πάντα τροπαί) is continually contrasted in Philo with the immutability of the Creator: cf. M. 1. p. 72 πᾶν τὸ γεννητὸν ἀναγκαῖον τρέπεσθαι ἴδιον γάρ ἐστι τοῦτο, ὥσπερ Θεοῦ τὸ ἄτρεπτον εἶναι, ib. 82 πῶς ἄν τις πιστεύσαι Θεώ; εὰν μαθη ὅτι πάντα τὰ ἄλλα τρέπεται, μόνος δὲ αὐτὸς ἄτρεπτός ἐστι, and (with a still closer resemblance to our text) ib. p. 80 όταν άμάρτη καὶ ἀπαρτηθή ὁ νοῦς ἀρετής, αἰτιᾶται τὰ θεῖα, τὴν ἰδίαν τροπην προσάπτων Θεώ. Many similar passages will be found in the treatises Leg. Alleg. and Cherub. From this opposition to the Divine nature the word $\tau \rho o \pi \dot{\eta}$ gets a second connotation implying moral frailty, as in p. 72 αντιφιλονεικεί μοι ή τροπή, και πολλάκις βουλόμενος καθηκόν τι νοήσαι ἐπαντλοῦμαι ταῖς παρὰ τὸ καθήκον ἐπιρροίαις, ib. 188 ὁ Θεοῦ θεραπευτής αἰώνιον έλευθερίαν κεκάρπωται, κατά τὰς συνεχεῖς τροπὰς τής ἀεικινήτου ψυχης ιάσεις δεχόμενος έπαλλήλους...της μεν τροπης διά το φύσει θνητον έγγινομένης, της δε ελευθερίας δια την του Θεού θεραπείαν επιγινομένης. Schneckenburger takes $\tau \rho o \pi \dot{\eta}$ here in Philo's sense, and translates obumbratio quae oritur ex inconstantia naturae. This gives a very good sense, 'overshadowing of mutability,' as one might speak of 'an overshadowing of disgrace': no changes in this lower world can cast a shadow on the unchanging Fount of light. Or we may take $\tau \rho o \pi \hat{\eta} s$ as a qualitative genitive, and interpret as Stolz does, after Luther, 'keine abwechselnde Verdunkelung.' Beyschlag maintains that this would require τροπη ἀποσκιάσματος, but why may not 'overshadowing of change' serve to express 'changing shadow' (i.e. an overshadowing which changes the face of the sun), just as well as 'a hearer of forgetfulness' in ver. 25 to express 'a forgetful hearer' or 'the world of wickedness' in iii. 6 to express 'the wicked world'? The meaning of the passage will then be 'God is alike incapable of change in his own nature (παραλλαγή) and incapable of being changed by the action of others (ἀποσκίασμα). On the unchangeableness of God compare Mal. iii. 6, Heb. xiii. 8. It is on this doctrine that Plato founds his argument against the possibility of a Divine Incarnation (Rep. ii. 380 foll.). See comment.

18. βουληθεὶς ἀπεκύησεν ἡμᾶς.] So far from God tempting us to evil, His will is the cause of our regeneration. It is the doctrine expressed by St. Paul (Eph. i. 5) προορίσας ἡμᾶς εἰς υἰοθεσίαν διὰ Ἰ.Χ. εἰς αὐτόν, κατὰ τὴν εὐδοκίαν τοῦ θελήματος αὐτοῦ, Rom. xii. 2; by St. Peter (i. 1. 3) ὁ

As the seed of sin and death is contained in the unrestrained indulgence of man's ἐπιθυμία, so the seed of righteousness and life in the word of God. For the general metaphor compare 1 John iii. 9 $\pi \hat{a}s$ ο γεγεντημένος εκ του Θεού όμαρτίαν ου ποιεί, ότι σπέρμα αυτού εν αυτώ μένει, καὶ οὐ δύναται άμαρτάνειν ὅτι ἐκ τοῦ Θεοῦ γεγένηται, Psa. lxxxvii. 4-6, lxxx. 18, exix. 25 (quicken Thou me according to Thy word), Deut. xxxii. 18, Clem. The choice of a word properly used of the mother is explained here by the reference to v. 15, but it may be compared with Psa. vii. 14 quoted on v. 15 above, and with the use of ωδίνειν Gal. iv. 19; also with Psa. xc. 2 (where the Heb. word translated 'thou hadst formed' means primarily 'to be in pangs with child,' 'to bear a child,' Jennings in loc.) and Psa. xxii. 9, Clem. Hom. ii. 52 'Αδάμ ὁ ὑπὸ τῶν τοῦ Θεοῦ χειρῶν κυοφορηθείς. On the word ἀπεκύησεν see v. 15. On the beneficence of the Divine Will cf. λόγφ ἀληθείας.] The word (explained in the parallel passage, 1 Pet. i. 25, to be τὸ ῥῆμα τὸ εὐαγγελισθέν εἰς ὑμᾶς, as in Rom. x. 8, 17) is God's instrument for communicating the new life; see below v. 21 λόγος ἔμφυτος, Matt. iv. 4, John vi. 63 τὰ δήματα ἃ ἐγὼ λελάληκα ὑμῖν πνεῦμά έστιν καὶ ζωή έστιν, xvii. 7, 8, Rom. x. 17, 1 Pet. i. 23. The phrase occurs Psa. exix. 43 (cf. άπαρχήν τινα των αὐτοῦ κτισμάτων.] The gifts of God were consecrated by devotion of the First-Fruits; see D. of B. s.v., where six kinds, private or public, are specified, and cf. Exod xxii. 29 foll., Deut. xviii. 3, xxvi. 2 foll., Neh. x. 35, Ezek. xx. 40. Similar offerings were made among the Greeks and Romans, cf. Homeric ἐπάρχομαι, and ἄργματα, Od. xiv. 446, Herod. i. 92 (of the offerings of Croesus), Thuc. iii. 58 ὄσα τε ἡ γῆ ἡμῶν ἀνεδίδου ὡραῖα, πάντων ἀπαρχὰς ἐπιφέροντες, Isaeus Dicaeog. 42, Lat. primitiae. We find the word used metaphorically, Plato Legg. 767 C., Plutarch Mor. p. 40, where see Wytt.; so Philo M. 2. p. 366 (Israel) τοῦ σύμπαντος ἀνθρώπων γένους ἀπενεμήθη οἶά τις ἀπαρχὴ τῷ ποιητῆ καὶ πατρί, with ref. to Jer. ii. 3. St. Paul uses it of the first converts, Rom. xvi. 5 ος έστιν ἀπαρχὴ τῆς 'Ασίας εἰς $X_{\rho \iota \sigma \tau \acute{o} \nu}$, 1 Cor. xvi. 15 $\mathring{a}\pi$. $\tau \mathring{\eta}$ s 'Aχαίαs (speaking of the house of Stephanas). The faith of the patriarchs, sanctifying their posterity, is typified by the heave-offering of the dough (Numb. xv. 21) εἰ ἡ ἀπαρχὴ ἀγία καὶ τὸ φύραμα Rom. xi. 16. In 1 Cor. xv. 20 Christ Himself is called άπ. τῶν κεκοιμημένων. The nearest approach to St. James is found in 2 Thess. ii. 13 God has chosen you ἀπαρχὴν εἰς σωτηρίαν: in Rom. viii. 23

² [Out of forty-two Pauline passages I find only one (2 Cor. viii. 6) in which εἰs τὸ may not be translated 'in order that'; but often an action is said to have been done for a purpose contemplated not by the doer but by God, c.g. 1 Thess. ii. 16, Rom. i. 20, iv. 11, &c. A.]

the existing manifestation of the Spirit is described as a mere $d\pi a p \chi \dot{\eta}$ in comparison with what shall be hereafter, 'the glorious liberty of the children of God': in Apoc. xiv. 4 the 144,000 are called ἀπαρχή τῷ Θεῷ καὶ τῷ 'Αριίω, cf. the ἐκκλησία πρωτοτόκων of Heb. xii. 23. In the Clementine Homilies (i. 3) Peter speaks of Clement as των σωζομένων έθνων ἀπαρχή. Τιτά = Lat. quidam, 'as it were,' marks thatthe word is used not strictly, but metaphorically. Κτισμάτων: cf. Wisd. xiii. 4 έκ καλλονής κτισμάτων άναλόγως δ γενεσιουργός θεωρείται. The writer uses the widest possible word, embracing not only Christians, but mankind in general, who were blessed in Abraham and still more in Christ; not only men, but all created things: cf. Rom. viii. 19-22, the παλιγγειεσία of Matt. xix. 28, the prophecies of Isa. xi. 6 foll., lxv. 13. The position of αὐτοῦ is unusual: cf. 1 Pet. i. 3 ὁ κατὰ τὸ πολύ αύτου έλεος άναγεινήσας ήμας, 1 John ii. 5 ος δ' αν τηρή αύτου τον λόγον, ver. 27 το αὐτοῦ χρίσμα διδάσκει ήμᾶς, 2 Pet. i. 9 τῶν πάλαι αὐτοῦ άμαρτιῶν, in all of which there is an emphasis on the pronoun.

19. ἴστε.] 'All this you know: act upon your knowledge. Since it is through the word we are begotten anew, let us listen to it in meekness, instead of being so eager to give utterance to our own opinions. Do not think that overbearing fanaticism is in accordance with the will of God, or that fierce argumentation is the way to recommend God's truth.' Cf. below iii. I foll. with notes. We find the same appeal to the knowledge of the reader in i. 3, iii. 1. The form $log au \epsilon$ is found elsewhere in N.T. only in Eph. v. 5 and Heb. xii. 17, οἴδατε being ordinarily used, as below iv. 4. It might be taken as an imperative 'be sure of this,' but I prefer to take it as indicative, as in Eph. v. 5 and Heb. xii. 17; cf. γινώσκετε below, v. 20.

The choice of ἀνήρ here, instead of ἄνθρωπος, was probably determined by the facts of the case; the speakers would be men, and they might perhaps imagine that there was something manly in violence as opposed to the feminine quality of πραύτης, cf. Longin. Sublim. 32 την μεν των επιθυμιων οϊκησιν προσείπεν ως γυναικωνίτιν, την του θυμου δε ωσπερ ανδρωνίτιν, Clem. Al. Strom. iii. p. 553 P. θυμον μεν άρρενα δρμήν, θήλειαν δὲ τὴν ἐπιθυμίαν. The word ἀνήρ is used of men in contrast to gods in Homer's phrase πατηρ ανδρών τε θεών τε. Here the thought that it is God's righteousness brings out the absurdity of man's hoping to δικαιοσύνην Θεοῦ. Already in the O.T. we find righteousness described as the attribute and gift of God: Isa. xlv. 24, liv. 17, lxi. 10, 11, Jer. xxiii. 6, xxxiii. 15, 16, Dan. ix. 7, Hos. x. 12; and in Micah vi. 5 ή δικαιοσύνη τοῦ Κυρίου is declared not to consist in sacrifices but in doing justice and loving mercy. This is more clearly expressed in Matt. v. 20, vi. 33, Rom. i. 17 δικαιοσύνη Θεοῦ ἐν αὐτῷ (the Gospel) ἀποκαλύπτεται έκ πίστεως είς πίστιν, ib. iii. 5, 21 foll., x. 3 άγνοοῦντες τὴν τοῦ Θεοῦ δικαιοσύνην καὶ τὴν ἰδίαν δικαιοσύνην ζητοῦντες στησαι, τῆ δικαιοσύνη τοῦ Θεοῦ οὐχ ὑπετάγησαν. What St. James understood by the phrase was no doubt (1) the perfect obedience to the law of liberty contained in the Sermon on the Mount (see below ver. 25, ii. 8, 12) as distinguished from that outward observance which constitutes righteousness in the eye of man, and (2) the acknowledgment that such righteousness was the gift of God, wrought in us by His word received into our hearts (above ver. 5, 18, iii. 17). We may compare the phrase δίκαιοι ἐνώπιον τοῦ Θεοῦ Luke i. 6 (of Zechariah and his wife), Acts iv. 19, viii. 21, 1 Pet. iii. 4, &c. See Vorst Hellen. p. 399 foll., 649 foll.

έργάζεται.] So κατεργάζεται ὑπομονήν ver. 3, τῷ ποιήσαντι ἔλεος ii. 13, έργαζόμενος δικαιοσύνην Acts x. 35, Heb. xi. 33.

21. διὸ ἀποθέμενοι πᾶσαν ρυπαρίαν.] 'Wherefore,' in order that we may yield ourselves to the divine influence, let us prepare our hearts. Cf. Eph. iv. 25 διὸ ἀποθέμενοι τὸ ψεῦδος λαλείτε ἀλήθειαν, 1 Pet. ii. 1 ἀποθέμενοι οὖν πᾶσαν κακίαν...τὸ λογικὸν ἄδολον γάλα ἐπιποθήσατε. It is a metaphor from the putting off of clothes, as in Heb. xii. 1 (stripping for the race), Rom. xiii. 12 where ἀποθώμεθα τὰ ἔργα τοῦ σκότους is opposed to ἐνδύσασθαι τὰ ὅπλα τοῦ φωτός, Eph. iv. 22 where ἀποθέσθαι τον παλαιον ἄνθρωπον is opposed to ἐνδύσασθαι τον καινον ἄνθρωπον, Col. iii. 8 foll. ἀπόθεσθε ὀργήν, θυμόν, κακίαν, βλασφημίαν, αἰσχρολογίαν... ένδύσασθε...ταπεινοφροσύνην, πραύτητα κ.τ.λ., Clem. Rom. i. 13 ἀποθέμενοι πᾶσαν ἀλαζόνειαν...καὶ ὀργάς, Acta Matt. Tisch. p. 171 κακίαν ἀποθέμενοι... άγαπην ενδυσάμενοι, Justin. Tryph. p. 343 οίτινες εν πορνείαις καὶ άπλως πάση ρυπαρά πράξει υπάρχοντες, δια της παρα του ήμετέρου Ίησου κατα το θέλημα τοῦ Πατρὸς χάριτος, τὰ ῥυπαρὰ ταῦτα, ἃ ἡμφιέσμεθα, κακὰ ἀπεδυσάμεθα, Clem. Hom. viii. 23 ἔνδυμα οὖν εἰ βούλεσθε γίνεσθαι θείου πνεύματος, σπουδάσατε πρώτον εκδύσασθαι τὸ ρυπαρὸν υμών πρόλημμα, οπερ εστίν ἀκάθαρτον πνεθμα. For the comparison between dress and character see Matt. xxii. 11 (the wedding garment), Apoc. iii. 4, 18 (white garment the symbol of purity), ib. vii. 14, xix. 8, Isa. lxi. 10, &c. The metaphor is continued in the word ρυπαρία (ἄπ. λεγ. in N.T.): see below ii. 3, Isa. lxiv. 6 'our righteonsness is as filthy rags,' Zech. iii. 4 ἀφέλετε τὰ ίματια τὰ ἡυπαρὰ ἀπ' αὐτοῦ καὶ εἶπε πρὸς αὐτόν. Ἰδού ἀφήρηκα τὰς ἀνομίας σου, καὶ ειδύσατε αὐτὸν ποδήρη, Job xiv. 4, Apoc. xxii. 11 ὁ ρυπαρὸς ρυπαιθήτω. St. Paul uses the synonym μολυσμός 2 Cor. vii. 1 (filthiness of the flesh and spirit). Strictly speaking the word ρύπος is used of the wax of the ear, as in Hippocrates and Clem. Al. Paed. ii. p. 222 P. quoted by Heisen, who suggests that there may be an allusion to the purged ear, aurium removendue sordes sunt quae audiendi celeritatem impedire quenut; but it cannot be assumed without evidence that the derivative retained the original force of the simple word. The phrase σαρκὸς ἀπόθεσις ῥύπου is used of baptism in 1 Pet. iii. 21; and so Schegg would explain here; but there is no reference here to a past event. The agrist participle is part and parcel of the command contained in the imperative $\delta \epsilon \xi a \sigma \theta \epsilon$, as in the quotations from St. Paul. Other examples of the metaphorical use are Philo M. 1, p. 597 (through repentance the soul washes away) τὰ καταρρυπαίνοντα, ib. 585, 273, Dion. Hal. A.R. xi. 5 ρυπαίνοντες αἰσχρῷ βίω τὰς έαυτῶν τε καὶ τῶν προγόνων ἀρετάς, Epict. Diss. 2. 5 recommends the expulsion of a ρυπαρά φαντασία by one which is καλή καὶ γενναία, Luc. V. Auct. 3 καθαράν την ψυχην έργασάμενος και τον έπ' αιτη ρύπον εκκλύσας, Acta Thomae. Tisch. p. 200 ρυπαρά κοινωνία, ρυπαρά ἐπιθυμία, Ignat. Eph. 16 ἐάν τις πίστιν θεοῦ ἐν κακῆ διδασκαλία φθείρη... ρυπαρὸς γινόμειος εἰς τὸ πῦρ τὸ ἄσβεστον χωρήσει. Plutarch uses ρυπαρία (like our 'shabbiness') of avarice (Mor. p. 60 D): the compounds ρυπαρόψυχος, ρυπαρογνώμων are found in Byzantine writers. Its precise force in our text will be considered in the following note.

περισσείαν κακίας.] 'Överflowing (ebullition) of malice.' The meaning is best shown in the cognate phrase in Luke vi. 45 ('the evil man out of the evil treasure in his heart bringeth forth that which is evil') $\epsilon \kappa$ γὰρ τοῦ περισσεύματος τῆς καρδίας λαλεῖ τὸ στόμα αὐτοῦ. The only other passages in which περισσεία occurs in N.T. are Rom. v. 17 την περισσείαν της χάριτος 'the superabundance of grace,' 2 Cor. viii. 2 ή περισσεία της χαράς... ἐπερίσσευσεν εἰς τὸ πλοῦτος τῆς ἀπλότητος αὐτῶν 'the overflowing of their joy overflowed to (so as to make up) the wealth of their generosity, 2 Cor. x. 15 είς περισσείαν 'to overflowing' (abundantly). The writer warns his readers against hasty and passionate words, against the outbreak of evil temper. Then comes the question whether ρυπαρίαν is to be taken separately (Calvin, Bouman, Lange), or as governing κακίας along with περισσείαν. The fact that πάσαν is not repeated is in favour of the latter construction, which is supported by Matthaei's Schol, την δμαρτίαν την δυπαίνουσαν τον ἄνθρωπον φησί, την ώς περιττήν οἶσαν ἐν ἡμῖν. Perhaps however it is better to give καί an epexegetic force, 'all defilement and effervescence of malice' being equivalent to 'all defilement caused by the overflowing malice of the heart': so Wiesinger 'allen Schmutz der reichlich bei ihnen sich findenden Bosheit.' Other explanations of περισσεία are (1) 'superfluity' A.V. (malitiam majorem quam in Christianis expectaveris, Theile).

This would seem to make the writer guilty of the absurdity of supposing a certain amount of malice to be proper for a Christian. It might be said the same objection applies to the rendering abundantia 'overflowing', because it is the seat of the disease in the heart, not its manifestation in the words which the Christian should seek to get rid of. But St. James here speaks as below in ch. iii. and as our Lord in Matt. xv. 18, 19 of defilement arising from words: before we can receive the word of God into our hearts we must prepare the way by laying aside this open outward sin. (2) 'rank growth,' 'Auswuchs,' with reference to the ground which has to be prepared for sowing the seed of the word: so Alf., Bassett (who translates, clearing away every kind of 'rubbish, ἡυπαρία, and overgrowth'), Heisen, Loesner, Pott, comparing Philo M. 2. p. 258 περιτέμνεσθε τως σκληροκαρδίας, τὸ δέ ἐστι, τὰς περιττὰς φύσεις τοῦ ἡγεμονικοῦ, ἃς αι ἄμετροι τῶν παθῶν ἔσπειράν τε καὶ συνηύξησαν ὁρμαὶ καὶ ὁ κακὸς ψυχῆς γεωργὸς ἐφύτευσεν, ἀφροσύιη, μετὰ σπουδης ἀποκείρασθε. It does not however appear to be proved that either περισσεία or (still less) ρυπαρία would bear the meaning suggested. (3) Hofmann, after Gebser and others, takes it in the sense of 'residuum,' 'what is left over and above': the Christians addressed have already renounced sin, but still sin is not entirely vanquished in them. It is true that περισσεία is not found in this sense, which would rather require περίσσευμα, but we have περισσός Exod. x. 5 (the locust) κατέδεται παν τὸ περισσὸν τῆς γῆς, τὸ καταλειφθέν, ο κατέλιπεν ή χάλαζα, Joseph. B.J. ii. 6. 2 (they begged the Romans to pity) τὰ τῆς Ιουδαίας λείψανα καὶ μὴ τὸ περισσὸν αὐτῆς ἀπορρίψαι τοῖς ώμῶς σπαράσσουσι, and so περίσσευμα Mark viii. 8 of the fragments of the loaves. (4) Nothing need be said of the strange interpretation praeputium adopted by Grotius, Hammond and Clericus, nor of Beza's excrementum = περίττωσις or περίττωμα. Heisen indeed cites a similar use of $\pi\epsilon\rho\iota\tau\tau\epsilon\iota$ a from Clem. Rom. p. 183 (which I am unable to verify); but what meaning could κακίας have in connexion with the word thus understood? Those who take ρυπαρία with an independent force understand it of the special sin of uncleanness, but there does not seem to be any special reference to that sin here, though there possibly may be in iv. 4, 8 below. Kakía seems best understood here of malice: cf. Lightfoot on Col. iii. 8 (ἀπόθεσθε ὀργήν, θυμόν, κακίαν): 'It is not, at least in the N.T., vice generally, but the vicious nature which is bent on doing harm to others, and is well described by Calvin (on Eph. iv. 31) animi pravitas quae humanitati et aequitati est opposita.' He refers to Trench N.T. Synon. § xi. p. 35 seq. It is not quite correct to say that it always bears this force in the N.T. (cf. Acts viii. 22, Matt. vi. 34), but here the preceding $\delta\rho\gamma\dot{\eta}$ and the following πραύτης leave little doubt as to the meaning. [Is it possible that ρυπαρία may be used to denote the passively mean and base, in opposition to κακία, an active form of vice, which leads περισσά πράσσειν ?—С. Τ.]

δέξασθε τον ξιμφυτον λόγον.] Cf. Acts xvii. 11 εδέξαντο τον λόγον μετὰ πάσης προθυμίας, 1 Thess. i. 6, ii. 13. "Εμφυτος only here in N.T. Its common meaning is 'innate,' as in Wisd. xii. 10 ἔμφυτος ή κακία αὐτῶν, Plato Ετην. 398 C πότερον δοκεί είναι διδακτόν ή άρετη η έμφυτον, Justin M. Apol, ii. 8 (the Stoics and others have spoken well on moral questions) διά το τριφυτον παντε γένει ανθρώπων σπέρμα τοῦ λόγου, ib. 13, and so Oecumenius here ; but the word $\delta \epsilon \xi a \sigma \theta \epsilon$ forbids this. We must therefore take it as the 'rooted word,' i.e. a word whose property it is to root itself like a seed in the heart: cf. Matt. xiii. 3-23 esp. ver. 21 οὐκ ἔχει ρίζαν ἐν ξαντώ, χν. 13 πασα φυτεία ην ουκ εφύτευσεν ὁ Πατήρ μου ὁ ουράνιος έκριζωθήσεται, 1 (or. iii. 6. The cognate words are used with a similar meaning, as Plut. Mor. p. 125 Ε διά τρυφήν τάς στάσεις έμφνεσθαι ταις πόλεσι, Xen. R. Lac. 3 το αιδείσθαι έμφυσιωσαι βουλόμετος αιτοίς, so εμφυτεύω, εμφυτεία of grafting. The A.V. seems to identify our word with εμφύτευτον, which however would be out of place here, since the word is sown, not grafted, in the heart. Other examples occur in which it cannot mean 'innate,' e.g. Herod. ix. 94 of Eucnius, to whom the gods granted the gift of prophecy as a solace after he had lost the sight of his eyes, μετὰ ταῦτα ἔμφυτον μαιτικὴν είχει, Barnab. i. 2, and ix. 9 την εμφυτον δωρεάν της διδαχής αὐτοῦ θέμεros ἐν τρῶν, where Harnack quotes Ignat. Eph. 17 (rec. maj.) ξμφυτον το περί Θεού παρά Χριστού λαβόντες κριτήριον. In like manner συμφυτος, which literally means 'congenital,' as in Jos. Ant. vi. 3. 3, is also used of that which has coalesced or grown into one since birth, as in Rom. vi. 5 σύμφυτοι γεγόναμεν τῷ ὁμοιώματι τοῦ θανάτου αὐτοῦ. Latin insitus has the same two meanings, 'innate,' and 'ingrafted' or 'incorporated.' The verb is found in the same application, though with a different meaning, in Plut. Mor. 47. A τον ἐκ φιλοσοφίας ἐμφυόμενον εὐφυέσι νέοις δηγμον αὐτὸς ὁ τρώσας λόγος ἰᾶται. For the injunction cf. Job. xi. 13, 14, Deut. xi. 18, and esp. xxx. 14 as explained in Rom. x. 8, Jer. xxxi. 33, Acts xx. 32, 2 Cor. iii. 3, 1 Thess. ii. 13.

τὸν δυνάμενον σῶσαι τὰς ψυχὰς ὑμῶν.] Cf. below ii. 14, iv. 12, v. 20, 1 Pet. i. 9 τὸ τέλος τῆς πίστεως σωτηρίαν ψυχῶν, John v. 24 ὁ τὸν λόγον μου ἀκούων καὶ πιστεύων τῷ πέμψαντί με ἔχει ζωὴν αἰώνιον, Rom. i. 16 οὐκ ἐπαισχύνομαι τὸ εὐαγγέλιον, δύναμις γὰρ Θεοῦ ἐστὶν εἰς σωτηρίαν παντὶ τῷ πιστεύωντι, 2 Tim. iii. 15, Heb. x. 39 πίστεως ἐσμὰν εἰς περιπούησιν ψυχῆς, Barnab. xix. 8 μελετῶν εἰς τὸ σῶσαι ψυχὴν τῷ λόγω, Clem. Hom. iii. 54 ἡ ἀλήθεια ἡ σώζουσα ἦν καὶ ἔστιν ἐν τῷ Ἰησοῦ ἡμῶν λόγω, so we read of σώζειν δυνάμενοι λόγοι, ζωοποιοὶ λόγοι, ib. i. 5, 6, 19. Below v. 15 the phrase is used of bodily life: see Vorst, p. 123, Hatch, p. 101.

22. γίνεσθε.] The imperative ἔστε does not seem to be used in N.T., though ἴσθε and ἔστω are not uncommon. We may take γ. to mean not simply 'be,' but 'show yourselves more and more': see below iii. 1, Matt. x. 16 γάνεσθε οὖν φρόνιμοι, ib. xxiv. 44 γ. ἔτοιμοι, 1 Cor. xiv. 20, xv. 28, Eph. v. 1.

ποιηταί λόγου.] Cf. iv. 11 π. rόμου, Rom. ii. 13, where π. νόμου is opposed to ἀκροατὴς ν. as being justified before God, Matt. vii. 24 πᾶς ὅστις ἀκοιϵι μου τοὺς λόγους τούτους καὶ ποιεῖ αὐτούς, Luke vi. 46, xi. 28, John xiii. 17, Ezek. xxxiii. 32, Sen. Ep. 108. 35 sic ista ediscamus ut quae fuerint verba, sint opera, Porphyr. Abstin. i. 57 δι' ἔργων ἡμῦν τῆς σωτηρίας, οὐ δι' ἀκροματως λόγων ψιλῆς γιγνομένης. The word ποιητής is only found six times in N.T., of which four are in St. James. Grotius quotes a rabbinical saying to the effect that there are two crowns, one of hearing, the other of doing. Cf. also Taylor's Jewish Fathers, p. 63 'R. Chananiah used to say whosesoever works are in excess of his wisdom, his wisdom stands; and whosesoever wisdom is in excess of his works, his wisdom stands not'; ib. p. 75.

άκροαταί.] Regularly used of an attendant at a lecture, but distinguished from μαθητής by Isocr. ad Nic. 17 ποιητῶν ἀκροατής, σοφιστῶν μαθητής γίγνου, ib. p. 405 B.: similarly ἀκουστής and auditor. As Dr. Plummer observes, we naturally think of the reading of the Scriptures in the synagogue, on which the Jews laid such stress. The word is used three times by St. James, only once besides in N.T. (Rom. ii. 16).

παραλογιζόμενοι.] The only other passage in which it occurs in N.T. is Col. ii. 4 ἴνα μηδεὶς ὑμῶς παραλογίζηται ἐν πιθαινολογία, which Lightfoot explains 'lead you away by false reasoning.' In LXX, it is more loosely used, as 1 Sam. xxviii. 12, where the witch of Endor says to Saul ἵνα τί παρελογίσω με;

23. ὅτι.] Here = γὰρ, giving the reason for the injunction 'do not be mere hearers,' because on such the word has no abiding influence. The causal connexion denoted by ὅτι, which is sometimes so close as to make even a comma unnecessary (e.g. Matt. xx. 15 δ ἀφθαλμός σου πουηρός ἐστιν ὅτι ἐγὼ ἀγαθός εἰμι;), is sometimes so loose as to allow of its being separated from what precedes by a full stop, as in Mark iii. 3 ἀμὴρ λέγω ὑμῖν... ἀμαρτήματος. ὅτι ἔλεγον πτεῦμα ἀκάθαρτον ἔχει, Luke xi. 18, ἰλ. xiv. 11, Heb. viii. 10.

οὐ ποιητήs.] Oὐ is used even in classical Greek after εἰ, when, as here, it may be considered to coalesce with the particular word or phrase to which it is joined, and not to affect the condition generally (this takes place most easily with such words as θελω or εάω), or when the negative conception is immediately contrasted with its positive, as below iii. 2 πολλὰ πταίομεν ἄπαντες. εἶ τις οὐ πταίει, or when it may be regarded as parenthetical, being most exactly represented by the insertion of such a phrase as 'I do not say.' The same rule applies where the condition is assumed to be the fact, εἶ being equivalent to ἐπεί ο ὅτι. But beside these cases, in which οὐ was admissible in classical Greek, the latter Greek employs εἶ οὐ instead of εἶ μή as more emphatic, the latter being generally used without a verb (out of ninety-three examples cited by Bruder only fourteen are followed by a verb) in the sense of 'but' or 'except.' Of εἶ οὐ Bruder cites thirty-one examples, omitting however this verse and iii. 2. On the other hand, μή is always used with

¹ [On Exod. xxiv. 7, which ends (lit.) 'we will do and we will hear,' it is written (T. B. Shabbath 88a) that "when Israel put 'we will do' before 'we will hear,' there came 60 myriads of ministering angels, and attached to each one of Israel two crowns, one corresponding to 'we will do' and the other to 'we will hear,' and when they sinned there came down 120 myriads of destroying angels and tore them off."—C. T.]

oùros.] The use of the pronoun to emphasize the apodosis after a relative, a condition or a participle, is a characteristic of the writer's style, cf. below 25, iii. 2.

Tourse, Only here and in ver. 6 in N.T.

άνδρι κατανοούντι έαυτόν.] For ἀνδρί see above ver. 8. Καταν, properly to take note of, as in Xen. Cyrop. ii. 2. 28 κατανοήσας τινὰ τῶν λοχαγῶν ατίνὰειπτον πεπουμρέτον ἄνδρα ὑπέραισχρον, hence, on the one hand volserve, blook at, as here and Acts vii. 31, 32, and more generally see, as in Psa xeiii. 9 ὁ πλάσας τὸν ὀφθαλμόν, οὐχὶ κατανοεῖ; on the other hand consider, as in Heb. x. 24, Herm. Sim. viii. 2. 5, ix. 6, 3.

τὸ πρόσωπον τῆς γενέτεως αὐτοῦ.] On the difficult word γένεσες = 'fleeting curthly existence,' as in Judith xii. 18 πάσας τὰς ἡμέρας τῆς γενέσεως 'all the days of my life,' see below iii. 6. It is used here to contrast the reflexion in the mirror of the face which belongs to this transitory life, with the reflexion as seen in the Word of the character which is being here moulded for eternity.

έν ἐσόπτρω.] The figure of the mirror is also found I Cor. xiii. 12, contrasting the imperfect knowledge gained through the reflexion with the perfect knowledge of the reality (as in Plato's cave, Rep. vii.), 2 Cor. iii. 18 ήμεῖς ἀνακεκαλυμμένω προσώπω τὴν δόξαν Κυρίου κατοπτριεόμετοι (reflecting as in a mirror) την αὐτην εἰκόνα μεταμορφούμεθα ἀπὸ οόξης εἰς δόξαν, with allusion to the glory which shone in the face of Moses, Sir. xii. 11, where the feigning of the hypocrite is compared to the rust on the face of the mirror which has to be rubbed off in order to see his real character, Wisd. vii. 26 σοφία is ἔσοπτρον ἀκηλίδωτον τῆς τον Θεον ἐνεργείας. It is often used by the poets (e.g. Eur. Hipp. 427 130, Ter. Ad. 415), and philosophers, as (Epict. Diss. ii. 14) the Stoic asks τί στοι κακον πεποίηκα; εί μη και το έστοπτρον τῷ αἰσχρῷ ὅτι δεικννει αὐτὸν αθτώ οδός έσταν: Plat. Mor. p. 42 B οὐ γὰρ ἐκ κοιρείου μὲν ἀναστάντα δεί τῷ κατόπτρφ παραστήναι καὶ τῆς κεφαλής ἄψασθαι τὴν περικοπὴν των τριχών επισκοπούντα και της κουράς την διαφοράν έκ δε άκροάσεως ἀπιώντα καὶ σχολής οὐκ εὐθὺς ἀφοράν χρή πρὸς ξαυτών, καταμανθάνοντα την ψυχήν, εἴ τι των οχληρών ἀποτεθειμένη καὶ περίττων ἐλαφροτέρα γέγονε καὶ ήδίων. Bias αρ. Stob. Flor. 21. 11 θεώρει ώσπερ εν κατόπτρφ τας σαυτού πράξεις ίνα τας μέν καλάς έπικοσμής τας δε αίσχρας καλύπτης, often by Philo, cf. Gfrörer, p. 439, who cites M. 2, p. 483 (the Law is compared by the Therapeutae to a living creature, of which the letter is the body and the spirit or intention the soul) ἐν ὧ ἥρξατο ἡ λογικὴ τιχή διαφερώντως τὰ οἰκεία θεωρείν ώσπερ διὰ κατόπτρου τῶν ὀνομάτων, ζξαίστα κάλλη νοημάτων κατιδούσα, ib. 197 (through the number seven) ώς σου κατόπτρου φαντασιούται ὁ νοῦς Θεὸν δρώντα καὶ κοσμοποιούντα, ib. 156 the priest should remember, as he bathes, that the layer was made out of the brazen mirror (Exod. xxxviii. 8), "να καὶ αὐτὸς οἶα πρὸς κάτοπτρου αθγάζη του ίδιου νοίν, Clem. Hom. xiii. 16 καλώ ἐσόπτρω δρά είς τ òr Θ còr $\epsilon \mu \beta \lambda \epsilon \pi o \nu \sigma a$, Clem. Al. Paed. i. 9. p. 150 P. ω_s yàp $\tau \delta$ στοπτρον τῷ αἰσχρῷ οὐ κακόν, ὅτι δεικινει αὐτὸν οἶώς ἐσταν, καὶ ώς ὁ ἰατρὸς τω τοσούντε οὐ κακός, ὁ τὸν πυρετὸν ἀναγγελλων αὐτοῦ ...οἴτως οὐδὲ ὁ ἐλέγχων δύστους $\tau \hat{\varphi}$ κάμνοντι τὴν ψυχήν. The mirror was sometimes made of silver, but more frequently of a mixture of copper and tin (D. of B. s.v.). The point of comparison here is that the Word will show us what needs to be cleansed and amended in our lives, as the mirror in regard to our bodies. It shows us what we actually are in contrast with what our deceitful heart paints us (ver. 26): it shows us also what is the true ideal of humanity which we are called upon to realize in our lives.

24. κατενόησε καὶ ἀπελήλυθεν.] 'Just a glance and he is off.' For the gnomic acrist often used in comparisons see ver. 11 ἀνέτειλεν. A. Buttmann, p. 174, Goodwin, M. and. T. § 30. The proleptic perf. (on which see Buttmann, p. 172) expresses the suddenness and completeness of the action, as in Nen. Cyr. iv. 2. 26 ὁ γὰρ κρατῶν ἄμα πάντα συνήρπακεν, Rom. xiv. 23 ὁ διακρινόμενος ἐὰν φαγἢ κατακέκριται, ib. vii. 2. On the combination of acrist and perfect see below ii. 10 ὅστις πταίση γέγονεν, Winer, p. 339. Both he and Buttmann (p. 171) ignore the special force of the perfect here, and compare it with such barbarous uses as Apoc. v. 7 ἢλθε καὶ εἴληφε τὸ βιβλίον, where, as often in the arguments to the speeches of Demosthenes, the perfect cannot be distinguished from the acrist, cf. εἴληχε and πεποίηκεν for ἔλαχε and ἐποίησεν in Pro Phorm. hyp. p. 944.

εύθίως ἐπελάθετο.] Dr. Taylor (J. of Phil. vol. xviii. p. 317) has pointed out that the phrase is borrowed by Hermas in the remarkable passage

όποῖος η̂ν.] The direct form $\pi o \hat{i} o s$ is always used in N.T. for indirect interrogation except in this verse and in Gal. ii. 6, 1 Thess. i. 9, 1 Cor. iii. 13. So always $\tau i s$, $\pi \phi \sigma o s$, $\pi \phi \tau \epsilon$, $\pi \phi \theta \epsilon v$ for $\delta \sigma \tau i s$, $\delta \pi \phi \sigma o s$, $\delta \pi \phi \tau \epsilon$, $\delta \pi \phi \theta \epsilon v$. "Οπου and $\delta \pi \omega s$ are frequent, but the former is never, the latter only rarely, used in an interrogative sense.

25. παρακύψαs.] 'bending over in order to examine minutely,' 'peering into': so 1 Pet. i. 12 εἰς ἃ ἐπιθυμοῦσιν ἄγγελοι παρακύψαι. It is used of John and of Mary looking into the sepulchre (John xx. 5, 11), also in Sir. xiv. 23 (blessed is) ὁ παρακύπτων διὰ τῶν θυρίδων σοφίας, Philo M. 2. p. 554 ποῦ γὰρ τοῖς ἰδιώταις θέμις εἰς ἡγεμονικῆς ψυχῆς παρακύψαι βουλεύματα, in Act. Thom. Tisch. p. 230 εἰς χάσμα παρακύψαι, Epiet. Diss. i. 1, 16 παρακύπτομεν συνεχῶς τίς ἄνεμος πνεῖ. In classical writers we find it sometimes used with the opposite sense of a careless glance, e.g. Dem. 1 Phil. p. 46 τὰ ξενικὰ παρακύψαντα ἐπὶ τὸν τῆς πόλεως πόλεμον πρὸς 'Αρτάβαζον οἴχεται πλέοντα. Clement of Rome uses ἐγκύπτω in the sense of St. James' παρακ. as in i. 40 ἐγκεκυφότες εἰς τὰ βάθη τῆς θείας γνώσεως, where Lightfoot refers to other passages, esp. 45 ἐγκύπτετε εἰς τὰς γραφάς. So also M. Anton. iv. 3 εἰς ἃ ἐγκύψας, 'contemplating which things.'

νόμον τόλειον τον τῆς ελευθερίας.] The careful hearer feels that the λόγος ἀληθείας is, and must be, the law of his life, though a law of freedom: it is the ideal on which his eye is to be fixed, not a yoke too heavy for his shoulders to bear. Even of the Mosaic law the psalmist says (xix. 7) 'the law of the Lord is perfect,' but this is merely rudimentary when compared with the law of Christ (Gal. vi. 2), as is shown in detail in the Sermon on the Mount, and in the Epistle to the Hebrews. St. Paul speaks of himself as čυνομος Χραστοῦ († Cor. ix. 21), and further describes the new law as τόμος πίστεως (Rom. iii. 27). It is of this he says in language which may serve as a comment on St. James δ νόμος τοῦ πνεύματος της ζωής ἐν Χριστῷ Ἰησοῦ ήλευθέρωσεν με ἀπὸ τοῦ νόμου τῆς ὑμαρτίας καὶ τοῦ θανάτου. Jeremiah prophesied of this law (xxxi. 33) as a new covenant which should be written on the heart. What led St. James to call the Gospel a law of liberty here and in ii, 123. Clearly he must mean by it a law not enforced by compulsion from without, but freely accepted as expressing the desire and aim of the subject of it. Such free obedience is recognized even in the O.T., Exod. xxxv, 5, Deut. xxviii, 47, Psa. i. 2, xl. 8, liv. 6 with a free heart will I sacrifice unto thee, exix. 32 '1 will run the way of thy commandments when thou hast set my heart at liberty,' ib. 45 1 will walk at liberty for I seek thy commandments, '1 cxix, 97 · O how I love thy law,' This freedom is declared to be the gift of God Psa, li. 12 stablish me with thy free Spirit,' corresponding to the words of St. Paul (2 Cor. iii. 16) οὐ τὸ πνεῦμα Κυρίου ἐκεῖ ἐλευθερία. But probably the source of the phrase used by St. James is his recollection of the words recorded Matt. v. 17 οὐκ ἦλθον καταλύσαι τὸν νόμον ἀλλὰ πληρῶσαι, and John viii. 32 γνώσεσθε την ολήθειαν καὶ ή ἀλήθεια ελευθερώσει ύμᾶς. It is another point in which St. James reminds us of the Stoics and their paradox, ὅτι μότος ο σοφὸς ελεύθερος καὶ πῶς ἄφρων δοῦλος, on which Cicero (Parad. 34) comments Quid est libertas? potestas vivendi ut relis: quis igitur vivit nt rult, nisi qui recta sequitur, qui gandet officio, qui legibus quidem non propter metum paret sed eas sequitur atque colit quia id salutare maxime esse indicat? So Ov. Met. i. 90 sponte sua sine lege fidem rectumque colebut, of the golden age, and Plut. Mor. 780 τίς οὖν ἄρξει τεῦ άρχοντος; δ νόμος, δ πάντων βασιλεύς θνητών τε καὶ άθανάτων, ώς έφη Πάνδαρος, οὐκ ἐν βιβλίοις ἔξω γεγραμμένος, ἀλλ' ἔμψυχος ὢν ἐν αὐτῷ (the ruler) λόγος, ἀεὶ συνοικῶν καὶ παραφυλάττων καὶ μηδέποτε τὴν ψυχὴν ἐῶν έρημον ήγεμονίας, Philo M. L. p. 120 νόμος γάρ θείος οθτος τήν άρετην δέ ξαντήν τιμάν, Seneca Vit. Beat. 15 in regno nati sumus: Deo parere libertas est; cf. the Collect 'Whose service is perfect freedom.' The law of liberty is called τέλωος, as the heavenly Tabernacle in Heb. ix. 11, because it carries out, completes, realizes, the object and meaning of the Mosaic law which it replaces (Matt. v. 17). From ii. 8 and 12 we learn something of the contents of St. James' law of liberty; he agrees with St. Paul (Gal. v. 1 and xiii, 14, Rom. xiii, 10) in identifying it with the law of love. Possibly he may not have contrasted it so strongly as St. Paul and St. Peter with the bondage of the Mosaic law (cf. Acts xv. 10, Rom. viii. 2 foll., Gal. iv. 9 foll., 21 foll.), but his view naturally leads on to theirs. Cf. Iren. iv. 39 τὰ ἀποστάντα τοῦ πατρικού φωτός και πυραβάντα τον θεσμόν της έλευθερίας παρά την αὐτών ἀπόστησαν αίτίαν, ib. iv. 34. A libertatis lex id est verbum Dei ab apostolis annuntiatum, iv. 37, 1, iv. 13, 2. For the position of the article see Essay on Grammar, and on the 'Torah' Cheyne's Isaiah i. 10.

 $^{^{-1}}$ Ct. Taylor, $J,\,F,\,$ p. 43 $^{\circ}$ R. Gamliel used to say Do His will as if it were thy will.

παραμείνας. Contrasted with the previous $d\pi \epsilon \lambda \eta \lambda \nu \theta \epsilon$, as παρακύψας with κατενόησε. Cf. John viii. 31 εαν μείνητε εν τῷ λόγω τῷ εμῷ...γνώ- $\sigma \epsilon \sigma \theta \epsilon \tau \dot{\eta} \nu \dot{a} \lambda \dot{\eta} \theta \epsilon \iota a \nu \kappa \tau \lambda$., Luke ii. 19, 51, ib. viii. 15, Deut. xxvii. 26 έπικατάρι τος πας ἄνθρωπος ος οὐκ ἐμμένει ἐν πασι τοῖς λόγοις τοῦ νόμου τούτου ποιήσαι αὐτούς, Philo M. 1. p. 180 τό γε άψαμένους της επιστήμης μὴ ἐπιμεῖναι ὅμοιόν ἐστι τῷ γείσασθαι σιτίων, Diod. ii. 29 ἀλίγοι παραμένουσιν ἐν τῷ μαθήματι (he is contrasting the superficial study and the absence of fixed principles among the Greeks with the opposite among the Chaldeans). The parable, as Occumenius remarks, is incomplete, omitting to give the case of one who makes full use of the mirror, or rather blending the figure with the interpretation in the word παρακύψας.

άκροατής ἐπιλησμονής.] For the gen. of quality see below ii. 4 κριταί διαλογισμών πονηρών, iii. 6 δ κόσμος της άδικίας (where see note), also Essay on Grammar, and Winer p. 297. The only other passage in which έπιλ. occurs in all Greek literature is Sir. xi. 25 κάκωσις ώρας ἐπιλησμονὴν $\pi \omega \epsilon \hat{i} \tau \rho \nu \phi \hat{\eta} s$. According to Meineke's correction of a scholium to Aristophanes (Fr. Com. ii. p. 223) the form was also used by Cratinus. The usual form is $\epsilon \pi i \lambda \eta \sigma \mu o \sigma \dot{\nu} \nu \eta$. Other examples of such double forms ποιητής έργου.] This does not correspond exactly to the preceding phrase, as the genitive here is objective. A more exact opposite would have been π. φιλεργίας or ἐπιμελείας. The present phrase suggests such an opposite as ἀκροατής φωτής. It acquires however a qualitative force by dwelling upon and intensifying the meaning of the word $\pi o i \eta \tau \eta s$. We have above π . $\lambda \acute{o} \gamma o v$ v. 22 and below π . $v \acute{o} \mu o v$ iv. 11.

έν τῆ ποιήσει.] Only here in N.T. It occurs in Sir. xix. 18 έν πάση σοφία ποίησις νόμου, li. 19 έν ποιήσει νόμου διηκριβωσάμην.

26. δοκεί θρησκὸς είναι. Here we have another source of self-deception, not in hearing, but in saying and doing. Cf. Erasmus: Qui Judaismum sapiunt religionis laudem constituunt in palliis ac phylacteriis, in delectu ciborum, in lotionibus, in prolixis precibus ceterisque ceremoniis. Δ οκε $\hat{\iota}$ is used in N.T. either impersonally = (1) 'seems' as Acts xxv. 27 ἄλογόν μοι δοκεῖ, (2) 'seems good' as Luke i. 3 ἔδοξε κάμοί: or personally (1) of others, Acts xvii. 18 ξένων δαιμονίων δοκεί καταγγελεύς ciral, (2) of a man's self, 'think,' as here. In this last meaning the word is used absolutely (a) Matt. xxiv. 44 $\mathring{\eta}$ ώρα οὐ δοκείτε: or (b) with ὅτι Matt. vi. 7 δοκοῦσιν ὅτι εἰσακουσθήσονται: or (c), as here, with infinitive relating to same subject, cf. John v. 39 δοκείτε ἐν αὐταῖς ζωὴν ἔχειν, 1 Cor. iii. 18 εἴ τις δοκεῖ σοφὸς εἶναι, ib. viii. 2, x. 12, xiv. 37, Gal. vi. 3. In some cases (e.g. Gal. ii: 6, Phil. iii. 4) it is disputed whether 'seem' or 'think' is the right rendering. Here the question is decided by the following ἀπατῶν καρδίαν ξαυτοῦ.

θρησκός] ἄπ. λεγ. The word θρησκεία occurs Acts xxvi. 5 κατά την ακριβεστάτην αίρεσιν της ήμετέρας θρησκείας έζησα Φαρισαίος, Col. ii. 18 θρησκεία των άγγελων, and the compound εθελοθρησκεία (self-imposed worship) Col. ii. 23, where see Lightfoot; also in Wisd. xiv. 18 and 27 ή των είδωλων θρησκεία, in 1 Macc. v. 6 τη Torδαίων χρώμενος θρησκεία, ib. v. 12, and in Josephus 1 Ant. iv. 4. 4 τοις κατ' οίκον θύουσιν εὐωχίας ένεκα τῆς αὐτῶν ἀλλά μὴ θρησκείας, ib. v. 10. Ι γυναίκας τὰς ἐπὶ θρησκεία παραγινομένας, ib. ix. 13. 3 (of the priests) ἵνα ἀεὶ τῆ θρησκεία παραμένοσι that they may always remain in attendance on public worship, ib. xii. 5, 4 and xii. 6, 2. Philo carefully distinguishes the term from εὐσέβεια and δσιότης (Μ. 1. 195) πεπλάνηται της πρός εὐσέβειαν όδον, θρησκείαν όντὶ όστιστητος ήγοι μενος καὶ δώρα τῷ ἀδεκάστῳ διδούς, and so Plut, V, Alex, 2 (where he gives the derivation from $\Theta p \hat{\eta} \sigma \sigma a$, which seems to have suggested to Dr. Hilgenfeld his strange idea that $\theta \rho \eta \sigma \kappa \delta s$ is an Orphic word borrowed by St. James) δοκεί το θρησκεύειν όνομα ταίς κατακόροις γενέσθαι κοί περιέργοις ίερουργίαις. Dr. Hatch sums up the result of his investigation (l.c. p. 57) in the words 'religion in its external aspect, as worship or as one mode of worship contrasted with another, must be held to be its meaning in the N.T. as in contemporary writers.' I subjoin some examples from later writers, Justin M. Coh. ad Gent. § 38 την των προγόνων θεοσέβειαν καταλιπόντες διδασκαλία βασκίνου δαίμονος έπὶ τὴν τῶν μὴ θεῶν ἐτράπησαν θρησκείαν, ib. 9, id. Monarch, 1 άτρεπτου έχειν την είς του πάιτων γυώστην θρησκείαυ, ib. των $\epsilon i \delta \omega \lambda \omega r \theta_0$, $\sin t' o h$, and Gent. 10 it is identified with $\theta \epsilon o \sigma \epsilon \beta \epsilon \omega$, the prophets being spoken of as teachers first of one, then of the other], Clem. Rom. i. 45 'Ανανίας καὶ 'Αζαρίας καὶ Μισαὴλ ὑπὸ τῶν θρησκευόντων την μεγαλοπρεπή καὶ ἔνδοξον θρησκείαν τοῦ ὑψ στου κατείρχθησαν εἰς κάμινον πυρός; μηδομώς τοθτο γένοιτο, Clem. Al. Strom. vi. p. 795 P έδωκεν τον ήλων και την σελήνην και τα άστρα είς θρησκείαν. It is of frequent occurrence in Clem. Hom.; see the account there given (vii. 8) of the θρησκεία required by God. The verb θρησκεύω occurs in Wisd. xi. 15 with an object ἐθρήσκενον ἄλογα ἐρπετά, and xiv. It (in the passive) τυράννων επιταγαίς εθρησκεύετο τὰ γλυπτά, Josephus B.J. ii. 9, 2 ήν παρ' αὐτοῖς θρησκενόμενον σάββατον, so Euseb. H.E. ii. 13 τούτους θρησκενέων έπιχειροιντές, Clem. Al. Strom. vi. § 77, p. 778 P το δε (keeping the commandments) έστὶ θρησκεύειν τὸ θείον διὰ τῆς ὅιτως δικαιοσύνης ἔργων τε καὶ γνώσεως, a passage much resembling the text, ib. iv. § 160, p. 636 P $\tau \hat{\eta}$ έβδόρη $\hat{\eta}$ ἀνάπανσις θρησκεύεται, 'is observed.' On the whole the words seem to answer to the Lat. colo, cultus. See Trench Synonyms of N, T, and Coleridge there cited.

χαλιναγωγών.] This seems to be the first use of the word. It occurs again below iii. 2 and in Herm. Mand. xii. 1 ἐνδεδυμένος τὴν ἐπιθυμίαν τὴν ἀγαθὴν μυτήσεις τὴν ποιημὰν ἐπιθυμίαν καὶ χαλιναγωγήσεις αἰτήν, Polycarp ad Phil. v. 3 τεώτεροι χαλιναγωγοῦντες ἐαυτοὺς ἀπὸ παιτὸς κακοῦ, also in Lucian Tyrannicida 4 τὸς ἡδοιῶν ὀρέξεις χαλιναγωγεῖν: Plutarch uses χαλινώω (read here by B.) in the same sense (Mor. p. 967). We find ἀχάλινον στόμα in Avistoph. Ran. 862, Eur. Bacch. 385 and often in Philo, e.g. M. 2, p. 5, 75, 219. Compare for metaphor Diog. L. v. 39 (of Theophyastus) θᾶττον ἔφη πιστεύειν δεῖν ἵππω ἀγολίνω ἡ λόγω άσυντάκτφ, Psa. xxxii. 9, xxxix. 1, exli. 3. For thought see ver. 19, and below iii. 1–10.

ἀπατῶν καρδίαν ἐαντοῦ.] We should rather have expected this to come in the apodosis: 'if any one thinks himself religious and yet does not bridle his tongue, he deceives himself and his religion is vain.' If included in the protasis it would have been more logically expressed by εἴ τις δοκεῖ θρῆσκος εἶναι, μὴ ὅν, ἀλλ' ἀπατῶν κ.τ.λ. For the general μὴ ὅν the writer substitutes that positive failing which he took to be the cause of this unreality. The phrase ἀπ. καρδ. is equivalent to παραλογιζόμενοι ἑαντούς above ver. 22, cf. Rom. xvi. 18 διὰ τῆς εἶναί τι, μηδὲν ὅν, ἑαντὸν ἀρκεναπατᾶ, 1 Cor. iii. 18 μηδεὶς ἑαντὸν ἐξαπατάτω' εἴ τις δοκεῖ σοφὸς εἶναι ἐν ὑμῶν μωρὸς γενέσθω κ.τ.λ., Test. Nephth. p. 668 Fabr. μὴ σπονδάζετε ἐν λόγοις κενοῖς ἀπατᾶν τὰς ψυχὰς ὑμῶν, ὅτι σιωπῶντες ἐν καθαρότητι καρδίας δυνήσεσθε τὸ θέλημα τοῦ θεοῦ κρατεῖν, Hatch, p. 98.

μάταιος.] Cf. τί ὄφελος below ii. 14. Here with two terminations, as in Tit. iii. 9, but with three in 1 Cor. xv. 17, 1 Pet. i. 18, see Winer, p. 80: for thought cf. Isa. i. 10–17, Isocr. ad Nicoc. p. 18 Ε ήγοῦ θῦμα τοῦτο κάλλιστον εἶναι καὶ θεραπείαν μεγίστην ἐὰν ὡς βέλτιστον καὶ δικαιότατον σαυτὸν παρέχης.

27. καθαρά και ἀμίαντος.] Often found together, as in Herm. Sim. v. 7 τὴν σάρκα φύλασσε κ. καὶ ἀμ., Philo 2 M. p. 249, Dion. Hal. A.R. viii. 43, 52 κ. καὶ ἀμ. ἔχειν συμβήσεται τὴν ψυχὴν ἀπὸ παυτὸς χόλου. Erasmus: Purus est apud Judaeos qui morticinium non contigit, qui lotus sit vivo flumine...impurus est qui carnem suillam ederit.

παρὰ τῷ Θεῷ καὶ Πατρί.] The heavenly standard is appealed to here as above ver. 20 δικαιοσύτην Θεοῦ, 1 Pet. ii. 20 τοῦτο χάρις παρὰ Θεοῷ, and below ἐτώπιον Θεοῦ iv. 10. The phrase ὁ Θεὸς καὶ Πατήρ is used below iii. 9 according to some MSS., and by St. Paul 1 Cor. xv. 24. Eph. v. 20, also with ἡρῶν added 1 Thess. i. 3, iii. 11, 13, Gal. i. 3, Phil. iv. 20. Θεὸς πατήρ is found Rom. i. 7, 1 Cor. i. 3, Eph. i. 2, &e., ὁ Θεὸς πατήρ Col. i. 3, iii. 17, where see Lightfoot, 1 Pet. i. 2 ὁ Θεὸς καὶ Πατήρ τοῦ Κυρίου ἡμῶν Ἰ.Χ., Rom. xv. 16, 2 Cor. i. 3, &e.

αὕτη ἐστίν, ἐπισκέπτεσθαι.] For the attraction of τοῦτο to αἴτη see Mady. Gr. § 98 'a demonstrative pronoun to which a substantive is attached as predicate-noun by εἰμί &c. is apt to assume the gender and number of the substantive, Xen. Oeron. 8. 2 αἴτη πενία ἐστὶ σαφής, τὸ δεόμενόν τινος μὴ ἔχειν χρῆσθαι.' For the explanatory infinitive in apposition to αἴτη cf. Winer, p. 663 foll. The verb is used of visiting the sick in Matt. xxv. 36, 43, Sirac. vii. 35, and in classical Greek, as Xen. Cyr. v. 4. 10, viii. 3. 25.

όρφανοὺς καὶ χήρας.] God is called the father of the fatherless and judge of the widow Psa. lxviii. 5; there is a special curse on those who afflict the fatherless and widow Deut. xxvii. 19; the Pharisees are charged with devouring widows' houses (Luke xx. 47); cf. Exod. xxii. 22. Job. xxxi. 16, 17, Sirac. iv. 10 γίτου ὀρφατοῖς ὡς πατηρ καὶ ἀττὶ ἀτδρὸς τῆ μητρὶ αὐτῶν. We find descriptions which recall many of the features of this passage in Barnab. xx. 2 χήρα καὶ ὀρφατῷ οὐ προσέχοντες...ὧν μακρὸν καὶ πόρρω πραύτης καὶ ὑπομονή...οὐκ ἐλεῶντες πτωχόν, εὐχερεῖς ἐν καταλαλία.

...πλουσίων παράκλητοι, πενήτων ἄνομοι κριταί [this is partly borroved from Didache v.], Polycarp Philipp. 6 describes the πρεσβύτεροι as επακεπτόρενοι πάντας ἀσθενείς, μὴ ἀμελοῦντες χήρας ἢ ὀρφανοῦ ἢ πένητος... ἀπεχόρενοι πάντης ὀργῆς, προσωπολημψίας, κρίσεως ἀδίκου; so in Cley. Hom. i. 8 Peter charges the presbyters to act the part of parents to the orphans, of husbands to the widows, cf. Herm. Mand. 8. 10, where Harnack cites many illustrative passages, Ignat. ad. Pol. 4 χῆραι μὴ ἀμελείνθωσαν μετὰ τὸν Κύριον σὰ αὐτῶν φροντιστὴς ἔσο.

ἄσπιλον ἐαυτὸν τηρεῖν.] For asyndeton see Essay on Grammar, ef. 1 Tim, vi. 14 τηρῆσαι τὴν ἐντολὴν ἄσπιλον, 1 Pet. i. 19, 2 Pet. iii. 14, 11erm. Vis. iii. 4. 5 ἄσπιλοι καὶ καθαροὶ ἔσοιται οἱ ἐκλελεγμένοι εἰς ζωὴν αἰώνιον, Sim. v. 6. 7, Lact. Inst. v. 9 (Christianorum) omnis religio est sine seelere ac sine macula vivrre, above ver. 21 ῥνπαρίαν, below iii. 6 ἡ γλῶσσα ἡ σπιλοῦσα ὅλον τὸ σῶμα. For τηρεῖν 1 Tim. v. 22 σεαντὸν

ἀπὸ τοῦ κόσμου.] See below iv. 4, 2 Pet. ii. 20 ἀποφυγόντες τὰ μαίσματα τοῦ κόσμου. For ἀπό Acts xx. 26 καθαρὸς ἐγὰ ἀπὸ τοῦ αἴματος πάιττων, Matt. xxvii. 24 ἀθῷος ἀπὸ, 2 Sam. iii. 28, Mark v. 34 ἴσθι ὑγιὴς ἀπὸ τῆς μάιστιγός σου, Rom. vii. 3 ἐλευθέρα ἐστὶν ἀπὸ τοῦ νόμου. The classical writers use the simple genitive with καθαρός and ἀθῷος; ἐλεύθερος is found with ἀπὸ in Xen. and Plato; Hermas Mand. xi. 4 has κενὸς ἀπὸ τῆς ἀληθείας. See Ryle, Psalms of Sol. p. lxxxiii.

11. 1. ἀδελφοί μου.] See n. on i. 2. There is special propriety in

έν προσωπολημψίαις.] Cf. Rom. ii. 11, Eph. vi. 9, Col. iii. 25, in all of which προσωπολημψία is denied of God, Polycarp ad Phil. 6 $d\pi\epsilon\chi\dot{\phi}$ μενοι πάσης δργής, προσωπολημψίας. The v. προσωπολημπτείν occurs below v. 9., the s. προσωπολήμπτης Acts x. 34 οὐκ ἔστι προσωπολήμπτης ό Θεός, and the adv. ἀπροσωπολήματως 1 Pet. i. 17 also of God (of man Clem. Rom. i. 1). These are the only recorded instances of the use of these compounds. The uncompounded λαμβάνων πρόσωπον occurs in Luke xx. 21, Gal. ii. 6, and in LXX., Lev. xix. 15 οὐ λήμψη πρόσωπον πτωχοῦ οὐδὲ μὴ θαυμάσης πρόσωπον δυναστοῦ, Psa. lxxxii. 2 ἔως πότε κρίνετε άδικίων και πρόσωπα άμαρτωλων λαμβάνετε; Malachi i. 8, 9, ii. 9. Sirac. iv. 21 (of false shame) μη λάβης πρόσωπον κατά της ψυχής σου, ib. 27, 2 Kings iii. 14 πρόσωπον Ίωσαφὰτ λαμβάνω, Didaché 4. 3, Can. Eccl. 20. In all these passages there is signified a bias of judgment owing to the position, rank, circumstances, popularity, and externals generally of the person judged. A just judge must not be influenced by personal prejudices, hopes or fears, but by the single desire to do justice. Other verbs used with $\pi\rho\delta\sigma\omega\pi\sigma\nu$ in much the same sense are θανμάζεις, Judo 16 θανμάζοντες πρόσωπα ώφελείας χάρις, 2 Chron. xix. 7. Job xiii, 10, Prov. xviii, 5, Psalm, Sol. ii, 191 Jused in good sense Clen. xix. 21 ἐθαύμασά ¹ σου τὸ πρόσωπον, 'I have accepted thee']; έπιγινώσκειν, Deut. i. 17 οὐκ ἐπιγνώση πρόσωπον ἐν κρίσει, ib. xvi. 19 ; ύποστέλλεσθαι, Deut. i. 17 οὐ μὴ ὑποστείλη πρόσωπον ἀνθρώπου, Wisdom vi. 8: αιδείσθαι, &c., Prov. xxiv. 23, δς οὐκ ἐπαισχνυθŷ πρόσωπον ἐντίμου Job xxxiv. 19; αίρετίζειν, 1 Sam. xxv. 35 ήρετισα το πρόσωπόν σου 1 Aq. ηρα.

(good sense); κρίνειν, Phoeyl. 10 μὴ κρῖνε πρόσωπον. Equivalent phrases are βλέπειν οι ὁρậν εἰς πρόσωπον Mark xii. 14, 1 Sam. xvi. 7 ἄιθρωπος ὄψεται εἰς πρόσωπον, ὁ δὲ θεὸς ὄψεται εἰς καρδίαν, 2 Cor. x. 7 τὰ κατὰ πρόσωπον βλέπετε; also κρίνειν κατ' ὄψιν John vii. 24, κατὰ τὴν δόξαν κρ. Isa. xi. 3, κατὰ τὴν σάρκα John viii. 15. In its strict sense the Greek would mean to accept the outside surface for the inner reality, the mask for the person, cf. Epict. Ench. 17 μέμιησο ὅτι ὑποκριτὴς εἶ δράματος οἴου ὰν θέλη ὁ διδάσκαλος...σὸν τοῦτ' ἔστιν τὸ δοθὲν ὑποκριτασθαι πρόσωπον καλῶς. The plural of the abstract refers to the many ways in which partiality may show itself, cf. below iv. 16 ἐν ἀλαζονίαις, 2 Pet. iii. 11 ἐν εὐσεβείαις, Col. iii. 22 ἐν ὀφθαλμοδονλείαις, Jude 18 ἐπιθνμίαι ἀσεβειῶν, Winer, p. 220, and for the similar use in Latin my note on Cic. N.D. ii. 98.

ἔχετε τὴν πίστιν.] · Do not have your faith in personal respects,' 'Do not you, who call yourselves believers in Christ, disgrace your faith by exhibitions of partiality.' WH. with marg. in R.V. take ἔχετε as indicative with a mark of interrogation, 'Do ye, in accepting persons, hold the faith?' &c. The interrogative rendering is also preferred by Stier, Schneckenburger, Kern, Gebser, Pott, and other commentators. I think it is simpler and more natural to take ἔχετε as imperative, especially as it is the commencement of a new section of the epistle, and it is the manner of the writer to begin by putting each topic forward clearly and explicitly, usually in the shape of a precept, and afterwards to enforce and illustrate it in a variety of forms. It certainly cannot be said that, taken interrogatively, the sentence gives a clear, unmistakable meaning. At first sight it would seem to suggest that those addressed are not guilty of respect of persons. And the following γάρ, which, if we take ἔχετε as imperative, gives a warning against respect of persons, because it is shown by an example to involve worldly-mindedness and unrighteous judgment, is hard to explain if we take ἔχετε as a question : ('Can it be that you are guilty of partiality? For if you make distinctions in your religious meetings you are not whole-hearted, but led away by worldly considerations.') The imperative also suits better the seriousness of the writer and the opening words ἀδελφοί μου. For έν expressing the sphere of manifestation cf. above i. 21 ἐν πραΐτητι, 1 Tim. i. 18 ἴνα στρατεύη ἐν αὐταῖς τὴν καλὴν στρατείαν. Μὴ ἔχετε is a more personal way of putting μὴ ἔστω ἡ πίστις, implying free-will and responsibility, cf. Mark ix. 50 ἔχετε ἐν ἑαυτοῖς ἄλας, Rom. x. 2 ζῆλον Θεοῦ ἔχουσιν ἀλλ' οὐ κατὰ ἐπίγνωσιν, below ii. 18 σὺ πίστιν ἔχεις κάγὼ ἔργα ἔχω.

τῆς δόξης.] This genitive has been variously interpreted as having an objective, a subjective, or a qualitative force, and been connected in turn by different commentators with every substantive in the sentence: with προσωπολημψίαις (1) by Erasmus, Calvin, Heisen, Michaelis; with $\pi i \sigma \tau \nu$ (2) by the Peshitto, Grotius, Cornelius à Lapide, Hammond and Hofmann; with the whole or a portion of the phrase τοῦ Κυρίου ...Χριστοῦ (3) by the majority of commentators. 1. Erasmus translates Cum partium studio quo ex sua quisque opinione quemlibet aestimat : Calvin. Ne in acceptionibus personarum fidem habeatis...ex opinione, which he explains Nam dum opum rel honorum opinio nostros oculos perstringit, veritas supprimitur.' Both interpretations would make $\delta \delta \xi \eta s$ a subjective genitive, denoting the cause or source of προσωπολημψία. Michaelis, on the other hand, gives it an objective force, translating Admiratio hominum secundum externum splendorem'; and much in the same way, Heisen. It is now generally recognised that the order of the words renders this explanation of the construction impossible. 2. The Peshitto, followed by Grotius, Hammond, Hofmann, &c., translates 'faith of (in) the glory of Christ' (objective genitive). Huther, 'Christ-given faith in the glory to be revealed'; Gataker, followed by Hottoman, 'the glorious faith in Christ' (qualitative genitive). Though the interval between the two words $\pi i \sigma \tau w$ and $\delta \delta \xi \eta s$ in my opinion entirely precludes any qualitative connexion, it is perhaps not so decisive against Grotius' interpretation. To a certain extent we may find a parallel in i. 2: τὸ δοκίμιον ὑμῶν τῆς πίστεως, 'the proof of your faith,' is not unlike την πίστιν... Ίησοῦ Χρισ- $\tau o \hat{v} \tau \hat{\eta} \hat{s} \delta \delta \xi \hat{\eta} \hat{s}$ 'the faith in Christ's glory'; but of course the harshness becomes greater with every additional word which separates them, and with the greater importance of those words. 3. It remains to consider the interpretations which make $\tau \hat{\eta}_s$ $\delta \delta \xi \eta_s$ depend upon the whole, or a part, of the phrase preceding. These may be classified as follows: (a) δόξης depending on Χριστοῦ only; (b) depending on Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ; (c) on τοῦ Κυρίου ἡμῶν; (d) on τοῦ Κυρίου understood; (e) on the whole phrase τ . K. $\dot{\eta}$, 'I X. (a) 'The Messiah of glory': so Laurentius, Schulthess, Lange, Bouman. The objection to this is, that it is impossible thus to separate 'Inσον Χριστον, and that in any case it would require the article before Xpiartov. (b) So Ewald: 'Den Glauben unsers Herrn, Jesus Christus der Herrlichkeit.' This seems to make an arbitrary division of the words, and is also liable to the same objections as (e). Moreover, do we ever find a proper name used with the genitive of quality! (c) 'Our Lord of glory, Jesus Christ.' So Schneckenburger De Wette, Wiesinger. If this were the writer's meaning, why did he not place the words $\tau \hat{\eta}_S \delta \delta \xi \eta_S$ after $\hat{\eta} \mu \hat{\omega}_F Y = (d)$ Our Lord Jesus Christ (the Lord) of glory.' So Baumgarten, Semler and others; but it is without parallel, and is not supported by any of the later commentators. (e) 'Of our glorious Lord Jesus Christ.' So Kern, Alford, Beyschlag, Erdmann, Schegg, and the great majority of modern commentators. We may allow that St. James makes frequent use of the genitive of quality, as in i. 25 ἀκροατης ἐπιλησμοτης, ii. 4 κριταὶ διαλογισμών ποτηρών, &c.: but it is very improbable that such a genitive would be appended to a phrase which is already conplete in itself; and we may safely say that no one would have thought of such a construction for this passage if the other suggested interpretations had not involved equal or even greater harshness.

There is however a perfectly natural and easy construction suggested by Bengel, which has been set aside by later commentators on what seem to me very inadequate grounds. His note is, $\tau \hat{\eta} \hat{s}$ $\delta \hat{o} \xi \hat{\eta} \hat{s}$; est appositio, ut ipse Christus dicatur $\hat{\eta}$ $\delta \hat{o} \xi \hat{a} \dots Christus$ gloria: hine fideles gloriosi. Hane fidelium gloriam nullus mundi honos aequat, nemo personarum acceptor agnoscit.' The objection made to it is that the abstract term $\delta\delta\xi a$, by itself, is too indefinite to bear this weight of meaning. But other abstractions are used of Christ. He calls himself the Truth, the Life; He is called the Word, why not the Glory? If we had before us such a sentence as $\mu \hat{\eta}$ έχετε εν άφροσύνη την πίστιν τοῦ Κυρίου ήμῶν Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ, τοῦ λόγου, we should have no scruple in translating it 'Do not hold in folly the faith of our Lord Jesus Christ, who is the Word,' any more than we have in translating 1 Tim. i. 1 κατ' ἐπιταγήν Κυρίου Χριστοῦ Ἰησοῦ τῆς έλπίδος ἡμῶν, 'According to the command of Christ Jesus, who is our hope.' Why should we object to the similar translation here, 'the faith of our Lord Jesus Christ, who is the glory'? The only question is whether the abstract $\delta \delta \xi a$ is thus used of a person. Bengel cites Luke ii. 31 τὸ σωτήριον ὁ ἡτοίμασας...δόξαν λαοῦ σου Ἰσραήλ, Eph. i. 17 ό Θεὸς τοῦ Κυρίου ἡμῶν Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ, ὁ Πατὴρ τῆς δόξης, 1 Pet. iv. 14 εὶ ὀνειδίζεσθε ἐν ὀνόματι Χριστοῦ, μακάριοι, ὅτι τὸ τῆς δόξης καὶ τὸ τοῦ Θεοῦ Πρεθμα εφ' υμας αναπαύεται (where he takes δόξης as an appellation of Christ). Perhaps more striking parallels are 2 Pet i. 17 φωνης ἀνεχθείσης τοιᾶσδε ὑπὸ τῆς μεγαλοπρεποῦς δόξης ('The words seem a periphrasis for God Himself, Alf.), Col. i. 27 τί τὸ πλοῦτος τῆς δόξης τοῦ μυστηρίου τούτου, \ddot{o} ἐστιν Χριστὸς ἐν ἡμῶν, ἡ ἐλπὶς τῆς δόξης, Rom. ix. 4, where it stands for the Shekinah (cf. 1 Sam. iv. 22, Psa. lxxviii. 61, ib. evi. 20, Isa. iv. 5), John xvii. 22 έγω την δόξαν ην δέδωκάς μοι δέδωκα αὐτοῖς, ib. i. 14 εθεασάμεθα την δόξαν αυτοῦ, δόξαν ώς μονογενοῦς παρὰ Πατρός (of which Westcott says (p. xlvii.) 'Christ the Light of the world is seen by the believer to be the manifested Glory of God'), Heb. i. 3 ἀπαύγασμα δόξης. Similarly μεγαλωσύνη is used Heb. i. 3, and δύναμις Matt. xxvi. 64, cf. Clem. Rom. i. 16 τὸ σκηπτρον της μεγαλωσύνης τοῦ Θεοῦ, ὁ Κύριος ήμῶν Χριστὸς Ἰησοῦς. We may suppose that the reason why the word δόξα stands here alone, without ημών οι τοῦ Πατρός, is in order that it may be understood in its fullest and widest sense of Him who alone comprises all glory in Himself. This interpretation is confirmed by the rhythm which makes a natural pause before $\tau \hat{\eta} s \delta \delta \hat{\xi} \eta s$.

commentary takes $\tau \hat{\eta} s \delta \delta \hat{\xi} \eta s$, as I have done, in apposition to τοῦ Κυρίου. In an appendix on this verse, to show that the name Shekinah was used by the Jews of God or of the Messiah, he cites Psa. Ixxxv. 9 έγγες των φοβουμένων αὐτον το σωτήριον αὐτοῦ, τοῦ κατασκηνῶσαι δόξαν ἐν τῆ γῆ ἡμῶν, on which Jennings notes the glory is certainly as in Psa. Ixiii. 2, Zech. vi. 12, 13, that of the Divine Presence which now again dawns on the restored people...St. John's description of the Advent of Christ offers an approximate parallel..." the Word was made flesh and dwelt (ἐσκήνωσε) among us and we beheld his glory...full of grace and truth": so here ver. 10 tells of a concurrence of Divine goodness and truth.' Bassett refers also to Hazg, ii, 7, 9, Zech, ii, 5, 1, saith the Lord, will be [the] glory in the midst of her,' ib. v. 8, 10, and to the book Sohar, where the Son of God is spoken of as the Shekinah. Thus δόξα would appear to be equivalent to Emmanuel, cf. Apoc. xxi. 3 ή σκηνή (= Shekinah) τοῦ Θεού μετά των ἀνθρώπων, Lev. xxvi. 11, 12 θήσω την σκηνήν μου έν ψμίν καὶ... εμπεριπατήσω εν υμίν, καὶ εσομαι υμών Θεος καὶ υμεῖς έσεσθε μοι λαός, and Pirke Aboth iii. 3 'two that sit together and are occupied in words of Thorah have the Shekinah among them,' where Taylor compares Matt. xviii. 20 'there am I in the midst of them.'2

2. εis συναγωγήν ύμων. Either 'to a meeting of yours,' or 'into your synagogue,' the article being omitted according to Hellenistic use, as in v. 20 ἐκ πλάτης αὐτοῦ. The word is used of a distinctively Christian assembly by Hermas Mand. xi. 9 (when a man having the Spirit of God comes) είς συναγωγήν ἀνδρων δικαίων ..καὶ ἔντευξις γένηται πρὸς τὸν Θ εον της συναγωγής τῶν ἀνδρῶν ἐκεινων (there the power of the Spirit is manifested). In the note Harnack says that the word is used in the earlier Greek only in active sense of 'bringing together,' but by Jewish writers of the apostolic age (1) of the religious community, (2) of the religious assembly, (3) of the place of assembly. It alternates with ἐκκλησία in the LXX., but the latter soon became the predominant and distinctive term among the Christians, συναγωγή being contrasted with it, as denoting an assembly of Jews or heretics, cf. Apoc. ii. 9, iii. 9 συναγωγή τοῦ Σατανᾶ, and many passages cited by Harnack from Tertullian, Irenaeus, Clem. Al., Apost. Constitt. It seems however that the Christians of Judaea retained the wider use, after it had been abandoned elsewhere, as Epiphanius xxx. 18 says of the Ebionites συταγωγήν οὖτοι καλοῦσι την ξαυτών ξεκκησίαν καὶ οὐχὶ ξεκκησίαν (Lightfoot Philipp. p. 190). It is also found loosely used by other Christian writers in the sense of 'gathering' (ἐπισυναγωγή Heb. x. 25), as Ignat. Polyc. iv. 2 πεκεότερον στεαγωγαί γινέσθωσαν (= Didaché xvi. 2 πυκνώς συναχθήσεσθε), Theoph. ad Autol. ii. 14 δέδωκεν δ Θεός

^{1 &#}x27;Commenting on Psa, ii. Simeon ben Jochai speaks of 'the Lord of the serving angels, the son of the Highest, yea, the Shekinah,' and again, 'God said Faithful Shepherd! verily thou art my Son, yea, the Shekinah.'' Bassett, p. 101.

² Delitzsch, in his story on Jerusalem in the time of the Herods, says with reference to this verse of Aboth, 'they had often felt in past days that the Shekinah was in their midst, but now this gracious Presence assumed bodily form in the person of Jesus, as the Messiah of Israel'—(shortened from English tr. p. 121).

τῷ κόσμῳ...τὰς συναγωγὰς, λεγομένας δὲ ἐκκλησίας άγίας, Clem. Al. Strom. vi. 4, p. 756 ἀλήθεια οὐρανόθεν ἄνωθεν ἐπὶ τὴν συναγωγὴν τῆς έκκλησίας ἀφιγμένη, Const. Apostol. iii. 6, οὐ γὰρ ἐπὶ τὸ κοινὸν τῆς συναγωγής ἀνάπαυμα εν τή κυριακή καταιτώσιν. Some have supposed that συναγωγή should be taken in its ordinary sense of a Jewish synagogue, the epistle having been written at a time when the separation of Christians from Jews was not completely effected. Compare Westcott Heb. p. xxxviii. 'For a time the fellowship of the church and synagogue was allowed on both sides. Little by little the growth of the Gentile element in the church excited the active hostility of the Jews against the whole body of Christians, as it troubled the Jewish converts themselves. This hostility could not fail to be intensified in Palestine by the spread of aggressive nationalism there shortly before the outbreak of the Jewish war. . . . When as yet the national unbelief of the Jews was undeclared it was not possible to foresee that the coming of Christ would bring the overthrow of the old order. The approaching catastrophe was not realized in the earlier apostolic writings. epistle to the Hebrews it is shown to be imminent.' So we read in Acts vi. 19 of Christians belonging to the synagogue of the Libertines; in Acts xv. 21 it seems to be implied that the Jewish Christians still heard Moses read in the synagogue every sabbath-day; ib. ix. 4 Saul takes letters to the synagogues in Damaseus bidding them to purge themselves of Christian members, cf. xxii. 19 ἐγὼ ήμην φυλακίζων καὶ δέρων κατὰ τὰς συναγωγὰς τοὺς πιστεύοιτας ἐπὶ σέ. Afterwards in his missionary journeys St. Paul regularly begins by preaching in the synagogues (Acts xiii. 14, 43; xiv. 1; xvii. 1, 2, 10, 17; xviii. 4, 26; xix. 8); in Corinth we hear of his leaving the synagogue in consequence of the violent opposition of the Jews and making use of an adjoining house (Acts xviii. 7); at Ephesus he preached in the synagogue for three months before he withdrew to the school of Tyrannus (ib. xix. 9). In our text it is plain that the writer supposes the meeting-place mentioned to be open to non-Christians: strangers might enter it either from curiosity, or from sympathy, or from malice to spy out what was going on. But as it is called συναγωγήν ύμων, it is evidently assumed that it was mainly under Christian The precise circumstances would of course vary from town direction. to town.

χρυσοδακτύλιος.] ἀπ. λεγ. Lucian (Tim. 20) uses χρυσόχειρ in the same sense, and Epict. Diss. i. 22 speaks of γέρων χρυσοῦς δακτυλίους ἔχων πολλούς, so Seneca N.Q. vii. 31 omni articulo gemma exp nitur, Plin. N.H. xxxiii. ch. 6, Juv. i. 28: that the wearing of rings was customary among the Jews appears from Luke xv. 22. In Const. Apost. i. 3 Christians are warned against fine clothing and wearing of rings (μηδὲ χρυσήλατον σφευδόνην τοῦς δακτύλοις σου περιθῆς), for these are all marks of wantonness. For ἀνήρ see above i. 8 n.

èν ἐσθῆτι λαμπρα.] èν is classical in this use, like in in Latin. The same epithet is used (Luke xxiii. 11) of the robe in which Herod clothed Jesus [should this be identified with the πορφυροῦν ἰμάτιον put on him by the soldiers John xix. 2?], and of the angel (Acts x. 30), cf. Posidonius

ap. Athen. v. p. 212 d. of the upstart Athenio, who εξήει χλαμέδα λαμπραν εκσύρων καὶ περικείμενος δακτύλων χρυσίων, Philo M 2. p. 50 (of Joseph) διτὶ ἡυπώσης λαμπραν έσθητα ἀντιδώντες, Artemid. ii. 3 fin. δεὶ δὲ ὅμεινον καθαρὰ καὶ λαμπρὰ ἡμάτια ἔχειν καὶ πεπλυμένα καλῶς ἡ ἡυπαρὰ καὶ ἄπλυτα. There does not seem any reason to confine the meaning to white colour as Thomas Magister and Casaubon on Fineophy. Char. 21. According to Wolf, the latter allows (in his Exercitt. c. Bar. xvi. 73. p. 532) that it may refer to any brilliant colour, and so Salmas, on Tertull. Pall. p. 182. In Euseb. II.E. ii. 10 a robe called λαμπρὰ καὶ βασιλική is afterwards described as στολὴ εξ δργύρου πεσισιμένη. Here the contrast with ἡυπαρά 'soiled,' 'shabby' (see above i. 21 n.) would perhaps be most marked in the case of white, which was also the usual colour worn by the Jews. Similar expressions are ἱματυτμὸς ἔνὸοξος Luke vii. 25, ον πολυτελής 1 Tim. ii. 9.

είσελθη δὲ καί.] · And there come in also on the other hand.' For omission of the correlative μέτ cf. above i. 13 πειμάζει δέ, below v. 10 πταίση δέ, iv. 6 ταπεινοῖς δέ, Matt. xxiii. 24, 25, Buttın. p. 312 foll. For the repetition of the verb see Essay on Grammar. We must suppose that in each case the man is unknown, and that each has his place assigned to him only on the ground of his appearance. St. Paul refers to such visits from strangers in 1 Cor. xiv. 23. For construction see below ver. 15 foll. ἐὰν γυμνοῖ ἑπάρχωσιν... εἴπη δέ τες ..μὴ δῶτε δέ.

3. ἐπιβλέψητε.] 'Look with favour,' as in Luke i. 48, ix. 38, I Kings viii. 28, Psa. xxiv. 16. This meaning is not found in classical writers.

κάθου $\hat{\omega}$ δε καλ $\hat{\omega}$ s. The form κάθου for κάθησο occurs in Psa. ex. 1 κίθου ἐκ δεξιῶν μου (tive times quoted in N.T.), and in Sir. ix. $9 \mu \epsilon \tau a$ ύπάνδρου γυναικός μὴ κάθου. It is attributed by the grammarians to Aristophanes and Menander, but it is not found in their extant remains. The corresponding indicative $\sigma \hat{v} \kappa \hat{a} \theta \eta$ is found Acts xxiii. 3, see Winer p. 98. For καλώς = lante, pulchre, i.e. 'in a good seat,' Field compares Alciph. Ερ. iii. 20 ἄγει μέ τις λαβών είς τὸ θέατρον καθίσας έν καλῷ, Aelian V.II. ii. 13 ἐν καλῶ τοῦ θεάτρου καθῆσθαι, see too Arist. Eq. 785 καθίζου μαλακῶς, Theile quotes 'Ptolemy καλῶς ἐκάθισε a bust of Homer,' for which he gives the erroneous reference Socr. xiii. 22. On the distinctions in the synagogue see D, of B, s.v. and Matt. xxiii, 6; and, as to the duties of the deacons in finding seats for strangers in the congregation, Apost. Const. ii. 58 (where there may perhaps be an allusion to this passage in the words ϵi $\delta \epsilon \pi \tau \omega \chi \delta s$ $\hat{\eta}$ $\hat{u} \gamma \epsilon r \hat{\eta} s$ $\hat{\eta}$ $\hat{\xi} \epsilon r \sigma s$ $\hat{\epsilon} \pi \epsilon \lambda \theta \omega \ldots \kappa \omega \epsilon$ τόπος οὐχ ὑπόρχει, καὶ τούτοις τόπον ποιήσει έξ όλης της καρδίας ὁ διάκοιος ΐνα μή προς ἄνθρωπον γένηται ή προσωπόληψις, άλλα προς Θεον ή διακονία cd ipartos κ τ.λ.), Plut. Mor. 58 C.

και τῷ πτωχῷ εῖπητε.] We should rather have expected δέ instead of καί to point the contrast to the case of the rich man; but the writer regards each action by itself, irrespective of the contrast, as constituting an instance of $\pi \rho \rho \sigma \omega \pi \rho \lambda \eta \mu \sqrt{a}$.

τέιχος, and see Luke x. 39 παρακαθίσασα παρὰ τοῦς πόδας τοῦ Κυρίου, ib. viii. 35 and Acts xxii. 3.

4. οὐ διεκρίθητε ἐν ἐμυτοῖς.] 'Are you not divided in yourselves,' i.e. guilty of διψυχία, as in i. 8? You have not a single eye, but you are influenced by worldly considerations: you look to the world and not to Christ only. For διεκ. see on i. 6, and αδιάκριτος iii. 17. For εν ξαυτοίς instead of $\vec{\epsilon} \nu \ \hat{\nu} \mu \hat{\nu} \nu \ a \hat{\nu} \tau \hat{o} \hat{i} \hat{s}$ see i. 22 n. and cf. Mark xi. 23 $\delta \iota a \kappa \rho \iota \theta \hat{\eta} \ \hat{\epsilon} \nu \ \tau \hat{\eta}$ καρδία αὐτοῦ. For construction $\dot{\epsilon}$ αν $\dot{\epsilon}$ ίπητ $\dot{\epsilon}$...οὐ διεκρίθητε, nor. instead of future or present, cf. 1 Cor. vii. 28 ἐὰν γαμήσης οὐκ ημαρτές, John xv. 6 έὰν μή τις μένη ἐν ἐμοὶ ἐβλήθη ἔξω καὶ ἐξηράνθη, Dem. F.L. p. 411 καν ἀναγκασθή που συντυχεῖν ἀπεπήδησεν εὐθέως. I think the agrist in such passages commonly expresses the immediateness of the consequence 'if ye speak thus, ye are thereby shown to be, cf. n. on i. 24 on a similar use of the perfect. In 1 Cor. vii. 28 it seems to show a wish on the part of the apostle to repudiate at once any idea of blaming a man for marrying; 'if you should marry, I don't mean to say it was wrong in you to get married,' see Winer p. 366 and Devarius ii. 451 there referred to; Goodwin § 155. Others take it as the gnomic agrist expressing a general fact, on which see i. 11, 24.

κριταὶ διαλογισμῶν πονηρῶν.] 'Wrong-considering judges,' gen. of quality like ἀκροατῆς ἐπιλησμονῆς above i. 25, ὁ κόσμος τῆς ἀδικίας below iii. 6, κρίσιν βλασφημίας Jude 9. Any one who speaks against his neighbour becomes a κριτής, as we read below iv. 11. The reference here is to the worldly considerations of expediency which made them pay court to the rich and slight the poor. The phrase occurs also in Matt. xv. 19 ἐκ τῆς καρδίας ἔρχονται διαλογισμοὶ πονηροί, an example of such διαλογισμοί is given Luke v. 21, 22, Rom. i. 21, see Hatch p. 8.

5. ἀκούσατε.] One of the rousing words employed by St. James, like μὴ πλανᾶσθε i. 16, ἄγε νῦν iv. 13. It is not used in the other epistles. In the Gospels and Apocalypse we find the still more urgent ὁ ἔχων οὖς ἀκονσάτω. The simple ἀδελφοί of v. i. is here repeated in a more affectionate form, as i. 16, 19 repeat i. 2.

ἐξελέξατο.] Used (in middle voice only) of the choosing of Israel Deut. xiv. 1, 2, and of the 'elect' Eph. i. 4; St. Paul speaks in much the same way 1 Cor. i. 27 τὰ μωρὰ τοῦ κόσμου ἐξελέξατο ὁ Θεός κ.τ.λ. and our Lord, Luke xviii. 25, Matt. xi. 5. 25.

τοὺς πτωχοὺς τῷ κόσμῳ.] 'Poor to the world' i.e. in the world's judgment, 'outwardly poor,' see below iv. 4 and Luke xii. 21 δ θησανρίζων έαντῷ καὶ μὴ εἰς Θεὸν πλουτῶν. For a similar antithesis of the outwardly poor and inwardly rich cf. above i. 9 ὁ ταπεινὸς ἐν τῷ τὖει, 1 Tim. vi. 17, 18 τοῖς πλουσίοις ἐν τῷ νῦν αἰῶνι)(πλουσίοις ἐν ἔργοις καλοῖς.¹ So of the two kinds of wisdom below iii. 15 and 1 Cor. iii. 19 ἡ σοφία τοῦ κόσμον μωρία παρὰ τῷ Θεῷ ἐστίν. For dative cf. Acts vii. 20 ἀστείος τῷ Θεῷ, 2 Cor. x. 4 δυνατὰ τῷ Θεῷ, 1 Cor. ix. 2 ἄλλοις οἰκ εἰμὶ ἀπόστολος, Winer p. 265. On πτωχός see Hatch p. 73. It is the regular word for 'poor' in N.T.

πλουσίους ἐν πίστει.] Oblique predicate, after ἐξελέξατο. This verb is sometimes used absolutely, as in Mark xiii. 20, 1 Cor. i. 27; sometimes with infinitive as in Acts i. 25 ἀνάδειξων ον έξελέξω...λαβείν τον τοπου της διακονίας ταύτης. Eph. i. Rom. viii. 29 οθς προέγνω και προώρισεν συμμώρφωνς της εἰκόνος, Phil. iii. 21 δς μετασχηματίσει το σώμα της ταπεινώσεως ήμων σύμμορφον τῷ σώματι της δόξης αὐτοῦ, 2 Cor. iii. 6 ίκανωσεν ήμας διακόνους καινής διαθήκης. We find ∂r , expressing the sphere, used with $\pi\lambda \omega \omega \sigma \omega \sigma$ and the cognate verbs in 1 Cor. i. 5 $\epsilon n \pi a r \tau \ell \lambda \delta \gamma \phi \epsilon \pi \lambda a v \tau \ell \sigma \theta \eta \tau \epsilon$, 2 Cor. ix. 11, 1 Tim. vi. 18 πλουτείν εν έργοις, so Eph. ii. 4 Θεός πλούσιος ών εν ελέει. Wetst. cites the rabbinical phrase 'rich in the law' = learned. The antithesis is not logically exact (cf. above i. 17 $\pi \hat{a} \sigma a$, and 25 $\pi o \iota \eta \tau \dot{\eta} s \, \xi \rho \gamma o v$): either the latter member should have been 'rich towards God,' or the former 'poor in worldly wealth' as opposed to those who are rich in the inner treasure of faith. κληρονόμους της βασιλείας.] Matt. v. 3 μακάριοι οί πτωχοί τῷ πνεύματι ὄτι αὐτῶν ἐστιν ή βασιλεία τῶν οἰρανῶν (τῷ πνεύματι is omitted in Luke xvi. 20), Matt. xxv. 35 δεθτε οἱ εὐλογημένοι τοθ πατρός μου κληρονομήσατε την ήτοιμασμένην δμίν βασιλείαν ἀπὸ καταβολής κόσμου, 1 Pet. i. 4 εἰς κληρονομίαν ἄφθαρτον καὶ ἀμίαντον, Justin M. Diogn. 10 οἶς τὴν ἐν οὐρανῷ βασιλείαν ζπηγγείλατο καὶ δώσει τοῖς ἀγαπήσασιν αὐτόν, borrowed, as the final words show, from this passage. See Westcott's excellent note on Heb. vi. 12, pp. 167ff., where after tracing the use of the word κληρόνομος in the O.T. he says that in the N.T. the word is commonlyused in connexion with the blessing (1 Pet. iii. 9) which belongs to divine sonship, the spiritual correlative to the promise to Abraham (Rom. iv. 13f.; viii, 17; Gal. iii, 18, 29; iv. 1, 7; ef. e. vi. 12, 17; xi. 8). The son of God as son enjoys that which answers to his new birth (cf. Matt. v. 5; Eph. i. 14, 18; Col. iii, 24). This is described as "eternal life" (Matt. xix, 29; Tit. iii, 7; comp. Mark x, 17; Luke x, 25, xviii. 18), or "the kingdom of God" (1 Cor. vi. 9f.; xv. 50; Gal. v. 21; comp. Matt. xxv. 34; Eph. v. 5), or "salvation" (Heb. i. 14), an "inheritance incorruptible," "the eternal inheritance" (Heb. ix. 15)." Also p. 183, the heirship of man to the Divine blessing answering to his nature is founded on God's purpose in creation, on the gift of His image with the power of attaining to His likeness.'

ής ἐπηγγείλατο τοῖς ἀγαπῶσιν αὐτόν.] See above i. 12, where the same words are used of the crown. For attraction cf. I John iii. 24 ἐκ τοῦ πνεύματος οὖ ἰδωκεν. Winer p. 203. In the Psalms the poor' is almost equivalent to 'the godly'; with the same feeling the Jewish Christians took the name 'Ebionites.'

In this and the following verses their $\pi\rho\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma\lambda\eta\rho\psi\dot{a}$ is condemned (1) as implety, contravening the purpose of God, who has selected the poor as special objects of His love; (2) as injustice and want of common sense, since it was the rich who oppressed them.

6. ἡτιμάσατε.] In the case supposed you slighted him by putting him into an inferior position, cf. Prov. xiv. 21 ὁ ἀτιμάζων πένητας ἁμαρτάνει, ἐλεῶν δὲ πτωχοὺς μακαριστός, ib. xxii. 22, Sir. x. 22 οὐ δίκαιον ἀτιμάσαι πτωχὸν συνετὸν καὶ οὐ καθήκει δοξάσαι ἄνδρα ἁμαρτωλόν, the word is also used Luke xx. 11, Acts v. 41. For a similar instance of unfair distinctions among Christians see 1 Cor. xi. 22. St. Peter in his 1st epistle ii. 17 lays down the rule πάντας τιμήσατε.

οί πλούσιοι καταδυναστεύουσιν ύμῶν.] In the supposed case the sole ground of preference between the two strangers was that the one seemed rich, the other poor; but you have certainly no reason for favouring the rich as a class. The verb only occurs elsewhere in Acts x. 38 in N.T. but we find the similar forms κατακυριεύειν and κατεξουσιάζειν Matt. xx. 25. It is not uncommon in LXX. with acc., cf. Mieah ii. 2 οἴκους κατεδυτάστευον, Amos viii. 4, Wisd. ii. 10 καταδυταστεύσωμεν γείνητα δίκαιον κ.τ.λ., ib. xv. 14. For warnings against wealth cf. below v. 1 foll., 1 Tim. vi. 9, 10, Matt. xiii. 22, xix. 23 foll., Sir. xiii. 3, 18.

αὐτοὶ ἔλκουσιν ὑμᾶς εἰς κριτήρια;] 'With their own hands drag you to the tribunals.' The pronoun avròs is used in the nominative, not only with the meaning 'self' when attached to a subject, as in classical Greek, but also when itself standing for the subject, with a less amount of emphasis, which we might render 'he for his part' or 'it was he who,' as in the next clause; it is disputed whether it does not in some cases lose its emphatic force altogether, as in Luke xix. 2 καὶ ἰδοὺ ἀνὴρ ονόματι καλούμενος Ζακχαίος, καὶ αὐτὸς ἢν ἀρχιτελώνης καὶ αὐτὸς πλούσιος. where it seems pleonastic, so xxiv. 31 αὐτῶν δὲ διηνοίχθησαν οἱ ὀφθαλμοὶ καὶ ἐπέγνωσαν αὐτόν καὶ αὐτὸς ἄφαντος ἐγένετο ἀπ' αὐτῶν, see Winer, p. 186 foll.; A. Buttmann, p. 93 foll. I have not noticed the fem. and neut, used in this laxer signification. St. Paul condemns Christians for going to law with one another (1 Cor. vi. where see Wetst.): here St. James is speaking of the persecution of Christians by Jews, especially by the rich Sadducees, cf. Acts iv. 1, xiii. 50. Paul and Silas were dragged before the judgment-seat (called κριτήριον 1 Cor. vi. 2, 4, Exod. xxi. 6, Dan. vii. 9, Polyb. ix. 33; the elassical word is δικαστήριον) at Philippi, επιλαβόμενοι είλκυσαν είς την άγοραν επί τους ἄρχοντας (Acts xvi. 19); and of Saul before his conversion we read σύρων ἄνδρας καὶ γυναῖκας παρεδίδου εἰς φυλακήν. Our Lord foretold that his disciples would be cited before the law courts both of Jews and Gentiles (Matt. x. 7, 18), be expelled from the synagogues and put to death (John xvi. 2).

7. οὖκ αὐτοὶ βλασφημοῦσιν τὸ καλὸν ὄνομα.] 'Is it not they who blaspheme the noble name?' Βλάσφημος and its cognates are used generally of slander and evil-speaking, as in 2 Pet. ii. 11, Tit. iii. 2, Col. iii. 8: in the N.T. they have also the special meaning of impicty towards God and Christ (= λέγει ἀνάθεμα Ἰησοῦν): so St. Paul Acts αχνι. 11 κατά πασας τὰς συταγωγὰς πολλάκις τιμωρῶν αὐτοὺς ἠμάγκαζον βλασφημεῖν, and 1 Tim. i. 13 τὸ πρότερον ὅντα με βλάσφημον καὶ διώκ την καὶ ὑβραστήν. Cf. Justin M. Trypho § 117 (Χηστοῦ) ὅνομα βεβη λωθήναι κατὰ πῶσαν τὴν γῆν καὶ βλασφημεῖσθαι οἱ ἀρχιερεῖς τοῦ λαοῦ ὑμῶν καὶ ὁιδάσκολοι εἰργάσαντο, ib. § 16 with Otto's note. We first read of the sin of blasphemy and its punishment in Lev. xxiv. 10-16.

If this is understood of wealthy members of the Church, we must explain it, either by supposing that the rich were more readily induced to apostatize and blasphene Christ (cf. Acts xxvi. 11, Plin. E_{P} , x, 97, 5, Polye, Mart. 9) than the poor, which may be illustrated from Herm. Sim. viii. 6, 4 οδτοί είσιν οἱ ἀπεστάται καὶ προδόται τῆς ἐκκλησίας και βλασφημήσαντες έν ταις άμυρτίως αὐτῶν τὸν Κύριον (valled βλάσφημοι είς τον Κύρων ib. ix. 19, 1) έτι δε και επαισχυνθέντες το όνομα Κυρίου τὸ ἐπικληθὲν ἐπ' αὐτούς, where see Harnack's note; or, in accordance with Rom, ii. 21 το όνομα του Θεου δι' ύμας βλασφημείται εν τοις εθνεσιν (a quotation from Isa, lii. 5), 2 Pet. ii. 2 δι' οῦς ή δδὸς τῆς ἀληθείας βλασφημηθήσεται, 1 Tim. vi. Ι ήτα μη τὸ ὅτομα τοῦ Θεοῦ βλασφημήται, Tit. ii. 5, we may understand it of those who profess to know God but by their works deny Him, Tit. i. 16, cf. Clem. Rom. ii. 13. The use of the active voice seems less suited to this interpretation, though Theile cites from Euseb, Η.Ε. v. 1 διὰ τῆς ἀναστροφῆς αὐτῶν βλασφημοῦντες τὴν ὁδόν. On the whole I think the general sense of the passage suits better with the idea that the blaspheners are unbelieving Jews, as in Acts xiii. 45 ἀιτέλεγον βλασφημοῦντες, and this is suggested, as Dr. Plummer remarks, by the following εφ' ύμας, not επ' αὐτούς.

τὸ καλὸν ὅνομα.] (ff. below v. 14, Acts v. 41 ὑπὲρ τοῦ ὁι όματος ἀτιμασθήναι. τὸ ἐπικληθὲν ἐψ΄ ὑμᾶs.] This Hebraism comes from the LXX. (Amos ix. 12) πάιτα τὰ ἔθιη ἐψ΄ οὖς ἐπικέκληται τὸ ὅνομά μον ἐπ' αὐτούς, also quoted by the writer of this epistle in his address to the Council at Jerusalem (Acts xv. 17). The phrase is common in the O.T., see Deut. xxviii. 10 ὅὐ ονται πάντα τὰ ἔθιη ὅτι τὸ ὅνομα Κνρίον ἐπικέκληταί σοι, Numb. vi. 27, 2 Chron. vii. 14, Isa. Ixii. 2, Ixiii. 19, Jer. xxv. 29, 2 Macc. viii. 15. It is used not only of Israel, as the people of Jehovah, but also of the wife taking the husband's name (Isa. iv. 1), of children named after their tather (Gen. xlviii. 16). It is questioned whether the reference here is to the name Χρισταινός, which came into use at Antioch apparently before St. Paul's first missionary journey (Acts xi. 26), and which is found Acts xxvi. 28, I Pet. iv. 16 (see Lightfoot's Ignatius vol. i. pp. 400–401); or to baptism, cf. Acts ii. 38 βαπτισθήτω ἔκαστος ὑμῶν ἀνομάται τὸν ὅιθροπον τὸ ὅνομα τοῦ Ὑιοῦ Θεοῦ νεκρός ἐστιν ὅταν δὲ λάβη τὴν σφραγίδα (baptism) ἀποτίθεται τὴν νέκρωσιν καὶ ἀναλαμβάνει τὴν ζωήν, Justin M. Apol. i. p. 94 D (in baptism) ἐπονομάζεται τῷ ἐλομένῳ ἀναγεινῆθηναι...τὸ τοῦ Πατρὸς τῶν ὅλων ὅνομα. The latter explanation seems the better, both as more suited to the phrase, which seems to imply an actual invocation of the name of Christ over each individual believer; and also because Christians were known to each other by such names as ἀδελφοί and πιστοί, while Χριστιανοί, like Nαζωραίοι and Γαλιλαίοι, was at first used by outsiders as a name of reproach.

8. This respect for the rich may however ($\mu \acute{e}\nu \tau o\iota$ in its ordinary sense) proceed from a good motive; it may be you are filled with the spirit of love, ready to forgive injury and to do to others as you would have them do to you. If so, well and good. But if your conduct is really determined by worldly motives, if you treat the rich well simply because he is rich and you wish to gain favour with him, and treat the poor harshly because he cannot advance your interests, then you break the law which forbids respect of persons and enjoins special consideration for the poor. It will not do for you to plead that you are scrupulous in other duties. The law is a whole; it is the revelation of God's will: disregard to a single point is disregard to the Lawgiver; it is disobedience to God, and the spirit of disobedience breaks the law as a whole. Do not entertain any idea of keeping this or that particular precept and obtaining credit by that means. Such views belong to the slavish conception of law as a collection of unconnected rules bearing on outward conduct alone. The Christian law is a law of liberty; it is the free manifestation in outward act of the loving spirit within. We shall be judged not by the observance or neglect of this or that external rule, but by the degree in which our heart and life has been penetrated by the spirit of love. If we show kindness, consideration, compassion in our behaviour to other men, we shall meet the same in God's judgment of us.

νόμον τελείτε βασιλικόν.] Middleton (p. 423) thinks the absence of the article forbids the translation 'the royal law.' I do not understand what he means by the words, 'βασιλικός I interpret excellent, in which case the article is unnecessary.' We have no right to tone down the remarkable word βασιλικός, and even if we were at liberty to do so it makes very poor sense to say 'ye fulfil an excellent law.' Hofmann and Schegg however agree with M.: the latter says 'νόμον ohne Artikel, weil Jakobus nicht das Gesetz der Nächstenliebe meint, sondern ein spezielles Gebot das aus dem Nächstenliebe hervorgeht (viz. "Seeleneifer," the Jewish love of proselytizing, as he explains above) und so erhaben ist dass es ein königliches genannt zu werden verdient.' Such an interpretation needs no refutation, but it is strange that neither Winer nor Buttmann has referred to this passage in discussing the use of the article in the N.T. There is no difficulty in the anarthrous vóμος being used (as below iv. 11) for the law of Christ or of Moses on the same principle that βασιλεύς could be used for the king of Persia, but the addition of an anarthrous epithet should not have been passed over without comment, as it has been by the editors generally. The only other instances named by Winer are 1 Thess. i. 9 δουλεύειν Θεώ ζωντι καὶ ἀληθιτῷ (which might there be indefinite, 'to serve a living and true God,' in contrast with the preceding ἐπεστρέψατε ἀπὸ των είδωλων: see however Westcott on Heb. iii. 12 ἀποστήναι ἀπὸ Θεοῦ ζῶιτος 'the anarthrous title, which is far more common than δ Θ. δ ζῶι, always fixes attention upon the character as distinguished from the "Person" of God. In every case it suggests a ground for corresponding thought or action'), and the constantly recurring Ηνενμα ἄγιον, which is used not only after a preposition, as in Matt. i. 18 εξρέθη ἐν γαστρὶ έχουσα έκ Ηνείματος άγίοι, but also without a preposition and even in the nominative, e.g. Luke i. 15 Πνεύματος άγίου πλησθήσεται, v. 35 Πνεύμα αγιον έπελεύσεται έπὶ σέ, ib. ii. 25 Πνεθμα ήν αγιον έπ' αὐτόν. It is noticeable that, when there is no article, the words are always in this order, but, with the article, τὸ ἄγιον Πν. is not much less common than τὸ Πν. τὸ ἄγ. We may compare also Luke i. 17 μνησθηναι διαθήκης άγίας αὐτοῦ and other exx. given in the Essay on Grammar. The phrase νόμον τελείτε is only found here and in Rom. ii. 27. The commandment of love on which all others hang (Rom. xiii. 8, Gal. v. 14) is rightly called 'supreme' βασιλικός: so Philo M ii. 459 οἱ σοφοὶ βασιλικώτερον οὐδὲν ἀρετῆς νομίζοντες, ib. p. 364 βασιλικὴν εἴωθεν ὀνομάζειν Μωϊσῆς ὁδὸν την μέσην υπερβολής και ελλείψεως ουσαν μεθόριον, ib. M i. p. 526 astronomy is βασιλὶς τῶν ἐπιστημῶν. Zahn (Gesch. Neut. Kan. i. 323) compares Clem. Al. Strom. vi. p. 164, the Scripture says 'if your righteousness do not exceed that of the scribes and Pharisees' (whoso righteousness consisted only in abstaining from evil, σèν τῷ μετὰ τῆς έν τούτοις τελειώσεως) καὶ τῷ τὸν πλησίον ἀγαπῶν καὶ εὐεργετεῖν δύνασθαι, οὖκ ἔσεσθε βασιλικοί, ib. vii. 73 ὅταν μὴ κατ' ἀνάγκην ἢ φόβον ἢ ἐλπίδα δίκαιός τις ἢ ἀλλ' ἐκ προαιρέσεως. αἕτη ἡ ὁδὸς λέγεται βασιλικὴ ἢν τὸ βασιλικὸν δδεύει γένος. Clement's use reminds one of βασίλειον ίεράτευμα (Εχ. xix. 6. 1 Pet. ii. 9). And this would make excellent sense. Christ's law is not addressed to slaves, who must obey whether they will or not, but to kings who voluntarily embrace the law as their guide: cf. the Stoic paradox in Hor, E_P , i. 1, 106. A curiously close verbal resemblance is found in pseudo-Plato Minos 317 C τὸ μὲν ὀρθὸν νόμος ἐστὶ βασιλικός, τὸ δὲ μὴ ὀρθὸν οἔ, where βασιλικός apparently means 'worthy of a statesman,' it having been stated just before that laws are the compositions of those who know how to rule states, viz. οἱ πολιτικοί τε καὶ οἱ βασιλικοί: ef. id. Ep. 8. p. 354 C.

κατὰ τὴν γραφήν.] Of course the O.T. viz. Lev. xix. 18, of which the

άγαπήσεις τὸν πλησίον σου ὡς σεαυτόν.] In Hellenistic Greek, as in Hebrew, the fut, is often used for imperat. e.g. Matt. v. 48 ἔσεσθε ὑμᾶς τέλειοι, ib. vi. 5 οὐκ ἔσεσθε ὡς οἱ ὑποκριταί, Rom. vii. 7 οὐκ ἐπιθυμήσεις: this is very rarely the case in classical Greek, see Winer, p. 396. The law, which is limited in Leviticus by the context οὐ μητιεῖς τοῖς νἱοῖς τοῦ λαοῦ σον, receives the widest significance as re-uttered by Christ Luke x. 27 foll., John xv. 12. Hillel is said to have told a proselyte that the essence of the law was contained in the saying 'what is hateful to thyself, do not to thy fellow,' and that the rest was only commentary.\(^1\) The phrase δ $\pi\lambda\eta\sigma\ell\sigma\nu$ is classical (as also δ $\pi\epsilon\lambda\alpha$ s). We find it without a following gen. in Rom. xiii. 10, xv. 2; $\tau\delta\nu$ $\epsilon\tau\epsilon\rho\sigma\nu$ is used as its equivalent in Rom. xiii. 8, see Vorst, pp. 67, 562.

καλῶς ποιεῖτε.] Used ironically below ver. 19, but here simply as in 2 Pet. i. 19 (τὸν λόγον) ῷ καλῶς ποιεῖτε προσέχοντες, Acts x. 33, 1 Cor. vii. 37, Phil. iv. 14. There is a similar phrase in the circular letter written from the Council of Jerusalem, probably by St. James, in Acts xv. 29 ἐξ ὧν διατηροῦντες ἐαυτοὺς εὖ πράξετε.

9. προσωπολημπτεῖτε.] ἄπ. λεγ. see above ver. 1 on προσωπολημψία. άμαρτίαν ἐργάζεσθε.] See on i. 3 and 20, Matt. vii. 23 ἐργαζόμετοι

έλεγχόμενοι ὑπὸ τοῦ νόμου.] 'Being convicted by the law,' personified as witness, so 4 Macc. 5. 33 ὧ παιδευτὰ νόμε, cf. Rom. vii. 7, Gal. iii. 24. So we have ὑπὸ τὴς συνειδήσεως ἐλεγχόμενοι in the disputed passage John viii. 9. The reference is probably to the law of love which they had broken by dishonouring the poor. [Or to Lev. xix. 5 μὴ θαυμάσης

πρόσωπον δυναστού. Α.]

ώς παραβάται.] Similarly Homer uses $i\pi\epsilon\rho\beta\alpha$ ίνω and $i\pi\epsilon\rho\beta\alpha$ σίη Il. i. 497. Παραβαίνω with an object, such as νόμονς, and even $\theta\epsilon$ ούς (see Herod. vi. 12), or absolutely (Aesch. Ag. 59), is quite classical; but the only certain example of this use of $\pi\alpha\rho\alpha\beta$ άτης in a classical author is from the treatise $\pi\epsilon\rho$ ί τῶν ἐν Σικελία θ ανμαζομένων π οταμῶν of Polemo (fl. about 180 в.с.) $\pi\alpha\rho\alpha\beta$ άτης γενόμενος τῶν $\theta\epsilon$ ῶν ap. Macrob. Sat. v. 19. The metaphor is adapted to the idea of righteousness as the way in which a man should walk. It occurs absolutely Gal. ii. 18, with νόμον below ver. 11 and in Rom. ii. 25, 27 2 ; $\pi\alpha\rho\alpha\beta\alpha\sigma\iota$ ς is used by St. Paul and in Heb. ii. 2, ix. 15, and $\pi\alpha\rho\alpha\beta\alpha\iota$ νω in this sense Matt. xv. 2, 3.

10. δστις όλον τὸν νόμον τηρήση.] 'Whoever keeps the law as a whole,' cf. Gal. v. 3. When ὅστις takes the subj. it is usually joined with ἀν, as in Matt. x. 33, xii. 50, Luke x. 35, John ii. 5, xiv. 13, Acts iii. 23, Gal. v. 10; when ἄν is omitted, the constant confusion of -ει and -η in the MSS. makes it difficult to know whether the fut. or aor. subj. is the true reading. Beside this verse WH. give ὅστις ἀρνήσηται Matt. x. 33. In classical Greek ἀν is occasionally omitted, both in poetry, as Eur. Ion. 856 ὅστις ἐσθλὸς ἢ, Medea 516, and in prose, as Thue. iv. 18. 4 οἴτινες νομίσωσι. ib. 17. 2 οὖ ἀρκῶσι, see Kühner on Xen. Mem. i. 6. 13 ὅστις ποοῆται. Winer, p. 386. A. Buttmann, 197. We find ἔως λάβη without ἀν below v. 7, where see n. On the Hellenistic use of τηρεῶν with such words as νόμον see Vorst, p. 191 foll.

πταίση δὲ ἐν ἐνί.] For πτ. see below iii. 2, Rom. xi. 11. It is a question whether ἐνί and the following πάντων should be regarded as masculine (agreeing with νόμφ, νόμων) or neuter. It does not seem that νόμω is ever used in the Bible of a particular precept = ἐντολή.

The ten commandments are never called of $\delta \epsilon \kappa a \ r \delta \mu o c$. But might not St. James unconsciously pass from the collective sense of $r \delta \mu o c$ to the particular precepts of which it consisted, without reflecting that, strictly speaking, such a use of the term was illegitimate? The other explanation is not without difficulty. We have plenty of examples of the substantival use of the neuter $\tilde{\epsilon} \nu$ in the nominative and accusative, but not, I think, in the other cases.

γέγονεν πάντων ένοχος.] For perfect following acrist see above i. 24. Eroχος (lit. 'in the power of ') is used with a genitive of the offence ('guilty of theft'), of the punishment (ἐν. θατάτον Matt. xxvi. 66), of the law sinned against, as here. It takes a dative of the tribunal. Πάττων is equivalent to ὅλον τοῦ τόμον.

St. James seems to have had in his mind the case of one who, thinking himself to be religious (i. 26), assumes that all is right with him, like the Pharisee in the parable (Luke xviii, 11). Some of the Rabbis actually laid it down that obedience to certain laws, e.g. the law about fringes and phylacteries, was as good as obedience to the whole. Cf. Midrash Mishle on Prov. i. 10 qui unum praeceptum servat est ac si totam legem servasset. On the other hand, the principle here affirmed by St. James is also to be found in the savings of the Rabbis: thus Schegg gives a story from a Midrash on Numbers: 2 'R. Hunna having taught his disciples that he who committed adultery broke all the commandments, was asked by them to explain how this could be true of the fourth commandment'; and Wetstein to the same effect quotes two sayings of R. Jochanan from Sabb. f. 70. 2 si faciat omnia, unum vero omittat, omnium et singulorum reus est; and Pesikta f. 50. 1 omnis qui dicit, totam legem ego in me recipio praeter verbum unum, hic sermonem Domini sprevit et praecepta ejus irrita fecit, Horaioth 8 b: (Levit. v. 5) R. Jose Galilaens dixit: 'qui reus est unius, reus est omnium,' ef. 4 Mace. 5. 18 μη μικράν είναι roμίσης ταύτην, εἰ μιαροφαγήσαιμεν, άμαρτίαν τὸ γὰρ ἐπὶ μικροῖς καὶ μεγάλοις παρανομεῖν ἰσοδίναμόν έστιν, δι' έκατέρου γὰρ ὁμοίως ὑπερηφανεῖται, and Test. xii. Patr. 689 ἄλλος κλέπτει, άδικει, άρπάζει, πλεονεκτει, και έλεει τους πτωχούς. διπρόσωπον μέν τοῦτο, τὸ δὲ ὅλον πονηρόν ἐστιν.

This passage of St. James is discussed at length by Augustine in a letter to Jerome (Ep. 167). He compares the teaching of St. James with the Stoic doctrine on the 'solidarity' of the virtues and vices, as to which see Stob. Ecl. ii. p. 108 τὸν μίαν ἔχοιτα ἀρετὴν πάσας ἔχειν, καὶ τὸν κατὰ μίαν πράττοιτα κατὰ πάσας πράττειν, ib. 116 φασὶ δὲ καὶ πάντα ποιεῖν τὸν σοφὸν κατὰ πάσας τὰς ἀρετῆς: πᾶσαν γὰρ πρᾶξιν τελείαν αὐτοῦ εἶναι, διὸ καὶ μηδεμίας ἀπολελεῖφθαι ἀρετῆς, ib. 120 κατὰ τὸ ἀιάλογον δὲ καὶ τὸν φαῦλον πάντα ὅσα ποιεῖ κακῶς ποιεῖν καὶ κατὰ πάσας τὰς κακίας, both doctrines flowing from their conception of virtue as the art of life. In the same way the Stoics asserted the equality of all virtues, Điog. L.

vii. 101. We may compare St. Paul (Rom. xiv. 23) παν δ οὐκ ἐκ πίστεως άμαρτία εστίν, and 1 Cor. x. 31 είτε οθν εσθίετε είτε πίνετε είτε τι ποιείτε

11. ὁ γὰρ ἐπών.] The unity of the law flows from the unity of the law-giver (below iv. 12); it is the expression of one will. The essence of sin lies in disobedience to that Will however shown. It was by an appeal to the same principle that our Lord answered the question of the lawyer $\pi o i \alpha \epsilon \sigma \tau \hat{i} \pi \rho \omega \tau \eta \pi \alpha \sigma \hat{\omega} \nu \epsilon \nu \tau o \lambda \dot{\eta}$; 'The first of all the commandments is, Hear, O Israel; the Lord our God is one Lord; and thou shalt love the Lord thy God' Mark xii. 29. This spiritual view of the law rendered impossible the comparisons of which the Jews were so fond.

μή μοιχεύσης.] Here the seventh commandment precedes the sixth, as in Luke xviii. 20, Rom. xiii. 9, and (LXX.) Ex. xx. where the order is ου μοιχεύσεις, ου κλέψεις, ου φοιεύσεις: cf. Philo M. 2, p. 189 ή δε έτέρα πεντας τας πάσας απαγορεύσεις περιέχει μοιχειών, φόνου, κλοπης, ψευδομαρτυριῶν, ἐπιθυμιῶν, ib. p. 201 ἀπὸ μοιχείας ἄρχεται, ib. 207, 300 ἐν τῆ δευτέρα δέλτω πρῶτον γράμμα τοῦτ ἐστίν, οὐ μοιχείσεις. We have the usual order in Deut. v. 17, Matt. v. 21, 27, xix. 18; the order in Mark x. 19 varies in different MSS. The future οὐ μοιχεύσειs is used by St. Matthew, as in the LXX.; $\mu \dot{\eta}$ with the subjunctive by the other Evangelists, as here.

εί δε, ού μοιχεύεις, φονεύεις δέ.] For ού after εί see i. 23 ού ποιητής n. Here the more exact way of expression would be moixevers per or, φονεύεις δέ, the single word μοιχεύεις being negatived, 'if you commit not adultery, but murder.' For the omission of μέν in such antitheses see above v. 2 εἰσέλθη δέ and i. 13 πειράζει δέ, also 1 Pet. i. 8 ἄρτι μή

γέγονας παραβάτης νόμου.] For perf. see i. 24; for παραβάτης above

ver. 9. On omission of article see Essay on Grammar.

12. Let your words and acts, e.g. your behaviour to the poor, be regulated by the thought that you will be judged by a law of freedom (see i. 25), that is, by a law of the spirit, not of the letter. It will be a deeper-going judgment than that of man, for it will not stop short at particular precepts or even at the outward act, whatever it may be, but will penetrate to the temper and motive. On the other hand it sweeps away all anxious questioning as to the exact performance of each separate precept. If there has been in you the true spirit of love to God and love to man, that is accepted as the real fulfilment of the law. same love which actuates the true Christian here actuates the Judge both here and hereafter, or rather He who is already dwelling in our hearts by faith assures us of that forgiveness in our own case which He enables us to show to others.

ούτως λαλείτε και ούτως ποιείτε. The repetition of ούτως is in accordance with the earnest weighty style of the writer: see i. 19 on $\beta \rho \alpha \delta v$ s, and cf. Buttm. p. 341. It insists on the importance of a right regulation of speech (on which see ch. iii. below), as well as of action (on which see vv. 14-26 of this chapter). The reference in οιντως is to the following ως, as in 1 Cor. ix. 26 οιντως ωκτεύω ως οικ ἀέρα δέρων, ib. iii. 15 σωθήσεται οιντως ως δια πυρός.

ώς διὰ νόμου ἐλευθερίας μέλλοντες κρίνεσθαι.] The absence of the article, which was used in i. 25, serves to give prominence to the qualifying genitive. For other instances in N. T. of the classical use of ως with part. cf. 1 Cor. iv. 18, 2 Cor. v. 20, Heb. xiii. 17, and Winer p. 770/.

13. ή γὰρ κρίσις ἀνέλεος τῷ μὴ ποιήσαντι έλεος.] The reading ἀνέλεος is found in all the best MSS, instead of ἀκίλεως. Neither form occurs elsewhere, but we find ἀrελεής (in scholiasts) and the more classical ἀιηλεής (Plato), ἀrελείμων (Wisd. xii. 5, Rom. i. 31). As to the formation, $dr \in \lambda \in S$ is regular from the classical δ $\ell \lambda \in S$ (like $d \lambda \circ S = d \theta \in S$), but $\tau \delta$ $\tilde{\epsilon} \lambda \epsilon \sigma s$ is the form used in N.T., from which would regularly be formed ἀνελεής (like εὐγενής from γένος) or ἀνηλεής (like ἀνηρεφής from ἐρέφω). We have another reference to κρίσις below v. 12. With ποιείν έλεος cf. Josh, ii. 12 ομόσατε μοι ὅτι ποιῶ ὑμίν ἔλεος καὶ ποιήσατε καὶ ὑμεῖς ἔλεος, Matt. vi. 2 ὅταν ποιῆς ἐλεημοσύνην, Tobit. xii. 9 οί ποιούντες έλεημοσύτας καὶ δικαιοσύτας. For the thought cf. Matt. v. 7, vi. 14, vii. 1, xviii. 28-35 the parable of the debtor, xxv. 41-46 the description of the judgment, Tit. iii. 5, below v. 20, Psa. xviii. 25, 26, Prov. xvii. 5, Sirac. xxviii. 2ff. ἄφες ἀδίκημα τῷ πλησίον σου καὶ τότε δεηθέντος σου αι άμαρτίαι σου λυθήσονται, Tobit. iv. 7-12, Test. xii. Patr. p. 641 έχετε εὐσπλαγχνίαν κατὰ παντὸς ἀνθρώπου ἐν ἐλέει ἵνα καὶ ὁ Κύριος είς ύμας σπλαγχνισθείς έλεήση ύμας, ότι καί γε έπ' έσχάτων ήμερων ὁ Θεὸς άποστέλλει τὸ σπλάγχιον αὐτοῦ ἐπὶ τῆς γῆς καὶ ὅπου εύρῆ σπλάγχια ἐλέους, έν αὐτῷ κατοικεῖ, Dem. Mid. 547 οὐδείς ἐστι δίκαιος τυγχάνειν ἐλέου τῶν μηδέτα έλωνττων. The reference to mercy looks backward to i, 27 and forward to ver. 15 fell.

κατακαυχάται έλεος κρίσεως.] 'Mercy triumplis over judgment.' The compound verb is found also below iii. 14 and Rom. xi. 18; the simple verb above i. 9. For the thought see Hosea vi. 6 ἔλεος θέλω ή θυσίας, quoted in Matt. ix. 13, where the Pharisees complain of Jesus eating with publicans and sinners, and again Matt. xii. 7 when they find fault with the disciples for eating the ears of corn; Luke vii, 47, 1 Pet. iv. 8, Matt. xxiii. 23. The absence of a connecting particle is a feature in the vigorous style of the writer, cf. below v. 6 κατεδικάσατε, εφονεύσατε τὸν δικαιον οὐκ ἀντιτάσσεται ὑμῶν, and above i. 19 ταχὺς εἰς τὸ ἀκοῦσαι, βραδίς είς τὸ λαλήσαι. Some MSS, insert $\delta \epsilon$, as in ver. 15 below, which would limit the scope of the words by presenting them as an antithesis to the preceding clause. It is such of course in the first instance: as the failure to show mercy or consideration for others forbids us to expect increy ourselves, so by the exercise of increy man gathers to himself 'a good reward against the day of necessity' (Tobit iv. 9), since 'God is not unrighteous to forget the labour that proceedeth of love' (Heb. vi. 10). But the asyndeton allows the words to be taken in their widest generality, as embodying the very essence of the Christian law of liberty, affirming the universal principle of God's judgment, even when it seems to be ἀνέλεος, and supplying the rule for the believer's daily life, cf. Philo M. 1. p. 284 οὐ μότον δικάσας ἐλεεῖ ἀλλὰ ἐλεήσας δικάζει πρεσβύτερος γὰρ δίκης ὁ ἔλεος παρ' αὐτῷ ἐστίν, ἄτε τὸν κολάσεως ἄξιον οὐ μετὰ τὴν δίκην ἀλλὰ πρὸ δίκης εἰδότι.

14—26. In this section St. James proceeds to enlarge on the meaning and nature of that faith in Jesus Christ which was spoken of in ver. I as inconsistent with προσωπολημψία. He dwells on the contrast, noted in i. 26, between mere outward religion and the consecration of the life to God. If a man πίστιν ἔχει ἐν προσωπολημψίαις, is not this the same as having a profession of faith which is not evidenced by deeds? But it is not such faith as this that can ever triumph over judgment. Compare the words of St. John (1 ep. ii. 4) δ λέγων ὅτι Ἑγνωκα αὐτὸτ, καὶ τὰς ἐντολας μὴ τηρῶν, ψεύστης ἐστίν. The apocryphal fourth book of Esdras shows that the question of faith and works was at that time agitated among the Jews, see ix. 7. 8 'whoever shall be able to escape either by his works or by his faith shall see my salvation,' also viii. 33–36, xiii. 23. For the relation of St. James' view of faith to that of St. Paul and the other apostles see Comment.

14. τί ὄφελος.] The omission of the article ('what good is it,' 'what boots it,' instead of 'what is the good'), especially when the verb is understood, is somewhat colloquial and has a sharp abruptness which suits the passage. It is omitted also by Philo M 1. p. 241 τί γὰρ ὄφελος λέγειν μὲν τὰ βέλτιστα, διανοεῖσθαι δὲ καὶ πράττειν τὰ αἴσχιστα...τί δὲ ὄφελος ἃ μὲν χρὴ διανοεῖσθαι ἔργοις δὲ ἀτόποις καὶ λόγοις χρῆσθαι; and p. 295, 320, M 2. p. 333, also by Plato and Xen. The only other place in which the word occurs in N.T. is 1 Cor. xv. 32 εἰ κατ' ἄνθρωπον ἐθηριο-

ἔργα.] Τhe ἔλεος of ver. 13. Cf. Clem. Hom. viii. 7 οὐ γὰρ ὡφελήσει τινὰ τὸ λέγειν ἀλλὰ τὸ ποιεῖν ἐκ παντὸς οὖν τρόπου καλῶν ἔργων χρεία, Pirke Aboth 'say little, do much' (Taylor J. F. p. 38), Philo M. 1. p. 525 ἡ ανευ πράξεως θεωρία ψιλή πρὸς οὐδὲν ὄφελος τοῖς ἐπιστήμοσιν.

μὴ δύναται ἡ πίστις σῶσαι αὐτόν;] The interrogative μή, expecting of course a negative answer, occurs again below iii. 12, and is very frequent in the 1st epistle to the Corinthians and the Gospel of St. John. For σῶσαι cf. i. 21: it is the triumph of mercy over judgment of ver. 13. ἡ πίστις not faith absolutely, but such faith as this, fides illa quam vos habere dicitis (Bede).

15. ἐἀν ἀδελφός.] See n. on i. 2. If δέ is inserted after ἐάν we should have to consider this a second parallel case, in which profession is opposed to reality; but it makes better sense to omit it with B. and Sin. and take this as a concrete illustration of the abstract principle stated in ver. 14. Compare 1 John iii. 17, 18 (where the empty profession of love is contrasted with the living reality), Philo M 1. p. 527 ὅσπερ ἐν ἰατροῖς ἡ λεγομένη λογοϊατρεία πολὺ τῆς τῶν κομιόντων ὡφελείας ἀποστατεῖ, φαρμάκοις γὰρ καὶ χειρουργίαις καὶ διαίταις ἀλλ' οὐ λόγοις αἱ νόσοι θεραπεύονται κ.τ.λ. For construction of ἐὰν γυμιοὶ ξπάρχωσιν...εἴπη

γυμνοί.] He still has before him the case of the poor who were slighted in the congregation. The word does not necessarily imply absolute nakedness: a person wearing the cetoneth, under-tunic (χιτονίσκος οτ δποδύτης), alone was described as naked: thus it is used of Saul after having taken off his upper garments (1 Sam. xix. 24), of a warrior who has cast off his military cloak (Amos ii. 16), of Peter without his fisher's coat (ἐπειδύτης); cf. too Hesiod Op. 391 γυμνον σπείρεω imitated in Georg. i. 299. The same expression is applied to the poorly clad in Job xxii. 6, Isa. lviii. 7, Matt. xxv. 36, see D. of B. s.v. 'Dress' p. 454.

λειπόμενοι.] See on i. 4. As the best MSS, omit &σιν, this must be taken with &πάρχωσιν, cf. Acts viii. 16 βεβαπτισμένοι &πῆρχου. The plural is of course not strictly grammatical after the disjunctive conjunction, but it is a very natural irregularity; cf. Plato Leg. 8, 838 ὅταν ἀδελφὸς ἢ ἀδελφή τω γένωνται καλοί, Krueg. Gr. § 63, 3, 2. So a singular subject followed by μετά with gen. is sometimes joined with a

ἐφημέρου,] Only here in N.T.; not in LXX. Diod. iii. 31 and Dion. H. viii. 41 use the phrase ἐφήμερος τροφή, Philo M. 2, p. 538 has τὸ ἐφήμερον, probably quoted from a comic poet (πένητές ἐσμεν καὶ μόλις τοὐφήμερον εἰς αὐτὰ τἀναγκαῖα πορίζειν δυνάμεθα). Field cites Ael. V.H. iii. 29 Diogenes said he was πτωχὸς δυσείμων, βίον ἔχων τὸν ἐφήμερον, Menander p. 134 Μ. στρατεία δ' οὐ φέρει περιουσίαν ἐφήμερον δὲ καὶ προπετή βίον. It is defined by Pollux as τὸ εἰς τὴν ἐπιοῦσαν μὴ μένον, cf. Herod. i. 32 οὐ γάρ τοι ὁ μέγα πλούσιος μᾶλλον τοῦ ἐπ' ἡμέμην ἔχοντος ὁλβιώτερός ἐστι.

16. τις ἐξ ὑμῶν.] Tit. i. 12 εἶπ ἐ τις ἐξ αὐτῶν, and frequently. Sometimes τις is omitted both in the accusative as Matt. xxiii. 34 ἀποστέλλω προφήτας...καὶ ἐξ αὐτῶν ἀποκτειεῖτε, and in the nominative as John xvi.

υπάγετε ἐν εἰρήνη.] Cf. the words of the jailor at Philippi to Paul πορεύεσθε ἐν εἰρήνη Acts xvi. 36, Jud. xviii. 6; but more commonly we find εἰς used, implying a future result, as in Mark v. 34 with ἔπαγε, Luke vii. 50 with πορεύον, also ch. viii. 48, 1 Sam. i. 17, xx. 42, with βάδιζε 2 Sam. xv. 9, ἀπελύθησαν μετ' εἰρήνης Acts xv. 33. In Tobit xii. 5 we have ἔπαγε ἐγιαίνων in much the same sense. It is a formula of comfort ('be at ease,' 'have no anxiety') usually grounded upon some act or assurance, as 1 Sam. xx. 42 the oath of friendship between David and Jonathan, Acts xvi. 36 the order of the magistrates. Here it should have been followed or preceded by the gift of food and clothing instead of the mocking words.

θερμαίνεσθε και χορτάζεσθε.] Beyschlag and others take these verbs in the middle sense 'warm yourselves and feed yourselves.' The Revisers retain the old version 'be ye warmed and fed,' which certainly gives a better sense and one more suited to the caustic irony of which St. James is a master. The sight of distress is unpleasant to these dainty Christians. They bustle out the wretched-looking brother or sister with seeming kindness and what sounds like an order to others to provide for their immediate relief, but without taking any step to carry out the order. Compare Hor. 2 Sat. 8. 25 tibi di quaecunque preceris commoda dent. To have said directly 'go and get warm, go and eat,' would have been giving an order which it was plainly not in their own power to obey: the other mode of address (like the barren fig-tree) excites a momentary delusive hope analogous to the impression produced by faith without deeds. It could only be rightly used where miraculous power accompanied the word, as in Mark v. 34 επαγε είς εἰρήνην καὶ ἴσθι ὑγιὴς ἀπὸ τῆς μάστιγός σου. Otherwise it is only a specimen of that hypocrisy of saying without doing ($\lambda \epsilon \gamma \eta \ \epsilon \chi \epsilon \nu \ \text{ver.} 14$) which called forth the severest reproof of St. James as of his Master. The active of $\theta \epsilon \rho \mu$, is common in classical writers and is found once in LXX. (Sirac. 38. 17) θέρμανον κοπετόν, 'make hot the wailing,' never in N.T.: θερμαίνεσθαι occurs elsewhere in N.T. only in Mark xiv. 54, 67, John xviii. 18, 25 of Peter warming himself at the fire: in LXX. we find it with passive sense Hos. vii. 7 ἐθερμάνθησαν ὡς κλίβανος and in Hagg. i. 6 used, as here, with reference to clothing, εφάγετε καὶ οὐκ εἰς πλησμονήν...περιεβάλεσθε καὶ οὐκ ἐθερμάνθητε (where it must mean, not 'did not warm yourselves,' but 'were not warmed'), so Job xxxi. 20 άπὸ κουρᾶς ἀμνῶν μου ἐθερμάνθησαν οἱ ὧμοι αὐτῶν, 1 Kings i. 1 (of David) περιέβαλλον αὐτὸν ἱματίοις καὶ οὐκ ἐθερμαίνετο, tropically Psa. xxxviii. 3 ἐθερμάνθη ἡ καρδία μου ('my heart was heated') καὶ ἐν τῆ μελέτη μου ἐκκαυθήσεται π ῦρ. The passive is also common in classical writers, as Eur. El. 402 χαρά θερμαινόμεσθα καρδίαν. There is just as little objection to taking χορτάζεσθαι as passive. The noun χόρτος 'fodder,' on which see above i. 11, is used of human food by Hipponax the satirist fr. 34 B. δούλιος χόρτος. The verb, which is only used by classical writers of beasts or men like beasts (Plato Rep. ix. 586 βοσκημάτων δίκην βόσκονται χορταζόμενοι), or as a piece of slang (Eubulus 350 B.C. βόλβοις έμαντὸν χορτάσων ἐλήλυθα), gets the general meaning of satisfying hunger in later Greek. Lobeck (Phryn. p. 64) compares it with ἐρεύγεσθαι as having lost its original specific meaning: see Matt. xiv. 20 ἔφαγον καὶ έχορτάσθησαν (were filled), Phil. iv. 12 μεμίημαι καὶ χορτάζεσθαι καὶ πειτᾶν, Psa. xxxvi. 19, lviii. 15, lxxx. 16, evi. 9, exxxi. 15 τοὺς πτωχοὺς χορτάσω ἄρτων, Acts vii. 11 οὐχ εὖρισκον χορτόσματα (sustenance). But the remembrance of the original sense was not quite lost for scholars: see Clem. Al. Paed. i. 155 P 'χορτασθέντες' φησίν, τὸ ἄλογον τῆς τροφῆς πλήρωμα χόρτασμα, οὐ βρωμα εἶπών: cf. Sturz Dial. Mac. p. 200 foll.

μὴ δῶτε δέ.] The plural is often used after an indefinite singular, such as ἔκαστος, τις, ὅστις, see Krueg. Gr. § 58. 4. 5. To avoid separating words which are closely connected, δέ sometimes takes the third sometimes the fourth place in the sentence, e.g. with the preposition (below v. 12 πρὸ πάντων δέ), with the article (John x. 12 ὁ μισθωτὸς δέ), even the relative (2 Tim. iii. 8 δν τρόπον δέ), and with the negative, as here and Matt. xviii. 25 μὴ ἔχοιτος δέ, Acts xvii. 6 μὴ εὐρώττες δέ, Acts xxi. 34 μὴ δυτάμετος δὲ γιῶται, xxi. 14 μὴ πειθομέτον δὲ αὐτοῦ, so οὐκ ἔγράφη δέ, οὐκ ἔγραψα δέ, οὐ θέλομεν δέ. Examples of the fourth place are John xvii. 20 οὐ περὶ τούτων δέ, Acts xxvii. 14 μετ' οὐ πολὺ δέ,

1 Cor. iv. 18 ώς μὴ ἐρχομένον δέ μον, even the fifth occurs in 1 John ii. 2 οὐ περὶ τῶν ὑμετέρων δὲ μόνον. In Justin M. Apol. ii. 8 we find an example of the sixth place, καὶ τοὺς ἀπὸ τῶν Στωικῶν δὲ δογμάτων.

τὰ ἐπιτήδεια τοῦ σώματος.] Only here in N.T., frequent in classical authors, e.g. Thuc. viii. 74 ὅσα περὶ τὸ σῶμα εἰς δίαιταν ὑπῆρχεν ἐπιτήδεια, Theophr. Char. xi. 5 φειδωνίω μέτρω μετρεῦν αὐτὸς τοῖς ἔνδων τὰ ἐπιτήδεια (their portions or rations).

17. ἡ πίστις...νεκρά ἐστιν.] The absence of works, the natural fruit of faith, proves that the faith is in itself lifeless, just as a compassion which expends itself in words is only counterfeit. Life cannot remain latent. Cf. Plant. Epid. i. 2. 18 quid te retulit beneficum esse oratione si ad rem auxilium emortuum est? For metaphorical use of νεκρός, nearly = μάταιος i. 2. 6, or ἀργός below ver. 20, cf. below ver. 26, Heb. vi. 1 and ix. 14 ἔργα νεκρά, that is, 'works done apart from the vivifying influence of faith and love, with a view to earn salvation,' cf. above i. 26 n. and John xv. 4); Rom. vii. 8 χωρὶς νόμον ἁμαρτία νεκρά, 'sin is dormant till roused into activity by antagonism to law'; Epiet. Diss. iii. 23. 28 ἄν μὴ ταῦτα ἐμποιῷ (viz. produce conviction of error) ὁ τοῦ ψιλοσόφον λόγος, νεκρός ἐστι καὶ αὐτὸς καὶ ὁ λέγων.

καθ' ἐαυτήν.] Not a mere repetition of ἐὰν μὴ ἔχη ἔργα: the absence of fruit shows that it is not merely outwardly inoperative but inwardly

18. άλλ' ἐρεῖ τις. 'Nay, one may say, Thou hast faith and I works; do thou, if thou canst, prove thy faith without works and I will prove mine by my works.' It has been shown that faith without works is of no value: one may go further and say that its existence is incapable of proof. The writer, with his usual modesty, puts himself in the background, does not claim to be the representative of perfect working faith, but supposes another to speak. Usually the phrase ἀλλ' ἐρεῖ τις is used of an objection, like $\nu \dot{\eta} \Delta i a$, at enim, as 1 Cor. xv. 35 d.ė. τ . $\pi \hat{\omega}$ s ἐγείρονται οἱ νεκροί; and in classical Greek Xen. Cyr. iv. 3. 10 ἀλλ' έρει τις ἴσως ...άλλ' είποι ἄν τις, and so some would take it here: 'It may be objected that works and faith are different forms of genuine religion: your form may be faith, mine works, both equally acceptable in the sight of God.' The explanation is untenable, because it makes the imaginary objector treat the writer as though it was the latter who was exalting faith above works, instead of the opposite. In the text $\dot{a}\lambda\lambda\dot{a}$ has a strengthening force = immo, like $\pi\lambda\dot{\eta}\nu$ in Matt. xxvi. 64, cf. John xvi. 2 ἀποσυναγώγους ποιήσουσιν ύμᾶς ἀλλ' ἔρχεται ὥρα ἵνα πος ὁ ἀποκτείνων ὑμᾶς δόξη λατρείαν προσφέρειν τῷ Θεῷ, Luke xvii. 8, άλλ' οὐχὶ ἐρεῖ αὐτῷ; (which I think should be translated 'nay! will be not rather say unto him?') 2 ('or. vii. 11 πόσην κατειργάσατο ψμιν σπουδήν, δλλά ἀπολογίαν, ἀλλά ἀγανάκτησιν, ἀλλά φόβον, κ.τ.λ., Phil. i. 18 ἐν τούτφ χαίρω· ἀλλὰ καὶ χαιρήσομαι, Heb. iii. 16 τίνες παρεπίκραναν ; ἀλλ' or πάντες; with Alf.'s n. Instead of the future the optative with αν would be more common in classical Greek, but the latter form is rather avoided by the Hellenistic writers, occurring only eight times in N.T. (thrice in Luke, five times in Acts), see A. Buttmann, p. 188, who cites Rom. v. 7 μόλις γορ ψπέρ δικαίου τις ἀποθανείται, &c. In Latin the future dicet aliquis is far more common than the present subjunctive, see Roby, vol. ii. pref. p. 101 foll.

κάγω.] In the N.T. the contracted is more usual than the uncontracted form, see WH. app. p. 145, Winer p. 51. We also find κάμω, κάμε, κάκεῖν κάκεῖνος. A close parallel to the form of this sentence is found in Theoph. Autol. i. 2 δεῖξών μοι τὸν ἄνθρωπών σου, κάγώ σοι δείξω τὸν Θεών μου.

χωρίς τῶν ἔργων.] We must supply σου just as we supply μου after τὴν πίστιν. Cf. Rom. iii. 28 λογιζόμεθα δικαιοῦσθαι πίστει ἄνθρωπον χωρὶς

έκ τῶν ἔργων.] So v. 21 below and iii. 13 ἐκ τῆς καλῆς ἀναστροφῆς. 19. σὸ πιστεύεις ὅτι εἶς ἐστιν ὁ Θεός.] This reading supported by A. Sin. Pesh. &c. seems preferable to that of B (accepted by WH.) & Oeós έστιν, as it expresses a more definite belief in the actual formula of Jewish orthodoxy given in Deut. vi. 4 ἄκους Ἰσραήλ, Κύριος ὁ Θεὸς ήμων Κύριος εξε έστιν, Mark xii. 29, 1 Cor. viii. 4, 6, Hermas Mand. i. πρώτον πάντων πίστενε ὅτι εἶς ἐστιν ὁ Θεός, Philo Leg. ad C. M. 2. p. 562 'Ιουδαίους δεδιδαγμένους έξ αὐτῶν σπαργάνων ένα νομίζειν τὸν πατέρα καὶ ποιητην τοῦ κόσμου Θεόν. Much is said of the excellence of the μοναρχική θρησκεία in the Clementine Homilies. This verse from Deuteronomy is the commencement of the Shema, that portion of the law which was appointed to be read or recited both morning and evening by every Jew. 'For him who reads the Shema with scrupulous precision as regards its several letters, they cool Gehinnom' (Berakoth 156, quoted in Taylor, Jewish Fathers, p. 52, and exc. iv.). St. Paul depicts the reliance placed by the Jews on their orthodoxy, Rom. ii. 17-22. The phrase $\pi \iota \sigma \tau$. $\delta \tau \iota$ denotes intellectual belief, as contrasted with $\pi \iota \sigma \tau$. $\epsilon \iota$ or $\epsilon \nu$ denoting moral faith or trust; so Bede: aliud est credere illi, aliud credere illum, aliud credere in illum. Credere illi, est credere vera esse quae loquitur; credere illum, credere quod ipse sit Deus; credere in illum est diligere illum. Credere vera esse quae loquitur multi et mali possunt; credunt enim esse vera et nolunt en facere, quiu ad operandum pigri sunt. Credere autem ipsum esse Deum, hoc et demones potuerunt. Credere vero in Deum soli novere qui diligunt Deum, qui non solo nomine sunt Christiani, sed et factis et vita; quia sine dilectione fides inanis. WH. take the clause interrogatively: it seems to me more impressive to regard it as stating a simple matter of fact, like $\sigma \dot{\nu} \pi i \sigma \tau \nu \xi \chi \epsilon i s$ before. There is no need to suppose with Winer (p. 678) that it expresses a condition, to which καλῶς ποιείς supplies the apodosis; what is prepared for is the following phrase καὶ τὰ δαιμόνια κ.τ.λ., not the merely parenthetic καλώς ποιείς. Another question is whether St. James must be supposed to speak here in his own person, or whether this verse also must be assigned to the interlocutor introduced in v. 18. The repetition of σὺ πιστεύεις after σὺ πίστιν ἔχεις and the decided break before v. 20 seem to favour the latter view. We must suppose him thus to put forward the two arguments (1) belief without works (may possibly be a real belief, but) can never prove its existence; (2) it may exist, and yet be consistent with diabolic

καλῶς ποιεῖς.] The phrase is not necessarily ironical, see above v. 8 and Mark xii. 32 καλῶς εἶπες ὅτι εἶς ἐστιν, but is made ironical by the context, as in Mark vii. 9 καλῶς ἀθετεῖτε τὴν ἐντολήν, 2 Cor. xi. 4 εἶ ὁ ἐρχόμενος ἄλλον Ἰησοῦν κηρύσσει...καλῶς ἀνέχεσθε, John iv. 17 καλῶς εἶπας ὅτι ἄνδρα οὐκ ἔχω. It is often used in a colloquial sense by classical writers, e.g. Demesth. p. 141, 14 μετὰ ταῦτα ἡ τύχη καλῶς ποιοῦσα ('many thanks to her') πολλὰ πεποίηκε τὰ κοινά, id. Μίd. p. 582 εἰσὶ μὲν εἶς τὰ μάλιστα αὐτοὶ πλούσιοι καὶ καλῶς ποιοῦσι, where Reiske translates id vero laudo congratulorque, id. Coron. p. 304, 26 (Philip's cruelty others have experienced) τῆς δὲ φιλαιθρωπίας...ὑμεῖς καλῶς ποιοῦντες ('by good luck') τοὺς καρποὺς κεκόμισθε, Arist. Plut. 863 καλῶς τοίντν ποιῶν ἀπόλλυται ('a good job too'): see Hermann's Viger, p. 362. [Diod. v. p. 442 R. καλῶς διεφθάρθαι 'a pretty clean sweep' A.]

τὰ δαιμόνια πιστεύουσιν.] This is the term regularly used in the Gospels for the evil spirits, also called πνεύματα ἀκάθαρτα or πονηρά, by whom men are possessed and who are themselves said to be subject to Beelzebub. We have instances both of their belief and their terror in Matt. viii. 29 (of Legion) ἔκραξαν λέγοιτες τί ἡμῶν καὶ σοί, νίὲ τοῦ Θεοῦ: ἡλθες ὧδε πρὸ καιροῦ βασανίσαι ἡμῶς; of their belief, Luke iv. 41 'He suffered them not to speak because they knew he was the Christ,' Acts xix. 15 'Jesus I know and Paul I know.' They suggest evil thoughts to men: hence σοφία δαιμονιώδης below iii. 15, διδασκαλίαις δαιμονίων 1 Tim. iv. 1. The same term is applied to heathen deitics 1 Cor. x. 20 foll.

και φρίσσουσιν.] The word, which properly means 'to bristle,' is used like the Lat. horreo of the physical signs of terror, especially of the hair standing on end, as in Job. iv. 14, 15. But the R.V. translation 'shudder,' seems too bold a metaphor to apply in English to spirits. It comes to express only a high degree of awe or terror, as Daniel, after the vision of the four beasts and their disappearance before the coming of the Son of Man, says ἔφριξε τὸ πιεῖμά μου (vii. 15), Prayer of Manasses 4 Κύριε ...δν πάντα φρίσσει καὶ τρέμει ἀπὸ προσώπου δυνάμεώς σου, hence τὸ φρικτὸν ὄνομα, φρικτά μυστήρια or ὄργια, μαρμαίρων τι φρικώδες of the dazzling splendour of the robes of Herod (Euseb. H.E. ii. 10); it is even used of the effect on the mind of a favourable omen Xen. Cyr. iv. 2, 15 $\tilde{\omega}\sigma\tau\epsilon$ πῶσι μὲν φρίκην ἐγγίγι εσθαι πρὸς τὸ θεῖον, θύρρος δὲ πρὸς τοὺς πολεμίους. The occasion of this terror is mentioned in Matt. viii. 29 quoted above, ef. Heb. x, 27 (for those who sin after receiving knowledge of the truth there remains) φοβερά τις ἐκδοχὴ κρίσεως, Philo M 1 p. 218 ἐπὶ τοῖς προσδοκωμένοις φοβεροίς τρέμοντές τε καὶ φρίττοντες. We find many reminiscences of this saying of St. James, e.g. Justin Trypho 49 (Χριστὸν) καὶ τὰ δαιμόνια φράσσει καὶ πᾶσαι ὑπλῶς αἱ ἀρχαὶ καὶ ἐξουσίαι τῆς γῆς, Acta Philippi T. p. 86 Θεε δε φρίττουσαν πάντες αίωνες...δε τρέμουσαν άρχαὶ τῶν ἐπουρανίων, Lactant. de Ira c. 23 Apollo Milesius de Judaeorum religione consultus responso hoc indidit... δε τρέμεται καὶ γαία καὶ οὐρανὸς ήδε θάλασσα, ταρτάρεοί τε μυχοί καὶ δαίμονες εκφρίττουσα. Orphica ap. Clem. Al. Strom. v. p. 724 P δαίμονες δυ φρίσσουσι (Herm. Orph. p. 454), Ignat. Philip. p. 175 (ὁ σταυρὸς) ἐστὶ τὸ τροπαθού κατὰ τῆς αὐτοῦ (τοῦ διαβόλου) δυνάμεως, ὅπερ ὁρῶν φρίττει.

20. θέλεις δὲ γνῶναι.] Cf. Rom. xiii. 3 θέλεις δὲ μὴ φοβεῖσθαι; τὸ ἀγοθον ποίει. The question is equivalent to a condition 'if you wish for a conclusive proof that faith by itself cannot save, take the case of Abraham.' It would seem that from this point St. James speaks again in his own name.

δ ἄνθρωπε κενέ.] Cf. Rom. ii. 1 ὁ ἄνθρωπε πᾶς ὁ κρίνων, ix. 20 ὁ ἄνθρωπε, μενοῖνγε σὰ τίς εἶ; l Tim. vi. 11 ὁ ἄνθρωπε Θεοῦ. Κενός (= Raca) is defined (Epiet. Diss. iv. 4. 25) as one ἐφ' οἷς οὖ δεῖ ἐπαιρόμενος: like vanus it is used of a man who cannot be depended on, whose deeds do not correspond to his words, hence of boasters (Soph. Ant. 703 οἶ τοι διαπτυχθέντες ικφθησαν κενοί) and impostors, joined with ἀλαζων Plut. Vit. p. 581 F. Perhaps the words in Hermas Mand. xi. 3 αὐτὸς κενὸς ὧν κενῶς ἀποκρίνεται κενοῖς: ὁ γὰρ ὧν ἐπερωτηθῆ πρὸς τὸ κένωμα τοῦ ἀνθρώπου ἀποκρίνεται nay refer to our text: cf. Didaché 2. 5 οἰκ ἔσται ὁ λόγος σον ψενδής, οὐ κενός, ἀλλὰ μεμεστωμένος πράξει. Hilgenfeld and others who suppose this argument on faith and works to be directed against St. Paul imagine that St. Paul himself is here addressed. See Introduction.

ἀργή.] Nearly = νεκρά, which is read here by some MSS., cf. 2 Pet. i. 8 ταῦτα (love, brotherly-kindness, &c.) οὐκ ἀργοὺς οὐδὲ ἀκάρπους καθίστησιν, Matt. xii. 36 παν δημα αργόν.

21. 'Αβραὰμ ὁ πατὴρ ἡμῶν.] This was the constant title of Abraham, as is shown in Matt. iii. 8, John viii. 33 foll., Luke xvi. 24, Rom. iv. 1, 16. Its use favours the supposition that the epistle is addressed

οὐκ ἐξ ἔργων ἐδικαιώθη;] The case of Abraham was naturally appealed to as the pattern of faith not by St. Paul only (in Rom. iv. and Gal. iii. 7, where we find the same quotation as in our next verse), but in Heb. xi. 8 and 1 Macc. ii. 52 'Αβραὰμ οὐχὶ ἐν πειρασμῷ εὐρέθη πιστὸς καὶ έλογίσθη αὐτῷ εἰς δικαιοσύτην, ib. xliv. 20 foll., Wisd. x. 5, see Lightfoot Galatians, p. 151 foll. When the example of Abraham was abused as assuring justification to all who professed an orthodox belief, it was equally natural to show, as St. James has done, that Abraham's faith was not a mere profession but an extremely active principle. Clement of Rome combines the views of St. James and St. Paul: see i. 10, 31, τίνος χάριν ηθλογήθη 'Αβ.; οθχὶ δικαιοσύνην καὶ ἀλήθειαν διὰ πίστεως ποιήσας; ib. 33 with Lightfoot's notes, and above ver. 14 n. For έξ ἔργων see ver, 18 and Matt. xii. 37 ἐκ τῶν λόγων δικαιωθήση. Δικαιόω is strictly to make i.e. prorounce just, like ἀξιόω to pronounce or deem worthy or fitting, cf. Exod. xxiii. 7 οὐ δικαιώσεις τὸν ἀσεβη, 1 Kings viii. 32 δικαιώσαι δίκαιον, δοΐναι αὐτῷ κατὰ τὴν δικαιοσύνην αὐτοῦ, Psa. exliii. 2 οὐ δικαιωθήσεται ἐνωπίον σου πᾶς ζῶν, Isa. xlv. 26 ἀπὸ Κυρίου δικαιωθήσοιται...παν τὸ σπέρμα των νίων Ίσραήλ, Acts xiii. 39, Rom. iii. 28 λογιζόμεθα δικαιοῦσθαι πίστει ἄνθρωπον χωρὶς ἔργων νόμου, ib. iv. 1 εἰ ᾿Αβραὰμ ἐξ ἔργων ἐδικαιώθη ἔχει κανχημα, Habak. ii. 4 quoted in Rom. i. 17. See T. S. Evans on 1 Cor. vi. 11.

ἀνενέγκας Ἰσαάκ.] Cf. Gen. viii. 20 ἀπὸ πάντων τῶν κτηνῶν τῶν καθαρῶν ...ἀνήνεγκεν εἰς δλοκάρπωσιν ἐπὶ τὸ θυσιαστήριον, 1 Pet. ii. 5, Heb. vii. 27 ἀιαφ θυσίας, where Westcott distinguishes it from the classical term $\pi\rho\sigma\sigma\phi\epsilon\rho\omega$ as properly describing the ministerial action of the priest, while the latter describes the action of the offerer. In the other -passages of the N.T. in which Abraham's faith is mentioned it is -differently proved: thus in Rom. iv. 1, 17-21 it is the faith in the promise of a son; in Heb. xi. 8-12 it is the departure from his own land to an unknown country; ib. 17-19 it is the sacrifice of Isaac in the faith that God would raise him up again from the dead. The much-quoted verse of Genesis (xv. 6) follows the promise of a son, but a special blessing follows the sacrifice of Isaac (ib. xxii, 12, 16-18). Philo has not less than twelve references to Gen. xv. 6 (see Lightfoot Gal. l.c.), the most striking passage being M. 1. p. 486 δίκαιον γὰρ οὔτως οὐδὲν ως ἀκράτω καὶ ἀμιγεῖ τῆ πρὸς Θεὸν μόνον πίστει κεχρῆσθαι ...τὸ ἐπὶ μόνφ τῷ ὄντι βεβαίως καὶ ἀκλινῶς ὁρμεῖν...δικαιοσύνης μόνον While St. Paul makes no reference to Gen. xvii. 17, in which Abraham is said to have laughed at the idea that he should have a son by Sarah (the earlier promise having been made when he was at least twelve years younger, and having no express reference to Sarah), Philo endeavours to show that this is no discredit to Abraham's faith (M 1. p. 605). I borrow from Gfrörer cited by Bishop Lightfoot l.c. p. 154 foll. the following rabbinical quotations: (Mechilta on Exod. xiv. 31) 'Abraham our father inherited this world and the world to come solely by the merit of the faith whereby he believed in God'; (Siphre on Deut. xi. 13) 'The sacred text' means to show that practice depends on doctrine and not doctrine on practice; and so we find God punishes more severely for doctrine than for practice, as it is said (Hosea iv. 1) Hear the word of the Lord, &c. ': 2 'As soon as a man has mastered the thirteen heads of the faith, firmly believing therein... though he may have sinned in every possible way...still he inherits eternal life.' It is to such views Justin refers (Tryph. 370 D) ovy &s ύμεις ἀπατατε έαυτοὺς καὶ ἄλλοι τινές...οἳ λέγουσιν ὅτι κὰν ἁμαρτωλοὶ ὧσι, Θεὸν δὲ γιιώσκωσιν, οὐ μὴ λογίσηται αὐτοῖς Κύριος ὁμαρτίαν.

έπι τὸ θυσιαστήριον.] Gen. xxii. 9 ἐπέθηκεν αὐτὸν ἐπὶ τὸ θυσ. The word, which is not found in classical writers, is used of the Jewish material altar or the Christian spiritual altar in the N.T., LXX., Philo Josephus, and later writers. See Westcott, Hebrews, p. 453ff.

22. βλέπεις.] I prefer, with WH., to take this and δρᾶτε below v. 24 as a statement, not a question, both explaining γνῶναι in v. 20.

συνήργει τοῖς ἔργοις.] 'Faith cooperated with his actions and was perfected by them': cf. Mark xvi. 20 τοῦ Κυρίου συνεργοῦντος (sc. τοῖς ἀποστόλοις), Plut. Mor. p. 138 Α τῆ ψυχῆ συνεργεῖ τὸ σῶμα καὶ συγκάμιτει, Philo M. 2, p. 616 αὐγὴ τὸ ἀποστελλόμενοι ἐκ φλογός, συνεργὸν ὀφθαλμοῖς εἰς τὴν τῶν ὁρατῶν ἀιτίληψιν. Here we have the opposite to χωρὶς ἔργων.

🕉. ἐτελειώθη.] As the tree is perfected by its fruits, so faith by its works. In like manner sin is spoken of (i. 15) as $\partial \pi \sigma \tau \epsilon \lambda \epsilon \sigma \theta \epsilon \hat{\sigma} \sigma \alpha$ when transformed into act and habit and so producing its natural result; and $\partial \pi \sigma \rho \rho \sigma \sigma \gamma$ is exercised and made perfect by practice (i. 4). Wherever there are good works, it is due to the faith which inspires them, wherever there is genuine faith it must blossom into works, see I John ii. 5.

23 ἐπληρώθη.] So Matt. ii. 17 ἐπληρώθη τὸ ῥηθέν κ.τ.λ. 'the word of prophecy about Rachel then received its true fulfilment.' In the sacrifice of Isaac was shown the full meaning of the word (Gen. xv. 6) spoken thirty or (as the Rabbis say) fifty years before in commendation of Abraham's belief in the promise of a child. When they were first spoken Abraham's faith was imperfect, as is shown by the question (Gen. xv. 8) 'Lord, whereby shall I know that I shall inherit it?' It was the willing surrender of the child of promise, 'accounting that God was able to raise him up from the dead,' which fully proved his faith. The Rabbis distinguish ten instances of faith in Abraham; ¹ his faith was perfected in the sacrifice of Isaac, his justification was proved by his being acknowledged as friend of God. The Jews implore the mercy of God by the sacrifice of Isaac, as Christians by the sacrifice of Christ.²

ή γραφή.] The singular is used of a particular passage, as in Mark xv. 28 ἐπληρώθη ἡ γραφὴ ἡ λέγουσα καὶ μετὰ τῶν ἀνόμων ἐλογίσθη. ἐπίστευσεν δέ.] The MSS of the LXX, with the exception of 19 and 108, have καὶ ἐπίστευσεν, but δέ is found, instead of καὶ, in Philo M. 1. p. 605, Rom. iv. 3, Clem. Rom. i. 10. 6, Justin M. Dial. 92, showing that δέ was the then accepted reading (Hatch, p. 156).

έλογίσθη αὐτῷ εἰς δικαιοσύνην.] The original Hebrew (Gen. xv. 6) has the active, 'God counted it to him': the quotations in the N.T. (Rom. iv. 3 foll., Gal. iii. 6) have the passive with the LXX. Similar phrases occur Gen. vii. 1 (of Noah) σε είδον δίκαιον εναντίον μοῦ, Deut. vi. 25 ' it shall be our righteousness (LXX. ἐλεημοσύνη) if we observe to do all these commandments before the Lord our God, ch. xxiv. 12 foll. 'if he be a poor man thou shalt deliver him the pledge again when the sun goeth down...and it shall be righteousness (ἐλεημοσύνη) unto thee before the Lord thy God,' Ps. evi. 30, 31 (then stood up Phinehas and executed judgment) καὶ ἐλογίσθη αὐτῷ εἰς δικαιοσύνην εἰς γενεὰν καὶ γενεάν. Compare also Levit. xxv. 31 αι δε οικίαι πρὸς τὸν ἀγρὸν λογισθήσονται 'shall be reckoned as,' Ps. xxxii. 2 (quoted in Rom. iv. 6, 8) μακάριος ἀνὴρ ῷ οὐ μὴ λογίσηται Κύριος ὁμαρτίαν, Wisd. ix. 6 κἃν γάρ τις ἢ τέλειος ἐν υίοις ἀνθρώπων τῆς ἀπὸ σοῦ σοφίας ἀπούσης εἰς οὐδὲν λογισθήσεται. Δικαιοσύνη in the Bible is taken in even a wider sense than that noted by Aristotle Eth. v. 1. 15 αυτη μεν ουν ή δικαιοσύνη άρετη μεν έστι τελεία, άλλ' οὐχ ἁπλῶς ἀλλὰ πρὸς ἔτερον, who quotes Theognis 147 ἐν δὲ δικαιοσύνη συλλήβδην $\pi \hat{a} \sigma' \hat{a} \rho \epsilon \tau \eta' \sigma \tau w$. In the Bible it is the character of the man who fulfils his duty in all respects towards God, as well as towards his neighbour. The great importance of the text in Gen. xv. is that it is the first passage in which the 'law of liberty' is laid down. Definite set tasks irrespective of motives are exacted from slaves: in the family of God the motives of the children are the main thing in the eyes of the Father. Here the right state of mind is declared to be in God's sight equivalent to the right action; though, as St. James says, right action is the necessary result of the right feeling and it is only through right action that the right state of mind can be evidenced to others, so that the absence of right action (unless precluded by special circumstances) is a proof that the state of mind is not right. The faith of Abraham is the same as the trust which is so often declared blessed in the Psalms, e.g. Ps. ii. 12, xxxiv, 8.

φίλος Θεοῦ ἐκλήθη.] The precise words are not found in the LXX. Gen. xviii. 17, where our version simply has 'Shall I hide from Abraham that thing which I do?' the LXX. has οὐ μὴ κρύψω ἀπὸ 'Aβ. τοῦ παιδός μου ἃ ἐγὸ ποιῶ, which is quoted by Philo (Sobr. M. 1, p. 401) with the words $\tau o \hat{v} \phi \hat{\iota} \lambda o v \mu o v$, though elsewhere (Leg. 111, M. I, p. 93) he cites it without alteration. In 2 Chron. xx. 7 'Art thou not our God who...gavest it (the land) to the seed of Abraham, thy friend, for ever?', the LXX. has έδωκας αὐτην σπέρματι 'Αβραάμ τῷ ήγαπημένφ σον eis τὸν αίῶνα, Vulg. semini Abraham amici tui; Isa. xli. 8 the seed of Abraham my friend' is in LXX. σπέρμα 'Αβραάμ ον ηγάπησα. The appellation is still in use among the Arabs, 'with whom the name of Khalil Allah (the friend of God), or more briefly El Khalil, has practically superseded that of Abraham. Even Hebron, as the city of Abraham, has become El Khalil' (Plumptre in loc.). Clem. Rom. has the phrase twice, probably copying from St. James (i. 10 δ φίλος προσαγορευθείς with Lightfoot's n. and 17), and so Irenaeus iv. 16, 2 Abraham credidit Deo et reputatum est illi ad justitiam et amicus Dei rocatus est. Compare John xv. 14, 15, Wisd. vii. 27 (σοφία) εἰς ψυχὰς όσίας μεταβαίνουσα φίλους Θεοῦ καὶ προφήτας παρασκευάζει, Taylor's J.F. p. 113, and for the same sentiment in Greek philosophers see Xen. Mem. ii. 1. 33 (Virtue speaks in the allegory of Prodicus) δι' ἐμὲ φίλοι μὲν θεοῖς όντες, άγαπητοι δε φίλοις, Plato Leg. iv. 716 D δ μεν σώφρων Θεώ φίλος, ομοιος γάρ, Rep. x. 613 'the righteous man is $\theta \epsilon o \phi \iota \lambda \dot{\eta}$ s and therefore all must turn out well with him', Epict. Diss. iv. 3. 9 ελεύθερος γάρ είμι καὶ φίλος τοῦ Θεοῦ, Cie. N.D. I. 121, H. 165.

25. [Paåβ ἡ πόρνη.] Selected as an example the furthest removed from Abraham: so Erasmus 'tantum calet apud Deum misericordia ac beneficentia in proximum, ut mulier, ut meretrix, ut alieniyena hospitalitatis officio commendata meruerit in catalogo piorum advumerari.' Probably it was on this account that her name was famous among the Jews. She was counted as one of the four chief beauties, the others being Sarah, Abigail, Esther; and was said to have been the ancestress of eight prophets (Meuschen, p. 40). She is also cited as an example of faith, Heb. xi. 31, and is mentioned in the genealogy in Matthew. Her faith is shown both by her actions here referred to and her words

ύποδεξαμένη τοὺς ἀγγέλους.] Heb. xi. 31 δεξαμένη τοὺς κατασκόπους. Both renderings are independent of the LXX, which says ἀπέστειλεν Ίησοῦς δύο νεανίσκους κατασκοπεύσαι. The word ὑποδο occurs elsewhere - in N.T. only in the writings of St. Luke.

έτέρα δδῷ.] By a window instead of by the door, and to the mountain instead of straight back to the camp of the Israelites, Josh. ii. 15, 16. For this pregnant use of ἔτερος of. Mark xvi. 12 ἐν ἐτέρᾳ μορφῆ, Acts ii. 4 ἐτέραις γλώσσαις.

έκβαλοῦσα.] In mild sense as Matt. ix. 38 ὅπως ἐκβάλη ἐργάτας εἰς τὸν θερισμὸν αὐτοῦ, Mark i. 12 τὸ πνεῦμα ἐκβάλλει αἰτὸν εἰς τὴν ἔρημον (= ἄγει Luke, ἀνάγει Matt.), John x. 4 ὅταν τὰ ἴδια (πρόβατα) πάντα ἐκβάλη

26. τὸ σῶμα χωρὶς πνεύματος νεκρόν ἐστιν.] It seems at first strange that the outward visible part of man should be compared to the invisible principle of faith, and the invisible spirit be compared to works which are the outward fruits of faith; but we must always keep in mind that St. James is speaking here not of faith of the heart, but of a mere lifeless profession of orthodoxy, 'professing to know God but in deeds denying Him' (2 Tim. iii. 5), 'having the form of godliness without the power' (Tit. i. 16).¹ And as 'faith' thus becomes a mere externality, so 'works' become identified with the working principle of love. It thus becomes easy to understand how a mere shell of profession void of the animating principle of love can be compared to a corpse. Or we might understand πνεῦμα of 'breath' as in Ps. cxlvi. 4, Apoc. xi. 11, xiii. 15 (so Peile and Bassett), which would give a simpler illustration: as a body which does not breathe is dead, so faith which does not act.² A similar metaphor is found in Curtius x. 6 (19) militaris sine duce turba corpus sine spirituest.

μή πολλοι διδάσκαλοι γίνεσθε.] In his circular letter (Acts xv. 24) St. James condemns unauthorized teachers, cf. Matt. xxiii. 7, 8, ib. xv. 14, Rom. ii. 17 foll., 1 Tim. i. 6, 7 θέλουτες εἶναι νομοδιδάσκαλοι κ.τ.λ., Heb. v. 12 ὀφείλουτες εἶναι διδάσκαλοι διὰ τὸν χρόνον πάλω χρείαν ἔχετε τοῦ διδάσκειν ὑμᾶς τωὰ τὰ στοιχεῖα τῆς ἀρχῆς τῶν λογίων τοῦ Θεοῦ, Pirke Aboth i. 11 dilige laborem et Rabbinatum odio habe with Taylor's n., Herm. phrase means 'do not be too eager to teach,' 'do not press into the work of teaching,' lit. 'do not many of you become teachers.' For the use of πολλοί cf. Heb. vii. 23 καὶ οἱ μὲν, πλείονές εἰσι γεγονότες ἱερεῖς διὰ τὸ θανάτω κωλύειτθαι παραμένειν, ὁ δὲ...ἀπαράβατον ἔχει τὴν ἱερωσύνην. We read of διδάσκαλοι at Antioch (Acts xiii. 1): they are included in St. Paul's two lists of church officers, 1 Cor. xii. 28 where they come next after apostles and prophets, and Eph. iv. 11 where the order is apostles, prophets, evangelists, pastors and teachers. In 2 Tim. iv. 3 a time is foretold when the people will become impatient of sound doctrine and κατὰ τὰς ιδίας ἐπιθυμίας ἑαυτοῖς ἐπισωρεύσουσιν διδασκάλους. In the only passages in which they are mentioned in the Didaché (xiii. 2, xv. 1, 2) they are joined with prophets and appear to stand on a higher level than the ἐπίσκοποι and διάκονοι, though these latter also should be carefully chosen for their office, ψμίν γὰρ λειτουργούσι καὶ αὐτοὶ τὴν λειτουργίαν τῶν προφητῶν καὶ διδασκάλων; see Hermas Vis. iii. 5 οἱ μὲν λίθοι οἱ τετράγωνοι...εἰσὶν οἱ ἀπόστολοι καὶ ἐπίσκοποι καὶ διδάσκαλοι καὶ διάκονοι, where Harnack says in Sim. ix. 15, 16 episcopi et diaconi negliguntur, quia ibi munus praedicandi evangelium solum respicitur. Doctores sunt omnes praedicatores Christianae veritatis, etsi neque apostoli neque presbyteri fuere. Certum est etiam sueculo secundo laicos in ecclesia publice docuisse, and adds many references.

Pirke Aboth, i. 18 'not learning but doing is the groundwork, and whose multiplies words occasions sin.' For the phrase κρ. λ. 'to be condemned' see Rom. xiii. 2, Luke xx. 47. Other references to judgment in this epistle are ii. 12, 13, v. 9, 12. By the use of the first person (corrected to the second in the Vulgate), St. James includes himself among the teachers whom he warns, as in v. 9, cf. ii. 18: so St. Paul 1 Cor. x. 6 foll., Heb. ii. 3, xii. 25, Ignat. The evidence is as follows: AB with some inferior MSS, read EIAE, Vulg. and Corb. si autem; Sin. EI Δ E Γ AP, Sin. omits $\gamma \acute{a}\rho$; Cod. Ephr. with many inferior MSS. and Theophyl. and Euth. Zig. in comment IDE; Pesh. ecce enim; Egyptian, Ethiopian and later Syriac versions ecce. The confusion between $\epsilon \iota$ and ι being extremely common, it is important to observe (1) that the insertion of vàp in Sin. seems to show that the preceding eide must be taken as an imperative; (2) that this view is supported by some of the oldest versions; (3) that as regards B in particular, since it 'shows a remarkable inclination to change ι into ει' (WH. Introduction, p. 306), its evidence here is of little weight.² We have therefore to fall back on other considerations: and it is plain that $\epsilon i \delta \epsilon$ is not suited to the context. 'If a man does not stumble in word he is able to bridle his whole body. And if we put the bits into the horses' mouths that they may obey us,—we turn about their whole body also.' The natural apodosis to such a protasis would be 'let us also for the same purpose put a bridle in our own lips.' The present apodosis adds nothing to the clause $\epsilon is \tau \delta \pi \epsilon i \theta \epsilon \sigma \theta a \iota$, and it is difficult to find any natural meaning for δέ at the beginning of the verse: even the καί in apodosis is out of place; it would have been natural if the protasis had run εἰ τὸ στόμα μετάγομεν. Lastly, the καί after ίδού in ver. 4 seems to look back to the preceding ιός. De Wette and Beyschlag felt these difficulties so strongly that they included the whole verse in the protasis and explained the construction as an aposiopesis. Thus the latter translates 'Wenn wir aber den Pferden die Zügel in die Mäuler legen um sie gehorsam zu machen, und so ihren gauzen Leib regieren, so sollten wir es doch auch uns selbst thun, d.h. auch unserer Zunge einen Zügel anlegen und so unseres ganzen Leibes sittlich mächtig werden'; and refers, for examples of aposiopesis after ϵi , to Luke xix. 42, Acts xxiii. 9, Mark vii. 11, which however are very unlike the present. In fact such an aposiopesis is simply impossible here, and in any case is opposed to the style of the writer: it is only suggested as a last resource by editors who felt themselves bound to this reading on the mistaken view of the overwhelming evidence in its favour, and in obedience to the hazardous maxim that the more difficult reading is always to be preferred. No doubt a copyist will avoid, if he can, a difficulty which stares him in the face (and this might account for $i\delta\epsilon$ being changed, before the following $i\delta \delta v$, into either $\epsilon i \delta \epsilon$ or $i\delta \delta v$); but as long as a protasis has an apodosis of any sort to follow, it is a matter of indifference to the copyist whether it adds anything new or merely repeats what is already included in the protasis. Lachmann proposed to read οὐδέ with a question instead of $\epsilon i \delta \epsilon$. With $i\delta \epsilon$ we get exactly the right sense. The casual use of the word $\chi a\lambda$, suggests the image to which he calls his readers' attention (so idov introduces a simile in ver. 7). 'Lo! in horses we use the bit for the purpose of making them obey and thus control their whole body.' The less common active imperative is found along with the middle in Eccles. ii. 1 δείρο δή πειράσω σε έν εὐφροσύνη καὶ ἴδε ἐν ἀγαθῷ· καὶ ἰδοὺ καί γε τοῦτο ματαιότης, Mark iii. 32 and 34, ίδου ή μήτηρ σου... ίδε ή μήτηρ μου, Matt. xxv. 6 and 22, xxvi. 51 and 66, John xvi. 29 and 32, Gal. ίδε v. 2, ίδού i. 20: St. Luke always uses idor. The difference between them is well given by Donaldson (in Winer, p. 319): 'the middle often exhibits a signification which might be called intensive, but which really implies an immediate reference to some result in which the agent is interested. One of the commonest cases is that of the agrists ideir and idéada, of which the former means simply "to see," the latter "to behold, to look with interest "... for this reason $i\delta\omega$ is more frequently used than $i\delta\epsilon$ in calling attention to something worth seeing.' So here $i\delta\epsilon$ is 'lo!' ίδον 'behold,' the latter calling attention to various particulars about the ship. Cf. a similar change below iv. 3 from alτείσθαι to alτείν.

 2 In this epistle B gives $\epsilon\iota$ not only for long $\iota,$ as $\gamma\epsilon\iota\nu\omega\sigma\kappa οντ\epsilon s,$ θλείψει, ἡειπιζομένω, elós, but occasionally for short ι, as ανθρωπείνη, ατμείς. So C has σοφείας i. 5.

τῶν ἴππων.] The gen, is here put in an emphatic place to mark the comparison. It belongs both to χαλινούς and to στόματα, probably more to the former as distinguishing it from the human bridle, so we have ἄχρι τῶν χαλινῶν τῶν ἵππων Αρος, xiv. 20, ἐπὶ τὸν χαλινῶν τοῦ ἵππων

Anima i. 5, 15 ψυχή φερομένη ὑπὸ τῶν ἀνέμων. The very frequent use of ὑπὸ before ἀνέμων and similar words suggests that here it retains something of its local force, not simply 'by,' but 'under.' Otherwise it is rarely used in the sense of 'by' with things, as below $\delta\pi\delta$ $\pi\eta\delta\alpha\lambda$ iov and v. 7, Luke viii. 14 ὑπὸ μεριμνῶν καὶ πλούτου...συμπνίγοιται, 2 Pet. ii. 7 Λὼτ καταπονούμενον ύπὸ τῆς τῶν ἀθέσμων διαστροφῆς. Ιn i. 14 ὑπὸ τῆς ἐπιθυμίαs, and ii. 9 ὑπὸ τοῦ rόμου, it is probably due to personification, as also in Col. ii. 18 φυσιούμενος ύπὸ τοῦ νοὸς τῆς σαρκὸς αὐτοῦ. On its use in the Attic orators see Marchant in Classical Review, vol. iii. pp. 250, 438. For σκληρός contrasted with μαλακός compare our 'stiff breeze,' and see Prov. xxvii. 16 Βορέας σκληρὸς ἄνεμος, and passages cited above from Aelian and Dio Chrys.

ὅπου.] Here for ὅπη 'in whichever direction,' as often for ὅποι (cf. John viii. 22 ὅπου ἐγὼ ὑπάγω), neither of these latter forms being found in N.T. or LXX. Similarly ἐκεῖ and ποῦ are found for ἐκεῖσε and ποῖ, like the English 'where' and 'here' for 'whither' and 'hither.' Even in classical writers we find ὅπου for ὅποι, as in Xen. Mem. i. 6. 6 βαδίζοντα ὅπου αν βούλωμαι. Cf. Winer, p. 592.

ή όρμὴ τοῦ εἰθύνοντος βούλεται.] 'The pressure (touch) of the steersman decides.' The word ὁρμή is used of the origin of motion either moral or physical. In N.T. it only occurs here and Acts xiv. 5 (of a rush or onset of the people); so LXX. Prov. iii. 25 οὐ φοβηθήση ὁρμὰς ἀσεβῶν ἐπερχομένας, ib. xxi. 1 ὁρμὴ ἔδατος 'the rush of water': cf. the erroneous comment on this passage in Euth. Zig. and the Catena, πηδαλίω μικρῷ ὁρμὴν πλοίου μεταφέρομεν. It appears here to mean the slight pressure of the hand on the tiller, what Apuleius, speaking (Flor. 1. 2) of the eagle's flight, calls nutus clemens laevorsum vel dextrorsum. So Schegg, Erdmann, Theile, Wiesinger, Hofmann: on the other hand Calvin, Gebser, Beyschlag, Brückner, Alford understand ὁρμή metaphorically of an inclination of the mind (R.V. 'whither the impulse of the steersman willeth,' as in 1 Pet. iii. 17, 'if the will of God should so will ' εἰ θέλοι τὸ θέλημα τοῦ θεοῦ). As βούλομαι cannot be used properly of a mere irrational impulse or whim any more than of muscular pressure, it seems to me less confusing to understand it of the latter: see above n. on i. 18, and (for the tropical use of βούλομαι) compare Plato Symp. 184 Α τούτους βούλεται ὁ ἡμέτερος νόμος βασανίζειν, and its technical meaning in Arist. Eth. iii. 2 τὸ ἀκούσιον βούλεται λέγεσθαι οὐκ εἴ τις ἀγνοεῖ κ.τ.λ., Τορ. i. 7. p. 103 ταῦτα γὸρ πάντα τὸ εν βούλεται σημαίνειν. Similarly θέλω John ii. 8 τὸ πνεῦμα ὅπου θέλει πνεῖ, Plato Phaedr. 230 D τὰ μὲν οὖν χωρία καὶ τὰ δένδρα οὐδέν με θέλει διδάσκειν, Rep. ii. 370 οὖκ ἐθέλει τὸ πραττόμενον τὴν τοῦ πράττοντος σχολὴν περιμένειν. For εὐθύν. cf. Philo M. 1. p. 422 φιλεῖ γὰρ ἔστιν ὅτε χωρὶς ἡνιόχων τε καὶ κυβερνητῶν ὅ τε πλοῦς καὶ ὁ δρόμος εὐθύνεσθαι, Eurip. Cycl. 15 ἐν πρύμνη δ'ἄκρα αὐτὸς λαβὼν ηὔθυνον ἀμφῆρες δόρυ, Aesch. Suppl. 717 οἴαξ εὐθυντήρ.

5. ἡ γλῶσσα μικρὸν μέλος.] This comparison is quite in the Jewish proverbial style. The horse's mouth is small in comparison to the body, yet through it the whole body is directed; the rudder is small in comparison to the ship; the tongue small in comparison to the man; yet control this small member and you control the whole nature. This however is only the allegorical outside; by the smallness of the tongue is meant the insignificance, as we deem it, of speech in comparison with action; yet by controlling speech we acquire the power of controlling action. For the metonomy by which an independent personality seems to be attributed to the tongue, so that it stands for the temptations or sins which are concerned with the use of the tongue, though, as Augustine says (Serm. 17 cited by Corn. a Lapide), ream linguam non facit nisi mens rea, compare Matt. v. 29, 30 'if thine eye...thy right hand, cause thee to stumble'; Matt. xv. 19 'the things that come out of the mouth defile a man'; 1 John ii. 16 'the lust of the eyes.'

μεγάλα αὐχεῖ.] 'Vaunts great things.' There is no idea of vain boasting: the whole argument turns upon the reality of the power which the tongue possesses. Whether written as two words with A B, or as one (μεγαλαυχεῖ) with Sin. K L, &c., the phrase occurs nowhere else in N.T., but is found in Ezek. xvi. 50, Zeph. iii. 12 (A.V. 'to be haughty'), Sir. xlviii. 18, 2 Macc. xv. 32, cf. Ps. xii. 3 γλῶσσα μεγαλορρήμων. It may be compared with the Homeric εἴχομαι εἶναι and with Philo M. 1. p. 338 μεγάλης ψυχῆς τὸ αὕχημα γένεσιν ὑπερκύπτειν, ib. 158 τὸ δουλεύειν Θεῷ μέγιστον αὕχημα, ib. M. 2. 235 ἐγκράτεια δὲ καθαρὰ καὶ ἀκηλίδωτος ἀρετὴ, πάντων ὅσα πρὸς βρῶσιν καὶ πόσιν ἀλογοῦσα, καὶ ἐπάνω τῶν γαστρὸς ἡδουῶν αὐχοῦσα ἵστασθαι, βωμῶν ψανέτω. Observe the use of alliteration in μ to point the contrast of μικρὸν μέλος μεγάλα αὐχεῖ, and compare that in δ below v. 7.

ήλίκον πῦρ ἡλίκην ὕλην ἀνάπτει.] 'How small a fire kindles how large a forest,' cf. Philo M. 1. p. 455 σπινθὴρ καὶ ὁ βραχύτατος ὅταν καταπνευσθεὶς ζωπυρηθῆ μεγάλην ἐξάπτει πυράν. For the double question compare Mark xv. 21 βάλλοντες κλῆρον τίς τί ἄρη, and Luke xix. 15, Isocr. p. 240 οὖκ ἀγνοῶ ἡλίκος ὧν ('how old,' viz. 94) ὅσον ἔργον ἐνίσταμαι, Plato Rep. 4, p. 423 Β ἡλίκη οὖση (πόλει) ὅσην χώραν ἀφορισαμένους ἐᾶν (δεῖ), Soph. Seneca Controv. Exc. v. 5 nesciebas quam levibus ignibus quanta incendia orientur, and Milton P.L. i. 91 'Into what pit thou seest from what height fallen.' There is no force in the objection that this interpretation gives opposite senses to the same word in the same sentence. Literally it is 'what (what-sized) a fire kindles what a forest,' but the context interprets the meaning of 'what' in either case. In Lucian Hermot. 5 ήλίκους ήμας ἀποφαίνεις, οὐδὲ κατὰ τοὺς πυγμαίους ἐκείνους ἀλλὰ χαμαιπετεῖς παντάπασιν, the context shows the meaning to be 'how small.' The reference to a burning forest is common both in the Bible, as Ps. lxxxiii. 14 ώσεὶ πῦρ ὁ διαφλέξει δρυμόν, ώσεὶ φλὸξ κατακαῦσαι ὅρη, Isa. ix. 18, x. 17, 18, Zech. xii. 6; and elsewhere, as Hom. 11. ii. 455 πυρ ἀίδηλον ἐπιφλέγει ἄσπετον ὕλην οὔρεος ἐκ κορυφῆς, Thuc. ii. 77, Pind. Pyth. iii. 66, Eur. Ino fr. 415 D. μικροῦ γὰρ ἐκ λαμπτῆρος Ἰδαῖον λέπας πρήσειεν ἄν τις, †καὶ πρὸς ἄνδρ' εἰπὼν ἕνα† πύθοιντ' ἂν ἀστοὶ πάντες ἃ κρύπτειν χρεών, Philo M. 2. p. 208 ή ἐπιθυμία οΐα φλὸξ ἐν τλη νέμεται δαπανῶσα πάντα καὶ φθείρουσα, ib. On the other hand inspiration from above is also symbolized by fire Acts ii. 3, Isa. vi. 6, Jer. v. 14.
- ό κόσμος της άδικίας ή γλώσσα καθίσταται ἐν τοῖς μέλεσιν ήμῶν.] The first point to be determined in this difficult verse is whether we should put our stop after $\pi \hat{v}\rho$ with the R.V., WH., Neander, Lange, Hofmann, Erdmann, Beyschlag; or after ἀδικίας with the margin, Alf., Huther, Schegg and the generality of editors. It seems to me that the former gives the only tenable construction. The sense may be difficult, but the grammar is clear, if we take ή γλώσσα as subject to καθίσταται, with the attributive clause ή σπιλοῦσα—γεέννης, and make ὁ κόσμος τῆς ἀδικίας the predicate or complement. With the other punctuation ή σπιλοῦσα becomes the predicate, but there is no justification for the article: either we should have καθίσταται σπιλοῦσα οτ καθίσταται τὸ σπιλοῦν (μέλος): and in either case καθίσταται loses its proper force. The predi-πνεθμα δ Θεός, 2 Pet. ii. 17 δ υίός μου δ άγαπητός μου οθτός έστιν, Luke iv. 41 τον Χριστον αὐτον είναι, see Winer, p. 689 f. As κόσμος is defined by the genitive της άδικίας, it necessarily keeps the article in the predicate. cf. Apoc. xix. 13 κέκληται τὸ ὄνομα αὐτοῦ ὁ Λόγος τοῦ Θεοῦ, 1 Cor. xi. 3 παντὸς ἀνδρὸς ἡ κεφαλὴ ὁ Χριστός ἐστιν, Winer, p. 141. The fact that the subject ή γλώσσα is repeated from the preceding clause of course facilitates the transposition of the predicate. We may suppose that the form of the sentence as it first occurred to the writer was ή γλώσσα πῦρ, ὁ κόσμος τῆς ἀδικίας: and that for the sake of clearness he added the remaining words.

The next difficulty is the meaning of κόσμος here. Isidore of Pelu sium (#. 400 A.D.), followed by the Greek commentators, mentions two meanings (1) 'ornament.' έγκαλλώπισμα δοκεί τῆς ἀδικίας, because the tongue κοσμεί την αδικίαν δια της των ρητόρων ενγλώττου δεινότη-Tos: so Elsner, Wetstein, Semler, Storr, Ewald, and others: (2) 'the wicked world': at least this seems to be intended by the somewhat obscure expressions $\pi \hat{v} \rho \epsilon \sigma \tau i$, $\pi \lambda \hat{\eta} \theta o s a \delta i \kappa \omega s \kappa a \tau a \kappa a i o v \sigma u$, and $\kappa \delta \sigma \mu o s \epsilon \sigma \tau \hat{i}$ της άδικίας, οίονει προς τον συρφετώδη δχλον και δημώδη εκφερομένη και $\beta\lambda\epsilon\pi\sigma\sigma\sigma\sigma$, with which apparently should be connected the sentence just below, ταέτη γὰρ ἀλλήλοις κοινωνοῦμεν τῶν ἐαντῶν νοημάτων. The majority however of modern commentators follow the Vulgate 'universitas iniquitatis' (3), thus explained by Bede, 'Quia cuncta fere facinora per eam aut concinnantur . . . aut patrantur . . . aut defenduntur. So Erasmus, Calvin, Corn. à Lapide, Schneckenburger, Kern, De Wette, Wiesinger, Alford, Beyschlag, Erdmann. The objection to (3) is, that St. James elsewhere only uses the word κόσμος in a bad sense (i. 27 ἄσπιλον ξαντόν τηρείν ἀπό τοῦ κόσμον, ii. 5, iv. 4 ή φιλία τοῦ κόσμον ἔχθρα $\tau \circ \hat{v} \Theta \epsilon \circ \hat{v} = \epsilon \sigma \tau \hat{u}$; that only one example in all Greek literature is adduced for the meaning 'totality,' viz. Prov. xvii. 6 του πιστού όλος ὁ κόσμος τῶν χρημάτων, τοῦ δὲ ἀπίστου οὐδὲ ὀβολός, if indeed this should not be rather understood more literally of the inanimate world, as consisting of things which can be used and enjoyed. Lastly, the article seems scarcely consistent with this interpretation. 'A world of cares' is a natural expression for many cares; but if we say 'the world of care,' we are understood to predicate something about the world itself. Schegg's interpretation, 'the sphere or domain of iniquity,' is, I think, an improvement on (3) as far as sense goes, but it is not the natural meaning of κόσμος. The objections stated above are also applicable in part to (1). It is moreover a very harsh expression to call the tongue 'the ornament of injustice' because it is capable of being used to give a colour to injustice; and it falls flatly after the stronger word 'fire.'

Putting aside the commentators, if we read the words simply we can hardly fail to be reminded of the similar expressions in Luke xvi. 8, 9 τὸν οἰκονόμον τῆς ἀδικίας, τοῦ μαμωνᾶ τῆς ἀδικίας, where τῆς ἀδικίας is qualitative, as is shown by the parallel expression in ver. 11, τῷ ἀδίκφ μαμωνᾶ (cf. i. 17 above). The meaning of the phrase will then be 'in our microcosm the tongue represents or constitutes the unrighteous world' which is probably the meaning of the version in the Speculum, mundus iniquitatis per linguum constat in membris vestris: cf. 1 John v. 19 ὁ κόσμος ὅλος ἐν τῷ πονηρῷ κεἶται, and below iv. 4.¹ In the same way it might be said ἡ ἐπιθνμία τῆς σαρκὸς ὁ γαστὴρ καθίσταται ἐν τοῖς μέλεσαν. The tongue represents the world, because it is that member by which we are brought into communication with other men; it is the organ of society, the chief channel of temptation from

^{1 [}I think the force of the expression is better brought out if we explain τ . ἀδικίαs as a possessive genitive, 'the world which is under the dominion of unrighteousness,' i.e. the world as converted by our diseased imaginations into an opaque looking-glass for selfishness, instead of a window for the view of God. Compare Rom. vi. $16 \tau \delta \ \sigma \delta \mu a \ \tau \tilde{\eta}_{\gamma} \ \delta \delta \kappa i a s. - \Lambda$.]

Dr. Taylor further illustrates the text, if understood in the sense universitas iniquitatis, from T. B. Berachoth 15b, 'Life and death are in the hand of the tongue. Has the tongue a hand! No, but as the hand kills, so the tongue. The hand kills only at close quarters: the tongue is called an arrow as killing at a distance. An arrow kills at forty or fifty paces: but of the tongue it is said (Psa. lxxiii. 9) "they have set their mouth in heaven and their tongue goeth through the earth." It ranges over the whole earth and reaches to heaven.'

It may be worth while to mention that the Peshitto, followed by Morus, Bassett and others, takes $\kappa \acute{o}\sigma \mu o_{S} \tau \acute{\eta}_{S} \ \acute{a}\delta \iota \kappa \acute{a}\iota_{S}$ independently of $\acute{\eta}$ $\gamma \lambda \acute{\omega} \sigma \sigma a$, and supplies $\ddot{\nu}\lambda \eta$ as subject: 'the tongue is the fire, the world of wickedness the forest' (which it consumes). It is possible that there was an old gloss $\ddot{\nu}\lambda \eta$ intended to explain a difficulty; but it is inconsistent with the general thought: the tongue sets on fire the $\tau \rho o \chi \grave{o}_{S} \gamma \epsilon \nu \acute{\epsilon} \sigma \epsilon \omega_{S}$ not the $\kappa \acute{o}\sigma \mu o_{S} \tau \acute{\eta}_{S} \ \acute{a}\delta \iota \kappa \acute{a}_{S}$, and it has been already shown that to put the stop after $\mathring{a}\delta \iota \kappa \acute{a}_{S}$ gives an impossible construction for the following clause.

ή σπιλούσα δλον τὸ σῶμα.] Of course an attribute of ή γλῶσσα. See above i. 27, Jude 23 μισοῦντες τὸν ἀπὸ τῆς σαρκὸς ἐσπιλωμένον χιτῶνα,

τον τροχον της γενέσεως.] In this extremely difficult expression it seems better to read τροχόν 'wheel' than τρόχον 'course' (for which δρόμος is the word used in the N.T. and LXX.), as the former alone supplies a natural figure in the wheel which, catching fire from the glowing axle, is compared to the wide-spreading mischief done by the tongue. Heisen cites Achmet Oneirocritica 160 (8th cent. A.D.) εἰ δὲ ϊδη ὅτι ήλαινεν ἐν τῷ διφρῷ καὶ οἱ τροχοὶ ἐφλογίσθησαν ἐκ τῆς ἐλάσεως, εύρήσει νόσον αναλόγως της φλογώσεως. A consideration of the context will exclude some of the explanations which have been offered. The clause is evidently meant to be distinct from and stronger than that which precedes: it cannot therefore be anything confined to the individual. This forbids any reference to Eccles. xii. 6 συντροχάση δ τροχὸς ἐπὶ τὸν λάκκον, or to physiological phrases, such as we find in Galen Hipp, et Plat. 711 borrowed from Plat. Tim. 79 (the whole process of respiration) οἷον τροχοῦ περιαγομένου γίγνεται, which is afterwards referred to as ή τοῦ τροχοῦ περιαγωγή. On the other hand it cannot be referred to the material world, of which Simplicius speaks (Comm. in Epict. Ench. p. 94 b) as τῷ ἀπεραντῷ τῆς γενέσεως κύκλω, διὰ τοῦτο ἐπ' ἄπειρον προϊόντι, διὰ τὸ τὴν ἄλλου φθορὰν ἄλλου γένεσιν εἶναι, which is merely another way of expressing the Heraclitean flux, ὁ τῆς γενέσεως ποταμὸς ἐνδελεχῶς ῥέων Plut. Mor. p. 406. St. James speaking here of the tongue's power of mischief in its widest extent can only refer to the world of human life, the sphere of the worldly spirit, ὁ κόσμος, of which the tongue is the organ and representative in our body, and which is always at enmity with God (below iv. 4).

Turning now to the word γένεσις, the consideration of which was deferred on its first occurrence i. 23, it is used (1) of birth Matt. i. 18, Luke i. 14, so Gen. xl. 20 ήμέρα γενέσεως 'birth-day,' ib. xxxi. 13 γη της γενέσεως 'native land,' (2) of creation Gen. ii. 4 βίβλος γενέσεως οὐρανοῦ καὶ γῆς, Wisd. i. 14 σωτήριοι αὶ γενέσεις τοῦ κόσμου 'all God's creations are wholesome' referring to the absence of poisons in Paradise (see Grimm in loc.). But it is in Philo we find the fully developed meaning (3) in which it stands for the seen and temporal as opposed to the unseen and eternal, e.g. M. 1. p. 569 τὰ πρὸς γένεσιν τῶν πρὸς Θεὸν μακρὰν ἀπέζευκται τῆ μὲν γὰρ τὰ φανερὰ μόνα, τῷ δὲ καὶ ἀφανῆ γνώριμα, and a little below θεώμενος οσα εν γενέσει φθειρόμενα καὶ γεννώμενα, ib. 231 Θεοῦ μὲν ἴδιον ἡρεμία καὶ στάσις, γενέσεως δε μετάβασίς τε καὶ μεταβατική πάσα κίνησις, ib. 697 (those who claim for man the attributes of God) τὸ ἀκαθαίρετον τοῦ Θεοῦ κράτος γενέσει τη ἀκαταστάτως ἀπολλυμένη καὶ φθειρομένη περιάπτοντες, ib. 177 (as there are some who prefer the body to the soul, so there are some who) γένεσιν μᾶλλον Θεοῦ προτετιμήκασι, ib. 219 (unless God chastens us, we shall not be servants of Him who is merciful) γενέσεως δε της άνηλεους, ib. 261 την μισάρετον καὶ φιλήδονον γένεσιν, ib. 608 Moses rebuked those who gave the first place γενέσει and only the second to God, ib. 538 μεγάλης ψυχής τὸ αὔχημα, γένεσιν ὑπερκύπτειν καὶ μόνου τοῦ άγεννήτου περιέχεσθαι, ib. 668 εὐσέβεια γενέσεως μέν έστιν άλλοτρία, Θεοῦ δὲ οἰκεία, ib. 251 ἡ ἀρετῆς φύσις μόνη τῶν ἐν γενέσει καλή τε καὶ ἀγαθή, ib. 486 τὸ ἀπιστησαι γενέσει τη πάντα έξ ξαυτης ἀπίστω, μόνω δὲ πιστεῦσαι Θεφ...μεγάλης καὶ 'Ολυμπίου διανοίας ἔργον ἐστίν (cf. p. 486), ib. 502 the Logos is the Mediator between γένεσις and God, ib. 497 the fourth commandment was given ἴνα τὴν ἀπραξίαν αὐτῆς (τῆς ἑβδομάδος) μελετῶσα γένεσις εἰς μνήμην τοῦ ἀοράτως πάντα δρῶντος ἔρχηται, ib. 477 τότε καιρὸς έντυγχάνειν γένεσιν τῷ πεποιηκότι ὅτε τὴν ἑαυτῆς οὐθένειαν ἔγνωκεν. Ι need not quote further to show that γένεσις is used not only of the inanimate creation but of the whole life of man upon earth. The idea is partly Jewish and partly Platonic, see Plat. Rep. viii. p. 525 B (Mathematics are useful to the philosopher) διὰ τὸ τῆς οὐσίας άπτέον εἶναι, γενέσεως έξαναδύντι, Tim. 29 λέγωμεν δι' ηντινα αιτίαν γένεσιν και το παν τόδε δ ξυνιστας ξυνέστησεν, Plut. Mor. p. 593 D αι απηλλαγμέναι γενέσεως ψυχαί δαίμονές είσιν, Philolaus ap. Stob. Ecl. 1. c. 22 φιλομετάβολος γένεσις, ib. c. 20.

How are we then to understand $\tau \rho o \chi \acute{o}s$? We may keep close to the original meaning and suppose it to denote the incessant change of life 'which never continues in one stay,' though this is perhaps sufficiently implied by the word $\gamma \acute{e} \nu \epsilon \sigma \iota s$: or we may suppose the metaphor borrowed not from the wheel in motion, but from the shape of the wheel at rest, the circle or sphere of this earthly life.

meaning all that is contained in our life '; the tongue being the axle, the central fire from which the whole is kindled. This seems to make the better sense, though the other meaning gives more precise point to φλογίζονσα. Lucian's treatise De Calumnia will illustrate how it is that the tongue sets on fire 'the round of life,' cf. 1 (through calumny) καὶ οἶκοι ἀνάστατοι γεγόνασι καὶ πόλεις ἄρδην ἀπολώλασι, cf. Sirac. xxviii. 14 foll.² For other interpretations see Pott pp. 317–329, Heisen pp. 819–880.³

φλογιζομένη ύπὸ τῆς γεέννης.] For the repetition of different parts of the same verb see above i. 13 ἀπείραστος—πειράζει, and below v. 7 δαμάζεται - δεδάμασται. The name Gehenna (Γαιέγγα) occurs only once in LXX. (Josh, xviii, 16), more commonly it is denoted as φάραχ: 'Erνόμ, see Wetstein i. p. 299, D. of B. under Gehenna' and · Tophet.' It is found in Matt. v. 22 την γεώνταν τοῦ πυρός (where see Rabbinical quotations in Wetstein), ib. v. 29, x. 28, xviii, 9, xxiii, 15 νίον γεέννης, ver. 33 κρίσις γεέννης, often in Orac. Sibyl. as i. 103, ii. 292, Acta Johannis T. p. 276, Pirke Aboth i. 6 'the wicked inherit Gehenna,' ib. v. 29, 31. As οὐρανός stands for Θεός, so γεέννα for διάβολος, see below v. 15 σοφία δαιμονιώδης, iv. 7, John viii. 44, 1 John iii, 8-10 6 ποιών την άμαρτίαν έκ τοῦ διαβόλου έστίν, κ.τ.λ. Here we have the origin of sin earried back beyond the ἐπιθυμία of the individual man as shown above i. 14. Thus we have combined in this passage the three hostile principles, the world embodied in the tongue, the flesh in the members (iv. I as well as here) and Satan using both for his own purpose. Wetst. quotes from the Targum on Ps. cxx. (lingua dolosa cum carbonibus juniperi) qui incensi sunt in Gehenna, and other passages to the same effect. See Sir. li. 4-6 and below on ἀκατάστατον a quotation from Hermas.

7. $\pi \hat{a} \sigma \alpha \gamma \hat{a} \rho$.] Introduces the proof of the preceding statement by reverting to the original figure contained in the word $\chi a \lambda a \alpha \gamma \omega \gamma \hat{c} \hat{c}$. The fact that the tongue is the one thing which defies man's power to control it is a sign that there is something satanic in its bitterness.

φύσις.] Here used with a pleonastic force, like natura in Latin; see Plut. Mor. 1112 F, where κατοῦ φύσις is said to be the same as αὐτὸ τὸ κατὸν, and my n. on Cic. N.D. 11. 136 alri natura. If we are to translate it, it is best done by an adverb 'every kind of animal is naturally subject to man.' Brute nature under all its forms is under

the control of human nature. It is also vaguer than $\pi \hat{a} r \tau a = \tau \hat{a} = \theta \eta \rho \hat{a}$ and may be supposed to admit of individual exceptions.

θηρίων τε και πετεινών έρπετών τε και έναλίων. The classification resembles that in Gen. i. 26, ix. 2 ὁ φόβος ὑμῶν ἔσται ἐπὶ πᾶσι τοῖς θηρίοις τῆς γῆς, έπὶ πάντα τὰ πετεινὰ τοῦ οὐρανοῦ καὶ ἐπὶ πάντα τὰ κινούμενα ἐπὶ τῆς γῆς καὶ έπὶ πάντας τοὺς ἰχθύας τῆς θαλάσσης, Dent. iv. 17, 18, Acts x. 12 τὰ τετράποδα της γης καὶ τὰ έρπετὰ καὶ τὰ πετεινὰ τοῦ οὐρανοῦ, 1 Kings iv. 33 (Solomon) ελάλησε περί των κτηνών και περί των πετεινών και περί των έρπετῶν καὶ περὶ τῶν ἰχθύων. So Philo M. 2. p. 352 foll. divides ζῶα into τετράποδα, ἔνυδρα, έρπετὰ, πτηνά. The word θηρία has a wider or narrower meaning: it may even include bees, fishes, and worms (see exx. in lex.), or may be confined to quadrupeds or more strictly to wild beasts, which is of course the prominent idea here, as there is no need to insist on the fact that domestic beasts are tamed. In like manner $\epsilon_{\rho\pi\epsilon\tau\dot{\alpha}}$ is used in a wider sense for animals, which walk on four or more legs in contradistinction to man who walks on two, as in Xen. Mem. i. 4. 11 and the poets; but also for the very unscientific class of reptiles, including the weasel, the mouse, the lizard, the grasshopper (Lev. xi. 21, 29). The word ἐνάλιος is not found elsewhere in the Bible, but it is quite classical (cf. Soph. Ant. 345 πόντον τ' είναλίαν φύσιν), and is used, as here, with substantival force by Plut. Mor. 669 το των έναλίων γένος, ib. 729, cf. ps. Arist. Mund. 5 εναλίων ζώων καὶ πεζων καὶ ἀερίων φύσεις έχώρισε. For the coupling of the words in the list by τε and καί compare Rom. i. 14 "Ελλησί τε καὶ βαρβάροις, σοφοίς τε καὶ ἀνοήτοις. Probably beasts and birds are coupled as the nobler orders, and the other two because some of the $\xi \rho \pi \epsilon \tau \hat{a}$ are amphibious, and others, as snakes, closely resemble some fishes.

δαμάζεται και δεδάμασται.] Elsewhere in N.T. only in Mark v. 4 of the untamable demoniac; in LXX. Dan. ii. 40 used of iron which subdues all things; in classical writers both literally and metaphorically. For the writer's love of puronomasia see Essay on Grammar, and Winer p. 793 foll. Here of course emphasis is gained by the combination of the present and perfect: the art of taming is no new thing, but has belonged to the human race from the first, cf. Juv. iii. 190 quis timet aut timuit, viii. 70 damus ac dedimus, John x. 35, Heb. vi. 10.

τῆ φύσε.] Dat. of the agent, an extension of the dat. commodi used most frequently with the perfect tense; see Madvig's Gr. Synt. 38y, Winer p. 274 (where this passage is however wrongly explained as dat. instr.), Marchant in Class. Rev. vol. iii. pp. 250, 437, and for the similar use in Latin, passages cited s.c. 'dative' in the Index to my Cic. N.D.

On the thought cf. Isoc. Nic. p. 17 μὴ καταγνῶς ἀνθρώπων τοσαύτην δυστυχίαν, ὡς περὶ μὲν τὰ θηρία τέχνας εὐρήκαμεν αἷς αὐτῶν τὰς ψυχὰς ἡμεροῦμεν...ἡμᾶς δ' αὐτοὺς οὐδὲν ἄν πρὸς ἀρετὴν ὡφελήσαιμεν (No! believe that our nature can be amended by training), Soph. Antig. 332 foll. Philo M. 1. p. 20 foll. 2. p. 200 πολλάκις ἔγνων ἡμερωθέντας λέοντας ἄρκτους παρδάλεις κ.τ.λ. Field cites Eur. Acol. (μρ. Plut. Mor. p. 954) ἡ βραχύ τοι σθένος ἀνέρος ἀλλὰ ποικιλία πραπίδων δαμᾶ φῦλα πόντου χθοιίων τ' ἀερίων τε παιδεύματα. It was a common-place of the Stoics, see Cic. N.D. II. 151, 158 foll., Senec. Benef. ii. 29 cogita quanta nobis tribuerit Parens noster, quanto valentiora animalia sub iugum miserimus, quanto velociora consequamur, quam nihil sit mortale non sub ietu nostro positum. Evasmus in his Paraphrase illustrates as follows: cicurantur leones, mansuescunt tigrides, serviunt etiam elephanti, subiguntur et crocodili, mitescunt aspides, redduntur familiares aquilae et vultures, ad amicitium alliciuntur delphini. The writer here follows Gen. i. 28, ix. 2, Ps. viii. 6–8.

8. οὐδεὶς δαμάσαι δύναται ἀνθρώπων.] But if so, how can the Psalmist say παθσον την γλωσσάν σου ἀπὸ κακοῦ (xxxiv. 13), and vow not to sin with the tongue (xvii, 3, xxxix, 1)! So Prov. xiii, 3. This may be partly explained by the emphatic position of ἀνθρώπων. Man cannot do it by himself, but he who is $\tau \acute{\epsilon} \lambda \cos$ may do it (ver. 2), and such perfection is attainable through the help of God given in answer to prayer; see above i. 5 and compare the Psalmist's prayer, cxli. 3. So Aug. de nat. et grut. c. 15 non enim ait, linguam nullus domare potest, sed nullus hominum; ut cum domatur, Dei misericordia, Dei adjutorio, Dei gratia fier i fateamur. The Pelagians, followed here by Oceumenius, read this verse as a question (Schegg). In the next place $\dot{\eta}$ $\gamma\lambda\hat{\omega}\sigma\sigma a$, when regarded as setting on fire the whole round of life, is not simply the speech of the individual, but that multiplied and re-echoed a thousandfold by the voices of others and by the power of the press; parva metu primo mox sese attollit in auras. However a man may learn to control his own tongue, these echoes are beyond all human power.

άκατάστατον κακόν.] Cf. above i. 8, also Herm. Mand. ii. 3 ποιγιρά ή καταλαλιά, ἀκατάστατον δαιμόνιον ἐστιν, μηδέποτε εἰρηνενον, where Harn. cites Orig. in Jounn. (Opp. iv. p. 355) οὐκ ὄκνησαν καὶ τὰ νομισθέντα ἃν ἐλάχιστα είναι των άμαρτημάτων δαιμονίοις προσάψαι οι φήσαντες την δένχολίαν δαιμόνιον είναι, όμοίως δε καὶ τὴν καταλαλιάν, and below ver. 16 ἀκαταστασία. Erdmann and Hofmann read ἀκατάσχετον with Cod. Ephr., the Peshitto, and some other versions, and we find the word similarly used by Philo Μ. 1. p. 695 τὸ στόμα διανοίξαντες καὶ ἐάσαντες ἀχαλίνωτον, καθάπερ ῥεθμα ἀκατάσχετον, φέρεσθαι τὸν ἀκριτόμυθον λόγον ἐωσι. This would suit the passage very well, agreeing with Ps. xii. 4; but the other reading is generally accepted and gives a good sense 'restless,' 'unquiet,' like the least tamable beasts; others translate as in i. 8 'unstable,' 'incousistent,' which they think agrees better with v. 9 foll., but it is a somewhat incongruous epithet for κακόν. See above i. 8. We should naturally take the words ακ. κ. as acc. in apposition to την γλώσσαν, like i. 8 ἀνηρ δίψυχος, but the following nom. makes it more probable that there is a sudden change of construction, $d\kappa$. κ . being the predicate of an independent sentence with $\dot{\eta}~\gamma\lambda\hat{\omega}\sigma\sigma a$ understood as subject; cf. Mark xii. 38 foll. βλέπετε ἀπὸ τῶν θελόντων ἐν στολαῖς περιπατεῖν...οῖ κατεσθίοντες τὰς οἰκίας τῶν χηρῶν οὖτοι λήμψονται περισσότερον κρίμα. In the Apocalypse we meet with many of these irregular appositions, e.g. i. 5 ἀπὸ Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ, ὁ μάρτυς ὁ πιστός, ib. xx. 2 ἐκράτησεν τὸν δράκοντα, ὁ ὄφις ὁ ἀρχαῖος, ὄς ἐστιν διάβολος, Winer, p. 668 foll., A. Buttmann, p. 68 foll. So even in Homer, Il. vi. 395, x. 437.

μεστή ἰοῦ θανατηφόρου.] For μεστή see below v. 17, 2 Pet. ii. 14, Rom. i. 29 μεστοὺς φθόνου. The metaphor here is taken from Ps. lviii.

4, and cxl. 3 ιὸς ἀσπίδων ὑπὸ τὰ χείλη αὐτῶν quoted in Rom. iii. 13. Eccles. x. 11 foll., cf. Lucian Fugit. 19 ἰοῦ μεστὸν αὐτοῖς τὸ στόμα (speaking of pseudo-philosophers), Test. Gad. p. 680 F τὸ μῖσος ἰοῦ διαβολικοῦ τὴν καρδίαν πληροῖ, Acta Philippi T. p. 76 ἔστιν δὲ τὸ κατοικητήριον αὐτοῦ (i.e. of the Serpent) Τάρταρος...φεύγετε οὖν ἀπ' αὐτοῦ ἴνα μὴ ὁ ιὸς αὐτοῦ ἐκχυθῆ ἐπὶ τὸ στόμα ὑμῶν...ἡ τῶν κακῶν ἐπιθυμία πᾶσα ἐξ αὐτοῦ προελήλυθεν, Didaché ii. 4 οὐκ ἔση διγνώμων οὐδὲ δίγλωσσος παγὶς γὰρ θανάτου ἡ διγλωσσία, Barn. 19, Clem. Al. Paed. 301 P. For θαν., which occurs here only in N.T., cf. Job xxxiii. 23 ἐὰν ὧσι χίλιοι ἄγγελοι θανατηφόροι, 4 Macc. viii. 17 θανατηφόρος ἀπείθεια: it is used by Xen., Plato, &c.

9. ἐν αὐτῆ εὐλογοῦμεν.] What makes the tongue more mischievous is that it serves the purpose of the δίγλωσσος, hiding evil under the mask of good. For instrumental use of ἐν see Winer p. 485. Here it might be possible to give it a stricter sense, 'in this part we bless God,' did we not also meet with such unmitigated Hebraisms as $\pi a \tau \acute{a} \sigma \sigma \epsilon \iota \nu$ or $\mathring{a} \pi o \kappa \tau \epsilon \acute{\iota} \nu \epsilon \iota \nu$ $\mathring{\epsilon} \nu \mu a \chi a \acute{\iota} \rho a$ Luke xxii. 49, Apoc. xiii. 10, Psal. Sol. ii. 1 ἐν κριῷ κατέβαλε τε ἰχη ἀχυρά. It was customary with the Jews. whenever they uttered the name of God, to add 'Blessed (be) He.' Hence we find $\mathring{\delta}$ ε ἐνλογητός used as a name for God in Mark xiv. 61. This sense of ε ἐνλ. is peculiar to Hellenistic writers, see Westcott, Heb. p. 203 foll.

τον Κύριον καὶ Πατέρα.] This phrase does not occur elsewhere in the Bible: the nearest approach to it is in 1 Chron. xxix. 10 εὐλογητὸς εἶ, Κύριε, ὁ Θεὸς Ἰσραήλ, ὁ Πατὴρ ἡμῶν, Isa. lxiii. 16 σὺ Κύριε πατὴρ ἡμῶν, Matt. xi. 25 ἐξομολογοῦμαί σοι Πάτερ, Κύριε τοῦ οὖρανοῦ καὶ τῆς γῆς. We may compare Philo on the name Κύριος καὶ Θεός (Μ. 1. p. 581), δικαιοῖ τῶν μὲν φαύλων λέγεσθαι κύριος καὶ δεσπότης, τῶν δ᾽ ἐν προκοπαῖς καὶ βελτιώσεσι θεός, τῶν δ᾽ ἀρίστων καὶ τελειοτάτων ἀμφότερον (being governed, as he adds below, by Him as κύριος, and benefited by Him as θεός). The name $\pi ατήρ$ is used with reference to man's being made in the image of God.

καὶ ἐν αὐτῆ.] Emphatic repetition. 'It is through it we bless God, through it we curse men.' Compare Philo M. 2. p. 196 οὐ γὰρ ὅσιον δι' οὖ στόματος τὸ ἰερώτατον ὄνομα προφέρεταί τις, διὰ τούτον φθέγγεσθαί τι τῶν αἰσχρῶν, Sir. xxviii. 12, Erasm. Adag. under the heading ex eodem ore calidum et frigidum etflure, Diog. L. i. 105 (Anacharsis) ἐρωτηθεὶς τί ἐστιν ἐν ἀνθρώποις ἀγαθόν τε καὶ φαῦλον, ἔφη 'γλῶσσα.' Similar stories are told of Pittacus and Bias as to that part of the sacrifice which is at once most useful and most harmful (Plut. Mor. p. 506, ib. p. 38 and 146, Fragm. xi. 41, p. 30, Didot).

καταρώμεθα.] Ps. lxii. 4 εν στόματι αὐτῶν εὐλόγουν καὶ τἢ καρδία αὐτῶν κατηρῶντο, Rom. xii. 13 εὐλογεῖτε καὶ μὴ καταρῶσθε, Sirac. xxxi. 24 εἶς εὐχόμενος καὶ εἶς καταρώμενος τίνος φωνῆς εἰσακούσεται ὁ δεσπότης: Test. Patr. p. 734 F ἡ ἀγαθὴ διάνοια οὐκ ἔχει δύο γλώσσας εὐλογίας καὶ κατάρας. An example of such cursing is in John vii. 49 ὁ ὅχλος οἶτος...ἐπάρατοί εἰσιν, Shimei's of David 2 Sam. xvi. 5. St. James uses the first person as in ver. 1.

M. p. 16 ἐπεὶ οὐ σύμπασα εἰκῶν άρχετύπω παραδείγματι εμφερής, πολλαί δε είσιν ανόμοιοι προσεπεσημήνατο είπων τῷ κατ' εἰκόνα τὸ καθ' ὁμοίωσιν εἰς ἔμφασιν ἀκριβοῦς ἐκμαγείου and Hagenbach Hist. of Doctr. § 56, vol. i. p. 214 tr. On the pagan view see Acts xvii. 38 and my nn. on Cic. N.D. I. 1 ad agnitionem animi and I. 90 nec vero intellego cur maluerit Epicurus deos hominum similes dicere quam homines deorum. Though the Divine image is traceable in every child of man (as Bengel says, remanet nobilitas indelebilis), yet it is only perfect in the Second Adam (Heb. i. 3, Col. i. 15, 2 Cor. iv. 4), into whose image the believer is being gradually transformed (Col. iii. 10, Eph. iv. 24, 2 Cor. iii. 18). For the argument here ef. Gen. ix. 6, Prov. xiv. 31, Matt. xxv. 35 foll., below iv. 11, 12, 1 John iv. 20. 10. ἐκ τοῦ αὐτοῦ στόματος.] This seems to imply that it is the combination of blessing and cursing which is condemned, and that either may be allowable by itself. Can this be the meaning of St. James?

What was the general feeling of the Jews about cursing! The old law required the Israelite to curse on Mount Ebal and bless on Mount Gerizim. The fact too that cursing was forbidden in special cases, as against parents (Exod. xxi. 17), the king (ib. xxii. 28), the deaf (Lev. xix. 14), seems to show that it was not generally condemned under the old dispensation. It is referred to without implying blame, Prov. xi. 26, xxiv. 24, xxvi. 2, xxx. 10, Eccles. vii. 21, x. 90. Compare also the eurse of Canaan by Noah (Gen. ix. 25), that of Simeon and Levi by their father (Gen. xlix, 7), of the builder of Jericho by Joshua (Josh. vi. 26), Abimelech by Jotham (Jud. ix. 20, 57), Meroz by Deborah (ib. v. 23), the children by Elisha (2 K. ii. 24), apostate Jews by Nehemiah (Neh. xiii. 25), and the imprecations in the Psalms. Are we then to suppose that St. James here attaches a special force to the words καθ' ὁμοίωσαν Θεοῦ γεγονότας? Does he mean by this, 'men transformed into the divine image '! This seems precluded by a comparison of the passages cited at the end of the preceding note, in which a similar inference is drawn from man's general relation to the Creator. Must we then conclude that cursing in itself is here condemned as a form, and that the worst form, of καταλαλιά and κρίσις (below iv. 11)? So St. Paul, Rom. xii. 14 εὐλογεῖτε καὶ μὴ καταρᾶσθε, cf. Luke vi. 28. Cursing will then be the overflow of the bitter water spoken of in ver. 11, 'the water which causeth the curse' (Numbers v. 18); a sign of the ζηλος πικρός which characterizes the wisdom of this world (below ver. 14). Nor is this view of the wrongfulness of cursing unknown in the O.T.: cf. Job xxxi. 29, 30 ('neither have I suffered my mouth to sin by wishing a curse to his, i.e. my enemy's, soul'); it is the mark of the wicked that ἀρᾶς τὸ στόμα αὐτοῦ γέμει καὶ πικρίας, Ps. x. 7. But then, why is not St. James content to condemn cursing in itself! Why does he only condemn it when combined with what is good, blessing? It is because 'the wrath of man worketh not the righteousness of God' (above i. 20), because 'bitterness proves that we are lying against the truth' (below v. 14); in the words of St. John (1 ep. iv. 20) because 'he that loveth not his brother cannot love God,' so that the mixture of cursing proves the unreality of the blessing, cf. Matt. xii. 34, ib. v. 23, 24.

ἐξέρχεται εὐλογία καὶ κατάρα.] Where there is one predicate to several connected subjects, of which the nearest to the verb is in the singular number, the predicate, if it precedes the subjects, may itself be in the singular, as though it referred only to the nearest subject: cf. 1 Tim. vi. 4 ἐξ ὧι γίνεται φθόνος, ἔρις, βλασφημίαι, Αρος. ix. 17, ἐκ τῶν στομάτων αὐτῶν ἐκπορεύεται πῦρ καὶ καπνὸς καὶ θεῖον, Winer, p. 651, Madv. § 2 b., Krueg. 63. 4.

οὐ χρὴ ταῦτα οὕτως γίνεσθαι.] χρή not found elsewhere in N.T., occurs in Prov. xxv. 27 τιμᾶν χρὴ λόγους ἐνδόξους. It is about equivalent to ὀφειλομεν, weaker than δεῖ, which properly implies not merely what ought to be, but what must be, though at times it comes very near to χρή, as in Mark xiii. 14 ἐστὼς ὅπου οὐ δεῖ, 2 Tim. ii. 24 δοῦλον Κυρίου οὐ δεῖ μάχεσθαι. Some hold that οἵτως is pleonastic with ταῦτα, merely adding emphasis, as where it marks the apodosis (Winer, p. 678): should it not rather be taken as summing up what was said before of the manner in which the blessings and curses are uttered with an unbridled tongue under the violence of passion? I think we cannot assume that St. James would have condemned such anathemas as we find in 1 Cor. xvi. 22, Gal. i. 8. Dr. Plummer compares Numb. xxiii. 8 'How shall I curse whom God hath not cursed?'

11. μήτι ή πηγή ἐκ τῆς αὐτῆς ὁπῆς βρύει τὸ γλυκὸ καὶ τὸ πικρόν.] For the interrogative μή compare ver. 12; the softened form μήτι is common in N.T., cf. the parallel in Matt. vii. 16 μήτι συλλέγουσιν ἀπὸ ἀκανθῶν σταφυλήν; ib. xxvi. 22, but comparatively rare in classical writers. For tigure cf. Philo M. 1. p. 199 πηγή λόγων διάνοια καὶ στόμιον αὐτῆς λόγος, ὅτι τὰ ἐνθυμήματα πάντα διὰ τούτου καθάπερ νάματα ἀπὸ γῆς εἰς τοὐμφανὲς ἐπιρρέουτα ἀναχεῖται, ib. 447. Βρύει is not found elsewhere in N.T. or LXX.: in classical Greek it is used intransitively with the dative, as in Arist. Νυb. 45 (βίος) βρύων μελίτταις, Hom. Il. xvii. 56 ἔρνος βρύει ἄνθεϊ λευκῷ, also with gen. (Soph. O.C. 17 χῶρος ..βρύων δάφνης, ἐλαίας), properly in reference to plants bursting into bud and flower, or of the land in spring (Xen. Cyney. v. 12), then metaphorically ἄχη βρύει Aesch. Choeph. 62, θράσει βρύων Ag. 177, λόγοι μεστοί πιεύματος θείου καὶ βρύοντες δυνάμει, Justin M. Tryph. 9. The only instance cited from a classical author for the transitive use is Anacr. (44, 1, 2 Bergk) χάριτες βρύουσι βόδα, where however Hermann reads ρόδου βρύουση: Justin M. (Tryph. 114) has της πέτρας ζων ίδωρ βρυούσης, cf. Chrysostom (hom. in mart., Migne Patrol. vol. 50, p. 664) οἱ τάφοι των μαρτύρων βρύουσιν εὐλογίαν, Clem. Hom. ii. 45 πηγάς γŷ βρύσας Θ_{cos} . Eustath, in II. ρ , p. 1126, 42 (ap. Wetst.) says it is properly used of olive blossoms and, later, of springs, as in Acta Johannis p. 276 Τ. βρέουσαν την πηγην είρον, Acta Thomae p. 22, Clem. Hom. iii. 36. $O\pi \hat{n}$ 'a cleft in a rock,' elsewhere in N.T. only in Heb. xi. 38, also in LXX., Exod. xxxiii. 22, Obad. 3. Huppor only used here and below in N.T. Its use here in preference to άλυκόν or άλμυρόν is doubtless owing to its often being found in a figurative sense, e.g. ver. 14, Ps. lxiv. 3, Sirac. iv. 6 καταρᾶσθαι έν πικρία ψυχής. descriptive of sea-water, like amarus, our 'brackish.' The Dead Sea however, to which St. James is probably alluding, was really bitter and had both salt and fresh springs on its shores. Other examples of bitter waters are Marah (Exod. xv. 23), 'the water that causeth the curse' (Numb. v. 18-27), Apoc. viii. 11. Pliny N.H. ii. 103 has a fable of a fountain of the Sun which was sweet and cold at noon and bitter and hot at midnight. Antigonus (Mirab. 148 ap. Wetst.) gives an account of such a spring τὸν δὲ Ἱμέραν ἐκ μιᾶς πηγῆς σχιζόμειον τὸ μὲν άλυκοι των ρείθρων έχειν, το δε πότιμον: in 4 Esdras v. 9 one of the prodigies which announce Messiah's coming is in dulcibus aquis salsae invenientur.

12. μη δύναται] See on ii. 14.

συκή έλαιας ποιήσαι.] Cf. for the use of ποιείν Matt. iii. 10 πῶν δένδρον μὴ ποίουν καρπόν, Gen. i. 11, Vorst, p. 162 and 830; and for the proverbial figure Matt. vii. 16, ib. xii. 33, Isa. v. 2, Seneca Ep. 87 non nascitur ex malo bonum, non magis quam ficus ex olea, Epict, Diss. ii. 20 πῶς γὰρ δύναται ἄρπελος μὴ ἀμπελικῶς κινείσθαι ἀλλ' ἐλαικῶς; ἡ ἐλαία παλυν μὴ ἐλαικῶς ἀλλ' ἀμπελικῶς; Plut. Mor. 472 Γ τὴν ἄμπελον σῦκα ψέρειν οὐκ ἀξιοῦμεν οὐδὲ τὴν ἐλαίας βότρος, Anton. 8. 15.

οὕτε άλυκὸν γλυκὸ ποιῆσαι ὕδωρ.] For this irregular use of οἴτε see Winer, p. 614, where the editor cites Tischenderf mihi non dubium est quin fatiscente Graceitate ctiam οἴτε pro οὐδέ sit dictum. So Apoc. ix. 21 οὐ μετενόησαν ἐκ τῶν φόνων αὐτῶν οἴτε ἐκ τῶν φαρμάκων αὐτῶν οἴτε ἐκ πορνείας αὐτῶν, where οὐ is parallel with οἴτε, not overlapping. In our text it may perhaps be explained by the preceding question being regarded as = οἴτε συκῆ κ.τ.λ. 'Αλυκόν classical, but found elsewhere in the Bible only in phrase ἡ ψάλασσα ἡ ἄλυκή, as a name for the Dead Sea (Numb. iii, 12, Deut. iii. 17). The rare phrase ποιῆσαι ὕδωρ is assimilated to π. ἐλαίας above : we find it used of rain Arist. Vesp. 261 ἔδωρ ἀναγκαίως ἔχει τὸν θεὸν ποιῆσαι.

Many MSS, and versions read $o\tilde{v}\tau\omega_{S}$ $o\tilde{v}\delta\hat{\epsilon}$, a smaller number insert $\mu\hat{u}a$ $\pi\eta\gamma\hat{\eta}$ and $\kappa\hat{u}\hat{\iota}$ after $\hat{u}\lambda\nu\kappa\hat{o}r$. The insertion of $o\tilde{v}\tau\omega_{S}$ may have arisen from a dittographia of $o\tilde{v}\tau\hat{\epsilon}$, but the latter insertions were evidently intended to avoid the difficulty of taking $\hat{u}\lambda\nu\kappa\hat{o}r$ as a substantive and the subject of $\delta \dot{v} \nu a \tau a \iota \tau a \upsilon \hat{\eta} \sigma a \iota$. The true relation of the sentences is lost by the insertion $o \tilde{v} \tau \omega_{5}$. The two clauses are not compared with each other, but are both used to illustrate the impossibility of genuine worship proceeding from a heart which naturally vents itself in curses.

13. τίς σοφὸς καὶ ἐπιστήμων ἐν ὑμῖν:] The interrogative here takes the place of a condition, as in Luke xi. 11 τίνα δὲ ἐξ ὑμῶν τὸν πατέρα αἰτήσει δ νίδς ἄρτον; μη λίθον ἐπιδώσει αὐτ $\hat{\varphi}$; and ib. 5–8, where the construction is broken, τίς ἐξ ὑμῶν ἔξει φίλον being changed into a regular conditional form in ver. 8 εἰ καὶ οὐ δώσει διὰ τὸ εἶναι φίλον, διά γε τὴν ἀναίδειαν αὐτοῦ δώσει αὐτῷ, Dent. xx. 5-8 τίς ὁ ἄνθρωπος ὁ οἰκοδομήσας οἰκίαν καινὴν καὶ οὐκ ἐνεκαίνισεν αὐτήν ; πορευέσθω...καὶ τίς ὁ ἄνθρωπος ὅστις ἐφύτευσεν άμπελωνα καὶ οὐκ εὐφράνθη έξ αὐτοῦ; πορευέσθω κ.τ.λ., Jud. vii. 3 τίς δ φοβούμενος καὶ δειλός; ἐπιστραφέτω, Psa. xxxiii. 12 τίς ἐστιν ἄνθρωπος δ θέλων ζωήν; παῦσον τὴν γλῶσσάν σου ἀπὸ κακοῦ, ib. evii. 43 τίς σοφός; καὶ φυλάξει ταῦτα καὶ συνήσει τὰ έλέη τοῦ Κυρίου, Isa. l. 10 τίς ἐν ὑμῖν ὁ φοβούμετος τὸν Κύριον; ὑπακουσάτω τῆς φωιῆς τοῦ παιδὸς αὐτοῦ, Jer. ix. 12, Hos. xiv. 10, Sir. vi. 33 τίς σοφός; αὐτῷ προσκολλήθητι, other examples in Vorst, p. 211 foll. For a similar use without the interrogative pronoun see n. on v. 13 κακοπαθεί τις εν υμίν; προσευχέσθω. Lachmann has no interrogation here, and A. Buttmann (p. 217) argues on the same side, comparing it with other instances in which he thinks τ 's is equivalent to an indefinite relative; but the passages cited above are sufficient to settle the question. The abruptness to which Buttmann objects is a marked characteristic of the writer's style. For ἐν ὑμῖν almost equivalent to ψμων cf. below v. 13, 14, and ἐξ ψμων above ii. 16. 'Επιστήμων here only in N.T., it occurs in Deut. i. 13 (of judges) δότε αὐτοῖς ἄνδρας σοφούς καὶ ἐπιστήμονας καὶ συνετούς, ib. iv. 6 (of Israel) ἴδου λαὸς σοφὸς καὶ ἐπιστήμων, Isa. v. 21 οὐαὶ οἱ συνετοὶ ἐν ἑαυτοῖς καὶ ἐνώπιον αὐτῶν ἐπιστήμονες: used in classical Greek for a skilled or scientific person as opposed to one who has no special knowledge or training. Compare for thought and expression Philo M. 2. p. 421 τίς γὰρ οὐκ ἂν εἴποι ὅτι σοφὸν ἄρα γένος καὶ ἐπιστημονικώτατον μόνον τοῦτ' ἔστιν, ὧ τὰς θείως παραινέσεις έξεγένετο μη κενώς και έρήμους ἀπολιπείν των οἰκειών πράξεων άλλα πληρωσαι τους λύγους έργοις επαινετοίς;

δειξάτω ἐκ τῆς καλῆς ἀναστροφῆς τὰ ἔργα αὐτοῦ.] Cf. above ii. 18. The noun is derived from ἀταστρέφομαι = L. versor, as in 1 Pet. i. 17, 2 Pet. ii. 18, Prov. xx. 7, and frequently in Polybius with adverb. It occurs often in both epistles of St. Peter, e.g. i. 15 ἄγιοι ἐν πάση ἀναστροφῆ γενήθητε, i. 18 ἐλυτρώθητε ἐκ τῆς ματαίας ἀναστροφῆς, iii. 2 τὴν ἐν φόβω άγνὴν ἀναστροφήν, iii. 16 τὴν ἀγαθὴν ἐν Χριστῷ ἀναστροφήν, 2 ep. ii. 7, iii. 11, so in Tobit. iv. 14 and Polyb. iv. 82, 1 κατὰ τὴν λοιπὴν ἀναστροφὴν τεθανμασμένος, see Hatch, p. 9. Καλός occurs in this epistle ii. 7. iv. 17, καλῶς, ii. 3, 8, 17: the former is joined with ἀναστ. in 1 Pet. ii. 12. For the general sense cf. Sir. xix. 18 πᾶσα σοφία φόβος Κυρίον, καὶ ἐν πάση σοφία ποίησις νόμον καὶ οὐκ ἔστι σοφία ποίηρίας ἐπιστήμη κ.τ.λ., Clem. Rom. i. 38 ὁ σοφὸς ἐνδεικνύσθω τὴν σοφίαν αὐτοῦ μὴ ἐν λόγοις ἀλλὶ ἐν ἔργοις ἀγαθοῖς. Here the simpler expression would have been, as De Wette remarks, δειξάτω...τὴν σοφίαν αὐτοῦ, like ii. 18 δείξω ἐκ τῶν ἔργων μου τὴν πίστα, but it is modified so as to give more emphasis to the two ideas which the writer is here insisting on, viz. deeds r, words, gentleness and modesty v, arrogance and passion, 'let him show his deeds in meekness of wisdom,' i.e. 'let him give practical proof (of his being wise) from his life and conduct in the meekness which proceeds from and is the true mark of wisdom.'

έν πραύτητι σοφίας.] Cf. i. 21, 1 Pet. iii. 16 (defend the faith) μετὰ πραύτητος καὶ φόβον, Gal. vi. 1 οἱ πνευματικοὶ καταρτίζετε τὸν τοιοῦτον ἐν πνεύματι πραύτητος, 1 Cor. iv. 21, 2 Tim. ii. 24 foll. δοῦλον δὲ Κυρίον οὐ δεὶ μάχεσθαι ἀλλ' ἤπιον εἶναι πρὸς πάντας, διδακτικὸν, ἀνεξίκακον, ἐν πραύτητι παιδεύοντα τοὺς ἀντιδιατιθεμένους, Prov. xi. 2 στόμα ταπεινῶν μελετῷ σοφίαν, Sirac. iii. 17 ἐν πραύτητι τὰ ἔργα σον διέξαγε, ib. iv. 8 ἀποκρίθητι πτωχῷ εἰρηνικὰ ἐν πραύτητι, also the frequent commendation of the meek in the Psalms, e.g. xxv. 9 ὁδηγήσει πραεῖς ἐν κρίσει, διδάξει πραεῖς ὁδοὺς αὐτοῦ.

πικρίας ενοχλή.

epiθίαν. 1 Party-spirit.' 2 derived from εριθος 'a hireling,' especially a woman who spins for hire (Dem. p. 1313, 6, Isa. xxxviii, 12; the idea of hire disappears in συνέριθος, Odys. vi. 32, Callim. Epig. xvii. 3). Probably the word got to be used, like operae in Cicero, of partisans hired by political leaders; hence ἐριθεύομαι and its cognates are employed to denote (1) canvassing by hired partisans, and (2) party spirit generally, cf. Arist. Pol. v. 3, 9 μεταβάλλουσι δ' αἱ πολιτεῖαι καὶ ἄνεν στάσεως διά τε τὰς ἐριθείας ὥσπερ ἐν Ἡραία (ἐξ αίρετῶν γὰρ διὰ τοῦτο έποίησαν κληρωτάς, ὅτι ήροῦντο τοὺς ἐριθευομένους) καὶ δι' ὁλιγωρίαν, Polyb. x. 25. 9 (speaking of demagogues) της στρατηγίας δρεγόμενοι δια ταύτης της άρχης εξεριθεύονται (cooperatores sibi comparant Schweigh.) τοὺς νέους καὶ πορασκευάζουσιν είνους συναγωνιστάς είς τὸ μέλλον, Philo Leg. ad Fluc. Μ. 2. p. 555 τί δὲ ἄμεινον εἰρήνης; εἰρήνη δὲ εξ ἡγεμονίας ὀρθῆς φύεται, ήγεμονία δὲ ἀφιλόνεικος καὶ ἀνερίθευτος ὀρθὴ μόνη, δι' ἦς καὶ τὰ ἄλλα πάντα όρθοῦται. It is used by St. Paul, Phil. i. 17 οἱ δὲ ἐξ ἐριθείας τὸν Χριστὸν καταγγέλλουση, Rom. ii. 8, Gal. v. 20 έρις, ζήλος, θυμοί, εριθείαι, διχοστασίαι (where Lightfoot translates 'caballings'), and the same list in 2 Cor. xii. 20, except that καταλαλιαί stands for διχοστασίαι, Phil. i. 17 μηδεν κατ' εριθείαν, μηδε κατά κενοδοξίαν άλλά τῆ ταπεινότητι άλλήλους ήγούμενοι ὑπερέχοντας έαυτῶν, imitated in Ignat. Philad. ὁ μηδὲν κατ' έριθείαν πράσσεις. It is possible that the later meaning may be coloured in the N.T. by a reminiscence of the earlier meaning; cf. Joh. x., where the spirit of the hireling is contrasted with that of the true shepherd.

² The classical equivalents φιλοδοξία, φιλοτιμία are not found at all in N.T., and the cognates of the latter are only used in a good sense, while φιλονεικία and its cognates are confined to the sense of quarrelsomeness.

The verb is used in its original sense of spinning Tobit ii. 11 (mid.) ή γυνή μου ἠριθεύετο ἐν τοῖς γυναικείοις καὶ ἀπέστελλε τοῖς κυριοις, Heliod.

μη κατακανχάσθε.] This verb was used above (ii. 13) with gen. to denote the triumph of one principle over another, and so in the only other passage where it occurs in N.T., Rom. xi. 17 μη κατακανχώ τῶν κλάδων. Three other instances of its use are cited, all from the LXX., Zech. x. 12 κατισχύσω αὐτοὺς ἐν Κυρίω καὶ ἐν ὀιόματι αὐτοῦ κατακανχήσονται, and Jer. l. (xxvii.) 11 and 38, where the verb is used absolutely, κατά having only an intensifying force, as in κατακτείνω, κατάδηλος. The question whether it should be thus taken here will be considered in connexion with the following clause.

ψεώδεσθε κατά της άληθείας.] If you have bitterness you cannot be truly wise, for wisdom is shown by gentleness; your profession therefore is a lie: cf. 1 John i. 6 ἐὰν εἴπωμεν ὅτι κοινωνίαν ἔχομεν μετ' αὐτοῦ καὶ ἐν σκότει περιπατωμεν, ψευδόμεθα καὶ οὐ ποιοῦμεν τὴν ἀλήθειαν, ib. iv. 20, Wisd. vi. 25 φθόνος οὐ κοινωνήσει σοφία. Some (Wiesinger, Hofmann) take της ἀληθείας to mean the Gospel, as above i. 18, explaining it of false teachers, blind leaders of the blind, who, like those referred to in 1 Cor. i. 18-23, speak contemptuously of the Gospel and misrepresent its doctrines. Perhaps it is simpler to understand it of 'the facts of the case,' for which Bloomfield compares Diod. i. 2 ένια κατεψεῦσθαι τῆς άληθείας, Jos. B.J. procem. 1 (former historians) καταψέυδονται τῶν πραγμάτων: ('you claim to be enlightened Christians, but enlightenment joined with bitterness and self-seeking comes not from God, but from the devil.') The expression is no doubt pleonastic: it would have been enough to say 'your boast of wisdom is at variance with the truth,' but emphasis is added by the fuller phrase, as in the passage quoted from St. John. If we understand it thus it would seem that κατακαυχᾶσθε must be taken absolutely ('do not boast of wisdom and so lie against the truth') and not with κατὰ τῆς ἀληθείας in the sense of 'triumphing over the truth.' See however Zahn N.K. p. 792 n.

ἐπίγειος.] The first stage in the antithesis to ἄνωθεν κατερχομένη, cf. Hermas Mand. ix. 11 ἡ πίστις ἄνωθέν ἐστι παρὰ τοῦ Κυρίου...ἡ δὲ διψυχία ἐπίγειον πνεῦμά ἐστι παρὰ τοῦ διαβόλου distinctly borrowed from this passage; also John viii. 23 εἰ τὰ ἐπίγεια εἶπον ὑμῦν καὶ οὐ πιστεύετε, πῶς, ἐὰν εἴπω ὑμῦν τὰ ἐπουράνια, πιστεύσετε; Phil. id. 19 οἱ τὰ ἐπίγεια φρονοῦντες, ib. ii. 10 ἄνα πᾶν γόιν κάμψη ἐπουρανίων καὶ ἐπιγείων καὶ καταχθονίων, Plut. Mor. 566 D τὸ ἐπίγειον τῆς ψυχῆς. Philo (M. 1. p. 49 on Gen. ii. 7 ἔπλασεν ὁ Θεὸς τὸν ἄνθρωπον χοῦν ἀπὸ τῆς γῆς καὶ ἐνεφύσησεν εἰς τὸ πρόσωπον αὐτοῦ πνοῆν ζωῆς, καὶ ἐγένετο ὁ ἄνθρωπος εἰς ψυχὴν ζῶσαν) distinguishes two kinds of men, ὁ μὲν γάρ ἐστιν οὐράνιος ἄνθρωπος, ὁ δὲ γῆϊνος

...τον μεν οδράνιον φησιν οδ πεπλάσθαι, κατ' είκονα δε τετυπώσθαι Θεοδ' το δε γήτον πλάσμα... δ δε νους ούτος γεώδης εστί τῷ ὅντι καὶ φθαρτός, εί μὴ ὁ Θεός επέπτευσεν αὐτῷ δύταμιν ἀληθινής ζωής, see ib. p. 32. St. Paul uses the equivalent χοϊκός 1 Cor. xv. 47 foll. The Gnostic Valentimus distinguished between an arω and κάτω σοφία, and again between the φύσεις πτευματικαί akin to the Pleroma, φύσεις ψυχικαί containing a mixture of ἔλη, and the φέσας which were altogether ελικαί (Iren. iii. 15), see Neander, vol. ii. pp. 110-145. So Hippolytus v. 6 (p. 134 Duncker) says of the Naassenes, who professed to receive their teaching from St. James, 'they divide the first man into three parts, νοερόν, ψυχικόν, χοϊκόν: in like manner they divide all that exists into three classes, ἀγγελικόν, ψυχικόν and χοϊκόν.' Heracleon ap. Orig. xi. 181 (quoted by Stieren on Iren. vol. i. p. 945) speaks of the Holy of Holies as representing the sphere of the πνευματικοί and the outer court the ψυχικοί, cf. Iren. i. p. 968 'when Jesus said to the Jews ye are the children of your futher the devil, he speaks to those who are not ovoce τοὺς διαβόλου νίούς, τοὺς χοϊκούς, ἀλλὰ πρὸς τοὺς ψυχικούς who make themselves such by their own fault, Clem. Al. Exc. ex Theod. § 54 'three natures spring from Adam, πρώτη μεν ή ἄλογος, ης ην Καίν, δευτέρα δε ή λογική και ή δικαία, ής ην Αβελ, τρίτη δε ή πνευματική, ής ην Σήθ και δ μεν χοϊκός έστι κατ' εἰκόνα, ὁ δὲ ψυχικὸς καθ' ὁμοίωσιν Θεοῦ, ὁ δὲ πνευματικὸς κατ' ίδιαν (ἰδέαν?),' ib. § 56 πολλοί μεν οι ύλικοί, οὐ πολλοί δε οι ψυχικοί, σπάνιοι δε οί πνευματικού το μεν οθν πνευματικον φύσει σωζόμενον, το δε ψυχικον...κατά την οἰκείαν αιρεσιν, το δε ύλικον φύσει ἀπόλλυται.

ψυχική.] On the various meanings attached to the word ψυχή see Hatch, pp. 94-130.1 This use of the adjective is in accordance with the Pauline trichotomy τὸ πνεθμα καὶ ἡ ψυχὴ καὶ τὸ σῶμα (1 Thess. v. 23), cf. 1 ('or. xv. 45 εγένετο ὁ πρώτος ἄνθρωπος 'Αδὰμ εἰς ψυχήν ζώσαν, ὁ ἔσχατος 'Αδώμ εἰς πνεθμα ζωοποιοθν, ἀλλ' οὐ πρώτον τὸ πνευματικὸν ἀλλὰ τὸ ψυχικόν. The distinction drawn by Plato, Aristotle, and the Stoics between the immortal reason, the divine principle in man, and the lower faculties of the soul which perished with the body, certainly coloured the views of some of the Jewish and Christian writers as to the distinction between soul and spirit, which fall in naturally with the wide sense given to the word ψυχή in Aristotle's De Anima, and with its use by the Stoics to denote the third grade of existence, the principle of movement in animals, as highest grade (see my note on Cic. N.D. 11, 33). Compare Tatian ad τίτ. 18 δύο πνευμάτων διαφοράς ἴσμεν ὧν τὸ μεν καλείται ψυχή, τὸ δὲ μείζον μέν της ψυχης Θεού δε είκων και ομοίωσις, ib. 22 ή ψυχη μόνη μεν διαιτωμένη

Justin M. fr. de Resurr. § 10 οίκος τὸ σῶμα ψυχῆς, πνεύματος δὲ ψυχὴ οίκος (after Plato Tim. 30 νοῦν μὲν ἐν ψυχῆ, ψυχὴν δὲ ἐν σώματι συνιστὰς τὸ πῶν ἐτεκταίνετο), Jos. 1. J. i. 34 ἔπλασεν ὁ Θεὸς τὸν ἄνθρωπον χοῦν ἀπὸ τῆς γῆς λαβὼν καὶ πνεῦμα ἐνῆκεν αὐτῷ καὶ ψυχήν, Philo Opif. Trinitatis; but Augustine in his treatise de Eccl. Dogmat. c. 20 blames Didymus for making spiritus a distinct principle, Apollinarius having in the meanwhile put forward his theory that the nature of Christ was έκ σαρκὸς καὶ ψυχῆς καὶ θεότητος ἀντὶ τοῦ νοῦ... and so, continues Matthiae, ' the separation of soul and spirit came to be thought a heresy.' In the N.T. ψυχικός connotes opposition to the higher principle, cf. Jude 19 ψυχικοί, πνεθμα μὴ ἔχοντες, 1 Cor. ii. 10 foll. esp. 14 ψυχικὸς ἄνθρωπος οὐ δέχεται τὰ τοῦ πνεύματος τοῦ Θεοῦ...ὁ δὲ πνευματικὸς ἀνακρίνει πάντα, ib. iii. 1 οὐκ ήδυνήθην λαλήσαι ύμιν ώς πνευματικοίς άλλ' ώς σαρκίνοις, ώς νηπίοις έν $X\rho\iota\sigma\tau\hat{\varphi}$. It was used at a later period in reference to the orthodox by the Montanists who claimed the power of prophecy, Clem. Al. Strom. iv. p. 605 P οἱ Φρύγες...τοὺς τῆ νέα προφητεία μὴ προσέχοντας ψυχικοὺς καλοῦσιν: so Tertullian (Jejun. 1) gives the name Psychici to those who refused to keep the fasts of the Montanists. In the LXX, we find it opposed to σωματικός, as in 4 Macc. i. 32. St. Paul contrasts the σωμα πνευματικόν with the σῶμα ψυχικόν, 1 Cor. xv. 44. Hilgenfeld and others who imagine an allusion to St. Paul in & ἄνθρωπε κενέ (ii. 20) regard this as a sarcastic reference to 1 Cor. ii. 10-15; 'your spiritual wisdom is worse than ψυχική, it is δαιμονιώδης.'

δαιμονιώδης.] This word is found elsewhere only in the Scholia to Aristoph. Ran. 295 and Symmachus, Ps. xc. 6. See above v. 6 φλογιζομένη ὑπὸ τῆς γεέννης, and ii. 19, 1 Tim. iv. 1 (of future apostates) προσέχοντες πνεύμασι πλάνοις καὶ διδασκαλίαις δαιμονίων ἐν ὑποκρίσει ψευδολόγων, Eph. ii. 2 f. those who walk according to the course of this world, κατὰ τὸν ἄρχοντα τῆς ἐξουσίας τοῦ ἀέρος, are described as ποιοῦντες τὰ θελήματα τῆς σαρκὸς καὶ τῶν διανοιῶν (apparently corresponding to ἐπίγειος and ψυχική here), John viii. 44 ἐκ τοῦ πατρὸς τοῦ διαβόλου ἐστέ, 1 John ii. 16, ἐδ. iii. 8–10, ἐδ. iv. 1–6, where τὸ πνεῦμα τῆς ἀληθείας is distinguished from $\tau \delta \pi \nu \epsilon \hat{\nu} \mu \alpha \tau \hat{\eta} s \pi \lambda \acute{a} \nu \eta s$.

16. ἀκαταστασία.] See above ver. 8 and i. 8, 1 Cor. xiv. 33 οὐ γάρ ἐστιν ἀκαταστασίας ὁ Θεὸς ἀλλὰ εἰρήνης, 2 Cor. xii. 20 where it is joined with ζῆλος and ἐριθεῖαι, Prov. xxvi. 28 στόμα ἄστεγον ποιεῖ ἀκαταστασίας, Clem. Rom. i. 3 ἐκ τούτου ζῆλος καὶ φθόνος καὶ ἔρις καὶ στάσις, διωγμὸς καὶ ἀκαταστασία, πόλεμος καὶ αἰχμαλωσία, Epict. Diss. iii. 19. 3 οὐδὲν ἄλλο ταραχῆς ἢ ἀκαταστασίας αἴτιόν ἐστιν ἢ δόγμα, Hatch p. 4.

πᾶν φαῦλον πρᾶγμα.] Simply 'every evil thing,' there is no need to take παν = 'eitel' with Hofmann and Erdmann. Compare Epict. Diss.

22. 61 ὅπου φθόνοι καὶ ζηλοτυπίαι, ποῦ ἐκεῖ πάροδος εὐδαιμονίας; ὅπου δ' ἄν ἡ σαπρὰ δόγματα, ἐκεῖ πάντα ταῦτα εἶναι ἀνάγκη.

17. ή δὲ ἄνωθεν σοφία.] Compare Wisd. vii. 7—30 esp. vv. 25 and 26,

πρῶτον μὲν ἀγνή.] First the inner characteristic, purity, then the outer, peaceableness, cf. the blessing in Matt. v. 8, 9. It is the pure who attain to the vision of God which constitutes the highest wisdom. Matt. v. 8, Acts xv. 9, 2 Cor. vi 6, 1 Tim. i. 4, Heb. x. 22. We may compare Antoninus viii. 5 συμμημοιεύσας τί τοῦ ἀιθρώπου ἡ φύσις ἀπαιτεῖ, πρᾶξον τοῦτο ἀμεταστρεπτί, καὶ εἰπὲ ὡς δικαίστατον φαίνεταί σοι, μόνοι εἰμετῶς καὶ αἰδημόνως καὶ ἀινποκρίτως.

ἔπειτα εἰρηνική.] The omission of δέ after ἔπειτα is quite classical (Winer p. 721), cf. below iv. 14, John xi. 6 : ἔπειτα δέ occurs in Heb. vii. 2. For the association of truth (wisdom) and peace compare Rom. viii. 6 τὸ φρότημα τοῦ πτεύματος ζωὴ καὶ εἰρήτη, Ps. lxxxv. 10, Prov. iii. 17, Isa. xxxii. 17, ib. xxvi. 3 ἀντιλαβόμετος ἀληθείας καὶ φυλάσσων εἰρήτην, Jer. xxxiii. 6, Mal. ii. 6. The word εἰρηνικός is only found elsewhere

έπιεικής.] Aristotle (Eth. vi. 11) says τον έπιεική μάλιστα φαμέν συγγιωμονικόν, and (Eth. v. 14) contrasts ἐπιείκεια 'equity' with strict justice, where Grant quotes the more detailed description given in Rhet. i. 13. 17 foll.: 'It is equity to pardon human failings, and to look to the law-giver and not to the law, to the spirit and not to the letter, to the intention and not to the action, to the whole and not to the part, to the character of the actor in the long run and not in the present moment, to remember good rather than evil, and good that one has received rather than good that one has done, to put up with injurious treatment, to wish to settle a matter by words rather than deeds, lastly to prefer arbitration to judgment.' Cope in loc. renders it 'merciful consideration.' In Homer the adj. is used in opposition to $\partial \epsilon \iota \kappa \dot{\eta} s$ (= seemly, decorous, fitting). It seems not to be used of persons before Herod. i. 85 (of the son of Croesus) τὰ μὲν ἀλλὰ ἐπιεικής, ἄφωνος δὲ (in other respects a goodly youth). Thucydides (viii, 93) uses it of men who would listen to reason; in Cleon's speech (iii. 90) οἶκτος is joined with ἐπιείκεια (like τὸ ἐπιεικὲς καὶ ξύγγνωμον Plato Leg. vi. 757) as one of the things most injurious to a ruling state, cf. ib. v. 86. Plato constantly uses it of respectable, well-behaved people, as opposed to those who are rude and violent: in Rep. 397 D one who had before been called μέτριος is referred to as δ ἐπιεικής, as in Thue. i. 76 τὸ $\epsilon \pi \iota \epsilon \iota \kappa \epsilon s = \tau \delta - \mu \epsilon \tau \rho \iota \alpha \zeta \epsilon \iota \nu$ 'moderation'; hence its colloquial use in Plato and Aristotle = $\sigma\pi\sigma\nu\delta\alpha\tilde{\imath}\sigma\varsigma$ or $\alpha\gamma\alpha\theta\sigma$. In the N.T. it always has the more special sense, and is twice joined with apaxos (1 Tim. iii. 3, Tit. iii. 2): in 1 Pet. ii. 18 it is used of a master who is considerate towards his slaves; Acts xxiv. 4 Tertullus begs Felix to hear him with his usual condescension ($\epsilon \pi \iota \epsilon \iota \kappa \epsilon \iota \phi$): the most important passage is 2 Cor. x. 1 παρακαλώ ύμας δια της πραύτητος και ἐπιεικείας τοῦ Χριστοῦ, which Matthew Arnold rendered by his phrase of 'sweet reasonableness,' compare Phil. iv. 5, Wisdom ii. 19 εβρει καὶ βασάνω ετάσωμεν αὐτὸν (the just) ίνα γνωμεν την έπιείκειαν αὐτοῦ καὶ δοκιμάσωμεν την ἀνεξικακίαν αὐτοῦ, ib. xii. 18 δεσπόζων ἰσχύος ἐν ἐπιεικείμ κρίνεις, Philo M. 2. p. 112 (of God) διὰ τὴν σύμφντον ἐπιείκειαν καὶ φιλανθρωπίαν. It is the Greek equivalent to the Roman clementia (App. B.C. ii. 106). The history of the word shows that it is etymologically connected with εἰκός, implying that which is fit and reasonable; but its later meaning was influenced by the idea of a connexion with είκω 'to yield,' implying one who does not stand on his rights, but is ready to give way to the wishes of others.

εὐπειθής.] Not found elsewhere in N.T. It is often used of military discipline, as in 4 Macc. 8. 6, Jos. B.J. ii. 20. 7. We find it with a gen. Plato Leg. i. 632 Β εὐπ. τῶν νόμων, with a dat. ib. vii. 801 εὐπ. τοῖς νόμοις, with prep. ib. vi. 718 C βουλοίμην αν αυτούς ως ευπειθεστάτους πρὸς ἀρετὴν εἶναι. In the last passage it should probably be translated 'easily to be persuaded,' as it follows the words 'our exposition of the law ' τὰ μὲν πείθουσα, τὰ δὲ μὴ ὑπείκοντα πειθοί...βία κολάζουσα, τὴν πόλιν εὐδαίμονα ἀποτελεῖ. So Philo M. 2. p. 378 διδασκαλίαι εἰσὶ τοὺς μὲν εὐπειθείς μαλακώτερον ἀναπείθουσαι, τοὺς δὲ ἀπειθεστέρους ἐμβριθέστερον. Τhe opposite $d\pi\epsilon\iota\theta\dot{\eta}s$, $d\pi\epsilon\iota\theta\epsilon\hat{\iota}\nu$, $d\pi\epsilon\dot{\iota}\theta\epsilon\iota a$ occur several times in N.T. in the sense of 'disobedience.' Musonius (ap. Stob. Ecl. p. 453, Peerlkamp Frag. p. 227), answering the question whether obedience to a father is always right, says that he alone is to be called $\epsilon v \pi \epsilon \iota \theta \eta s$ who willingly submits to a true fatherly will (ὁ τῷ τὰ προσήκοντα παραισοῦντι κατήκοος ων καὶ ἐπόμενος ἐκουσίως, οἶτος εὐπειθής). As ἐπιεικής refers mainly to one in a superior position, so I should understand εὐπειθής to refer to an inferior, and translate 'submissive,' 'docile,' 'tractable,' old English 'buxom,' Lat. morigera. The quarrels and rivalries in the Church were due to faults on the side of the latter as well as of the former.

μεστή έλέους καὶ καρπῶν ἀγαθῶν.] See above vers. 8, ii. 13. ἀδιάκριτος.] Here only in N.T. The meaning of διακρίνομαι above (i. 6, ii. 4) makes it probable that we must understand the adj. here in the sense of 'whole-hearted' (undivided), as in Heracleon ap. Orig. Comm. in. Joh. xiii. 10 (Brooke's Heracl. p. 73) έπαινεί την Σαμαρείτιν ωσαν ένδειξαμένην την αδίακριτον...πίστιν, μη διακριθείσαν έφ' οίς έλεγεν αὐτη, Ignat. Ignatius to the Church' ήδρασμειη έν δμοιοία Θεοῦ καὶ ἀγαλλιωμένη έν τῷ πάθει τοῦ Κυρίου ήμῶν ἀδιακρίτως. 1 It only occurs once in the LXX., Prov. xxv. 1 αὖται αἱ παιδείαι Σαλομῶντος αἱ ἀδιάκριτοι, where it seems to have a secondary passive sense 'the undoubted proverbs.' More commonly it means undistinguishable, and hence 'confused,' vague,' as in Polyb. xv. 12.9 άδιάκριτος φωνή (promiseuus clamor Schw.), Epict. Diss. i. 16.12, ib. ii. 20. 29 φαντασία μοι έγένετο έλαίου άδιάκριτος δμοιοτάτη (oleo ita simile ut ab eo discerni non posset Schw.), Test. Patr. p. 641 άδιακρίτως πασι σπλαγχνιζόμενοι 'pitying all without distinction,' Greg. Naz. V. Mos. p. 232 μάστιξ άδ. 'indiscriminate punishment': Lucian Jup. Trag. 25 has άμφήριστον έτι καὶ ἀδιάκριτον καταλιπων τὸν λόγον 'leaving the matter undecided,' almost the opposite force to that which it bears here.

άνυπόκριτος.] 'Unfeigned,' 'genuine,' used of love 1 Pet. i. 22 τὰς

It is also found in LXX., Wisd. v. 18, xviii. 16, Clem. Rom. ii. 2. 12 ἐν δυσὶ σώμασιν ἀνυποκρίτως μία ψυχή.

18. καρπὸς δὲ δικαιοσύνης ἐν εἰρήνη σπείρεται.] Πεθ. xii. 11 (παιδεία) καρπὸν εἰρηνικὸν τοῖς δὶ αὐτῆς γεγυρνασμένοις ἀποδίδωσι δικαιοσύνης. Amos vi. 2 ἐξεστρέψατε καρπὸν δικαιοσύνης εἰς πικρίαν, Hos. x. 12 σπείρατε ἐαντοῖς εἰς δικαιοσύνην, τρυγήσατε εἰς καρπὸν ζωῆς, Prov. xi. 21 ὁ σπείρων δικαιοσύνην λήψεται μισθὸν πιστόν, ib. v. 18, Isa. xxxii. 17 καὶ ἔσται τὰ ἔργα τῆς δικαιοσύνης εἰρήνη (the converse of what is said here), Job iv. 8, Gal. vi. 7. The difficulty of the expression here consists in the prolepsis which regards the seed as already containing in itself the fruit,¹ see Jennings on Psa. xcvii. 11 'light is sown for the righteous,' where the note is 'the affliction entailed by the oppression of the wicked is to the righteous as the seed of light.' Compare above i. 20.

τοῖς ποιοῦσιν ἐἰρήνην.] The phrase occurs Eph. ii. 15, 2 Macc. i. 4. We have the compound ἐἰρηνοποιῶ in Col. i. 20 and ἐἰρηνοποιῶς Matt. v. 9. 1 think the dat. here is best explained as dat. comm., not of the agent, as in ver. 7. 'A harvest of righteousness' is the issue of the quiet and gentle ministrations of those who aim at reconciling quarrels and being themselves in peace with all men.

IV. I.— $\pi \delta \theta \epsilon \nu$.] St. James is much given to the use of the interrogative, see ii. 4, 5, 6, 7, 14, 15, 16, 19, 20, 21, 25, iii. 11, 12, 13, iv. 4, 5, 12, 14. For the repetition of $\pi \delta \theta \epsilon \nu$ see iii. 9 $\epsilon \nu$ $a \epsilon \tau \hat{\eta}$, i. 19 $\beta \rho a \delta \epsilon s$. Notice that the severity of this section, as of that which commences below with ν . 13, is marked by the absence of the word $a \delta \epsilon \lambda \phi o \delta s$.

πόλεμοι καὶ μάχαι. These need not be limited to their narrow sense: the former denotes any lasting resentment, the latter any outburst of pression. Compare Titus iii. 9 μωράς δε ζητήσεις...καὶ έρεις καὶ μάχας roμικάς περιίστασο, ib. v. 2, 2 Tim. ii. 22 f., Gal. v. 15, 2 Cor. vii. 5. The verb μάχομαι is used of chiding or disputing in Gen. xxxi, 36, Neh. xiii. 11, John vi. 52. So in other writers we have πολέμους καὶ στάσεις καὶ μάχας οὐδὲν ἄλλο παρέχει ή τὸ σῶμα καὶ αἱ τούτου ἐπιθυμίαι Plato Phaedo 66 C (not 'Phaedrus xv.' as Beyschlag), Cic. Fin. i. 13, 43 cupiditates sunt insatiubiles quae non modo singulos homines sed universas familias evertunt, totam etiam labefactant saepe rem publicam. - 2. ἐπιθυμεῖτε καὶ οὐκ ἔχετε φονεύετε καὶ ζηλοῦτε, καὶ οὐ δύνασθε ἐπιτυχεῖν. μάχεσθε καὶ πολεμεῖτε.] This is the reading and punctuation of Westcott and Hort, agreeing in essentials with Alford, Tischendorf and the more recent editors. The R.V. has 'ye lust, and have not: ye kill, and covet (marg. 'are jealous'), and cannot obtain: ye fight and war.' The extraordinary anti-climax 'ye kill and covet' has long exercised the minds of commentators, who have endeavoured to remove it either (1) by weakening the force of φονεύετε, or (2) by strengthening the force of ζηλοῦτε, or (3) by giving a special meaning to the connexion between them

(1, a) 'Kill' means 'hate,' because every one that hateth his brother is a murderer. So Estius, Corn. a Lap., Theile, De Wette, Wiesinger. Beyschlag, Erdmann. (1, b) 'Kill' means 'commit moral suicide,' so Oecumenius and Theophylact, φοιεύειν φησὶ τοὺς τὴν ξαντῶν ψυχὴν ἀπο κτωνύντας ταῖς τοιαύταις ἐπιχειρήσεσι.

(2) ζηλοῦτε means 'become ζηλωταί,' i.e. assassins; so Macknight and Dean Scott in the Speaker's Commentary, referring to Josephus, B.J. vii. 8, 1, where the ζηλωταί are said to have been worse than the σικάριου.

(3) φονεύετε καὶ ζηλοῦτε form a hendiadys, 'ye murderously envy,' ad necem usque invidetis. So Pott, Schneckenburger, Gebser, and not much otherwise Bengel, occiditis per odia et zelum.

The objections to these expedients are to my mind conclusive. (1) It does not follow, because to show the heinousness of hate it may be represented as virtually equivalent to the murder of which it is the germ, that it is therefore allowable in all cases to substitute the word 'murder' for 'hate.' In the present case it may be safely said that no sane writer, no one who had the slightest feeling for rhetorical effect (and St. James is both eminently sane and eminently rhetorical) could have used φοιεύετε in the sense of μισείτε before ζηλούτε. There is no reason here to lay an exaggerated stress on the idea of hate, if nothing more than hate is intended: not only does it make a mere bathos of ζηλοῦτε, but it weakens the force of the following $\mu \dot{\alpha} \chi \epsilon \sigma \theta \epsilon \kappa \alpha i \pi \delta \lambda \epsilon \mu \epsilon i \tau \epsilon$. Others have thought it impossible that those addressed by St. James could be guilty of the actual sin of murder. But in ch. v. 6 we read ἐφονεύσατε τὸν δίκαιον, so 1 Pet. iv. 15 μὴ γάρ τις υμών πασχέτω ώς φονευς η κλέπτης η κακοποιός, and Didaché iii. 2 μη γίνου οργίλος...μηδε ζηλωτής μηδε εριστικός μηδε θυμικός εκ γάρ τούτων απάντων φόνοι γεννωνται, and I think we should gather from Acts xxi. 20 that some of the assailants of St. Paul at Jerusalem were members of the Christian community. Of (2) it is sufficient to say that there is no evidence of the verb ζηλόω being used in this sense, and nothing to suggest it in the G.T. use of the word ζηλωτής. (3) If ζηλοῦτε preceded φονεύετε, something might be said for the theory of $\hat{\epsilon}_{\nu}$ dia dvoiv: as it is, every one must feel that it is a suggestion of despair.

Lastly, Alford, Bouman, Schegg and others, feeling the unsatisfactory nature of the above-mentioned explanations, have fallen back on the literal rendering. Schegg is the only commentator known to me who makes any attempt to account for the order of the words, which he defends as fellows; 'Die Lust begehret, d. h. sie sucht werkthätig zu erreichen, wornach sie gelüstet; die Lust tötet, d. h. sie schafft gewaltsam bei seite was ihr hinderlich entgegentritt; die Lust ringet um das. was sie zu erlangen im Begriffe ist...Da töten und ringen verschiedene Objekte haben, indem sich töten gegen, ringen auf etwas richtet, so hat Jakobus psychologisch richtig die Reihen-und-Stufenfolge der Aeusserungen des Gelüstens eingehalten.' It is by no means certain that $\zeta_{\eta}\lambda_0\hat{v}_{\tau\epsilon}$ is to be taken here in the sense, which Schegg assigns to it, of striving after a thing: it is often followed by an accusative of the person. But supposing it to be true that the object of ζηλοῦτε is here a thing, and that of φονεύετε a person, I am unable to see why this makes it psychologically right to put φονεύετε first. Surely it is the resistance to our effort to gain an object which suggests to us the necessity of moving the obstacle out of the way.

I have for many years held the opinion that, assuming the correctness of the text, the only way to interpret it is to place a colon after φονεύετε: and I am glad to find that the same idea has occurred to Dr. J. Chr. K. v. Hofmann, whose commentary appeared in 1876. It is also given as an alternative reading in Westcott and Hort's edition (1881). The easiest way of seeing how the words naturally group themselves is to put them side by side without any stopping: ἐπιθυμεῖτε καὶ οὐκ ἔχετε φονεύετε καὶ ζηλοῦτε καὶ οὐ δύνασθε ἐπιτυχεῖν μάχεσθε καὶ πολεμεῖτε. Can any one doubt that the abrupt collocations of φονεύετε and μάχεσθε are employed to express results of what precedes, and that in the second series ζηλοῦτε καὶ οὐ δύνασθε ἐπιτυχεῖν correspond to ἐπιθυμεῖτε καὶ οὐκ ἔχετε in the first series? Unsatisfied desire leads to murder (as in the case of Naboth); disappointed ambition leads to quarrelling and fighting. Schegg and Beyschlag and Erdmann object to this grouping of the words as harsh and unlike the style of St. James, but abruptness is a marked characteristic with him, see ii. 19 σὲ πιστεύεις ...Θεός καλῶς ποιεῖς, ν. 6 ἐφονεύσατε τὸν δίκαιον οὐκ ἀντιτάσσεται ἑμῶν. The only difficulty introduced is that the second series (ζηλοῦτε κ.τ.λ.) is joined to the first by καὶ instead of standing independently by its side. Perhaps this may be accounted for by the fact that the figure asyndeton was already employed to mark the change from the antecedents to the consequents. [Dr. Plummer adopts this punctuation.]

Taking it in this way we may compare Epict. Diss. ii. 17 θέλω τι καὶ οὐ γίνεται καὶ τί ἐστιν ἀθλιώτερον ἐμοῦ; τοῦτο καὶ ἡ Μήδεια οὐχ ὑπομείνασα ἡλθεν ἐπὶ τὸ ἀποκτεῖναι τὰ ἴδια τέκνα... ἀπλῶς μὴ θέλε ἡ ἃ ὁ Θεὸς θέλει, καὶ τίς σε κωλύσει, τίς σε ἀναγκάσει; Clem. Rom. i. 3 ἔκαστον βαδίζειν κατὰ τὰς ἐπιθυμίας αὐτοῦ τὰς πονηράς, ζῆλον ἄδικον καὶ ἀσεβῆ ἀνειληφότα, δι' οὖ καὶ θάνατος εἰσῆλθεν εἰς τὸν κόσμον: see Lightfoot on this and the following paragraph, where he cites Clem. Hom. iii. $42 \text{ Kάϊν ἔρμηνενεται ζῆλος, and Iren. iv. 18. 3; also Clem. Rom. i. 4 δρᾶτε, ἀδελφοί, ζῆλος καὶ φθόνος ἀδελφοκτονίαν κατειργάσατο, where their effect is traced through a long series of examples: ib. 6 ζῆλος καὶ ἔρις πόλεις μεγάλας κατέστρεψεν καὶ$

But may it not be that we ought, with Erasmus, followed by Calvin. Beza, Hottinger, Ewald, to read $\phi\theta o \nu \hat{\epsilon} i \tau \epsilon$, supposing this to have been carelessly written φονείτε (which indeed we find in the text, though not in the note, of Oecumenius), and corrected into φονεύετε? A similar corruption may have given rise to the reading $\phi\theta\acute{o}vo\iota$, $\phi\acute{o}vo\iota$ in Gal. v. 21. where φόνοι is omitted by the best MSS. Conversely in Clem. Hom. ii. 11, φθόνου is wrongly given in the MS. for φόνου. Certainly the process of thought is thus made easier. Accepting this change of reading, we shall have only the last result, 'ye fight and war,' following the two antecedents, 'ye lust and have not', 'ye are envious and jealous and cannot obtain': 'we thus see the words ήδονων στρατευομένων fitly associated with $\pi \delta \lambda \epsilon \mu \omega \kappa a \lambda \mu \dot{\alpha} \chi \omega$, and these words anticipating $\mu \dot{\alpha} \chi \epsilon \sigma \theta \epsilon \kappa a \lambda \pi \delta \lambda \epsilon$ μεῖτε' (Hoskyns Abrahall in C.R. iii. p. 314). Internal unrest (ήδοναὶ στρατενόμεναι εν τοις μέλεσιν) in its two stages—desire without possession (of a thing), envy and jealousy which bring us no nearer our aim (of a person)—is followed by outward disturbance (μάχεσθε καὶ πολεμείτε). Compare the stages of ἐπιθυμία in i. 14, 15. If it is once recognized that, whatever punctuation we adopt, φονεύετε can only be taken here in its literal sense, it must be allowed that it disturbs the natural order, and strikes, as it were, a false note between the πόλεμοι and $\mu \acute{a} \chi a \iota$ of ver. 1 and the $\mu \acute{a} \chi \epsilon \sigma \theta \epsilon$ and $\pi o \lambda \epsilon \mu \epsilon \hat{\iota} \tau \epsilon$ of v. 2.

έπιθυμεῖτε καὶ οὐκ ἔχετε.] Both words are used absolutely as in Rom. xiii. 9 (ἐπιθ.), Matt. xxv. 29 τοῦ μὴ ἔχουτος καὶ δ ἔχει ἀρθήσεται ἀπ' αὐτοῦ,

2 Cor. viii. 12 καθὸ ἐὰν ἔχῃ εὐπρόσδεκτος, οὐ καθὸ οὐκ ἔχει.

(φθονεῖτε) και ζηλοῦτε.] On the difference between them see Thuc. ii. 64 ταῦτα ὁ μὲν ἀπράγμων μέμψαιτ' ἄν, ὁ δὲ δρῶν τι βουλόμενος καὶ αὐτὸς ζηλώσει· εἰ δέ τις μὴ κέκτηται φθονήσει, Arist. Rhet. ii. 10 and 11 with Cope's notes, Cic. Tusc. iv. 17 invidentium esse dicunt aegrimonium susceptam propter alterius res secundas, quae nihil noceant invidenti... aemulatio autem est aegritudo si eo, quod concupierit, alius potiatur, ipse careat, Trench, Syn. p. 100. Both are distinguished from $\epsilon \pi \iota \theta$, as denoting a feeling towards a person rather than a thing. ζήλος with its cognates embraces the two meanings, emulation and jealousy, and it is used also of vehement desire, our 'zeal', in a good sense. For examples see Acts v. 17 and xiii. 45 ἐπλήσθησαν ζήλου, Rom. xiii. 13, 1 Cor. iii. 3, 2 Cor. xii. 20, Gal. v. 20, and above iii. 14, in all which places the R.V. has 'jealousy': similarly the verb, Acts vii. 9 οἱ πατρίαρχαι ζηλώσαντες τὸν Ἰωσὴφ ἀπέδοντο, ib. xvii. 5, 1 Cor. xiii. 4, Clem. Rom. ii. 4 μη καταλαλείν άλληλων, μη ζηλούν. For ζήλος in good sense cf. John ii. 17 δ ζήλος τοῦ οἴκου σου καταφάγεταί με 'the zeal (holy jealousy) for thy house will devour me, Rom. x. 2 ζηλον Θεού έχουσιν, 2 Cor. xi. 2, ib. vii. 7 τον ύμων ζηλον ύπερ έμου, v. 11, Phil. iii. 6 κατὰ ζήλος δίωκων την ἐκκλησίαν; so ζηλωτής του Θεου Acts xxii. 3, του rόμου ib. xxi. 20, καλῶν ἔργων Tit. ii. 14. The verb takes an acc. in the sense of 'seek eagerly,' τὰ χαρίσματα 1 Cor. xii. 31, ζηλῶ ὑμᾶς 2 Cor. xi. 2, Gal. iv. 17, εζήλωσα τὸ ἀγαθόν, Sir. li. 18, μὴ ζηλοῦτε θάνατον, Wisd. i. 12.

ἐπιτυχείν.] Used absolutely Gen. xxxix. 2 (Ἰωσὴφ) ἦν ἀνὴρ ἐπιτυχχάνων ('prosperous'); with gen. Heb. xi. 33 ἐπέτυχον ἐπαγγελιῶν, ib. vi. 15; with acc. Rom. xi. 7 τοῦτο οὐκ ἐπέτυχεν.

ούκ ἔχετε.] Repeated like αἰτείτω in i. 5, 6. It is not a further step.
διὰ τὸ μὴ αἰτεῖσθαι ὑμᾶs.] The subject of the infinitive is expressed as in iii. 3, where see n.

3. αἰτεῖτε καὶ οὐ λαμβάνετε.] Yet in i. 5 he had said, quoting from the Sermon on the Mount, αἰτείτω καὶ δοθήσεται. But the promise is not unconditional. In the former passage stress is laid on the need for simple faith in the worshippers, here on the right choice of things to pray for.

Why is the active voice used here, and the middle immediately before and afterwards? The latter has a slight additional shade of meaning, which may be illustrated by the distinction (noted by Dobree in Arnold's n. on Thuc. v. 43) between δεινά ἐποίουν 'they expressed,' and δεινὰ ἐποιοῦντο 'they felt indignation'; and by Donaldson's distinction between ίδεῦν 'to see' and ἰδέσθαι 'to behold,' 'sce with interest ' ('in this particular use of the middle it will generally be found to imply a certain special diligence and earnestness in the action' Winer, p. 318): ef. for this 'dynamic' or 'subjective' middle Krüger Gr. § 52. 8 and 10. Sturz in Lex. Xen. s.v. quotes Schol. Aristoph. 156 αἰτοῦμαι τὸ αὐτὸ (τῷ αἰτῶ), ὥσπερ ποιῶ καὶ ποιοῦμαι, πλὴν ὅτι τὸ μὲν αἰτῶ τὸ ἀπλῶς ζητῶ, τὸ δὲ αἰτοῦμαι τὸ μεθ' ἰκεσίας, Phavorin. αἰτοῦμαι τὸ μετὰ παρακλήσεως αἰτῶ καὶ ἰκετείω. When αἰτεῖτε is thus opposed to $a \partial \tau \epsilon \partial \sigma \theta \epsilon$, it implies using the words, without the spirit, of prayer. Otherwise, where there is no special reason to emphasize this shade of meaning. the active may be used to include the force of the middle, just as μετα- $\pi \epsilon \mu \pi \omega$ is used in the sense of 'send for,' which strictly belongs to μεταπέμπομαι. I add a few examples of the combination of the two κακῶς.] 'Wrongly,' as in John xviii. 23 εἰ κακῶς ἐλάλησα. It is explained by the words which follow, and is the opposite to 1 John v. 14 ἐάν τι αἰτώμεθα κατὰ τὸ θ έλη μα α ὐτοῦ ἀκούει ἡμῶν, cf. Isa. lix. 2, Max. Tyr. 30 ὁ Θεὸς λέγει, εἰ ἀγαθὰ ἐπ' ἀγαθῷ αἰτεῖς, λάμβατε, Theophylact on Luke xviii. 42 ἐπεὶ ἄλλα αἰτοῦντες ἄλλα λαμβάνομεν πρόδηλον ὅτι οὐ καλῶς οἰδὲ πιστῶς αἰτοῦμεν. This wrong prayer is without submission (v. 7): the petitioner uses it as an instrument of selfishness; he would make religion a help to serving the world, cf.

ἴνα ἐν ταῖς ἡδοναῖς ὑμῶν δαπανήσητε.¹] Cf. Luke xv., where δαπανήσαντος αὐτοῦ πάντα (v. 14) is explained by ὁ καταφαγών σου τὸν βίον μετὰ πορνῶν (v. 30). The object here is understood from αἰτεῖτε. In Acts xxi. 24 δαπ. is followed by ἐπί, in classical writers usually by εἰς, but also by πρός, ἀμφί, or the simple dat.; there is however no occasion to separate ἐν from the verb (as Alf.), cf. Thuc. vii. 48. 5 ἐν περιπολίοις ἀναλίσκοντας, where Poppo cites Arist. Ετh. iv. 2. 20 ἐν τοῖς μικροῖς τῶν δαπανημάτων πολλὰ ἀναλίσκει, Aristid. αὐν. Lept. p. 62 τὴν ἐν τοῖς τοιούτοις δαπάνην, and compares Lat. consumere in τε. The extreme of this δαπάνησις is seen in the ἐτρυφήσατε and ἐσπαταλήσατε of v. 5. Prayer for this is the opposite to prayer for daily bread, and to Matt. vi. 32, 33 'seek first the kingdom of God, and all these things shall be added unto you, for your Father knoweth ye have need of these things. Compare the conclusion of Juvenal's tenth Satire.

4. μοιχαλίδες.] Recent editors follow A. B. Sin. in omitting μοιχοὶ καί, and understand the word in a figurative sense of adulterous souls, in accordance with the language of the O.T., which speaks of Israel as married to Jehovah (Isa. lvii. 3–9, Jer. iii. 20, Ezek. 16 esp. vv. 32, 35, 38, ib ch. 23, Hosea ch. 2), and of the N.T. which speaks of the Church as the Lamb's Wife (2 Cor. xi. 1–2, Eph. v. 22–32, Apoc. xix. 7, ib. xxi. 9). It is less usual to find this figure used to express the relation of the individual soul to God, but cf. Psa. lxxiii. 27, Rom. vii. 2–4, Clem. Hom. iii. 28 ὁπόταν ἡ ψυχὴ ὑψ ἐτέρων σπαρῆ, τότε, ὡς πορνεύσασα ἡ μοιχευσαμένη, ὑπὸ τοῦ Πρεύματος ἐγκαταλείπεται. The insertion of μοιχοί was natural when μοιχαλίς was understood literally, but the context and especially ver. 5 are in favour of the figurative meaning. The word, which is unclassical (Lob. Phryn. p. 452), is found in LXX. Mal. iii. 5 (where μοιχούς is read by some), Rom. vii. 3, 2 Pet. ii. 14 ἐφθαλμοὶ μεστοὶ μειχαλίδος, (Plut.) *Plac. ή φιλία τοῦ κόσμου.] The word φιλία is defined by Aristotle (Eth. N. xiii. 2) εἴτοιαν μὴ λανθάνουσαν ἐν ἀντιπεπονθόσι φιλίαν εἶναι, involving the idea of loving as well as of being loved, cf. John xv. 19 ὁ κόσμος ἄν τὸ ἴδιον ἐφίλει, 2 Tim. iv. 10 Δημᾶς...ἀγαπήσας τὸν νῦν αἰῶνα. It is not found elsewhere in N.T. but occurs in LXX. (Prov. xxvii. 5). See above i. 27, 2 Pet. i. 4 ἄνα γάνησθε θείας κοινωνοὶ φύσεως ἀποφυγόντες τῆς ἐν κόσμω ἐν ἐπιθυμία φθορᾶς, Tit. ii. 12 ἄνα ἀρνησάμενοι τὰς κοσμικὰς ἐπιθυμίας εὐτεβῶς ζήσωμεν.

ός έὰν οὖν βουληθή φίλος είναι τοῦ κόσμου. For the use of εάν instead of \ddot{a}_{V} with relatives see Winer, p. 390 It is very common in N.T., especially after a vowel (WH. app. p. 173), also in LXX., as 1 Sam. xix. 3 στήσομαι εν άγρφ οθ εάν ής εκεί...καὶ όψομαι ο τι εάν ή, Job xxxvii. 10 οιακίζει το έδωρ ως έαν βούληται, Sirac. ii. 7 παν δ έαν έπαχθή σοι δέξαι, ib. xiv. 11 $\kappa a \theta \dot{\omega}_S$ $\dot{\epsilon} \dot{\alpha}_V \ddot{\epsilon}_{XJS} \dot{\epsilon}_V \dot{\alpha}_S \dot{\epsilon}_L \dot{\omega}_S \dot{\omega}_S \dot{\omega}_S$, and in the patristic writings, Clem, Rom, xii. (on Rahab) ως ἐὰν (' whenever') οὖν γένηται λαβέᾶν αὐτὴν ύμας διασώσατέ με, and just below ώς έαν γιώς παραγιιομένους ήμας, Hermas Vis. 3. 13 ώς εάν του λυπουμένω έλθη αγγελία αγαθή τις, εὐθὺς ἐπελάθετο,των προτέρων λυπων, ib. § 8, ib. § 2 δς ἐὰν πάθη, § 3 ὅσοι ἐὰν ἐργάσωνται ib, § 1. Numerous examples from classical authors are cited in Viger, p. 516, but they are all corrected (against the MSS.) in the later editions, see Hermann in Vig. p. 833, and Kühner on Xen. Mem. iii. 10, 12. It stands in the newly discovered treatise of Aristotle $\Delta\theta$. Hol. c. 30 τοὺς Ἑλληνοταμίας οἱ ἐὰν διαχειρίζωσε τὰ χρήματα μὴ συμβουλεύειν, ib. c. 31 τοις νόμοις οι έαν τεθώσιν χρήσθαι, in Polyb. vii. 9, 6 πρὸς οιστινας ήμεν έων γένηται φιλία, Anton. 9. 23 ήτις έων πρώξις μη έχη την αναφοράν, Ärtem. i. 78 οΐα οθν έὰν ἢ ἡ γυνὴ καὶ ὅπως διακειμένη, οθτως καὶ ἡ πρᾶξις, Fabricius' text of Sext. Emp. Hyp. ii. 163, iii. 37. This use may have arisen from a wish to distinguish between a qualifying a relative, and $d\nu$ qualifying the optative or indicative. As the former frequently introduced a quasi-hypothetical proposition, it was not unnatural to mark it by the addition of a hypothetical particle, particularly as this had already become nearly otiose in such phrases as καν εἰ, ωσπερ \mathring{a}_{r} ϵi , while on the other hand \mathring{a}_{r} itself was often used as equivalent to $\dot{\epsilon}$ ár. Boc $\lambda\eta\theta\hat{\eta}$ ('makes it his aim') is important, since a Demetrius may have 'good report of all men as well as of the truth itself,' but no man who makes worldly success his aim can be also a friend of God. Compare Plut. Mor. 6 τὸ τοῖς πολλοῖς ἀρέσκειν τοῖς σοφοῖς ἐστιν άπαρέσκειν.

καθίσταται.] 'Thereby becomes,' lit. 'is constituted,' see on iii. 6.
5. ἢ δοκεῖτε.] The alternatives are, either the friendship of the world is enmity with God, or the Scripture speaks without meaning. Cf. Matt. xxvi. 53 ἢ δοκεῖς ὅτι οὐ δύταμαι; 2 Cor. xi. 7, Rom. vi. 3. For δοκ. see above i. 26.

κενῶς.] Epict. Diss. ii. 17. 6 ἢ κενῶς φθεγγόμεθα; ή γραφή λέγει.] The same phrase is used Rom. iv. 3, v. 17, x. 11, Gal. iv. 30, 1 Tim. v. 18, cf. above ii. 23, and Westcott Heb. p. 474 on modes of citation. For the personification see Lightfoot on Gal. iii. 8. To show the incompatibility of being at the same time friends with the world and friends of God, the writer refers to the mode of speaking common in the O.T. where jealousy is ascribed to God.

No passage in the O.T. exactly corresponds to this. The nearest are Gen. vi. 3-7, Exod. xx. 5 έγω γάρ είμι Κύριος ὁ Θεός σου, Θεός ζηλωτής, expanded in the Song of Moses, Deut. xxxii. (esp. vv. 11, 12, 16, 19, 21 παρεζήλωσάν με $\epsilon \pi'$ οὐ Θε $\hat{\omega}$, cf. 1 Cor. x. 22), Exod. xxxiv. 14, 15, Isa. lxiii. 8–16, Zech. viii. 2 ἐζήλωκα τὴν Σιων ζῆλον μέγαν καὶ θυμῷ μεγάλῳ εζήλωκα αὐτήν.. επιστρεψω επί Σιων καὶ κατασκηνώσω εν μεσω Ίερουσαλήμ. Some commentators (e.g. Ewald) have thought the allusion must be to some lost writing. Others (Kern, Bouman, Wiesinger, Hofmann) think that the words following $\dot{\eta}$ $\gamma \rho a \phi \dot{\eta} \lambda \dot{\epsilon} \gamma \epsilon \iota$ down to $\delta \iota \dot{\phi}$ are parenthetic, and that St. James is already referring to the quotation from Prov. iii. 34 given in v. 6. But there seems no justification for such a sudden break; and we have other instances of quotations in the N.T. which remind us rather of the general sense of several passages, than of the actual words of any one particular passage in the O.T.: see Alf. on 1 Cor. ii. 9 (which Jerome rightly takes as a paraphrase of Isa, lxiv. 4, while Chrysostom was in doubt whether it was not from some lost book); Eph. v. 14 probably a loose paraphrase from Isa. lx. 1, 2; Rom. xi. 8 made up of Isa. xxix. 10 (Alf., but vi. 10 Jowett) and Deut. xxix. 4; John vii. 38 where Westcott's n. is 'the reference is not to any one isolated passage, but to the general tenor of such passages as Isa, lviii, 11, Zech, xiv, 8 taken in connexion with the original image (Exod. xvii. 6, Num. xx. 11); Matt. ii. 23 (which Alf. leaves 'as an unsolved difficulty'); and the differing versions of the same quotation in Heb. viii. 8 f. and x. 16 f. For an account of the various explanations offered here, see Wolf. Cur. Phil. v. p. 58 foll., Heisen, p. 883-928, Pott, 329-355, Theile, 215-229.

πρὸς φθόνον ἐπιποθεῖ.] 'Jealously desires,' cf. 1 Pet. ii. 2 (as new-born babes) τὸ λογικὸν ἄδολον γάλα ἐπιποθήσατε, Phil. i. 8 (God is my witness) ὡς ἐπιποθῶ πάντας ὑμᾶς ἐν σπλάγχνοις Χριστοῦ Ἰησοῦ, which Lightfoot translates 'I yearn after,' adding 'the preposition in itself signifies merely direction, but the idea of straining after the object being thereby suggested, it gets to imply eagerness, cf. Diod. xvii. 101 παρόντι μὲν οὐ χρησάμενος, ἀπόντα δὲ ἐπιποθήσας.' He notices the fact that while the simple πόθος, ποθεῖι, ἀc. are not found in the N.T., the compounds ἐπιποθεῖι, ἐπιποθία, ἐπιπόθησις, ἐπιπόθητος are not uncommon. So in LXX., Psa, xlii. 1 ὂν τρόποι ἐπιποθεῖ ἡ ἔλαφος ἐπὶ τὰς πηγάς, οἴτως ἐπιποθεῖ ἡ ψυχή μου πρὸς σὲ ὁ Θεός, Deut. xxxii. 11 ὡς ἀετὸς ἐπὶ τοῖς νοσσοῖς ἐπεπό-θησε ('fluttereth over') '; rarely used in a bad sense as Sir. xxv. 20 γεναϊκα ἐν κάλλει μὴ ἐπιποθήσης. With the adverbial phrase compare πρὸς ὀργήν, πρὸς βίαν, πρὸς ἡδονήν, and so with δίκην, εὐσέβειαν, ὑπερβολήν, ἀφθονίαν, καιρόν, φέσιν, τύχην, δύναμιν, ἔβριν, ἀχθηδόνα, χάριν, φιλίαν, ἀλήθειαν, φιλονεικίαν. We might perhaps have expected ζῆλος here rather than φθόνος, as we have ζηλωτής and not φθονερός in Exod. xx. 5, but the former always has a bad sense in St. James, and the latter is often used of the feeling towards a rival, see Eur. Alcest. 306 μὴ πιγήμης τοῦσδε μητρειὰν τέκνοις, ἥτις κακίων οὖσ' ἐμοῦ γενὴ φθόνφ τοῖς σοῦσι κάμοῦς παισὶ χεῖρα προσβαλεῖ, Ιρhίμ. So, constantly, of divine Nemesis φθόνος θεῶν οτ θεόθεν (Alc. 1135, Orestes 974, Iph. A. 1097), of which Herodotus writes (vii. 10) φιλέει ὁ θεὸς τὰ ὑπερέχοντα πάντα κολούειν (see below v. 6).

τὸ πνεῦμα δ κατώκισεν ἐν ήμῖν.] It seems best to take τὸ πνεῦμα as the subject to $\epsilon \pi \iota \pi \circ \theta \epsilon \hat{\imath}$ ('the Spirit which he made to dwell in us jealously yearns for the entire devotion of the heart'), cf. Rom. viii. 11 foll. εὶ τὸ πιεθμα τοῦ ἐγείραντος Ἰησοῦν ἐκ τῶν νεκρῶν οἰκεῖ ἐν ὑμῖν...ἐλάβετε τὸ πνεθμα νίοθεσίας, 1 Cor. iii. 16 τὸ πνεθμα τοῦ Θεοθ οἰκεὶ ἐν ὑμθν, Gal. iv. 6, Eph. iv. 30, John vii. 39, xvi. 7, Ezek. xxxvi. 27 τὸ πνεθμά μου δώσω έν θμίν, Isa. lxiii. 11 που έστιν ο θείς έν αὐτοίς το πνεθμα το άγιον; Psa. li. 11, 12, De Aleatoribus 3 nolite contristare spiritum sanctum qui in vobis est et nolite exstinguere lumen quod in vobis effulsit, Hermas Sim. 5. 6 § 5 τὸ πνεθμα τὸ ἄγιον...κατώκισεν ὁ Θεὸς εἰς σάρκα ην ηβούλετο (Jesus), ib. 7, Μαπα. 3.1 ἀλήθειαν ἀγάπα...ἴνα τὸ πνεθμα δ ὁ Θεὸς κατφκισεν ἐν τῆ σαρκὶ ταύτη ἀληθὲς εξρεθῆ...καὶ οὕτως δοξασθήσεται ὁ Κύριος ὁ ἔν σοι κατοικῶν, ib. 5. 2 ἐὰν μακρόθυμος ἔση, τὸ πνεθμα τὸ ἄγιον τὸ κατοικοῦν ἔν σοι καθαρὸν ἔσται μὴ ἐπισκοτούμενον ὑπὸ ἐτέρου πονηρού πνεύματος... εάν δε δένχολία τις προσέλθη, είθυς το πνεύμα το άγιον τρυφερον ον² στενοχωρείται κ.τ.λ., Test. Jos. x., Benj. vi. If on the other hand we make God or the Scripture the subject and τὸ πνεῦμα the object of $\epsilon \pi \iota \pi \circ \theta \epsilon \hat{\iota}$ we may compare Eccl. xii. 12, Isa. xlii. 5, lvii. 16. If we read κατώκησεν with the majority of MSS, and versions, the sense will remain practically unaltered: 'the Spirit which has taken up his abode in us jealously yearns, &c.'

The interpretation given above is that of Cajetan, Corn. a Lap. (putatisne, O Christiani, frustra in Scriptura Deum vocari zelotypmm restri, osorem mundi illique quasi invidentem possessionem cordis vestri?), Schneckenburger, Kern, Wiesinger, Alford, Hofmann, Ewald, Brückner, Erdmann, Schegg, Beyschlag: with whom agree (so far as $\pi\rho\delta s \phi\theta\delta\sigma\nu$ is concerned) Theophylaet, Euthymius, Methodius, Occumenius, Heisen, Gebser, Theile, Winer. It is in my opinion the only interpretation which is alike in harmony with the context and permissible according to the usage of the Greek language; but as some readers may find a difficulty in the word $\phi\theta\acute{o}ros$, it may be well to give here a brief conspectus of the other explanations which have been proposed.

Bede says on the words 'Ad invidiam concupiscit spiritus qui habitut in volis?' Interrogative per increpationem legendum est, quasi dicevet, 'numquid Spiritus gratiue quo significati estis...hoc concupiscit ut invideatis alterutrum? Non utique bonus spiritus invidiae vitium in volis sed malus operatur.' He then mentions that others read it without a question in the sense: adversus invidiam concupiscit, hoc est, invidiae morbum debellari atque a vestris mentibus extirpuri desiderat. Alii de spiritu hominis dictum intelligunt, ut sit sensus 'nolite concupiscere, nolite mundi hujus amicitiis adhaerere, quia spiritus mentis vestrue, dum terrena concupiscit, ad invidiam usque concupiscit, dum ea quae ipsi acquirere concupiscitis alios invidetis habere.'

Cyril ap. Theophyl. εἰ φθόνω διαβόλου θάνατος εἰσῆλθεν εἰς τὸν κόσμον, καὶ εἰ κατώκησεν εἰς τὸν ἔσω ἡμῶν ἄνθρωπον ὁ Χριστὸς κατὰ τὰς γραφάς, διὰ τοῦτο κατώκησεν ἴνα τὸν ἐκ τοῦ φθόνου προσγινόμενον θάνατον καταργήση... ὅτι δὲ ἐπιποθήσας ἡμᾶς ὁ Θεὸς κατώκησεν ἐν ἡμῖν Ἡσα΄ας ἐδήλωσεν εἰπών.

Theophylact: οὐ γὰρ κετῶς ἥτοι ματαίως, ἣ πρὸς φθόνον, ἡ γραφὴ τὰ ἀμήχανα ἡμῖν διαγορεύει, ἀλλ' ἐπιποθοῦσα τὴν διὰ παρακλήσεως αὐτῆς έγκατοικιζομένην ημίν χάριν.

Occumenius has the same, with a fuller explanation : $\mathring{\eta}$ δοκεῖτε ὅτι κενῶς $\mathring{\eta}$ γραφ $\mathring{\eta}$ λέγει $\mathring{\eta}$ πρὸς φθόνον ; οὐδὲν τούτων ἀλλ ἐπιποθεῖ ἤτοι ἐπι-

Methodius of Patara (in Matthaei's Scholia): ἡ παρὰ τοῦ Θεοῦ ἐνσπαρεῖσα τῆ φύσει νοερὰ δύναμις φθονεῖ τῆ παρὰ τοῦ ἀντικειμένου ὑποβαλλομένη καὶ πρὸς ἡδονὰς ὑμᾶς καὶ πάθη κατασυρούση (so Gebser for κατασύρει) καὶ βούλεται μόνα ήμᾶς τὰ καλὰ ἐνεργεῖν.

The views of later commentators may be more briefly classified in reference (1) to the construction of $\pi\rho\delta s$ $\phi\theta\delta ror$, (2) to the meaning of $\pi \rho \delta s \phi \theta \delta \nu \delta \nu$, (3) to the subject of $\epsilon \pi \iota \pi \delta \theta \epsilon \hat{\iota}$.

(1) It will have been noticed that Theophylact and others put a stop after $\pi\rho\delta$ s $\phi\theta\delta\nu\sigma\nu$, connecting it with $\lambda\delta\gamma\epsilon$ and not with $\delta\pi\iota\pi\sigma\theta\epsilon\hat{\epsilon}$, and so we read in A and other MSS. Gebser agrees, translating 'Think ye that the Scripture speaks without reason, enviously?' and regards the following words as parenthetic. Du Mont and Heumont (ap. Wolf. p. 59) translate 'Think ye the Scripture speaks against envy to no purpose?' For the view of Michaelis see below (2, d). The decisive objection to these, as to all other interpretations except that which I have given above, is that they do not carry on the thought of the preceding verse. Moreover such a division spoils both sentences: and all commentators are now agreed that $\pi\rho\delta s$ $\phi\theta\delta\nu\rho\nu$ can only be taken with $\delta\pi\nu\sigma\theta\delta$

- (2) Scarcely less unanimous is the opinion of modern scholars that Theophylact, Occumenius and Euthymius were right in taking πρὸς φθόνον as equivalent to $\phi\theta o r \epsilon \rho \hat{\omega}_s$. Others have understood $\pi \rho \hat{\omega}_s$ to mean 'against,' (a) as Cyril above and the second interpreter in Bede, with Luther, Bengel, Pott, Stier and Lange in later times. But πρός can only mean 'against' when joined with a word which implies hostility: it cannot have this force when joined with a word which implies strong affection like $\epsilon \pi \iota \pi \circ \theta \epsilon \hat{\iota}^{1}$ (b) Others again understand $\pi \rho \acute{o}s$ to mean 'towards' or 'with a view to,' as Bede above, 'Does the Spirit desire that you should be envious one of another?' Calvin 'Is the Spirit of God disposed to envy?' so too Bloomfield: Beza and Estius translate 'spiritus humanus ad invidiam proclivis: Bouman after Wolf and Witsius Does the Spirit move you to envy?' As to this interpretation, while it may be granted that $\epsilon \pi \iota \pi \circ \theta \epsilon \hat{i}$ is occasionally followed by $\pi \rho \delta \hat{s}$ in Hellenistic writers (as in Psa, xlii, I quoted above), this is only allowable in describing warm affection towards a person, never in speaking of a tendency to a certain state of mind. Still less can $\epsilon \pi i \pi i \theta \epsilon \hat{i}$ have the causative force assigned to it by Wolf.
- (c) Others take $\pi\rho\delta$ s to mean 'up to,' Lat. usque, as the third interpreter in Bede quoted above, and von Soden 'bis zur Eifersucht liebt er den Geist.' Practically this is much the same as the correct interpretation, but the former is without precedent, while the latter is in accordance with analogy, and flows naturally from the ordinary use of $\pi\rho\delta$ s to express 'in conformity with.'

(d) Michaelis and Semler translate 'in reference to envy,' connecting it with $\lambda \acute{\epsilon} \gamma \epsilon \iota$. This interpretation is open to the objections stated under (1).

(3) Bede, Cyril, Methodius and Euthymius rightly regard $\tau \delta \pi r \epsilon \hat{\imath} \mu a$ (the Divine Spirit) as the subject of $\epsilon \pi \iota \pi \sigma \theta \epsilon \hat{\imath}$. Others make $\hat{\eta} \gamma \rho a \phi \hat{\eta}$ the subject, as Theophylact, Occumenius, and in later times Gebser and Theile (a). Others, as Kern and Wiesinger, take God to be the subject understood and $\tau \delta \pi r \epsilon \hat{\imath} \mu a$ (the human spirit) the object (b). Practically there is not much difference between these interpretations and that which I regard as the right one. Of the two (b) has far more claim to consideration than (a). A third view (c) which makes the human spirit the subject seems to me entirely to destroy the meaning of the passage.

6. μέζονα δὲ δίδωσιν χάριν.] More, in consequence of this jealous affection, which shows itself not in the abandonment of the unfaithful spouse, but in further bounteousness; cf. Isa. liv. 7, 8 'for a small moment have I forsaken thee, but with great mercies will I gather thee, &c., ix. 6, 7, on the effect of the Divine 'jealousy,' Zech. i. 14, viii. 2, where the declaration of God's jealousy of Zion is followed by promises of her future glory. The absolute self-surrender demanded of the Christian is rewarded by richer supplies of divine grace than he could otherwise receive. For the pregnant use of μείζων cf. above iii. 1.

διὸ λέγα.] The subject understood is probably God, as above i. 12 $\epsilon \pi \eta \gamma \gamma \epsilon i \lambda \alpha \tau o$, and Eph. iv. 8, v. 14, where the same phrase occurs; others take it as $\dot{\eta} \gamma \rho a \phi \dot{\eta}$, cf. above ver. 5.

ό Θεὸς ὑπερηφάνοις ἀντιτάσσεται ταπεινοῖς δὲ δίδωσιν χάριν.] Cited in the same form I Pet. v. 5. The LXX. (Prov. iii. 34) has Kύριος for Θεός. Clement of Rome (I. 30), who also has Ocos, has probably borrowed the quotation from St. James, as his next sentence reminds us of our epistle, καταλαλιᾶς πόρρω ξαυτούς ποιούντες, ξργοις δικαιούμενοι καὶ οὐ λόγοις. For άντιτ. 'sets himself against' see Acts xviii. 6, Rom. xiii. 2. $i\pi\epsilon\rho\eta\phi$. 'conspicuous beyond others,' 'outshining them,' and so 'proud,' ' haughty,' 1 see Sirac, x. 7 μισητή εναντι Κυρίου καὶ ἀνθρώπων ὑπερηφανία, ib. v. 12 ἀρχὴ ὑπερηφανίας ἀνθρώπου ἀφισταμένου ἀπὸ τοῦ Κυρίου, καὶ ἀπὸ τοῦ ποιήσαντος αὐτὸν ἀπέστη ἡ καρδία αὐτοῦ, v. 18 οὐκ ἔκτισται άνθρώποις ὑπερηφανία, Psalm. Sol. ii. 25, iv. 28, where it is used of defiant wickedness. In St. Peter the quotation simply enforces an exhortation to humility, 'be humble, for grace follows': here we have to suppose \mathring{v} περηφανία ('pride of life,' 1 John i. 16) identified with $\mathring{\eta}$ φιλία το \mathring{v} κόσμον in v. 4; see the passage just quoted from Sirac. x. 12. The friend of the world is proud because he makes himself his own centre, disowning his dependence upon God, see Trench Syn. p. 113 foll., Cheyne on Isaiah ii. 12.

ἀντίστητε δὲ τῷ διαβόλῳ.] Opposed first to the previous clause, and then the addition of καὶ φεύξεται suggests a new contrast to the clause which follows. Compare the parallel passage in 1 Pet. v. 8, 9, also Eph. vi. 11, 12. The devil is the ἄρχων τοῦ κόσμον τοῦτου (above ver. 4, John xiv. 30), he inspires hatred and discord (above iii. 15, John viii. 44), the proud fall into his condemnation (above ver. 6, 1 Tim. iii. 6).

καὶ φεύξεται ἀφ' ὑμῶν.] The imperative followed by καὶ is an energetic form of the conditional sentence, see A. Buttmann, p. 196, and compare John ii. 19 λύσατε τὸν ναὸν καὶ ἐγερῶ αὐτόν, also below vv. 8, 10. The promise gives an answer to those who might plead in excuse the power of the tempter, as others pleaded the force of circumstances ordained by God (above i. 13). Christ's temptation is an example of submission to God's appointment, followed by the flight of the devil. We find a reminiscence of this verse in Hermas Mand. xii. 5 οὐ δύταται (ὁ διά-βολος) καταδεταστεύειν τῶν δούλων τοῦ Θεοῦ τῶν ἐξ ὅλης καρδίας ἐλπιζόντων ἐπ' αὐτόν. δύταται ὁ διάβολος ἀντιπαλαῦσαι, καταπαλαῦσαι δὲ οὐ δύναται. ἐὰν οὖν ἀντισταθῆτε αὐτῷ. νυκηθεὶς φεύξεται foll., ib. xii. 2, 4, 6, vii. 2, 3, Testam. 8. ἐγγίσατε τῷ Θεῷ καὶ ἐγγίσει ὑμῖν.] Cf. Psa. cxlv. 18 ἐγγὺς Κύριος πᾶστι τοῖς ἐπικαλουμένοις αὐτὸν ἐν ἀληθεία. Isa. xxix. 13 (quoted in Matt. xv. 8), Hos. xii. 6 ἔγγιζε πρὸς τὸν Θεόν σου διὰ παντός, Dent. iv. 7 παῖον ἔθνος μέγα ῷ ἐστιν αἰτῷ Θεὸς ἐγγίζων ὡς Κύριος ὁ Θεὸς ἡμῶν; on which Philo commenting says (M. 1. p. 445) the greatness of a nation consists in τὸ τῷ Θεῷ συνεγγίζειν ἡ ῷ Θεὸς συνεγγίζει, 2 Chron. xv. 2, Isa. lix. 2, Zeeh. i. 3, Mal. iii. 7. The phrase was first used of the priestly office Exod. xix. 22, Ezek. xliv. 13, then of all spiritual worship, as in Heb. iv. 16, vii. 19 (where see Alf.).

καθαρίσατε χειρας. In the literal sense this was an ordinary ritual observance, see Mark vii. 3, Exod. xxx. 19-21 (when the priests go into the tabernacle they shall wash their hands and their feet that they die not), ib. xl. 30 foll., Lev. xvi. 4: then used of moral purity Psa. xxvi. 6, Job xxii. 30, Isa. i. 16, Jer. iv. 14, 1 Tim. ii. 8, 1 John iii. 3. The same change from ceremonial to moral purity is found in the Lat. castus, cf. Cic. N.D. I. 3, II. 71. Purifying before the Passover was general (John xi. 55), see also Acts xxi. 24, xxiv. 16, and Heb. x. 22 (of baptism) προσερχόμεθα έρραντισμένοι τὰς καρδίας ἀπὸ συνειδήσεως πονηρᾶς καὶ λελουμένοι το σωμα έδατι καθαρώ, Matt. xxvii. 4 (of Pilate). Philo M. 2. p. 406 explains χείρας in the following words, λόγον μὲν στόμα σύμβολον, καρδία δε βουλευμάτων, πράξεων δε χείρες, ib. M. 1. p. 214. Thus it suits with the word άμαρτωλός, which is used of open, notorious sinners in the Gospels and in 1 Tim. i. 9 δικαίω νόμος οὐ κεῖται, ἀνόμοις δε...καὶ άμαρτωλοῖς κ.τ.λ., 1 Pet. iv. 18, Jude 15. Καθαρίζω found in Hellenistic writers instead of classical καθαίρω (cf. Westcott Heb. p. 346 f.) is less technical than ἀγείζω, which is also unclassical.

άγνίσατε καρδίας δίψυχοι.] This and the preceding clause are combined in Psa. xxiv. 4, lxxiii. 13. The verb άγτίζω and the cognate άγτισμός are generally used of ceremonial purification; but figuratively, as here, in 1 Pet. i. 22 τὰς ψυχὰς ὑμῶν ἡγιικότες ἐν τῷ ὑπακοῷ τῆς ἀληθείας and 1 John iii. 3. For διψ. see above i. 8 and compare Hos, x. 2 ἐμέρισαν καρδίας αἰτῶν: here its full sense comes out as applied to one divided between God and the world, cf. Herm. Mand. ix. 7 καθάρισον τὴν καρδίαν σον ἀπὸ τῆς διψυχίας. For the anarthrous καρδίας see Essay on Grammar.

9. ταλαιπωρήσατε.] The word, which only occurs here in N.T., is quite classical: it is regularly used of undergoing hardship, cf. Thuc, ii. 101 ή στρατιὰ σῖτόν τε οὐκ εἶχεν καὶ ὑπὸ χειμῶνος ἐταλαιπώρει. Jer. iv. 13 οὐαὶ ἡμῶν ὅτι ταλαιπωροῦμεν, v. 20 τεταλαιπώρηκε πᾶσα ἡ γῆ ('is spoiled'), Micah ii. 4 ταλαιπωρίω ἐταλαιπωρήσαμεν ('we be utterly spoiled'); so ταλαιπωρία below v. l. In Isa. xxxiii. 1 it has a transitive force 'to afflict another.' This is perhaps the only place in which the imperative is used, and I think it is best understood of voluntary abstinence from comforts and luxurics (the δαπαιᾶν of iv. 3, τρυφᾶν of v. 5); so Erasınus, Grotius (affligite ipsos vosmet jejuniis et aliis corporis σκληραγωγίαις), Corn. a Lap. and the Romanists generally. On the other hand Alf., following Huther as usual, translates 'be wretched in your minds from a sense of your sinfulness'; but if we consider that St. James himself was noted for his asceticism, that St. Paul bids Timothy κακοπάθησον ώς καλὸς στρατιώτης Χριστοῦ Ἰησοῦ (2 Tim. ii. 3, 4, 5), and himself kept his body in subjection (1 Cor. ix. 27); that fasting, sackcloth and ashes were ordinary accompaniments of repentance (Luke x. 13, Dan. ix. 3, Joel i. 13, 14, Jer. iv. 8, Isa. xxii. 12, cf. Psa. xxxv. 13, 14); lastly that our Lord's charge to those who would follow him was to deny themselves and take up their cross, we shall see no difficulty in adhering to the usual meaning of the word.

δ γέλως ὑμῶν εἰς πένθος μεταστραφήτω.] For the thought cf. Eccles. ii. 2, vii. 2–6, Tobit ii. 6, Sirac. xxi. 20, xxvii. 13, Luke vi. 21, 25; and for the expression Joel ii. 28 ὁ ἥλιος μεταστραφήσεται εἰς σκότος, 1 Macc. ix. 41 μετεστράφη ὁ γάμος εἰς πένθος καὶ ἡ φωνὴ μουσικῶν εἰς θρῆνον. The reading of B μετατραπήτω is less vigorous, and the verb does not occur at all in the N.T., nor, I think, in this construction elsewhere.

κατήφειαν.] Classical, only found here in the Bible. It describes the condition of one with eyes cast down like the publican in Luke xviii. 13, cf. Philo M. 2. p. 331 λυπουμένων ὀφθαλμοὶ συννοίας γέμουσι καὶ κατη-

10. ταπεινώθητε ἐνώπιον Κυρίου.] Cf. i. 9, 1 Pet. v. 6 ταπεινώθητε ὑπὸ τὴν κραταιὰν χεῖρα τοῦ Θεοῦ, ἴτα ὑμᾶς ὑψώση ἐν καιρῷ ἐπισκοπῆς, Matt. xxiii. 12, Luke xiv. 11, 1 Sam. ii. 7, 8, Job xxii. 28, 29, Prov. xxix. 23, Ezra xvii. 24, Isa. lvii. 15, Sirac. ii. 17 οἱ φοβούμενοι Κύριον ἐτοιμάσουσι καρδίας αὐτῶν καὶ ἐνώπιον αὐτοῦ ταπεινώσουσι τὰς ψυχὰς αὐτῶν. The adv. ἐνώπιον is Hellenistic, it has much the same sense as παρὰ Θεῷ in i. 27, cf. Luke i. 6 δίκαιοι ἐν. Θεοῦ, 1 Cor. i. 29, 2 Cor. i. 2, &c. The adj. ἐνώπιος is found in Theoer. xxii. 152. For the use of the passive aorist with middle sense see Winer, p. 327.

11. μη καταλαλείτε ἀλλήλων.] Returns to the topic of i. 26, ii. 12, iii. 1-10, 14: ef. 1 Pet. ii. 1 ἀποθέμενοι πάσας καταλαλιάς, ib. ver. 12, iii. 16, 2 Cor. xii. 20, Rom. i. 30 κατάλαλος, ib. xiv. 3-10, 13, Matt. vii. 1, Psa. xlix. 20 κατὰ τοῦ ἀδελφοῦ σου καταλαλεῖς, ib. ei. 5, ib. lxxviii. 19 κ. Θεοῦ, Hermas Mand. ii. 2 πρῶτον μὲν μηδενὸς καταλάλει μηδὲ ἡδέως ἄκουε καταλαλοῦντος ..πονηρὰ ἡ καταλαλιά, ἀκατάστατον δαιμόνιόν ἐστιν, μηδέποτε εἰρηνεῦον, Clem. Rom. ii. 4 μὴ καταλαλεῖν ἀλλήλων, Barn. 20 εὐχερεῖς ἐν καταλαλιά, Τest. Gad. 3 (ὁ μισῶν) τῷ κατορθοῦντι φθονεῖ, καταλαλιὰν ἀσπάζεται. Field, Ot. Norv., quotes the definition κατάλαλοι: οἱ διαβολαῖς κατὰ τῶν ἀπόντων ἀδεῶς κεχρημένοι. The word is not used by classical writers. This evil-speaking flows from the pride condemned in v. 16 and is an expression of the hate denounced in vv. 1, 2. It is shown in what follows to imply a usurpation of God's right to judge.

άδελφοί.] The three-fold repetition of the word n this sentence is in part required by the different constructions of $\kappa a \tau a \lambda a \lambda \hat{\omega}$ and $\kappa \rho \hat{a} r \omega$, like the fourfold repetition of rópos, but it also adds weight to the writer's appeal to their feeling of brotherhood. The appeal is heightened in the third case by the addition of $\tau \delta \nu d\delta$, $\alpha \dot{\nu} \tau \delta \dot{\nu}$, not simply a, but his, brother.

καταλαλεί νόμου και κρίνει νόμον.] Whoever deliberately breaks a law and does not repent of it, thereby speaks against it and treats it as a bad law, since it is the essence of a law to require obedience, and he who refuses obedience virtually says it ought not to be law. Thus he who speaks against a brother virtually speaks against the law of brotherhood. The law which the writer has in mind is the royal law spoken of in ii. 8, to which reference is made by the word $\pi \lambda \eta \sigma i \sigma v$ in v. 12. The offence against man is also an offence against God, cf. above iii. 9, Matt. xxv. 42-45, 1 John iv. 20, Prov. xvii. 5. The phrase 'speaks against the law' is evidently adapted to the special context, cf. i. 4 τέλειον and τέλειος, v. 11 μαρανθήσεται, vv. 12-14 πειράζω, 15 and 18 ἀπεκύησεν, iv. 1 στρατευομένων after πόλεμοι.

ούκ εί ποιητής νόμου.] = ποιητής λόγου in i. 22, see Rom. ii. 13, 1 Macc. ii. 67. The critical attitude is adverse to the dutiful performance of the law. It is only by doing the will of God, so far as it is known to us, that we learn to understand the reasons of it, John vii. 17.

άλλὰ κριτής.] Cf. Clem. Hom. xii. 26 foll. 'If you seek to benefit the good only and not the bad, you undertake to perform the office of a judge (κριτοῦ τὸ ἔργον) and not of kindness, &c., Const. Apost. ii. 36 έὰν κρίνης τὸν ἀδελφὸν, κριτής ἐγένου, μηδενός σε προχειρισαμένου, τοῖς γὰρ

είς ἔστιν νομοθέτης.] One who criticises the law is really proposing to enact a better law; but there is only one lawgiver and judge (John v. 22, 1 Cor. iv. 3-5, Taylor J. F. p. 83), viz. he who is Lord of life and death, i.e. whose sentence takes effect; just as he is the ruler who exercises the right of sovereignty (Matt. xxii. 21). The noun roμοθ. does not occur elsewhere in N.T., though both roμοθετέω and roμοθεσία are found.

13. ἄγε νῦν οἱ λέγοντες.] For the interjectional use of ἄγε cf. Jud. xix. 6, 2 Kings iv. 24; for its use with a plural see below v. 1, Hom. II. i. 62 άλλ' ἄγε δή τιτα μάντιν ἐρείομεν, Χοη. Αροί. 14 ἄγε δη ἀκούσατε καὶ ἄλλα, similarly age in Latin, of which Servius says (on Aen. ii. 707) 'age' non est modo verbum imperantis sed adverbium hortantis, adeo ut plerumque 'age facite' dicamus et singularem numerum copulemus plurali. In like manner we have Mutt. xxvi. 65 ἴδε νῦν ἢκούσατε, Arist. Ach. 318 εἰπέ μοι τί φειδόμεσθα τῶν λίθων ὧ δημόται; Pax 385 εἰπέ μοι τί πάσχετ' ὧνδρες; Plat. Gory. 455 B φέρε δὴ ἴδωμεν, Xen. Mem. iii. 4. 7 ἴθι δὴ ἐξετάσωμεν. It is usually followed by an imperative or an interrogative, as in Cyrop. ii. 1. 6 ἄγε δή, τῆς σῆς δυνάμεως τί φής πλῆθος εἶναι; and in the plural as Xen. Anab. v. 4. 9 ἄγετε δὴ, τί ἡμῶν δεήσεσθε; Here it would seem that the following parenthesis has destroyed the construction and changed the question οὖκ οἴδατε ὅτι ἀτμίς ἐστιν ἡ ζωὴ ὑμῶν into the statement οὖκ ἐπίστασθε τὸ τῆς αἴριον κ.τ.λ.

σήμερον ἢ αὔριον.] The reading ἢ of Sin. B. &c. gives a better sense than καί, which occurs in the same phrase Luke xii. 28, xiii. 32, 33; so $\chi\theta$ ès καὶ σήμερον Heb. xiii. 8. For the warning cf. Luke xii. 16 foll., Prov. xxvii. 1 μὴ κανχῶ τὰ εἰs αἴριον, οὐ γὰρ γινώσκεις τί τέξεται ἡ ἐπιοῦσα, Sir. xi. 16, 17, Philo M. 1. p. 132 ὁ γεηπόνος φησί· σπέρματα βαλοῦμαι, φυτεύσω, αὐξήσει τὰ φυτὰ, καρποὺς ταῦτα οἴσει...εἶτ' ἐξαίφιης φλὸξ ἢ ζάλη ἢ ἐπομβρίαι συνεχεῖς διέφθειραν πάντα· ἔστι δὲ ὅτε...ὁ ταῦτα λογισάμενος οὖκ ὅτατο ἀλλὰ προαπέθανε, Seneca Ep. 101 esp. § 4 quam stultum est aetutem disponere ne crastini quidem dominum, Sen. Thyestes 619 nemo tam divos habnit faventes crastinum ut possit sibi polliceri, Soph. Oed. C. 566 ἔξοιδ' ἀνὴρ ὧν, χὤτι τῆς ἐς αἴριον οὐδὲν πλέον μοι σοῦ μέτεστιν ἡμέρας. Wetst. quotes many similar passages, among them one from a Jewish story of R. Simeon ben Chal. hearing from the angel of death that his office was to slay those who boasted of the things they were about to do.

πορευσόμεθα εἰς τήνδε τὴν πόλω.] 'We will go to this city,' pointing it out on the map. So τόδε in Aristotle gets the force of the particular as opposed to the general. Erdmann and Beyschlag, reading καί above, wrongly translate 'we will journey for two days.' The dispersion of the Jews, which gave them connexions all over the world and let them know at once of any new opening for trade, led to their being constantly on the move. Thus we read of Aquila and Priscilla at Rome and at Corinth (Acts xviii. 1, 2), at Ephesus (ib. v. 18), again at Rome (Rom. xvi. 3) and at Ephesus (2 Tim. iv. 19), see above i. 11 ἐν ταῖς πορείαις. [See Zahn, Weltverkehr und Kirche, Hanov. 1877. S.] ποιήσομεν ἐκεῖ ἐνιαυτόν.] Cf. Acts xx. 3 ποιήσας μῆνας τρεῖς, ib. xv. 33, xviii. 23, Prov. xiii. 23 δίκαιοι ποιήσουσιν ἐν πλούτω ἔτη πολλα. The usage appears to be confined to later Greek, see Shilleto on Dem. F.L. p. 392, Vorst, p. 158 foll. There is a similar phrase in Latin, cf. Sen. Ep. 66. 4 quantis paucissimos una fecerimus dies, tamen multi nobis sermones fuerunt.

έμπορευσόμεθα.] Elsewhere in N.T. only in 2 Pet. ii. 3, where it has a transitive force. In LXX. (Gen. xxxiv. 10) and in profane authors it is intransitive as here.

κερδήσομεν.] No other example of this form of the future is cited. The Attic is $\kappa\epsilon\rho\delta\alpha r\hat{\omega}$, with Aor. $\epsilon\kappa\epsilon\rho\delta\alpha r\alpha$, Ion. and late Att. $\kappa\epsilon\rho\delta\gamma\sigma r\alpha \mu\alpha$, Aor. $\epsilon\kappa\epsilon\rho\delta\eta\sigma\alpha$ (the latter occurs often in N.T.). R. and P. give ἀποκερδήσω as fut, of the compound. The pass, fut, κερδηθήσωμαι occurs in 1 Pet. iii. 2. Dr. Plummer calls attention to the repeated καί separating 'the different items of the plan, which are rehearsed thus one by one with manifest satisfaction."

14. οἴτινες οὐκ ἐπίστασθε τὸ τῆς αὕριον.] 'People that know not (= 'whereas ye know not,' Lat. qui non intelligatis) what belongs to the morrow'; or, reading τά with some MSS., 'the things of the morrow.' The phrase is in apposition with οἱ λέγοντες, as ἀνὴρ δίψυχος with ὁ ἄνθρωπος ἐκεῖνος in i. 7, 8. For the neuter article cf. Matt. xxi. 21 τὸ τῆς συκῆς, 2 Pet. ii. 22 τὸ τῆς παρουμίας, Rom. viii. 5 τὰ τῆς σαρκὸς φρονοῦσω, xiv. 19 τὰ τῆς εἰρήνης διώκομεν, 2 Cor. ii. 30. For ellipse of ἡμέρας see Winer p. 738.1

ἀτμὶς γάρ ἐστε.] Often used for smoke, as in ἀ καμή ου Gen. xix. 28, ἀ καπνοῦ Acts ii. 17, ἀ τ. θυμμάματος Ezek. viii. 11, elsewhere for steam or breath as in Clem. Rom. 17 (a quotation, as Lightfoot suggests, from Eldad and Modad) ἀτμὶς ἀπὸ κύθρας 'steam from a kettle.' It is found in the versions of Symmachus and Aquila, where the Eng. has 'vanity,' as in Eccl. i. 2, ix. 9, xii. 8, Ps. xxxix. 5, lxii. 9, exliv. 4, Job vii. 16. For the thought see Wisd. ii. 4 παρελεύσεται ὁ βίος ἡμῶν ὡς ἔχτη νεφέλης καὶ ὡς ὁμίχλη διασκεδασθήσεται διωχθεῖσα ὑπὸ ἀκτίνων ἡλίον, ib. v. 9–14 and passages quoted in Wetstein. The force of γάρ here is to give significance to the preceding ποία. The reading ἐστε is more vigorous than ἐστι, and may be compared with the substitution of ὁ πλούσιος for πλοῦτος in i. 10, where the thought is the same as here. πρὸς δλίγον.] So Heb. xii. 10 οἱ μὲν πρὸς ὀλίγας ἡμέρας ἐπαίδενον, Αρος. xvii. 10 ὀλίγον αὐτὸν δεῦ μεῖναι.

έὰν ὁ Κύριος θελήση.] Cf. Acts xviii. 21 τοῦ Θεοῦ θέλοντος, 1 Cor. iv. 19 έὰν ὁ Κύριος θελήση, ib. xvi. 17 ἐὰν ὁ Κύριος ἐπιτρέπη, Heb. vi. 3, Phil. ii. 24 πέποιθα ἐν τῷ Κυρίῳ ὅτι...ἐλεύσομαι, but elsewhere we find St. Paul speaking of his future plans without the use of any such phrase, e.g. Acts xix. 21, Rom. xv. 28, 1 Cor. xvi. 5. A similar phrase was customary with the Greeks and Romans, cf. Arist. Plut. 114 oluan γαρ, οίμαι, σύν θεώ δ' είρησεται, ταύτης απαλλάξειν σε της όφθαλμίας, ib. 347, 405, 1188 ην θεός θέλη, Xen. Hipparch. ix. 8 ταιτα δε πάντα θεών συνεθελόντων γένοιτ' ἄν: εἰ δέ τις τοῦτο θαυμάζει ὅτι πολλάκις γέγραπται τὸ σὺν θεῷ πράττειν, εὖ ἴστω ὅτι, ἢν πολλάκις κα δυνεύη, ἦττον τοῦτο θαυμάσεται, Plat. Theaet. 151, Laches 201 άλλὰ ποιήσω ὧ Αυσίμαχε ταῦτα καὶ ήξω παρά σε αυριον ήν θεος εθέλη, Hipp. Maj. 286 μέλλω επιδεικνύναι είς τρίτην ήμέραν...ὅπως παρέσει καὶ αὐτὸς καὶ ἄλλους ἄξεις. 'Αλλὰ ταῦτ' ἔσται ἂν θεὸς ἐθέλη, Alcib. I. p. 135 ἐὰν βούλη σὰ ὧ Σώκρατες. Οὐ καλῶς λέγεις ὧ ᾿Αλκιβιάδη. ᾿Αλλὰ πῶς χρὴ λέγειν; "Οτι ἐὰν θεὸς ἐθέλη, Eur. Alc. 783, Minuc. F. 18 'si Deus dederit:' vulgi iste naturalis sermo est, Senec. Tranquill. 13 tutissimum est de fortuna cogitare et nihil sibi de fide ejus promittere: navigabo nisi si quid inciderit, &c. Cf. Brisson i. 57. The same language is customary among Jews and Arabs. Ben Sira is quoted to the effect: 1 'Let no man say he will do anything without prefixing to it "If the Lord will."

καὶ ζήσομεν καὶ ποιήσομεν.] The boaster forgets that life depends on the will of God. The right feeling is, both my life and my actions are determined by Him. To put ζήσομεν οτ ζήσωμεν into the pretasis is to make life independent of God's will, a second factor which needs to be taken into account.

έν ταῖς ἀλαἴονίαις.²] Does not denote the subject of glorying like έν τῷ ἔψει i. 9, but the manner in which glorying was shown, 'in your self-confident speeches or imaginations' = ἀλαζοτενόμετοι, cf. Clem. Rom. 21 ἀτθρόπεις ἐγκανχωμέτοις ἐν ἀλαζονεία τοῦ λόγον αὐτῶν. In N.T. only found here and 1 John ii. 16 ἡ ἀλαζότεια τοῦ βίον. The adj. is also found twice, each time joined with ἑπερήφανος, see above ver. 6. Aristotle defines it Eth. N. iv. 7. 2 δοκεῖ ὁ ἀλαζὸν προσποιητικὸς τῶν ἐνδόξων εἶται καὶ μὴ ὑπαρχόντων καὶ μειζόνων ἡ ἑπάρχει, see Trench Syn. p. 113 foll. It implies confidence in one's cleverness, luck, strength, skill, &c. For the plural see above ii. 1 προσωπολημψίαις: Bengel says arrogantine exprimentur in illis verbis, profisciscemur, lucrabimur; gloriatio in praesumptione temporis.

17. εἰδότι οὖν.] 'So it seems, if one knows to do good and does it not, there is guilt to him.' The verse sums up all that has been said before, going back as far as i. 22, ii. 14, iii. 1, 13, iv. 11. Instead of εἰδότι καλὸν ποιεῖν...ἀμαρτία ἐστίν, we should rather have expected τὸ

For the pleonasm of αὐτῷ ef. John xv. 2 πῶν κλῆμα μὴ φέρον καρπὸν αἴρει αὐτό, Matt. iv. 16, Apoc. ii. 7 τῷ νικῶντι δώσω αὐτῷ φαγεῖν, esp. after a relative, as Mark vii. 25 γυτὴ ἦs εἶχεν τὸ θυγάτριον αὐτῆς πτεῖμα ἀκάθαρτον, very common in LXX., as Exod. iv. 17 ῥάβδον ἐν ἢ ποιήσεις ἐν αὐτῆ τὰ σημεῖα, Amos. iv. 7 μερὶς ἐφ ἡν οὐ βρέξω ἐπ' αὐτὴν ξηραιθήσεται, see Winer p. 184, who gives instances from classical Greek. Examples of the infinitive after οίδα in this sense are found in 2 Pet. ii. 9, Matt. vii. 11. The word καλόν is common with St. James (ii. 7, iii. 13) as with St. Paul (Rom. vii. 18, 19, 21, 2 Cor. xiii. 7, Gal. vi. 9, where the phrase ποιεῦν τὸ καλόν occurs). The anarthrous neuter occurs in the similar phrase πᾶς ποιῶν πονηρόν Mal. ii. 17. For the thought see Luke xii. 47, John ix. 41, Philo M. 2. p. 518 τῷ μὲν ἀγνοίφ τοῦ κρείττονος διαμαρτάνοντι συγγνώρη δίδοται: ὁ δ᾽ ἐξ ἐπιστήμης ἀδικῶν ἀπολογίαν οὐκ ἔχει. The appeal to knowledge here, as above i. 19, is a proof that the writer is addressing Christians.

V. 1.—It is a question whether the rich here addressed are Christians or not. That there were rich members of the Church appears from i. 10, ii. 2, iv. 13 and St. Paul's warnings against the love of riches. On the other hand 'the brethren' in v. 7 seem to be opposed to 'the rich' here; and the prophets, whom St. James imitates, did not confine their threats and warnings to Israel: we have the burden of Moab and Egypt as well as of Israel. If we suppose the words uttered first of all with reference to disbelievers, they will still be applicable to all who

όλολύζοντες.] Only here in N.T.: it is used in Hom. II. vi. 297 and Herod. iv. 189, of the joyful outeries of women in the worship of Athene; in the LNX. it occurs only as the expression of violent grief, as in Joel i. 5, 13, Isa. xiii 6 (of Babylon) ὀλολύζετε ἐγγὺς γὰρ ἡμέρα Κυρίου, ib. xiv. 31 ὀλολύξατε πύλαι πόλεων, ib. xv. 3 ὀλολύξατε μετὰ κλαυθμοῦ, ib. xvi. 7, Jer. iv. 8. So Latin ululatus.

έπι ταῖς ταλαιπωρίαις ταῖς ἐπερχομέναις.] The early Christians were in momentary expectation of the second coming of the Lord, when the world and its lusts would pass away (v. 8): cf. on the ἀδᾶτες, the sufferings which precede his appearance, 4 Ezra v. and the prophecies of Dan.

xii. I, Matt. xxiv. partially fulfilled in the siege of Jerusalem, in which some of those here addressed would probably be involved, as many who had come up for the Feast were surprised by the rapid concentration of the Roman armies.

2. σέσηπε.] Prophetical perfect as in Isa. xl.2, xliv. 23, xlvi. 1, xlix. 13, lii. 9, liii. 3–10, lx. 1. The verb σ is only found here in N.T., the active occurs with transitive force Job xl. 7 σῆψων τοὺς ἀσεβεῖς, the pass. ib. xxxiii. 21, Psa. xxxvii. 5, Sirac. xiv. 19 πῶν ἔργων σηπόμενον ἐκλείπει. It is questioned whether the expression is intended literally of wealth which, like the manna, will not keep, e.g. of stores accumulated to sell at a profit; or whether it is abstract and symbolical, all wealth having in itself the character of corruptibility. The terms chosen have reference to the different kinds of wealth, σέσηπε to corn and other products of the earth, σητόβρωτα to rich fabrics, ἴωται to metals; giving examples of corruption arising from an external cause (the moth), or internal, whether deep-seated rottenness or superficial rust. In Matt. vi. 19 another danger, that from thieves, is mentioned. Compare with the whole passage Sirac, xiv. 3–19.

ϊμάτια σητόβρωτα.] Rich garments were handed down as heirlooms, cf. Acts xx. 33 'I coveted no man's silver or gold or apparel,' Judges xiv. 12, above ch. ii. 2, Hor. Ep. i. 6. 40. No other instance of the adj. σητ. is cited except Job xiii. 28 παλαιοῖται ὥσπερ ἱμάτιον σητόβρωτον ¹, cf. Sibyll. prooem. 64 (of wooden idols), Isa. li. 8 ὧς γὰρ ἱμάτιον βρωθήσεται ἑπὸ χρόνον καὶ ὡς ἔρια βρωθήσεται ἑπὸ σητός, Sir. xlii. 13 ἀπὸ ἱματίων σὴς ἐκπορεύεται, Hor. Sat. ii. 3. 118 stragula vestis blattarum ac tinearum epulae. On the σής or tinea see Arist. H.A. v. 32. 1, Cato R.R. 98, Pliny N.H. xi. 35 § 117.

3. δ χρυσὸς κατίωται.] The word is used in Sir. xii. 11 of a mirror dimmed with rust, cf. ib. ver. 10 ώς δ χαλκὸς ἰοῖται οἴτως ἡ πονηρία αἰτοῖ, ib. xxix. 10 ἀπόλεσον ἀργύριον διὰ φίλον καὶ μὴ ἰωθήτω ὑπὸ τὸν λίθον εἰς ἀπώλειαν, Plut. Mor. 164 F ὑπολαμβάνει τὸν πλοῦτον ἀγαθὸν εἶι αι μέγιστον τοῖτο τὸ ψεῦδος ἰὸν ἔχει, νέμεται (cf. below φάγεται) τὴν ψυχήν, ἐξίστησιν, ib. 819 E τὴν φιλοχρηματίαν ισπερ μεστὸν ἰοῦ νόσημα τῆς ψυχῆς ἀποδυσάμενος ἀπορρῆψον, Hor. A.P. 330 haec animos aerugo et cura peculi cum semel imbucrit, speramus carmina fingi posse? Epict. Diss. 4. 6. 14 (principles not put into practice) ὡς ὁπλάρια ἀποκείμενα κατίωται. The force of κατά is intensive, as in κατεσθίω, καταβρέχω, καταπίμπρημι, κατακαυχῶμαι above iv. 14.

St. James here uses popular language like the author of the apocryphal Epist. Jerem.² v. 11 θεοὺς ἀργυροῦς καὶ θεοὺς χρυσοῦς καὶ ξυλίνους. οὖτοι δὲ οὐ διασώζουται ἀπ' ἰοῦ καὶ βρωμάτων, ib. v. 24 τὸ γὸρ χρυσόον ὁ περίκεινται εἰς κάλλος, ἐὰν μὴ ἐκμάξῃ τὸν ἰόν, οὐ μὴ στίλψωσιν: strictly speaking it is a property of gold not to rust, Philo M. p. 503 χρυσὸς ἰὸν οὐ παραδέχεται, Theognis 451 εὐρήσεις δέ με πᾶσιν ἐπ' ἔργμασιν ὥσπερ ἄπεφθον χρυσόν, ἐρυθρὸν ἰδεῖν τριβόμενον βασάνω, τοῦ χροιῆς καθύπερθε μέλας οὐχ ἄπτεται ἰὸς οὐδ' εὐρώς, αἰεὶ δ' ἄνθος ἔχει καθαρόν, Pindar fr. 207 Bergk Διὸς παῖς ὁ χρυσός κεῖνον οὐ σὴς οὐ κὶς δάπτει. Strabo however speaks (xvi. 2. 42) of a fuliginous vapour rising from the Dead Sea ὑφ' ἦς

ό tòs αὐτῶν εἰς μαρτύριον ὑμῖν ἔσται] τὸς (Lat. virus), which was used in the sense of poison in iii. 8, and possibly in some of the passages quoted in the preceding note, here stands for rust. The thought is 'You think only of outer riches, your heart is set on treasure here: that treasure is perishing before your eyes: it is a witness of the perishableness of all earthly things, including the body which makes use of it. yourselves are doomed to a like decay, which will consume that flesh with which you identify yourselves (Job xv. 25, 26, Psa. lxxiii. 7) no less certainly than the funeral pyre of the Gentiles, or that which burns to consume the garbage in the Vale of Hinnom. If you had been willing to lose your lower life, you would have found a higher: the corrupting body would have been nothing to the true self.' Compare Gal. vi. 8 'he that soweth to the flesh shall of the flesh reap corruption.' May we attach to this general conception a more special application of the figurative rust? It is a witness that you have not used your wealth but selfishly stored it up (cf. Theophr. Char. x. των μικρολόγων καὶ τὰς άργυροθήκας ἔστιν ίδειν εὐρωτιώσας και κλείς ίωμένας); so Calvin neque Deus aurum destinavit aerugini neque restes tineis, quin potius hace voluit esse humanae vitae subsidia. Quare ipsa sine usu consumptio testis ipsorum inhumanitatis erit. Auri et argenti putredo quasi materia erit inflammandae irae Domini ut instar ignis eos consumat. As the rust eats into the metal, so that selfish covetousness, of which it is the sign, shall eat into your materialized soul like a canker, destroying all the finer and more generous qualities. For instances of the phrase είς μαρτύριον αὐτοῖς cf. Matt. viii. 4 'show thyself to the priest as a testimony unto them,' x. 18 'ye shall be brought before kings for a witness unto them and the Gentiles,' xxiv. 14, 'the Gospel shall be preached as a witness to all nations,' Luke ix. 5 'shake off the dust of your feet' είς μαρτύριον ἐπ' αὐτοὺς 'as a witness against them' (in the parallel passage Mark vi. 11 the dative simply is used), Luke xxi. 13 ἀποβήσεται ὑμῖν εἰς μαρτύριον 'it shall turn to you for a testimony' (in your favour). There is no need to translate ψμω 'against you'; the rust is a witness first to you and then to all observers.

φάγεται τὰς σάρκας ὑμῶν.] This form of the fut. of ἐσθίω is Hellenistic and is found in Luke xiv. 15 and xvii. 8 διακότει μοι ἔως φάγω καὶ πίω καὶ μετὰ ταῖτα φάγεσαι καὶ πίεσαι σύ, 2 Kings ix. 36 καταφάγωται αὶ κύνες τὰς σάρκας Ἰεζάβελ, Lev. xxvi. 29 φάγεσθε τὰς σάρκας τῶν τίῶν, Αρος. xvii. 16 τὰς σάρκας τῆς πόρτης φάγωται, ib. xix. 18, 21. The form φαγοῦμαι appears in Gen. iii. 2. Both are condemned by Phrynichus (p. 327 Lob.). Cf. σητόβρωτα above, Judith xvi. 17 Κύριος ἐκδικήσει αὐτοὺς ἐν ἡμέρα κρίσεως δοῦναι πῦρ καὶ σκώληκας εἰς σάρκας αὐτῶν, Micah iii. 2, 3, Plut. Mor. p. 164 F quoted on κατίωται, Stob. Serm. 38, 53 ιωσπερ ὁ ὶὸς σιδηρών, οἴτως ὁ φθώνος τὴν ἔχουσαν αὐτὸν ψυχὴν ἔξαναψήχει, Basil. hom. de invid. p. 445 quoted by Suicer s.v. φθώνες, Sir. xxxiv. 1 ἀγρυπνία πλούτον ἐκτήκει σάρκας. The pl. σάρκες is used for the fleshy parts of the body both in classical and later writers, e.g. Hom. H. viii. 380 ἢ τις καὶ Τρώων κορἐει κένας ἡδὶ οἰωνοὺς δημῷ καὶ σάρκεσσι, Aesch. Cho. 280, Theophil. Ant. i. 13 νόσφ περιπεσων ἀπώλεσας τὰς σάρκας, and the preceding quotations from the LXX.; while the sing. σάρξ is used for the whole body. Cf. also Menander p. 198 M., Antisth. ap. Laert. vi. 5.

ώς πῦρ.] I think the parallel passages lead us to connect this with what precedes rather than (as WH. and others after Cod. A. and Pesh.) with what follows, cf. Isa. x. 16, 17, xxx. 27 ἡ ὀργὴ τοῦ θυμοῦ ὡς πῦρ ἐδεται, ib. xxxiii. 11, Ezek. xv. 7 πῦρ αὐτοὺς καταφάγεται, Jer. v. 14, Ps. xxi. 9, Amos i. 12, 14, v. 6, vii. 4, Heb. x. 27 φοβερά τις ἐκδοχὴ κρίσεως καὶ πυρὸς ζῆλος ἐσθίειν μέλλοιτος τοὺς ὑπεταντίους. It is not merely gradual unperceived decay which is to be feared, but this is changed into gnawing pain and swift destruction as by fire in the approaching judgment. Cf. Jude 7 πυρὸς αἰωιίου δίκην ὑπέχουσαι, Matt. xxv. 41, Mark ix. 44 ὅπου ὁ σκώληξ αὐτῶν οὖ τελευτῆ καὶ τὸ πῦρ οὖ σβένννται.

ἐθησανρίσατε.] Absolute, as in Łuke xii. 21 οἴτως ὁ θησανρίζων ἐαντῷ. 2 Cor. xii. 14. In Matt. vi. 19 we have the full phrase μὴ θησανρίζετε θησανρούς, cf. Rom. ii. 5 θησανρίζεις σεαντῷ ὀργὴν ἐν ἡμέρᾳ ὀργῆς, Prov. i. 18 οἱ φόνον μετέχοντες θησανρίζουσω ἑαντοῖς κακά, Amos iii. 10, Tobit iv. 9, Psalm. Sol. ix. 9. 'The aor. is used as if from the standing-point of the day of judgment, looking back over this life,' Alf. Perhaps it is more correct to say that it refers back to the perfects σέσηπε, κατίωται. The laying up of treasures is anterior to these. The word ἐθησανρίσατε is pregnant with irony: 'You heap up treasure, but the time for enjoying such treasure has come to an end; it is now only a treasure of wrath in the day of wrath.' For the asyndeton cf. below v. 6.

ἐν ἐσχάταις ἡμέραις.] Cf. Acts ii. 17 ἔσται ἐν ταῖς ἐσχάταις ἡμέραις. 2 Tim. iii. 1 ἐν ἐσχάταις ἡμέραις ἐνστήσονται καιροὶ χαλεποί, Didaché 16. 3 ἐν τ. ἐσχ. ἡμέραις πληθυνθήσονται οἱ ψευδοπροφῆται. The singular ἐν τῆ ἐσχάτη ἡμέρα is often used in St. John's Gospel; other forms are ἐν καιρῷ ἐσχάτψ 1 Pet. i. 5, ἐπ' ἐσχάτων τῶν χρόνων ib. v. 20. ἐπ' ἐσχάτων τῶν ἡμερῶν 2 Pet. iii. 3, ἐπ' ἐσχάτον χρόνον Jude 18, cf. Deut. iv. 30, Numb. xxiv. 14, Isa. xli. 23, 4 Esdr. xiii. 18, Vorst p. 109 foll., Westcott on 1 Joh. ii. 18 ἐσχάτη ὥρα. For the general sense see below on ἡμέρα σφαγῆς, and for omission of article Essay on Grammar.

ό μισθὸς τῶν ἐργατῶν.] A reminiscence of the proverb ἄξιος ὁ ἐργάτης τοῦ μισθοῦ αὐτοῦ Luke x. 7, 1 Tim. v. 18. The word is used especially of husbandmen as in Matt. ix. 37.

τῶν ἀμησάντων] It does not seem that any distinction is to be drawn between this and θερισάντων below. ἀμάω appears to mean originally 'gathering,' 'heaping together,' as of the ant Hes. Opera 778 ἴδρις σωρὸν ἀμᾶται, of 'pressing the curds together' ἀμησάμειος Od. ix. 247, of preparing a couch εὐνὴν ἐπαμήσατο Od. v. 482; hence (in compounds) of heaping up earth round the roots of a plant Xen. Oecon. xix. 11 ἐπαμήσαιο δ' ἂν μόνον, ἔφη, τὴν γῆν, ἢ καὶ σάξαις ἂν εὖ μάλα περὶ τὸ φυτόν; ib. xvii. 13 ἀντιπροσαμησάμειοι τὴν γῆν τῷ ἐψιλωμένο τὰς ῥίζας, of heaping earth on a corpse Herod. viii. 24 τάφρονς ὀρυξάμενος ἔθαψε γῆν έπαμησάρενος: in its commonest sense of reaping or mowing, getting in the harvest, the active voice is used as in Homer II. xviii. 551 ἔριθοι ἤμων δξείας δρεπάνας ἐν χερσὶν ἔχοιτες, ib. xxiv. 451 λαχνήεντ' ὄροφον (reeds) λειμωνόθεν ἀμήσαντες, Herod. vi. 28 ἀμ. σῖτον, Arist. Eq. 392 ἀμ. θέρος. The word θερίζεω is rather more common for reaping and harvesting, and is given as a synonym of ἀμῶν by Hesych. Both are used alike of the reaping of corn (ἀμ. in Lev. xxv. 11, Deut. xxiv. 19, Isa. xvii. 5) and the mowing of grass (θερ. in Ps. cxxix. 7). Both are used also in a metaphorical sense of cutting sheer off, as in Hes. Theog. 181 (of Cronos mutilating his father) ἤμησε, Soph. 1j. 239 (of Ajax) γλῶσσαν μίπτει θερίσας.

τὰς χώρας ὑμῶν.] Used here of a field, plot of ground, like χωρίον in Λets i. 18, iv. 34, xxviii. 7, and in classical writers. So we find Luke xxi. 21 οἱ ἐν ταῖς χώραις, ib. xii. 16 ἀνθρώπου τινὸς εὐφόρησεν ἡ χώρα, John iv. 35 θεώσασθε τὰς χώρας ὅτι λευκαί εἰσι πρὸς θερισμόν, Evang. Thomae c. 12 ἵνα σπείρη σῖτον εἰς τὴν χώραν αὐτῶν. In Amos iii. 9, x. 11 it stands where the A.V. has 'palaces': Josephus (Ant. vii. 8. 5)

ο άφυστερημένος άφ' ύμων.] 'Which is kept back by you,' 'comes too late from you.' The verb is only found here in N.T. In classical writers ὑστερέω and its compounds are intransitive, as also in Sir. xiv. 14 μη ἀφυστερήσης ἀπὸ ἀγαθης ημέρας 'be not late for a feast,' Heb. xii. 15 θστερών ἀπὸ τῆς χάριτος τοῦ Θεοῦ 'falling short of,' Luke xxii. 25 μή τινος ὑστερήσατε: 'did ye come short in anything l', Sir. xxvi. 19 ἀνηρ πολεμιστής ύστερων δι' ενδειων. Of the transitive use we have an example in Neh, ix. 20 τὸ μάινα σου οὐκ ἀφυστέρησας ἀπὸ στόματος αὐτῶν. The passive occurs Diod. xviii. 71 ἐστεροῦντο τῆς χρείας, Eurip. Iph. A. 1203 παιδὸς ὑστερήσομαι (4), 2 Cor. xi. 8 'when I was in want (ὑστερηθείς) I was not a burden on any man,' Heb. xi. 37 δστερούμενοι, θλιβόμενοι, Luke xv. 14, 1 Cor. viii. 8, Phil. iv. 12, Sir. xi. 11 ἔστι σπεύδων καὶ τόσω μᾶλλον έστε ρείται. Some take $d\pi \dot{\phi} = v\pi \dot{\phi}$ comparing Luke xvii, 25 $d\pi \dot{\phi} \delta \phi \kappa \iota \mu a \sigma \theta \hat{\eta} r a \iota d\pi \dot{\phi}$ της γενεάς ταύτης. In both cases I should prefer to explain it as denoting not properly the agent, but the quarter from which the action proceeds. I cannot agree with Huther, Lange and Alford in connecting it with κράζει 'cries from your coffers.' The law required the prompt payment of the workman, Deut, xxiv. 15 αὐθημερον ἀποδώσεις τον μισθον αὐτοῦ οἰκ έπιδύσεται ὁ ἥλιος ἐπ' αὐτῷ, ὅτι πένης ἐστὶ καὶ ἐν αὐτῷ ἔχει τὴν ἐλπίδα καὶ καταβοήσεται κατὰ σοῦ πρὸς Κύριον καὶ ἔσται ἐν σοὶ άμαρτία, Levit. xix. 13, Jer. xxii. 13, Mal. iii. 5, Prov. iii. 27, 28, Sir. xxxi. (xxxiv.) 22 εκχέων αίμα ὁ ἀποστερών μισθόν μισθίου, Tobit iv. 14, Hermas Vis. iii. 9 βλέπετε υμείς οι γαυρούμενοι έν τῷ πλούτῷ υμῶν μήποτε στενάξουσιν οἱ ὑστερούμενοι καὶ ὁ στεναγμὸς αὐτῶν ἀναβήσεται πρὸς τὸν Курют. Immediately afterwards he speaks of the los received into their heart.

κράζει.] The withholding of wages is one of the four sins which are said to cry to heaven. See Deut. Le., Gen. iv. 10 thy brother's blood βοῦ πρός με ἐκ τῆς γῆς, ib. xviii. 20 (cry of Sodom), Job. xvi. 18 foll., xxxi. 38, Sirae, xxxii. 17 προσενχὴ ταπεινοῦ τεφέλας διῆλθε...καὶ οὐ μὴ

είς τὰ ὧτα Κυρίου Σαβαώθ.] From Isa. v. 9 ήκούσθη γὰρ εἰς τὰ ὧτα Κυρίου Σαβαώθ. The only other passage in N.T. where the form occurs is Rom. ix. 29, a quotation from Isa. i. 9. In the LXX, it is found in Sam. i. 3, 11 'Αδωναὶ Κύριε 'Ελωὶ Σαβαώθ, ib. xv. 2, and in Isa. ii. 12, vi. 3 &c.: more often it is translated either by παντοκράτωρ, as in 2 Sam. v. 10, Apoc. iv. 8 compared with Isa. vi. 3, and in Jeremiah and the Minor Prophets, esp. Malachi; or by δυνάμεων, as in Ps. lix. 5, lxxx. 7, &c., Hermas Vis. i. 3: sometimes it is omitted, as frequently in Jeremiah. By later writers it is used as an independent name of God in the nom. or voc. sing. as in Act. Apoc. T. p. 86, Sibyll. i. 316 δ μέγας $\Sigma a\beta a\dot{\omega}\theta$. Its immediate reference is to the hosts of heaven, whether angels or the stars over which they preside; then it is used more generally to express the Divine Omnipotence, cf. Matt. xxvii. 53, Luke vii. 7, 2 Kings vi. 17, Josh. v. 14. See Cheyne's Isaiah, app. on I. 9. The use of this name is one among many indications serving to show that the epistle is addressed to Jews.

εἰσελήλυθαν.] In later Greek the regular forms of the imperf., 2nd aor., and perf. were often changed to the type of the 1st aor., as είδαν, ἔπεσαν, ἐλάβοσαν, εἴροσαν, εἴχοσαν, cf. Winer, pp. 86-91, and for examples of the perf. John xvii. 7 ἔγνωκαν, ib. xvii. 6 τετήρηκαν, Luke ix. 36 εώρακαν, Rom. xvi. 7 γέγοναν, Barnabas vii. 3 πεφανέρωκαν. Meisterhans (Gr. Att. Inser. p. 147) cites παρείληφαν from Smyrna 230 в.с., διατετέλεκαν, ἐντέτενχαν, εἴσχηκαν, πεποίηκαν, all в.с. from Laconia.

5. ἐτρυφήσατε.] Only here in N.T. The noun occurs 2 Pet. ii. 13 ήδονὴν ἡγούμενοι τὴν ἐν ἡμέρα τρυφήν, Luke vii. 25. It is used in blame here, as generally in classical authors: in good sense in Isa. lxvi. 11 ἴνα ἐκθηλάσαντες τρυφήσητε ἀπὸ εἰσόδου δόξης αὐτῆς and Neh. ix. 25. Hermas joins it with σπαταλάω in δίm. 6. 1, no doubt a reminiscence of this pas-age, τὰ πρόβατα ὡσεὶ τρυφῶντα ἦν καὶ λίαν σπαταλῶντα, which is interpreted of those who have given themselves up to the lusts of the world and are afterwards delivered over to the angel of vengeance.

έσπαταλήσατε.] Found elsewhere in N.T. only in 1 Tim. v. 6 ή δὲ σπαταλῶσα ζῶσα τέθτηκεν. It occurs also in Ezek. xvi. 49 ἐσπατάλων αἔτη καὶ αἱ θυγατέρες, Sir. xxi. 15 ἤκουσεν ὁ σπαταλῶν, Barn. x. 3 ὅταν σπαταλῶσιν λαιθάνονται τοῦ Κυρίον, but is much rarer than τρυφάω, and is never found in a good sense. The noun occurs Sir. xxvii. 13 γέλως αὐτῶν ἐν σπατάλη ἁμαρτίας, and Varro ap. Non. p. 46. 12 spatule evirarit omnes Venerivaga pneros; the compound verb κατασπαταλάω l'rov. xxix. 21, Amos vi. 4. The classical word of the same root, σπαθάω (fr. σπάθη, the batten, used in weaving for the purpose of driving home the threads of the woof), occurs in Dem. F.L. p. 354, where Shilleto says that the only example of the literal sense is the play on words in the Nubes 55 δ γ érat λ íar $\sigma\pi a\theta$ $\hat{q}s$, and that elsewhere it only means 'to squander.' In our word however the prominent idea is that of self-indulgence without distinct reference to squandering.

έθρέψατετάς καρδίας.] No other instance of this phrase is recorded. Occumenius gives πιαίνομαι as the equivalent of τρέφω, and this agrees with its use in Hom. Od. ix. 246 ήμων θρέψας γολακτός of turning milk into cheese (whence τροφαλίς = cheese). It would thus have the same force as παχύνειν τὴν καρδίαν Matt. xiii. 15 quoted from Isa. vi. 10, cf. Luke xxi. 34 προσέχετε μήποτε βαρυνθώσιν ὑμῶν αἰ καρδίαι ἐν κραιπόλη καὶ μερίμναις βιωτικαῖς, καὶ αἰφνίδιος ἐφ' ὑμῶς ἐπιστῆ ἡ ἡμέρα ἐκείνη. Λets xiv. 17, Psa. civ. 15.

έν ήμέρα σφαγής.] Psa. xliv. 22, Prov. vii. 22 ώσπερ βοθς έπε σφαγήν άγεται, Jer. xii. 3 άγνατον αὐτοὺς εἰς ἡμέραν σφαγής, ib. xxv. (xxxii.) 34 δλαλάξατε... ὅτι ἐπληρώθησαν αι ήμέραι έμων εἰς σφαγήν. For èr ἡμέρα cf. 1 Pet. ii. 12, Rom. ii. 5. The rich are represented as sinuing (1) in getting their wealth by injustice, (2) in spending it merely on their own pleasures. Their folly is shown (1) in laying up their treasures on earth, (2) especially in doing so in the very day of judgment. fattening themselves like sheep unconscious of their doom. Plummer illustrates from Jos. B. J. v. 10, 2, Josephus tells us it was all one whether the richer Jews stayed in the city during the siege or tried to escape to the Romans; they were equally destroyed in either case. Every such person was put to death on the pretext that he was preparing to desert, but in reality that the plunderers might get his possessions. . . Those whose bodies showed no signs of privation were tortured to make them reveal the treasures they were supposed to have concealed.' Even more horrible is the description in v. 13. 4.

6. κατεδικάσατε.] The word occurs Matt. xii. 7, Wisd. xi. 11, xii. 15, and in the remarkable parallel ii. 20 θανάτφ ἀσχήμονι καταδικάσωμεν αὐτόν (τὸν δίκαιον). The middle is used Job xxxiv. 29, Psa. xeiii. 21. In classical writers it is followed by a genitive of the person.

έφονεύσατε. See n. on iv. 2, and for the asyndeton Essay on Grammar. τὸν δίκαιον. Cf. Wisd. ii. 10–20, esp. καταδυναστεύσωμεν πένητα δίκαιον ... ἐνεδρεύσωμεν τὸν δικαιον ὅτι δύσχρηστος ἡμῖν ἐστιν ... ἀλαζονεύεται πατέρα Θεόν... εἰ γάρ ἐστιν ὁ δίκαιος νίὸς Θεοῦ, ἀντιλήψεται αὐτοῦ κ.τ.λ., a passage regarded by some of the Fathers and by many in later times as prophetic of Christ; by others it has been thought to be a Christian interpolation. We may compare other parts of the same book, e.g. iii. 1, iv. 7. as well as Isa. iii. 10 δήσωμεν τὸν δίκαιον ὅτι δύσχρηστος ἡμῖν ἐστίν (from which the passage in Wisdom is borrowed), ib. ch. liii., Prov. i. 11, Amos v. 12, Matt. xxiii. 35, xxvii. 19, 24, 1 John ii. 1, iii. 12, Acts iii.

14, vii. 52, xxii. 14, 1 Pet. iii. 18, Luke xxiii. 47. These passages might suggest that we have here a direct reference to the Crucifixion, but in any case δ $\delta i \kappa a \iota o s$ must be regarded as generic and not confined to one individual. Thus the words are applicable to the writer himself, who was known to all the Jews as the Just; cf. the account of his death in Euseb. H.E. ii. 23, taken from Hegesippus: $\delta \iota a \tau \dot{\gamma} r \epsilon \rho \beta o \lambda \dot{\gamma} r \tau \dot{\gamma} s \delta \iota \kappa a \iota o \sigma \dot{\tau} \gamma s \delta \iota \kappa a \iota o \delta \dot{\tau} \kappa a$ οὐκ ἀντιτάσσεται ὑμῖν.] The subject here is ὁ δίκαιος. A more regular construction would be οὐκ ἀντιτασσόμενον, but the abrupt change to direct statement is a far more graphic way of putting the fact. For the change from aor, to present we may compare the similar passage in Isa. liii. 5-7 ετραυματίσθη διὰ τὰς άμαρτίας ἡμῶν...καὶ αὐτὸς διὰ τὸ κεκακῶσθαι οὐκ ἀνοίγει τὸ στόμα ώς πρόβατον ἐπὶ σφαγὴν ἤχθη, καὶ ώς ἀμνὸς ...οὐκ ἀνοίγει τὸ στόμα. The present brings the action before our eyes and makes us dwell upon this, as the central point, in contrast with the accompanying circumstances. Others (Hofmann, Erdmann, &c.) take the verb as an impersonal passive. like ἀφεθήσεται below v. 15, meaning 'no opposition is needed,' 'you have your way'; but no instance of this use has been pointed out. It is the middle, not the active, which means to resist, as above iv. 6, and Rom. xiii. 2, Acts xviii. 6, 1 Kings xi. 34, Hos. i. 6. The only example of the passive in the LXX. is Prov. iii. 15, where it means 'shall not be compared with her,' lit. 'set against her.' The clause is made interrogative by WH., as ! by Benson, understanding δ Κύριος (ef. above iv. 6), which was actually substituted for our by Bentley (OKE for OYK), but I agree with Herder that this gives a less natural and a less pathetic sense than the reading of the MSS. For the thought see Matt. v. 39. Rom. xii. 19, 1 Pet. ii. 23; and for asyndeton the Essay on Grammar and ii. 13 above.

7. μακροθυμήσατε οὖν.] Turning to the oppressed brethren St. James urges patience upon them by the example of 'the just,' and because it is now the last time, the day of slaughter, and their cries have gone up to the Lord of Sabaoth. As γλυκύθυμος means 'sweet-tempered,' ὀξύθυμος 'quick-tempered,' so μακρόθυμος is literally 'long-tempered,' the opposite to our 'short-tempered.' In N.T. we find μακρόθυμος used of God (Rom. ii. 4. 1 Pet. iii. 20), of man (below v. 10 and 2 Cor. vi. 6, also the adv. μακροθύμως Acts xxvi. 3). The verb μακροθυμέω is used of God 2 Pet. iii. 9, of man 1 Cor. xiii. 4. In LXX. we find μακρόθυμος of God Exod. xxxiv. 6, Ps. eiii. 8: of man Prov. xiv. 29, xvi. 32, xix. 11. The word is rare in classical Greek, but μακροθυμία occurs in Menander p. 203 Mein., and μακροθυμέω in Plutarch. On the relation of μακροθυμία to ὑπομονή see Lightfoot on Col. i. 11, and 2 Tim. iii. 11.

Arist. Top. ii. 2. p. 109b ἔως τῶν ἀτόμων,¹ then by Polyb. i. 18. 2 οἰκ ἀντεξήεσαν πλὴν ἔως ἀκροβολισμοῦ, often in LXX. and N.T. The word παρουσία 'visible presence' is regularly used for the Second Coming, as below v. 8. Matt. xxiv. 3, xxxvii. 39. 1 Thess. ii. 19, iv. 15, &c., 2 Pet. iii. 4. Other expressions are ἀποκάλυψις Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ 1 Pet. i. 7, 13; ἐπιφάνεια Τἰτ. ii. 13, 2 Tim. iv. 1; ἡ ἐπιφάνεια τῆς παρουσίας, 2 Thess. ii. 9.

ίδού.] As in iii. 4, 5, directs attention to the following illustration. δ γεωργόs.] For the comparison see Sir. vi. 18 ως δ ἀροτριων καὶ δ σπείρων προσέλθε τῆ παιδεία καὶ ἀνάμενε τοὺς ἀγαθοὺς καρποὺς αὐτῆς, Psa. cxxvi. 5, 6, Matt. xiii. 30, ib. xxiv. 32, John iv. 35 foll., 1 Cor. iii. 5-9, thal. vi. 7, 2 Tim. ii. 6, Menander p. 215 Mein. δ τῶν γεωργῶν ήδονὴν ἔχαι βίος, ταῖς ἐλπίσιν τὰλγεινὰ παραμυθούμενος, Tibull. ii. 6. 21 spes alit ἐκδέχεται.] Cf. what seems like a reminiscence in Clem. Rom. ii. 20, γυμναζόμεθα τῷ νῖν βίῳ ἴνα τῷ μέλλοντι στεφανωθῶμεν οἰδεὶς τῶν δικαίων ταχὴν καρπὸν ἔλαβεν ἀλλ' ἐκδέχεται αὐτόν. He goes on to give the reason for this, εἰ γὰρ τὸν μασθὸν τῶν δικαίων ὁ Θεὸς συντόμως ἀπεδίδον, εὐθέως ἐμπορίαν ἠσκοῦμεν καὶ οὐ θεοσέβειαν. The word ἐκδ. is also found Heb. x. 13. xi. 10, 1 Cor. xvi. 11 &c.

μακροθυμεί ἐπ' αὐτῷ.] Same phrase in Luke xviii. 7, Sir. xviii. 10, xxix. 8 ἐπὶ ταπείνφ μακροθύμησον. See Winer p. 491 on the use of ἐπί with verbs denoting emotion.

 $\ell_{\omega s} \lambda \dot{\alpha} \beta_{\Pi}$.] The subject is $\kappa \alpha \rho \pi \dot{\omega} s$ (cf. above iii. 18) contained in the nearest object $\alpha \dot{v} \tau \dot{\omega}$, not (as Luther) the husbandman, nor (as Erdmann) the earth. On the omission of $\dot{\alpha}_{V}$ see on ii. 10, and cf. Winer 370, 387, πρόϊμον.] WH. read πρόϊμον here with B¹, though retaining the ω in πρωινός Apoc. ii. 28, xxii. 16: see their Appendix, p. 152. Xenophon uses it of crops Occon. xvii. 4 πολλοὶ διαφέρονται περὶ τοῦ σπόρον, πότερον ὁ πρώϊμος κράτιστος ἢ ὁ μέσος ἢ ὁ ὀψιμώτατος, and so Hofmann here understands it, as πρώϊμα is used of early figs (Jer. xxiv. 2) and ὄψιμα of wheat and rye (Exod. ix. 32). But the reference is more commonly to rain, as in Deut. xi. 14 δώσει τὸν ὑετὸν τῷ γῷ σον καθ' ὥραν πρώϊμον καὶ ὄψιμον, καὶ ἐὐσοίσεις τὸν σῖτόν σον, Hos. vi. 4 ἥξει ὁ Κύριος ὡς ὑετὸς ἡμῶν πρώϊμος καὶ ὄψιμος (perhaps referred to here), Jer. v. 24, Joel ii. 23, Zech. x. 1. The former rain comes after the sowing, the latter just before the ripening, see D. of B. under 'rain.' For the ellipsis of ὑετός see Winer p. 738 foll. and above iii. 11 τὸ γλυκὸ καὶ τὸ πικρόν.

8. στηρίξατε τὰς καρδίας.] This is more usually ascribed to the Divine working, as in 1 Thess. iii. 13 εἰς τὸ στηρίξαι ὑμῶν τὰς καρδίας, 1 Pet. v. 10, 2 Thess. ii. 17, Ps. li. 12, cf. Ps. xxvi. 14. It is the true cure for διψυχία. The noun στηριγμός occurs in the same sense 2 Pet. iii. 17.

ἥγγικεν.] 1 Pet. iv. 7 πάιτων τὸ τέλος ἥγγικεν σωφροιήσατε οὖν, Matt. iii. 2 and often ἤγγικεν ἡ βασιλεία τῶν οὐρανῶν, Luke xxi. 28, Heb. x. 25, Phil. iv. 6 ὁ Κύριος ἐγγύς· μὴ μεριμιᾶτε, 1 Cor. xvi. 22, Barn. xxi. 3 ἐγγὺς ἡ ἡμέρα ἐν ἡ συναπολεῖται πάιτα τῷ ποιηρῷ· ἐγγὺς ὁ Κύριος καὶ ὁ μισθὸς αἰτοῦ. For the general belief in the approaching coming of the Lord see 1 Cor. xv. 52, 1 Th. iv. 15, Rom. xiii. 11, 1 John ii. 18; one argument for the lateness of the second epistle of St. Peter is the doubt expressed on this subject (iii. 4) ποῦ ἐστιν ἡ ἐπαγγελία τῆς παρουσίας αὐτοῦ; 'since the fathers fell asleep all things continue as they were.'

9. μη στενάζετε κατ ἀλλήλων.] Cf. above iv. 11 μη καταλαλεῖτε and the reasons there assigned. The word denotes feeling which is internal and unexpressed, cf. Rom. viii. 23; used of secret prayer Mark

πρὸ τῶν θυρῶν ἔστηκεν.] Matt. xxiv. 33 ὅταν ἴδητε πάντα ταῦτα γινώσκετε ὅτι ἐγγύς ἐστιν ἐπὶ θύραις, Apoc. iii. 20 ἰδοὺ ἔστηκα ἐπὶ τὴν θύραν καὶ κρούω, Plut. Mor. 128 Ϝ ἔνιοι μόλις...πυρετοῦ περὶ θύρας ὅντος ἥδη, θορυβούμενοι στέλλουσιν ἑαυτούς. Even to the brethren the Coming is a warning as well as a comfort and encouragement. Winer p. 152 mentions θύραι in his list of anarthrous words.

10. ὑπόδειγμα.] John xiii. 15 ὑπόδειγμα ἔδωκα ὑμῖν ἵιτα καθὼς ἐγὼ ἐποίησα ὑμῖν καὶ ὑμεῖς ποιῆτε, 2 Pet. ii. 6, Sir. xliv. 16 Ἐνὼχ εὐηρέστησε Κυρίω, ὑπόδειγμα μετανοίας ταῖς γενεαῖς. Phrynichus says the correct form is παράδειγμα, we find however in Xen. de re eq. ii. 2 ταῦτα ὑποδείγματα ἔσται τῷ πωλοδάμνη.

κακοπαθίας.] Only here in N.T., used by Malachi i. 13. For the spelling see WH. App. p. 153 foll., and compare above ἐριθία iii. 16, ἀλαζονίαις, iv. 16. The verb occurs below v. 13. Both are classical.

τοὺς προφήτας.] How is it that no mention is made of the great example to which St. Peter refers in the words Χριστὸς ἔπαθεν ὑπὲρ ὑμῶν ὑμῶν ὑπολιμπάνων ὑπογραμμόν? Was it less familiar, less effective, less acceptable? But how then could they be Christians? Is it that Christ has already been alluded to as the Just, or that St James wishes to fix their thoughts on Him rather as the Lord of Glory than as the pattern of suffering? The example of the prophets is referred to Matt. v. 12, xxiii. 34, Acts vii. 52, esp. Heb. xi. Noah, Abraham, Jacob, Moses, Isaiah, Jeremiah are preeminent patterns of endurance. Cf. Isa. l. 5 foll., Lam. iii. 27 foll., Heb. vi. 12 μμηταὶ τῶν διὰ πίστεως καὶ μακροθυμίας κληρονομούντων τὰς ἐπαγγελίας. In Heb. xiii. 7 μνημονεύετε τῶν ἡγονμένων ὑμῶν...ὧν ἀναθεωροῦντες τὴν ἔκβασιν τῆς ἀναστροφῆς μιμεῖσθε τὴν πίστιν, it is possible that there is allusion to the life and death of St. James himself. Compare Introduction p. exxiii.

ἐλάλησαν ἐν τῷ ὀνόματι.] Honoured as they were they still had to bear persecution. Speaking 'in the name' means speaking as representatives of Him who sent them, cf. below v. 14. The simple dative is found Matt. vii. 22, Jer. xliv. (li.) 16 δ λόγος δν ἐλάλησας πρὸς ἡμᾶς δνόματι Κυριόν. This approaches the force of ἐπὶ τῷ ὀνόματι (depending on his name, i.e. through his power), which occurs both in N.T., as in Acts iv. 17, 18, and in classical writers, as Dem. Lept. 495, 7, Isae, 58, 28, and 85, 3 with Schömann's n. Diodorus xviii, 57 has γράψας ἐπιστολὴν ἐκ τοῦ τῶν βασιλέων ὀνόματος.

11. μακαρίζομεν τοὺς ὑπομείναντας.] As in i. 12, and Dan. xii. 12, cf. Matt. xxiv. 13 δ δὲ ὑπομείνας εἰς τέλος οὖτος σωθήσεται. Ύπομονή is found in connexion with μακροθυμία 2 Cor. vi. 4 ff., Col. i. 11, 2 Tim. iii. 10.

Τώβ.] Job is not an example of what we should call patience except in his first acceptance of calamity (i. 21, ii. 10). We should rather say that his complaint in ch. iii., his indignation against his friends for their want of faith in him, his agony at the thought that God had forsaken him, were symptoms of an extremely sensitive, vehcment, impatient character, which has very little either of Stoic ἀπάθεια or of Christian πραύτης, but excites our admiration by its passionate outbursts of exalted feeling. The word means however endurance, and may well be applied to the persistent trust in God shown in ch. xiii. 10, 15, xvi. 19–21, xix. 25 foll. It corresponds to ἐκαρτέρησε, used of Moses, Heb. xi. 25. For the reference to Job, cf. Tanchuma 29, 4 ap. Schoettgen H.H. 1009 foll, si pauper stat in tentatione et non recalcitrat, ille duplion arcipiet in mundo futuro. Ex cujus exemplo hoc addiscis? Exemplo Jobi qui tentatus est in hoc mundo, Deus vero duplum ipsi reddidit.

ἡκούσατε.] So in the Sermon on the Mount ἦκούσατε ὅτι ἐρρήθη. It is properly used of oral instruction in the synagogue. The aor, here must be translated, as in many other instances, by the Eng. perfect.

τὸ τέλος Κυρίου είδετε.] 'You are acquainted with the story and have seen in it how God makes all turn out for good.' Alf, reads ίδετε with AB2, translating 'see also,' which gives a very uncouth sentence, and would imply that they could have heard the story without seeing the end. On the confusion between α and ι in the MSS, see note on iii. 3 ἴδε. Ewald understands τέλος as 'das Ziel welches Gott bei Job's Leiden hatte, nämlich seine Liebe zu zeigen,' so Schegg and others, comparing 1 Tim. i. 5 τὸ τέλος τῆς παραγγελίας ἐστὶν ἀγαπή, but it is better understood (as in the Peshitto version exitum quem ei fecit dominus) of the end appointed by the Lord, viz. Job's final prosperity and the declaration of his integrity against Satan and the friends, cf. Heb. xiii. 7 ών αναθεωρούντες την εκβασιν της αναστροφής μιμείσθε την πίστιν and Job xlii. 12 δ δε Κύριος ενλόγησε τὰ έσχατα Ἰώβ η τὰ ἔμπροσθεν, 2 Cor. xi. 15 ων τὸ τέλος ἔσται κατὰ τὰ ἔργα αὐτῶν, 1 Pet. iv. 17 το τό τέλος των ἀπειθούντων; For the subjective genitive Κυρίου cf. 1 Pet. iii. 14 τὸν φόβον αὐτῶν μὴ φοβήθητε, 2 Cor. xi. 26 κανδύνοις ποταμών, ληστών, κ.τ.λ., Test. Gad. p. 685 δρου Κυρίου εκδέξασθε 'wait the limit appointed by the Lord,' so δικαιοσύνη, εἰρήνη Θεού, the older commentators and Bassett take Kuplov of Christ, contrasting what the readers had seen of his sufferings with what they had heard about Job. But this, instead of giving one perfect illustration of the result of suffering rightly borne, gives two imperfect and barely intelligible illustrations. If $\tau \dot{\epsilon} \lambda o_{\gamma}$ is supposed to refer to the Resurrection and Ascension, the main point of the comparison (suffering) is omitted: if it refers to the Crucifixion, the encouragement is wanting. Moreover if $Kv\rho iov$ is to bear this force here, we should at least have expected the article with it; and the writer in the preceding verse bid them look to the prophets as their examples, not to Christ.

 $\delta \tau \iota$.] Epexegetic of $\tau \dot{\epsilon} \lambda o s$. 'Ye have see the final result of God's working, (showing) that God is merciful.' Alford, taking it in the sense 'because,' gives a very forced explanation 'look on to the end which God gave Job; and it is well worth your while to do so, for you will

πολύσπλαχνος.] 'Sympathetic.' Occurs elsewhere only in Hermas Mand. iv. 3. 5, Sim. v. 7. 4. The equivalent πολυέλεος is found in Psa. eiii. 8, Joel ii. 13. The substantive πολυσπλαγχνία is found in Herm. Vis. i. 3, 2, ib. ii. 2. 8, iv. 2. 3, Mand. ix. 2, Justin M. Tryph § 55; πολυεύσπλαγχνος Herm. Sim. v. 4, πολυευσπλαγχεία in Sim. viii. 6. 1, see the n. on Vis. i. 3. 2, and cf. εἔσπλαγχνος Eph. iv. 32, 1 Pet. iii. 8, σπλαγχνίζομαι common in the Gospels, both derived from such phrases as σπλάγχνα έλέους Luke i. 78, σπλ. οἰκτιρμῶν Col. iii. 12, τὰ σπλάγχνα τῶν ἁγίων ἀναπαύεται Philem. 7, κλείειν τὰ σπλάγχνα 1 John iii. 17, τὰ σπλάγχνα αὐτοῦ περισσοτέρως εἰς ὑμᾶς ἐστιν 2 Cor. vii. 15, αὐτόν, τοῦτ' ἔστι τὰ ἐμὰ σπλάγχνα 'my very heart' Philem. 12, Prov. xii. 10, Isa. lxiii. 15, where Vulg. has multitudo viscerum tuorum. The sing, is used in the same sense in Test. Zab. 8 ὁ Θεὸς ἀποστέλλει τὸ σπλάγχιοι αὐτοῦ ἐπὶ τῆς γῆς καὶ ὅπου εύρη σπλάγχνα έλέους εν αὐτῷ κατοικεί, Herm. Sim. ix. 24 σπλάγχνον έχοιτες ἐπὶ πάντα ἄνθρωπον. The word is sometimes used metaphorically by elassical writers, as by Eur. Med. 220 πρὶν ἀνδρὸς σπλάγχνον ἐκμαθεῖν. but this is of disposition in a wider sense, not specially of compassion. See Vorst, p. 35 foll.

οικτίρμων. j 'Compassionate.' Occurs elsewhere in N.T. only in Luke vi. 36, found in LXX. Clem. R. i. 23 and Theocritus.

12. πρὸ πάντων δὲ μὴ ὀμνύετε. This is a reminiscence of our Lord's words (Matt. v. 34) in which, instead of the old rule οὐκ ἐπιορκήσεις, he lays down the Christian rule μὴ ὀμόσαι ὅλως...ἔστω δὲ ὁ λόγος ὑμῶν raὶ ναί, οὖ οὖ, τὸ δὲ περισσὸν τούτων ἐκ τοῦ πονηροῦ ἐστίν. The language of the O.T. itself is not by any means uniform on this subject. A Jew might defend the use of oaths by appealing to Deut. vi. 13 (bidding the people swear by the name of God). Psa. Ixiii. 11 ἐπαινεθήσεται πᾶς δ ομνύων ἐν αὐτῷ, Isa. lxv. 16, Jer. xii. 16 (though in these passages it is rather the faith in Jehovah symbolized by the oath than the oath itself which is meant); also to the practice of Elijah (1 Kings xvii. 1), Micaiah (ib. xxii. 14), and the words ascribed (ἀνθρωπικώτερον, as Athanasius says, ap. Suic. ii. p. 513) to God himself, Gen. xxii. 16, Psa. ev. 9, Isa. xl. 23, see particularly Heb. vi. 16 f., vii. 21. On the other hand we read in Sir. xxiii. 7 παιδείαν στόματος ἀκούσατε τέκνα...έν τοῖς χείλεσιν αὐτοῦ καταληφθήσεται άμαρτωλός, καὶ λοίδορος καὶ ὑπερήφανος σκανδαλισθήσονται εν αὐτοῖς. ὄρκω μὴ εθίσης τὸ στόμα σου καὶ ὀνομασία τοῦ Θεοῦ μὴ συνεθισθής...ἀνὴρ πολύορκος πλησθήσεται ἀνομίας κ.τ.λ., Prov. xxx. 9 ἵνα μὴ πενηθεὶς κλέψω καὶ ὀμόσω τὸ ὄνομα τοῦ Θεοῦ, which Delitzsch understands of blaspheming against God, eursing him as the cause of his misfortunes, Levit. xxiv. 15 ἄrθρωπος δς ἐὰν καταράσηται Θεον άμαρτίαν λήμψεται, ονομάζων δε όνομα Κυρίου θανάτω θανατούσθω. This prohibition gave rise to a variety of forms of swearing in which the name of God was not expressed, see Matt. v. 35, 36, xxiii. 16-22, Philo Spec. Legg. M. 2, p. 271 'if a man must swear, let him not swear by God, but by the earth, the sun, the moon, the stars, the heaven.' Elsewhere however Philo gives the higher view (M. 2. p. 184) κάλλιστον δὴ καὶ βιωφελέστατον καὶ ἄρμοττον λογικῆ φύσει τὸ ἀνώμοτον, οὕτως άληθεύειν έφ' έκάστου δεδιδαγμένη ώς τοὺς λόγους ὅρκους εἶναι νομίζεσθαι δεύτερος δε πλούς το εὐορκείν, ib. p. 271 οὐ πίστεως ή πολυορκία τεκμήριον άλλ' ἀπιστίας ἐστὶ παρὰ τοῖς εὖ φρονοῦσιν, and he goes on to point out the motives, such as hatred, which often lead to swearing. Similarly the Essenes are said to have forbidden all swearing, Joseph. B.J. ii. 8. $6~\pi$ âν τὸ ϸηθὲν ὑ π ' αὐτῶν ἰσχυρότερον ὅρκου, τὸ δὲ ὀμνύειν περιίστανται χεῖρόν τι της ἐπιορκίας ὑπολαμβάνοντες, so Philo M. 2. p. 458; hence Herod excused their taking the oath of allegiance (Jos. Ant. xv. 10, 4). It is difficult to reconcile with this what Josephus says of the oaths they had to take in the course of initiation (B.J. ii. 8. 7). So the ancient Greeks, see Pythag. ap. Diog. L. viii. 22 μη δμιτναι θεούς, ἀσκείν γὰρ αύτον δείν άξιόπωτον παρέχειν, Diod. Sic. x. fr. 16, Epict. Ench. 33, cf. Wetst. on Matt. v. 37, and the story told of Xenocrates (Cic. pro Balb. 5) cum jurandi causa ad aras accederet una voce omnes judices ne is juraret reclamasse.

On the teaching and practice of the early Christians see Dict. of Christ. Ant. under 'Oaths,' Nicod. Evang. p. 532 Thilo (on Pilate's adjuring certain witnesses δρκίζω ύμῶς κατὰ τῆς σωτηρίας Καίσαρος, they answer) ήμεις rόμον έχομεν μη δμινέων ότι άμαρτία έστι, Clem. Al. Strom. vii. 8. p. 861 P. esp. § 51 πεπεισμένος πάντη τον Θεον είναι πάιτοτε καὶ αίδούμειος μη άληθεύειν, ἀνάξιον τε αὐτοῦ καὶ ψεύδεσθαι γινώσκων, τῆ συνειδήσει τη θεία και τη έαυτου άρκειται μόναις...ταύτη δε οὐδε όμνυσιν ορκον ἀπαιτηθείς, Orig. on Jerem. iv. 2 (where Israel is bidden to swear righteously and truly) says τάχα πρώτον δεί δμόσαι εν άληθεία .. ἵνα μετὰ τοῦτο προκόψας τις ἄξιος γένηται τοῦ μὴ ὀμνύειν ὅλως ἀλλ΄ έχη ναὶ μὴ δεόμενον μαρτύρων τοῦ εἶναι τὸ ναί (Lomm. vol. xv. p. 166), Chrysost, Hom, viii. in Act. (ap. Suie. ii. 510) χαλινον ἐπιθωμεν τŷ γλώττης μηδείς όμιντω τον Θεόν, Photius Epist. i. 34 δ δε εξωταθής και μεγαλόψυχος ἀνήρ αἰσχυνθήσεται τοὺς λόγους ὅρκῷ πιστοὺς ἀποφαίνειι κοὶ την δια των οικείων τρόπων πίστιν ατιμάζειν, Theodoret Epit. div. decr. 16. ό μεν παλαιώς νόμος ἀπαγορεύει τὸ ψεῦδος, ὁ δέ γε νέος καὶ τὸν ὅρκον. Tertullian is inconsistent, denying the lawfulness of oaths in Idol, xi. tacro de perjurio, quando ne jurare quidem liceat, but allowing it in Apol. 33 sed et juramus sic, ut non per genios Cuesurum, ita per salutem For a further discussion see Comment below.

St. Augustine has some interesting remarks on this verse (Serm. 180). He had always, he says, shrunk from taking it as the subject of a sermon, but as it came in the lesson for the day be felt it his duty to offer some explanation. He sees no harm in oaths if it were not for the danger of committing perjury. They are sometimes required in order to induce belief of an important matter, but as they are certainly too common, it is better to keep on the safe side and avoid them altogether. What especially puzzles him is the ante omnia. 'Is swearing worse than stealing or adultery? We must regard it as a hyperbolical phrase used to add weight to the apostolic injunction.' The truer explanation of the $\pi\rho\delta$ $\pi\acute{a}\nu\tau\omega\nu$ is to limit the comparison to what immediately precedes. St. James is not thinking of offences against the moral law generally, but only of those modes of expressing impatience of which he had spoken in the preceding verses μή στεγάζετε, &c., cf. 1 Pet. iv. 8 προ πάντων την είς ξαυτούς άγαπην έκτενη έχοντας, where this precept is compared with the preceding σωφρονήσατε καὶ νήψατε, not with the first and great commandment, Thou shalt love the Lord thy God.' It must be confessed however that we might rather have expected the angry feeling of injustice to have expressed itself in curses than in oaths. The latter seem rather to betoken irreverence and a low tone as to ordinary truthfulness, which would have come more naturally in speaking of the sins of traders in iv. 13, cf. Clem. Al. Paed. 3. § 79, p. 299 P ἐπαίτιος δὲ ὅρκος περὶ πάντων τοῦ πωλουμένου ἀπέστω, and Tert. Idol. xi. For examples of hasty, irreverent oaths see 1 Sam. xxvi. 16, 2 Kings v. 20. Still the oath supplies a heightened form of expression for almost any feeling, and especially in the case of angry threats, cf. Philo M. 2. p. 271 cited above. For construction of δμνύω cf. Hos. iv. 15 μη δμνύετε Κύριον: the acc. is common also in classical writers. Other constructions are with $\kappa a \tau a'$, $\epsilon i s$, ϵv . For position of $\delta \epsilon'$ see Index s.v.

μήτε τὸν οὐρανὸν μήτε τῆν γῆν.] Both are referred to in Matt. v. 34, 35, where, and in Matt. xxiii. 16 foll., other common forms of swearing are

ἥτω.] The only examples cited of this form are 1 Cor. xvi. 22 ἤτω ἀνάθεμα, Psa. ciii. 31, 1 Macc. x. 31 Ἱερουσαλημ ήτω άγία, Aretaeus i. 2. 79, Hippocr. 8. 340 L. Clem. Al. Strom. i. 7. p. 339 P ήτω τις πιστὸς, ήτω δυνατός τις γνωσιν έξειπεῖν, ήτω σοφὸς ἐν διακρίσει λόγων, ήτω γοργὸς ἐν ἔργοις, quoted from Clem. Rom. 48 with the omission of a final clause ήτω άγνός: in Strom. vi. 8. p. 778 the same quotation occurs with ἔστω for ήτω in the first two clauses. Hermas (Vis. iii. 3 has μότον ή καρδία πρὸς τὸν Θεὸν ήτω, and it occurs in the treatise Ad Diogn. 12 ήτω σοι καρδία γιώσις, ζωὴ δὲ λόγος ἀληθής, and in Epiphanius quoted below. It was formerly read in Plato Rep. iii. 361 D, but Stallb, now reads ἔστω, Zur. ἴτω. Sterrett Epigr. J. in As. Mi. has one instance (no. 31) εί δέ τις κακουργήσει, ήτω ένοχος Ήλίω Σελήνη, and Prof. W. M. Ramsay (Zt. f. Vgl. Sprachforschung 1887, p. 386) cites another from Tiberiopolis in Phrygia κατηραμένος ήτω αὐτὸς καὶ τὰ τέκνα αὐτοῦ. He also gives several examples of the Phrygian form εἴτου. Dr. E. L. Hicks in a private letter suggests that 'it was a late form adopted through false analogy from $βηθι βήτω, στηθι στήτω. The resemblance of <math>\mathring{ω} βω στω$, ην ἔβην ἔστην, ήμεναι βήμεναι might well lead to this.

τὸ ναὶ ναὶ κὰ τὸ οῦ οῦ.] 'Let your yea be a yea and your nay a nay' (and nothing more). I prefer this, which is the ordinary way of taking it, as the simplest and plainest, but Schegg would translate it as a direct quotation from Matt. v. 37 'let yours be the "yea yea" and the

"nay nay", and so apparently WII. reading τὸ Ναὶ καὶ τὸ Οι οι. Justin M. while quoting from St. Matt. inserts the article with St. James (Apol. i. 16 D) and so Clem. Al. Str. v. 100 quotes $\tau \delta \tau \sigma \hat{v}$ Κυρίου βητόν, έστω έμων το και και οδ οδ, ib. vii. 67 δικαιοσένης ην $\epsilon \pi \iota \tau o \rho i j$ φάναι Έστω έμων τὸ ναὶ ναὶ καὶ οὂ οἔ, and Clem. Hom. xix. 2τοῖς δὲ νομίζουστιν ώς αἱ γραφαὶ διδάσκουστιν ὅτι ὁ Θεὸς ὀμινέει ἔφη, ἔστω έμων τὸ rai rai καὶ τὸ ον ον. So also Epiphanius Haer, i. p. 44 τον Κυρίου λέγουτος Μη δμινιαι μήτε του ουραιου μήτε την γην μήτε έτερον τινα ορχον, ἀλλ' ήτω ψμών τὸ ναὶ ναὶ καὶ τὸ οὐ οὔ. Resch (Zeitschr. f. kirchl. Wissenschaft u. k. Leben 1888, pp. 283—288) regards this variety as a proof that we have in them different renderings of the same Aramaic logion. Similarly he regards the όλως of Matt, and the πρὸ πάντων of James as standing for the same word in the original; and compares $\tau \delta$ raí with δ' Αμήν in Apoc. iii. 14. If Stanley and Alford are right in their explanation of 2 Cor. i. 17 (η α βουλεύομαι κατα σάρκα βουλεύομαι, τια η παρ' έμοι τὸ ται ται, και τὸ ον ον :) it has no reference to our Lord's words, and is indeed used in an opposite sense, implying either blamable inconsistency or, as others think, over-confidence and obstinacy.

ἴνα μὴ ὑπὸ κρίσιν πέσητε.] = ἵνα μὴ κρίθητε above v. 9: cf. Sir. xxix. 19 ἄμαρτωλὸς ἐμπεσεῖται εἰς κρίσεις. The judgment would be for the

13. κακοπαθεί τις.] See on κακοπαθία above v. 10. The verb occurs in N.T. only here and in the Second Epistle to Timothy ii. 3 κακοπάθησον ώς καλός στρατιώτης, ν. 9 κακοπαθώ μέχρι δεσμών, ib. iv. 5 νήφε καὶ κακο- $\pi \dot{\alpha} \theta \eta \sigma \sigma \nu$. For examples of a hypothesis contained in an indicative clause without any hypothetical particle, see above iii, 13 n., 1 Cor. vii. 18 περιτετμημένος τις έκλήθη : μὴ ἐπισπάσθω: ἐν ἀκροβνστία κέκληταί τις ; μη περιτεμνέιτθω, ib. ver. 27 δέδεσαι γυναικί: μη ζήτει λύσιν. λέλυσαι ἀπὸ γυναικός: μη ζήτει γυναίκα, ib. ver. 21 δούλος έκλήθης; μή σοι μελέτω, Sir. vii. 22 =26 : also în profane Greek Dem. Cor. p. 317, 15 ἀδικεῖ τις ἐκών ; οργή καὶ τιμωρία κατὰ τούτου - ἐξήμαρτέ τις ἄκων ; συγγυώμη ἀντὶ τῆς τιμωρίας τούτω, id. Androt. 601 ἀσθενέστερος εἶ: τοῖς ἄρχουσιν ἐφηγοῦ· φοβῆ καὶ τοῦτο: γράφον, Juv. 3. 100 rides, majore cachinno excutitur with Mayor's n., Roby Gr. § 1553, 1555. In Latin the protasis is usually regarded as a categorical assumption, and so some would take it here, and even in such forms as that in iii. 13, where the sentence begins with the interrogative pronoun. The interrogative is more in accordance with the vivacity which characterizes St. James.

εύθυμεί.] Classical, found elsewhere in N.T. only in Acts xxvii. 22, 25. ψαλλέτω.] Properly used of playing on a stringed instrument, as Luc. Paras. 17 οἴτε γὰρ αὐλεῖν ἔτι χωρὶς αὐλῶν οἴτε ψάλλειν ἄτεν λύρας. We find it also used of singing with the voice and with the heart, Eph. v. 19, 1 Cor. xiv. 15. The word is only used of sacred music in N.T., but in Sir. ix. 4 of a hired citharistria. μετὰ ψαλλούσης μὴ ἐνδελέχιζε.

11. ἀσθενεί,] 'Sick,' as in Matt. x. 8 and often both in classical

τους πρεσβυτέρους της έκκλησίας.] The same phrase ocours Acts xx. 17 (of Ephesus). The ecclesiastical constitution of the Jewish churches was developed out of the synagogue, in which, if the place was populous, there was the council of elders (Luke vii. 3) one or more of whom, entitled ἀρχισύταγωγος, like Jairus (Luke viii. 41, 49), was intrusted with the superintendence of the religious meetings, 1 cf. D. of B. under Bishop' and 'Synagogue,' also Dict. of Chr. Ant pp. 1699 foll, and Rothe Die Anfänge der christlichen Kirche, pp. 147 foll. Other references to Christian elders are Acts xi. 30 (the church at Antioch send their contributions to the elders at Jerusalem), ib. xxi. 18 (the elders were present during Paul's interview with James), 1 Pet. v. 1 πρεσβυτέρους εν ψμίν παρακαλώ ὁ συμπρεσβύτερος. Rauch contests the genuineness of this passage on the ground that the writer elsewhere speaks of διδάσκαλοι and $\sigma vray \omega y \dot{\eta}$, not as here of $\pi \rho \epsilon \sigma \beta \dot{v} \tau \epsilon \rho \sigma i$ and $\dot{\epsilon} \kappa \kappa \lambda \eta \sigma i \alpha$; but $\dot{\epsilon} \kappa \kappa$, and συγ. are convertible terms, not only in early Christian literature (for which see note on ii. 2, Schürer l.c. p. 58 and Harnack in Zt. f. wissensch. Theol. 1876, p. 104), but in the LXX. A reason for the use of $\dot{\epsilon}\kappa\kappa$, here may be that it is a general word for the permanent body of the Church, and is appropriately used for the title of its ministers (cf. Matt. xvii. 17 'if thy brother sin against thee'...εἰπὲ τῆ ἐκκλησίμ, which has much the same force as 'the elders of the Church' here), while συναγ. refers strictly to the congregation in a particular building. If James presided over the council at Jerusalem and wrote the letter preserved in the Acts, he cannot have been ignorant of $\pi \rho \epsilon \sigma \beta \dot{\nu} \tau \epsilon \rho \omega t$. We need not of course suppose the word to be used in its later hierarchical sense (see Diet. of Chr. Ant. under 'Priest'): Bede in loc. understands it simply of age and experience, tristato praecipiens ut ipse pro se oret et psallat, infirmanti antem vel corpore vel fide mandans ut, qui majorem sustinuit plagam, plurimorum se adjutorio et hoc seniorum curare meminerit; neque ad juniores minusque doctos causam suae imbecillitatis referat, ne forte quid per eos allocizionis aut consilii nocentis accipiat. It seems better however to regard it as an official title, denoting the leaders of the local Christian society (οἱ προϊστάμενοι 1 Thes. v. 12, οἱ ήγούμενοι Heb. xiii. 17), who would exercise a general superintendence over the activity of the individual members and over the use to be made of the χαρίσματα. Those who possessed these gifts in the largest measure would doubtless be themselves included in the council of elders (τὸ πρεσβυτέριον 1 Tim. iv. 14). On notification of a case of sickness, the council would, we may suppose, consider whether it was a fit case for the exercise of the χάρισμα, and would depute some of their body to attend to the case and unite in prayer for the sick person (Matt. xviii. 20). Schneckenburger is, I think, right in his view that the writer is not here commending a new remedy, but remedii semper usitati rectum usum commendare...Noluit tumultario charismatum usu ordinem, jam docendi promiscue pruritu (iii, 1) labefactatum, magisturbari.

In Clem. Hom. Ep. ad Jac. 12 it is said to be the duty of the deacons, as the eyes of the bishop, to inform the congregation of all cases of sickness, in order that they may visit the sick and give such assistance as the president may think fit. Wetst, quotes from Rabbinical writings showing that it was the custom to send for a rabbi in sickness, and that sometimes as many as four visited the sick at one time. Polycarp (ad Phil. 6) mentions visitation of the sick as a duty of the elders ἐπισκεπτόρενοι πάντας ἀσθενεῖς, see Acts xx. 35. On the treatment of the sick and the use of the physician cf. Sir. xxxviii. 1–15 esp. v. 9 ἐν ἀρρωστήματί σον...εἶξαι Κυρίφ καὶ αὐτὸς ἰάσεταί σε.

προσευξάσθωσαν ἐπ' αὐτόν.] 'Let them pray (stretching their hands) over him.' Origen (Hom. in Lev. ii. 4) comparing the ways of propitiation under the old and new covenants, quotes this verse as follows si quis autem infirmatur, rocet presbyteros ecclesiae, et imponunt ei manus, unquutes eum in nomine Domini. Et oratio fidei salvabit infirmum et, si in peccatis fuerit, remittentur ei. I do not think this implies any denial of the beneficial effect of oil in bodily sickness (as Dr. Plummer seems to hold in his note on this passage): it is merely that Origen does not care to dwell upon it, as it is unconnected with his particular subject. For the acc. cf. μη κλαίετε ἐπ' ἐμέ Luke xxiii. 28, ὀνομάζειν ἐπὶ τοὺς ἔχοιτας τὰ πτεύματα τὸ ὄτομα τοῦ Κυρίου Acts xix. 13. It often alternates with the dat. as in Zech. xii. 10 κόψοιται ἐπ' αὐτόν, ὡς ἐπ' ἀγαπητῷ, and σπλαγχνίζομαι ἐπ' αὐτόν Matt. xv. 32, Mark viii. 2, ix. 22, but ἐπ' αὐτη Luke vii. 13; so πιστεύω with acc. Acts ix. 42, but with dat. Rom. iv. 3, 1 Tim. i. 16: cf. Winer p. 508, 510.

άλείψαντες έλαίω.] Anointing the sick was customary, see D. of B. under 'Medicine' and also vol. iii. p. 395, and for instances Isa. i. 6, Luke x. 31. Herod in his last illness was recommended a bath of oil by his physicians (Jos. B.J. i. 33, 5). The medicinal properties of oil are also praised by Philo (Souri. M. i. 666), Pliny (N.H. xxiii. 34-50), and Galen (Med. Temp. bk, ii.). The latter calls it ἄριστον ἰαμάτων πάντων τοις εξηραμμένοις και ανχμώδεσι σώμασιν. Here the anointing is accompanied by a miraculous healing in answer to prayer, as we are told of the Twelve (Mark vi. 13) ήλειφον έλαίω πολλούς άρρώστους καὶ ἐθεράπενοι. Nothing is specified as to the use of oil in the promise recorded by the same Evangelist (xvi. 18) ἐπὶ ἀρρώστους χείρας ἐπιθήσουσιν καὶ καλῶς ἔξουσιν, or in Acts xxviii. 8, where St. Paul is said to have healed the father of Publius by prayer and the laying on of hands. In the church of Corinth (1 Cor. xii. 9) gifts of healing (χαρίσματα λαμάτων) are mentioned along with the other manifestations of the Spirit, but again nothing is said as to their mode of working. So too Irenaeus (ii. 32, 4) asserts that miraculous powers might still be witnessed in his day, ἄλλοι τοὺς κάμεοντας διὰ τῆς τῶν χειρῶν ἐπιθέσεως loran, but is silent as to the use of oil: Augustine in his long list of contemporary miracles (Civ. D. xxii, 8) only once mentions the use of oil. On the other hand Tertullian (ad Scap. 4) says Septimius Severus was cured with oil by the Christian Proculus; and in the Gospel of Nicodemus (c. 19) Seth, having asked for oil from the tree of life to heal his father Adam, is told that this is impossible, but that hereafter the Christ would come καὶ ἀλείψει αὐτὸν τῶ τοιούτω ἐλαίω καὶ ἀναστήσεται... καὶ τότε ἀπὸ πάσης νόσου ἰαθήσεται. Irenaeus (i. 21. 5, cf. August. Haeres. 16, Epiphan. Haeres. xxx. 2) says that the Gnostic sect of the Heracleonites anointed the dying with oil and water to protect them from hostile spirits in the other world. Chrysostom, Hom. 3 in Matt. (Migne Patrol. Gr. vol. 57, col. 384), magnifying the sanctity of Church vessels generally, says, those know how far our lamps surpass all others όσοι μετά πίστεως καὶ εὐκαίρως έλαίω χρισάμενοι νοσήματα έλυσαν, from which it is inferred that the oil for anointing the sick was taken from the lamps used in church, as is still the custom in the Greek Church, cf. Neale's Eastern Church, Introd. pp. 966, 1037, Dict. of Chr. Ant. under 'Oil' p. 1453 foll. Cassianus speaking of Abbot Paul says (Coll. vii. 26) such virtue proceeded from him, that cum de oleo quod corpore contigisset unquerentur infirmi, confestim cunctis vuletudinibus curarentur. This may be compared with Chrys. Hom. in Mart. (Patr. vol. 50. col. 664), where he recommends, as a remedy against drunkenness, the anointing of the body with oil taken from the martyrs' tombs. So the Nestorians mix oil, water and the relics of some saint or, if these are not to be procured, dust from the scene of a martyrdom, and anoint the sick with it (Neale, l.c. p. 1036 and cf. Greg. T. Mir. Mart. i, 2). On the Oil of the Cross see Dict. Chr. Ant. l.c.

From these facts it may be probably inferred that, the anointing with simple oil having ceased to be effective in healing the sick, some endeavoured to add fresh virtue to the oil either by special consecration or by combining it with the relics of saints, while others, like the followers of Heracleon and the Church of Rome in later times, supposed it to retain a purely spiritual efficacy, thus changing a hypothetical appendage to the injunction ($\kappa a \nu \dot{a} \mu a \rho \tau (as \dot{\eta} \pi \epsilon \pi o i \eta \kappa \omega s)$ into the essence of the injunction itself. There is, I believe, no recorded instance during the first eight centuries of the anointing of the sick being deferred, as having only a spiritual efficacy, to the point of death, except among the Heracleonites, whose conception of the use of the anointing, as described by Epiphanius l.c., is almost in verbal agreement with the language of a monastic rule for Extreme Unction contained in Martene (De Antiquis Ecclesiae Ritibus, vol. 5 p. 241) ut more militis uncti praeparatus ad certamen aereas possit superare potestates.

Many stories are told of cures wrought by the Unction for the Sick in D. of Christian Ant. pp. 1455 and 2004. In the Greek Church the oil, called $\epsilon i \chi \epsilon \lambda a \iota o v$, is usually consecrated by seven priests. In the West we find the oil consecrated by laymen and even by women as late as the 6th century. In the 8th century Boniface ordered all presbyters to obtain the oil of the sick from the bishop. It is curious that in the early church it was not necessary for the anointing to be done by a priest: it was frequently performed by the sick man or by his friends. It is not till A.D. 852 that the function of anointing is confined to the priest. The original intention for the healing of the body was forgotten and 'the rite came to be regarded as part of a Christiau's immediate preparation for death. Hence in the 12th century it acquired the name of nuctio extrema.... In the 13th century it was placed by schoolmen among the seven rites to which they then limited the application of the term sacrament.' D. of C. A.

The effect of this sacrament is thus defined by the Council of Trent (sessio decima quarta). After declaring (cap. 1) that it was ordained by Christ (Mark vi. 13) and promulgated in this verse by St James, the decree continues (cap. 2) res et effectus hujus sacramenti illis verbis explicator: Et oratio fidei salvabit informum et alleviabit eum Dominus: et si in peccatis sit, dimittentur ci. Res etenim haec est gratiu Spiritus sancti, cujus Unctio delicta, si quae sint adhue expianda, ac peccati reliquias abstergit et aegroti animam alleviat et confirmat...et sanitatem corporis interdum, ubi saluti animae expedierit, consequitur. The dogma is clenched by the following anathemas: Can. I. Si quis dixerit extremam Unctionem non esse vere et proprie Sacramentum a Christa Domino nostro institutum et a beato Jacobo Apostolo promulgatum, sed ritum tanium acceptum a patribus aut figmentum humanum ; anathema sit. Can. 11. Si quis direrit sacram infirmorum Unctionem non conferre gratiam nec remittere peccata nec alleviure infirmos; sed jam cessasse, quasi olim fuerit gratia curationum; anathema sit. in Canons III, and IV, those are anothermatized who think that the Roman rite is opposed to the teaching of St. James and may be safely neglected by Christians, as well as those who think that the Elders mentioned by St. James are other than episcopally ordained priests. The Roman Catechism adds that it is only to be administered to those who are dangerously ill, that the oil is to be applied to those parts of the body in quibus potissimum sentiendi vis eminet, eyes, ears, nose, month, hands, feet, renes etiam veluti voluptatis et libidinis sedes. Pastors must instruct their people that by this sacrament venial sins are remitted, the soul is freed from the weaknesses contracted by sin, and filled with courage, hope, and joy. If bodily health does not now follow it, this is to be ascribed to the want of faith of those who administer or receive the sacrament. In the form of Visitation for the Sick, in the English Prayer-book of 1549, anointing was allowed if the sick person desired it: 'then shall the priest anoint him on the forchead or breast only, making the sign of the Cross and saying thus? (a prayer for the inward anointing of the soul and for a restoration of bodily health).

As regards the Greek Church Dr. King says (Rites and Ceremonies of the Greek Church in Russia, 1772, p. 305) 'though the Greek Church reckons it (the anointing of the sick) in the number of her mysteries, yet it is certain there is nothing throughout the whole office which implies that it should be administered only to persons periculose aegrotantibus et mortis periculo imminente, as is prescribed in the Roman Church. On the contrary it may . . . be used in any illness as a pious and charitable work, but not of necessity; and thence 1 presume the doctors of this church maintain that this mystery is not obligatory or necessary to all persons.'

It is curious that there is no note on this verse in Theophylact, Euth. Zig., or Cramer's Catena. Occumenius on ἀλείψαντες έλαίω refers simply to the miracles in the Gospels without alluding to any sacramental use of oil in his own day: τοῦτο καὶ τοῦ Κυρίου ἔτι τοῖς άνθρώποις συναναστρεφομένου οἱ ἀπόστολοι ἐποίουν ἀλείφοντες τοὺς ἀσθενοῦντας ἐλαίω καὶ ἰώμενοι. Bede in like manner speaks only of the use of oil for healing bodily disease: hoc et apostolos fecisse in Evangelio legimus, et nunc Ecclesiae consuetudo tenel ut infirmi oleo consecrato ungantur a presbyteris et oratione comitante sanentur. Nec solum presbyteris, sed, ut Innocentius papa scribit, etiam omnibus Christianis uti licet eodem oleo in sua aut suorum necessitate unaendo, quod tamen oleum non nisi ab episcopis licet confici. Nam quod ait, 'Oleo in nomine Domini,' significat oleum consecratum in nomine Domini: vel certe quia etiam, cum ungunt infirmum, nomen Domini super eum invocare debent. Luther's opponent, Cardinal Cajetan, in his comment on this verse denies that it has any reference to the Sacrament of Extreme Unction: Textus non dicit 'Infirmatur quis ad mortem?' sed absolute 'Infirmatur quis?' et effectum dicit infirmis alleviationem, et de remissione peccatorum non nisi conditionaliter loquitur. . . . Praeter hoc quod Jacobus ad unum aegrum multos presbyteros tum orantes tum ungentes mandat vocari, quod ab extrema unctione alienum est.

ἐν τῷ ὁνόματι τοῦ Κυρίου.] In v. 10 we had the same phrase used of the prophets only with the omission of the article before K. It is probable however that the words τ. K., which are bracketed by WH., are merely an explanatory gloss, as they are not found in B and are variously given in the other MSS. In that case τὸ ὅνομα will be used here as in 3 John 7 (where see Westcott), Acts v. 41 (where αὐτοῦ or some other specifying genitive is added in the inferior MSS.), Lev. xxiv. 11, cf. above ii. 7, and the similar use of ἡ ὁδός in Acts ix. 2, xix. 9, &c.¹ All cures were wrought in the name of Jesus Christ; cf. Mark xvi. 17 ἐν τῷ ὀνόματί μου...ἐπὶ ἀρρώστους χεῦρας ἐπιθήσουσιν, Luke x. 17, John xiv. 13, Acts iii. 6, 16, iv. 10, xvi. 18, xix. 13 (of the exorcists).

15. ἡ εὐχὴ τῆs πίστεωs.] Prayer proceeding from faith, cf. i. 6.

σώσει τὸν κάμνοντα.] 'Shall restore to health him who is ailing,' cf. Mark v. 23 (lay thy hands upon her) ὅπως σωθης καὶ ζήσεται, ib. vi. 56, iii. 4, viii. 35, &c.: so in classical writers, Lys. p. 107 'Ανδοκίδης ἔχει τὰ μήνυτρα σώσας τὴν αὐτοῦ ψυχὴν ἐτέρων διὰ ταῦτα ἀποθανόντων: hence the word σῶστρον was used of a doctor's fee. This is the only passage in the N.T. in which κάμνω is found in this sense, though it is common enough in classical writers, who also use the aor, and perf. participles of the dead. I see no ground for the distinction made by some between ἀσθενῶ and κάμνω.

έγερει αὐτὸν ὁ Κύριος.] Cf. Mark i. 31 προσελθὸν ἤγειρεν αὐτήν, Matt. ix. 5, Psa. xli. 8–10. Dean Plumptre compares Acts ix. 34 'J. C. maketh thee whole.' The R.C. interpreters understand it of spiritual comfort.

κάν.] Not to be taken in its more usual sense 'even if,' as Alford and Huther. The latter denies that it can ever have the copulative force, but see Mark xvi. 18 κἂν θανάσιμόν τι πίωσιν, Luke xiii. 9 κἂν μὲν ποιήση καρπόν, Demosth. άμαρτίας ἢ πεποιηκώς.] We might ask why St. James puts the commission of sin hypothetically after he had distinctly said πολλὰ πταίομεν ἄπαιτες. But the clause is probably to be taken as meaning 'if he has committed sins which have given rise to this sickness,' cf. Matt. ix. 2–5 (the healing of the paralytic), John v. 14, ib. ix. 2, 1 Cor. xi. 30, Deut. xxviii. 22, 27, Psa. xxxviii., Job xxxiii. 19 foll. There is a Jewish saying 'No sick man recovers from sickness till his sins have been forgiven' (Nedarim f. 41a cited by Schneckenburger). Lange compares Isa. xxxiii. 24 'The inhabitant shall not say I am sick: the people that dwell therein shall be forgiven their iniquity.'

άφεθήσεται αὐτῷ.] Impersonal: 'forgiveness shall be extended to him,' cf. 16. έξομολογείσθε οθν άλλήλοις τὰς άμαρτίας.] Instead of τὰς άμαρτίας, read by WII. Ti. Treg. with the best MSS., Alford reads τὰ παραπτώματα, found in K L Pesh., Theophylact, Oecumenius, and Origen in Proverb. (Mai Nov. Bib. vii. 51) ὁ Ἰάκωβος φησὶν, ἀλλήλοις έξαγγέλλετε τὰ παραπτώματα ὑμῶν ὅπως ἰαθῆτε. It may perhaps receive some slight support from the Didache 4. 14 έν έκκλησία έξομολογήση τὰ παραπτώματά σου καὶ οὐ προσελεύση ἐπὶ προσευχήν σου ἐν συνειδήσει ποιηρά, ib. xiv. Ι κατά κυριακήν...κλάσατε άρτον καὶ εὐχαριστήσατε προεξομολογησάμενοι τὰ παραπτώματα ύμων όπως καθαρά ή θυσία ύμων ή πας δε έχων την αμφιβολίαν μετα του έταίρου αὐτου μη συνελθέτω υμίν έως ου διαλλαγώσιν, ἵνα μη κοινωθή ή θυσία ύμῶν, Clem. Ερ. ad Jac. 15 έξομολογούμενοι τὰ παραπτώματα καὶ τὰ έξ ἐπιθυμιῶν ἀτάκτων σωρευθέντα κακά, ἄτινα τῷ ὁμολογῆσαι ὥσπερ ἀπεμέσαντες κουφίζεσθε της νόσου, προσιέμενοι την έκ της ἐπιμελείας σωτήριον υγίειαν. The latter reading seems to agree better with what appears to be the sense of the passage, if we understand it as referring to our Lord's words reported in Matt. v. 23 foll. and vi. 14: the sins of the sick man will only be forgiven if he forgives others who have injured him, and if he makes amends for any injuries he may himself have St. James expands the precept out of its narrow applicatien 'let the sick man confess his trespasses to those against whom he has trespassed and let them in turn confess any trespasses which they may have committed against him, and join in prayer for him, in order that he may be healed of his bodily ailment,' into the general rule 'confess your trespasses to each other, and pray for each other at all times, that ye may be healed of all your diseases whether of body or soul.' The use of the word ov implies the close connexion of the present with the preceding clause ('since prayer has such power, pray for each other; and, that you may be able to do this better, confess your faults to each other').

If we read άμαρτίας it is more natural to understand the confession to refer not to trespass towards man, but to sins towards God (though ἀμαρτάνω is also used of the former, as in Matt. xviii. 15, 21). Such confession (ἐξομολόγησις)¹ was made to John the Baptist (Matt. iii. 6) and by the penitents at Ephesus to Paul (Acts xix. 18), but for long after the apostolic age it seems to have been unusual, except in the case of converts or penitents who were under ecclesiastical censure. For others the words of Augustine held good (Conf. x. 3) quid mihi est cum hominibus ut audiant confessiones meus, quasi ipsi sanaturi sint omnes languores meos, and the even stronger words of Chrysostom (Hom. xx. in Gen. p. 175) quoted in Bingham xviii. 3, and in Dict. of Ch. Ant. under Exomologesis. We need not however suppose any reference here to a formal confession of sin, but merely to such mutual confidences as would give a right direction to the prayers offered by one for the other: so Augustine, commenting on this verse (Tract. 58 in Johan. quoted by Bingham, I.c.), and Bede quotidiana leviaque peccata alterutrum coaequalibus confiteamur eorumque quotidiana credamus oratione salvari; though the latter adds gravioris leprae immunditiam juxta legem sacerdoti pandamus atque ad ejus arbitrium qualiter et quanto tempore jusserit purificure curemus. The Greek commentators have no note here. Origen (Hom. ii. in Ps. xxxvii., Lomm. xii. p. 266) points out the use of such confession and at the same time recommends caution in choosing the person to whom confession should be made. He does not limit the selection to presbyters, though they would naturally be thought of, and are generally specified by later writers on the subject.

Some of the Romish controversialists, as Bellarmine, cited by Hooker vi. 5, maintain that St. James in this passage alludes to auricular confession, but Cajetan again speaks the language of common sense: nec hic est sermo de confessione sacramentali (ut patet ex eo quod dicit 'confitemini invicem'; sacramentalis enim confessio non fit invicem, sed sacerdotibus tantum), sed de confessione qua mutuo fatemur nos peccatores ut oretur pro nobis, et de confessione hinc et inde erratorum pro mutua placatione et reconciliatione. The practice of auricular confession was not made generally obligatory even by the Church of Rome till the Lateran Council of 1215 under Innocent III., which ordered that every adult person should confess to the priest at least once in the year. In all other Churches it is still optional. Mutual confession was an early custom in monasteries,¹ and the Moravian Societies (which Wesley took as the pattern for the Methodist Classes) used to meet two or three times a week 'to confess their faults one to another and to pray for one another that they might be healed.' σπως ἰαθῆτε. For the use of ἐᾶσθαι in reference to the diseases of the soul cf. Heb. xii. 13, 1 Pet. ii. 24, Matt. xiii. 15, Deut. xxx. 3 ἰάσεται Κύριος τὰς ἄμαρτίας σου, 2 Chron. xxx. 20, 1sa. vi. 10, lvii. 19, Sir. xxviii. 3, &c., Herm. Sim. 9. 23, also the remarkable parallel in Arrian Anab. vii. 29 μότη γὰρ ἔμοιγε δοκεῖ ἔασις άμαρτίας ὁμολογεῖν τε άμαρτάνοντα καὶ δῆλον εἶναι ἐπ' αὐτῷ μεταγιγνώσκοντα. If the word is understood literally of bodily disease, as by De Wette and Huther, the connexion of thought is perhaps closer, keeping to the subject of the miraculous cure, which is spoken of in the preceding verse and seems to be referred to in the words which follow, dwelling on the miraculous

πολὺ ἰσχύει δίησις δικαίου.] Compare the saying of R. Jehuda poenitentia potest aliquid sed preces possunt omnia, and the promise in Matt. xvii. 20, 21, ib. xxi. 21, 22, Mark xi. 22–26, Phil. iv. 13, 1 John v. 14–16, Psa. cxlv. 18, 19, Prov. xv. 29, Sir. xxxii. 7, Clem. R. 21 μαθέτωσαν τί ταπεινοφροσύνη παρὰ Θεῷ ἰσχύει. For δικαίον cf. v. 6: he is one who by faith fulfils the νόμος ἐλευθερίας. Bp. Wordsworth (Stud. Bib. I. 128) and Rönsch (Das Neue Test. Tertullians) hold that Tertullian never quotes from St. James; but is there not a reference to this passage in the De Oratione c. 28? We find there 1st an allusion to the prayer of Elijah retro oratio imbrium utilia prohibebat, and 2nd to the muchavailing 'prayer of righteousness': nunc vero oratio justitiae omnem iram Dei avertit, and its employment defunctorum animas de ipso mortis itinere vocare, debiles reformare, aegros remediare . . . Eadem diluit delicta, tentationes repellit: cf. above ver. 15 and below ver. 20, also i. 5, 6.

ενεργουμένη.] Is this passive or middle? Of the former we have examples I Esdr. ii. 19 ἐνεργεῖται τὰ κατὰ τὸν ναόν 'the works of the temple are being pushed on,' Joseph. N.T., see Alf. and Lightfoot on Gal. v. 6 πίστις δι' ἀγάπης ἐνεργουμένη. The latter says 'the Spirit of God or the Spirit of Evil' ένεργεί [cf. 1 Cor. xii. 6 διαιρέσεις ένεργημάτων είσι και δ αύτος Θέος δ ένεργῶν τὰ πάντα ἐν πᾶσιν, Gal. ii. 8 δ ἐνεργήσας Πέτρω... ἐνήρ γησεν καὶ έμοί, Ερh. i. 20 κατὰ τὴν ἐνέργειαν ἡν ἐνήργηκεν ἐν Χριστῷ, Phil. ii. 13; and (of Satan) Eph. ii. 2 τοῦ πνεύματος τοῦ νῦν ἐνεργοῦντος ἐν τοις νίοις της ἀπειθείας, Justin M. Tryph. 78 (the Magi were carried away) πρὸς πάσας κακὰς πράξεις τὰς ἐνεργουμένας ὑπὸ τοῦ δαιμονίου], 'the human agent or the human mind ἐνεργεῖται (middle).' It is however not quite correct to say that the human agent ένεργείται: the word in the N.T. is always used of some principle or power at work, whether in the soul or elsewhere, e.g. Rom. vii. 5 ὅτε ημεν έν τη σαρκὶ, τὰ παθήματα τῶν άμαρτιῶν τὰ διὰ τοῦ νόμου ἐνηργεῖτο έν τοις μέλεσιν ήμων, 2 Cor. i. 6 ύπερ της ύμων παρακλήσεως της ένεργουμένης έν ὑπομονη, ib. iv. 12 ὁ θάνατος ἐν ἡμῖν ἐνεργεῖται, Eph. iii. 20 (to Him that can do exceeding abundantly) κατὰ τὴν δύναμιν τὴν ἐνεργουμένην ἐν ἡμῶν, Col. i. 29 ἀγωνιζόμενος κατὰ τὴν ἐνέργειαν αὐτοῦ (i.e. Christ) τὴν ἐνεργουμένην ἐν ἐμοὶ ἐν δυνάμει, 1 Thess. ii. 13 (λόγος Θεοῦ) ἐνεργεῖται ἐν ὑμίν τοῖς πιστεύουσιν, 2 Thess. ii. 7 το μυστήριον ήδη ένεργείται της ανομίας. Again the active is not exclusively confined in the Hellenistic writers to the immediate action of a good or evil spirit, cf. Prov. xxi. 6 δ ἐνεργῶν θησαυρίσματα γλώσση ψευδεί μάταια διώκει 'he that getteth treasures by falsehood,' Matt. xiv. 2 αὶ δυνάμεις ἐνεργοῦσιν ἐν αὐτῷ (with which compare ἐνεργουμένην used in Eph. iii. 20, Col. i. 29), Wisd. xv. 11 ήγνόησε τὸν ἐμπνέυσαντα αὐτῷ ψυχὴν ἐνεργοῦσαν, Prov. xxxi. 12 ἡ γυνὴ ένεργει τῷ ἀνδρὶ εἰς ἀγαθὰ πάντα τὸν βίον, cf. Jos. Β. J. iv. 6 τὰ δοχθέντα τάχιον καὶ της ἐπινοίας ἐνήργουν ('put in practice'). When we compare such instances of the transitive use of the act, as Gal. iii, 5 δ ένεργων δυνάμεις έν ήμιν, Phil. ii. 13 δ ένεργων έν ύμιν τὸ ένεργείν, Eph. i. 20 ην (ἐνέργειαν) ἐνήργησεν ἐν Χριστῷ, and the use of the passive noun ἐνέργημα, we are tempted to regard as passive the forms which are usually assumed to be middle, and so to get the force here of prayer actuated or inspired by the Spirit, as in Rom. viii. 26 (so Bull 'fervore atque impetu quodam divino acta et incitata,' Benson 'inspired,' Macknight 'inwrought prayer,' Bassett, 'when energized by the Spirit of God'). In like manner Chrysostom on Rom. vii. 5 οὖκ εἶπεν, ἃ ἐνήργει τὰ μέλη, άλλ' ἃ ἐνηργεῖτο ἐν τοῖς μέλεσιν, δεικνὺς ἐτέρωθεν οὖσαν τῆς πονηρίας τὴν άρχην, άπὸ τῶν ἐνεργούντων λογισμῶν, οὐκ ἀπὸ τῶν ἐνεργουμένων μελῶν. Cf. Bull Examen Censurae (vol. v. p. 22 foll.) 'ἐνεργεῖσθαι fere semper id significat quod Latine dicimus agi, agitari, exerceri, effici': he supports this by Tertullian's renderings of Rom. vii. 5 and Gal. v. 6, and by Chrys. on 2 Cor. i. 6 ή σωτηρία ύμων τότε ένεργείται μειζόνως, τοῦτ' έστι δείκνυται, αὔξεται, ἐπιτείνεται, ὅταν ὑπομονὴν ἔχη...οὖκ εἶπεν, τῆς ἐνεργούσης, ἀλλὰ τῆς ένεργουμένης, δεικνὺς ὅτι ἡ χάρις πολλὰ εἰσέφερεν ἐιεργοῦσα ἐν αὐτοῖς. On the whole I am not satisfied that any undoubted instance of the middle can be adduced either from profane or sacred writers. If however we are to regard this as a true middle, it would seem that the distinction between it and the active here is analogous to that between $\tau\iota\theta\acute{\epsilon}ra\iota$ and $\tau\acute{\epsilon}\theta\acute{\epsilon}\sigma\theta a\iota$ $r\acute{\epsilon}\mu$ or. God acting by his own sovereign will $\acute{\epsilon}r\acute{\epsilon}\rho\gamma\acute{\epsilon}\iota$, the principle of good which he engrafts into our nature $\acute{\epsilon}r\acute{\epsilon}\rho\gamma\acute{\epsilon}\iota\tau a\iota$.

I turn now to the explanations offered by previous editors. old Greek commentators give it a passive sense, Occumenius and Theophylact interpreting it much as Matthaei's scholiast συνεργουμένη ύπὸ τῆς τοῦ δεομένου γνώμης καὶ πράξεως 'assisted by (actualized by) the intention and the action of the sick man,' and not far otherwise Enthymius and Cramer's Catena 'strengthened and heartened by the penitence and obedience of the sick,' which they illustrate by the case of Samuel forbidden to pray for Saul, of Jeremiah forbidden to They also give a second interpretation, according pray for the Jews. to which the just man's prayer is energized by his own life of active godliness (την δέησιν ένεργον καὶ ζώσαν τοις τρόποις των έντολων ψυχουμένην ... ισχυρών και πάντα δυναμένην ο δίκαιος έχει την δέησιν ένεργουμένην ταις έντολαίς): cf. Theodoret's note on the next verse ταῦτα τοῦ θείου πνεύματος ένεργοῦντος εἴρηκεν ὁ προφήτης in the same Catena. Michaelis takes it in the way suggested above preces agitante Spiritu effusae. Wette, Hofmann, Huther, Alford take it 'the prayer of a righteous man avails much in its working,' but this gives a very poor force to a word which ought from its position to be emphatic. Erdmann translates 'viel vermag das Gebet des Gerechten indem es sieh wirksam erweist,' which appears to me either tautological or unmeaning: prayer is no prayer at all, if it is not real. Bp. Wordsworth seems to strain the force of the preposition (which cannot be other in the verb than in adi, erepyos, from which it is derived) when he translates 'working inwardly,' 'inwardly energizing in devotion and love, so as to produce external effects in obedience.' Most commentators take it with Luther 'wenn es ernstlich ist' (so Dean Scott 'when urgent,' he compares Col. iv. 12 πάντοτε άγωνιζόμενος ὑπὲρ ὑμῶν ἐν ταῖς προσευχαῖς); though some ignore the participial force and make it simply equivalent to ἐνεργής (Heb. iv. 12, Philem. 6) or ἐκτενής (Luke xxii. 44, Acts xii. 5), as Schneckenburger, Kern, Bouman, Wiesinger. I would not deny that ἐνεργουμένη may be used in the sense of ἐνεργὴς οὖσα, but no precise parallel is cited. Pallad. Laus. 1083 B and Eustath. on Odyss. δ. p. 197, 50 are eited for the phrase $\pi \rho o \sigma \epsilon v \chi \dot{\eta}$ $\dot{\epsilon} v \epsilon \rho \gamma \dot{\eta} s$. Lange tries to combine the form of the passive and middle, 'die mit der vollen Hingebung an den göttlichen Impuls zugleich gesetzt volle Spannung des betenden Geistes.'

17. ἄνθρωπος ἢν ὁμοιοπαθὴς ἡμῖν.] The classical word δμ. is used by Paul of himself and Barnabas to the people of Lystra, by the Fathers of Christ (e.g. Euseb. H.E. i. 2, cf. Heb. iv. 15), in 4 Macc. xii. 13 to show the atrocity of persecution οἐκ ἢδέσθης ἄνθρωπος ὧν τοὺς ὁμοιοπαθεῖς καὶ ἐκ τῶν αὐτῶν γεγονότας στοιχείων γλωττοτομῆσαι. It was necessary for the writer to insist on the resemblance between us and Elijah because of the exaggerated ideas entertained of the latter at that time (see Sir. xlviii. 1–12): 'Such potency of prayer is not out of our reach, for Elijah possessed it, though he gave evidence of weakness similar to ours.' Compare Peter's words to Cornelius, Acts x. 26, and Anton. vi. 19 μὴ εἴ τι αὐτῷ σοι δυσκαταπόνητον τοῦτο ἀνθρώπῳ ἀδύνατον ὑπολαμβάνειν ἀλλ' εἴ τι ἀνθρώπῳ δυνατὸν καὶ οἰκεῖον τοῦτο καὶ σεαντῷ ἐφικτὸν νόμιζε with Gataker's n., also Calvin's n. here, ideo minus proficimus ex sanctorum exemplo quia ipsos fingimus semideos vel herous quibus peculiare fuit cum Deo commercium: ita ex eo quod auditi sunt nihil fiduciae concipimus. For the use of the copulative conjunction (ἦν...καὶ) instead of the participle (ὢν) see Winer 542–544 and above iii. 5 μικρὸν μέλος ἐστὶ καὶ κ.τ.λ.

προσευχή προσηύξατο.] For examples of similar reduplication see Luke xxii. 15 ἐπιθυμία ἐπεθύμησα, John iii. 29 χαρά χαίρει, Acts iv. 17 ἀπειλή ἀπειλησώμεθα, ib. v. 28 παραγγελία παρηγγείλαμεν, ib. xxiii. 14 ἀναθέματι άνεθεματίσαμεν έαυτούς, 2 Pet. iii. 3 έν έμπαιγμονή έμπαικται, Deut. vii. 26 προσοχθίσματι προσοχθιείς και βδελύγματι βδελύξη. Jos. xxiv. 10 εύλογίαις εὐλόγησεν, Isa. xxx. 19 κλαυθμώ ἔκλαυσεν, Judith vi. 4 ἀπωλεία ἀπολοῦνται, Vorst p. 626, Winer p. 584, Lobeck Paral. 523 foll., where analogous instances are cited from classical writers, in some of which the dative is added for precision, as in Dem. 1002. 12 γάμφ γεγαμηκώς qui rite confecit nuptias, but in others has an intensive force, as Plato Symp. 195 φεύγειν φυγή, compare such phrases as κακὸς κακῶς, and in Lat. occidione occidere, curriculo currere. I cannot understand what should lead De Wette, Hofmann, Huther, Erdmann to deny this intensive force which belongs to reduplication in all languages. The last translates 'in einem Gebet betete er,' and says by this is expressed 'nicht der Charakter der Ernstlichkeit und Kräftigkeit, sondern die That des Gebets,' and so, I suppose, Alford 'he prayed with prayer (made it a special matter of prayer, not prayed earnestly. This adoption of the Hebrew idiom merely brings out more forcibly the idea of the verb),' though his meaning is far from clear. A similar intensive phrase is formed by the use of the participle, as in 1 Sam. xxvi. 25 ποιῶν ποιήσεις, δυνάμενος δυνήση, Ps. exviii. 18 παιδεύων ἐπαίδευσε, Jer. iii. 22 ἐπιστραφῆτε ἐπιστρέφοντες, Lam. i. 2 κλαίουσα εκλαυσεν. Here the strengthened phrase illustrates what the writer intended by the word ἐνεργουμένη.

τοῦ μὴ βρέξαι.] The genitive of the infinitive is used to express the purpose of an action in classical writers, as in Thuc. i. 4 τὸ ληστικὸν καθήρει ἐκ τῆς θαλάσσης τοῦ τὰς προσόδους μᾶλλον ἰέναι αὐτῷ, but the use is much extended in the Hellenistic Greek. Thus it is found not only after verbs immediately expressive of design, as here and in Isa. v. 6 ταῖς νεφέλαις ἐντελοῦμαι τοῦ μὴ βρέξαι εἰς αὐτὸν ὑετόν, and in the Byzantine writers, as Malalas xiv. 357 ἢτήσατο ἡ Αὔγονοτα τὸν βασιλέα τοῦ κατελθεῖν εἰς τοὺς ἀγίους τόπους (cf. Thuc. viii. 40 ἀγγελίαν ἔπεμπον ἐπὶ τὰς ναῦς τοῦ ξυμπαρακομισθῆναι); but it is used also to denote the consequence of an action, as in Acts iii. 12 ὡς πεποιηκόσι τοῦ περιπατεῖν αὐτόν, and even for the simple infinitive, when it stands as subject of the sentence, as in Luke xvii. 1 ἀνειδεκτόν ἐστιν τοῦ τὰ σκάιδαλα μὴ ἐλθεῖν, Acts x. 25 ἐγένετο τοῦ εἰσελθεῖν τὸν Πέτρον, see Winer, p. 408 foll. The verb βρέχει is here used, like ὕει, without a subject, as in Luke xvii. 29: we have the personal use in Matt. v. 45 (ὁ Θεὸς) βρέχει ἐπὶ

As regards the facts referred to, we hear nothing of this prayer in the O.T. unless the expression 'before whom I stand' (in 1 Kings xvii. 1) may be interpreted to mean 'stand in prayer' as in Jer. xv. 1, cf. Gen. xviii. 22, xix. 17. The duration of the drought here given is the same as that in Luke iv. 25, which is also found in the Rabbinical tractate Jalkut Simeoni quoted by Schegg after Surenhusius; but in 1 Kings xviii. 1 it is said 'after many days the word of the Lord came to Elijah in the third year saying... I will send rain upon the earth.' We are not told from what point the third year is dated; if it is from the commencement of his sojourn with the widow, as is generally supposed; and if the expression 'end of the days' in 1 Kings xvii. 7 ('it came to pass at the end of the days that the brook dried up') is to be understood, as in other places, of a year or more (see Keil in loc. and on xviii. 1, who compares Lev. xxv. 29, 1 Sam. xxvii. 7, Jud. xvii. 10); then the cessation of the drought would take place in the fourth year from its commencement, and Jewish tradition would naturally fix on the middle of the fourth year, as giving the half of the symbolical number, which is so prominent in the prophecies of Daniel and in Apoc. xi. 3-9 (where it is said that the two witnesses 'have power to shut the heaven "να μη ύετος βρέχη during the days of their prophecy, i.e. $1260 \text{ days} = 3\frac{1}{2} \text{ years}$). Others suppose the calculation to include the dry season preceding the first failure of the regular periodical rains. It is simply a question as to the origin of a Jewish tradition which undoubtedly existed at the time of the Christian era, and which was probably excogitated by the early rabbinical interpreters. In the fourth book of Esdras (vii. 39) Elijah is cited as an example of intercession pro his qui pluviam acceperant et pro mortuo ut viveret.

ἐπὶ τῆς γῆς.] Merely filling up the idea of ἔβρεξεν as in Gen. vii. 12

έγένετο ὁ ὑετὸς ἐπὶ τῆς γῆς, 1 Kings xvii. 7, see above v. 5.

18. πάλιν προσηύξατο.] As shown by his attitude (1 Kings xviii. 42),

δ οὐρανὸς ὑετὸν έδωκεν.] The phrase ὑ. διδ. is used of God 1 Kings xviii. 1, 1 Sam. xii. 17, Acts xiv. 17 οὐρανόθεν ὑετοὺς διδούς. Josephus (Ant. xiv. 2. 1) tells a similar anecdote of Onias (B.C. 64) δίκαιος ἀνὴρ καὶ θεοφιλὴς ὃς ἀνομβρίας ποτὲ οὔσης ηὕξατο τῷ Θεῷ...καὶ ὁ Θεὸς ὖσεν, and Epiphanius (p. 1046) of James himself, ποτὲ ἀβροχίας γενομένης ἐπῆρε τὰς χεῖρας εἰς οὐρανὸν καὶ προσηύξατο καὶ εὐθὺς ὁ οὐρανὸς ἔδωκεν ὑετόν. Clem. Al. (Ντομ. vi. 3, p. 753 P.) cites the legendary story of Aeacus (Paus. ii. 28, p. 179) to the same effect, as being derived from the narrative of the miraculous rain sent in answer to Samuel's prayer (1 Sam. xii. 17). Compare also the story of the Legio Fulminatrix given by Euseb. H.E. v. 5.

έβλάστησεν.] The aor. is here transitive, as in Gen. i. 11 βλαστησάτω ή γη βοτάνην, Sir. xxiv. 17 έγω ως ἄμπελος έβλάστησα χάριν, more usually intr., as Matt. xiii. 26, Heb. ix. 4. In later Greek the present also is sometimes found in a transitive sense, see Lobeck on Aj. 1. 869.

19. ἐάν τις ἐν ὑμῖν πλανηθῆ.] Returns to the subject of ver. 16. For ἐν ὑμῖν see above v. 13. There seems no reason to give, as Alf., to πλανηθῆ here the passive force which it bears in Apoc. xviii. 23 ἐν τῆ φαρμακείμ σου ἐπλανήθησαν πάντα τὰ ἔθνη. The passive aor. is used with a middle force in classical writers, as in the LXX. Deut. xxii. 1, Ps. cxix. 176, Ezek. xxxiv. 4, and probably in Luke xxi. 8 and 2 Pet. ii. 15 καταλείποντες εὐθεῖαν δδὸν ἐπλανήθησαν. It makes no difference as to the admonition given, whether the wanderer goes astray of his own will, or is led astray by others. See above i. 16 and $\pi \lambda \acute{a} \nu \eta$ δδοῦ just below.

άπὸ τῆς ἀληθείας.] See above i. 18, John viii. 32, 1 John i. 6, iii. 18, 19, 3 John 4 (I have no greater joy than to hear that my children) èv άληθεία περιπατοῦσιν, Wisd. v. 6 ἐπλανήθημεν ἀπὸ ὁδοῦ ἀληθείας, Psa. exix.

ἐπιστρέψη τις.] Found with the same force Mal. ii. 6 πολλοὺς ἐπέστρεψεν ἀπὸ ἀδικίας, Luke i. 16, 17, Acts xxvi. 18, Psa. lxxix. 3, Lam. v. 21, Polyc. ad Phil. 6 οι πρεσβύτεροι εἴσπλαγχνοι...ἐπιστρέφοντες τὰ ἀποπεπλανημένα, Apost. Const. ii. 6 τους πεπλανημένους επιστρέφετε, Plut. Mor. 21 (Menander) ἐπέστρεψε καὶ περιέσπασε πρὸς τὸ καλὸν ἡμᾶς. In Matt. xiii. 15 and elsewhere it is used intransitively, much as the passive in 1 Pet. ii. 25 ἦτε γὰρ ὡς πρόβατα πλανώμενοι, ἀλλ' ἐπεστράφητε νῦν ἐπὶ τὸν ποιμένα καὶ ἐπίσκοπον τῶν ψυχῶν ὑμῶν. The following τις shows that this duty was not confined to the elders. As it belongs to the brethren in common to pray for each other and hear each other's confessions, so here they are in common exhorted to bring back wanderers to the faith.

20. γινώσκετε.] So WH. with Cod. B. The majority of the best MSS. have γινωσκέτω, keeping the regular construction. The use of the plural after τις ἐν ὑμῖν may be paralleled by μὴ δῶτε after τις ἐξ ὑμῶν above (ii. 16). On the other hand it is possible that an original γινωσκέτω may have been altered to suit ἀδελφοί μου. Reading γινώσκετε, Ι should be inclined to treat it as an indicative (as in Matt. xxiv. 32, John xv. 18), calling attention to the well known fact (like ἴστε in i. 19) that conversion involves salvation, rather than introducing it as something of which they had to be informed. Or, if we follow the other interpretation, and consider that we have here an appeal to enlightened self-interest, it may perhaps be thought more worthy of St. James to mention this as a fact in which all are interested, than to insist on it as a motive for the individual who takes in hand to convert ό ἐπιστρέψας άμαρτωλόν.] Why is this repeated? Some say in order to emphasize the fact, but a more obvious reason would be that it is in order to avoid ambiguity, especially if γινώσκετε is read. Without these words the subject of σώσει would naturally be understood to be 'one

έκ πλάνης όδοῦ αὐτοῦ.] Comparing Wisd. xii. 24 τῶν πλάνης όδῶν μακρότερον ἐπλανήθησαν longius aberrabant quam erroris viae ferebant ('even further than error itself') we might be disposed to make $\pi\lambda\acute{a}\nu\eta$ s depend on ὁδοῦ, translating 'his erring path'; but the usual order of words, when the metaphorical boos is joined with a gen. of quality, is to put δδός first, as in Psa. cxix. 29, 30 δδόν ἀδικίας ἀπόστησον ἀπ' ἐμοῦ...δδόν ἀληθείας ἡρετισάμην, Prov. iv. 24 δδ. εἰρήνης, ib. viii. 20 δδ. δικαιοσύτης. ib. v. 6 δδ. ζωῆς, ib. xii. 19, xv. 25, xvii. 24, Job xxiv. 13, Isa. xxvi. 7. lix. 8. It seems better therefore to translate 'from the error of his way.' In classical prose the article would have been used both before πλάνης and δδοῦ. The second article is omitted according to Hellenistic usage because the noun is defined by the genitive of the personal pronoun which follows it (cf. ψυχὴν αὐτοῦ just below, καρδίαν αὐτοῦ, γλῶσσαν αὐτοῦ above i. 26 and Winer, p. 155 foll.), and the first article is omitted by the 'law of correlation' to suit the anarthrous δδοῦ, as in Matt. xix. 28 ἐπὶ θρόνου δόξης αὐτοῦ, cf. Winer, p. 175 and A. Buttmann, p. 104. We find the same opposition of πλάνη to ἀλήθεια in 1 John iv. 6 ἐκ τούτου γινώσκομεν τὸ πνεῦμα τῆς ἀληθείας καὶ τὸ πνεῦμα τῆς πλάνης.

σώσει ψυχήν αὐτοῦ. If this is the correct reading, the second αὐτοῦ may either be understood of the subject of the verb (= Lat. suus, cf. Winer, p. 188 foll, A. Buttmann, p. 97 foll., Meisterhans Gr. Att. Insch. p. 122), or, more probably, it repeats the preceding αὐτοῦ, in which case it may have been intentionally inserted to mark that this clause refers to the sinner exclusively, allowing a wider scope to the next elause; but in B. avrov comes after $\theta a v a \tau o v^{-1}$ instead of after $\psi v \chi \dot{\eta} v$, suggesting that it may have arisen from a dittography. The future σώσει is easier to understand if $\psi v \chi \dot{\eta} v$ refers to the subject of the 'He who converts a sinner will be himself saved' reads naturally enough, the one action not being either identical or contemporaneous with the other; or again 'He who converts a sinner has thereby saved a soul'; but there is something of incongruity in the words 'He who turns a sinner from the error of his way will save that sinner's soul from death, and will cover a multitude of sins.' The object of the writer is to stimulate and encourage the work of conversion to the utmost, but by the use of the future instead of the present 2 or past he puts off the issue of the work to an indefinite distance of time. [Bengel explains it olim constabit, it will be seen on the day of judgment that he has saved a soul from death.] Otherwise salvation is regarded and spoken of by the writers of the N.T. sometimes as a fact of the present, sometimes of the future. See n. on next clause. For σ , ψ , cf. i. 21, and for the absence of the article the last note and 1 Pet. iii. 3 δφθαλμοὶ Κυριου ἐπὶ δικαίωνς καὶ ὧτα αἰτοῦ εἰς δέησιν αἰτῶν, particularly with the word $\psi v \chi \dot{\eta}$, Heb. x. 39 ϵis $\pi \epsilon \rho \iota \pi o i \eta \sigma \iota v \psi v \chi \dot{\eta} s$, 1 Pet. i. 9 $\kappa o \rho \iota \zeta \dot{\rho} \rho \epsilon v s$ τὸ τέλος της πίστεως, σωτηρίαν ψυχῶν, 2 Pet. ii. 8 ψυχὴν δικαίαν ἀνόμοις έργοις εβασάνιζεν. The saving of the soul is attributed to the human instrument in Rom, xi. 14, 1 Cor. vii. 16, 1 Tim. iv. 16, &c.

καλύψει πλήθος άμαρτιῶν.] A proverbial expression, which occurs also in 1 Pet. iv. 8 ἀγάπη καλύπτει πλήθος άμαρτιῶν, and which Resch regards as one of the unwritten words of Christ, quoting Clem. Al. Paed. iii. 12. p. 306, where it is introduced by φησί, which he corrigit sibinet ipsi per hoc vitae eaciestis gandia amptioca conquirit.

2 The Pesh, has the present 'covers the multitude of his sins,' so too Corb, and understands of Christ; but as the immediately preceding references in Clement are to the O.T. it is more natural to supply Θεός or ή γραφή. It is however ascribed to Christ in Didascalia ii. 3 λέγει Κύριος ἀγάπη καλύπτει κ.τ.λ. The original is found in Prov. x. 12 (Heb. not LXX.) 'hate stirreth up strife, but love covereth all transgressions,' cf. Psa. lxxxv. 2 ἀφηκας τὰς ἀνομίας τῷ λαῷ σου, ἐκάλυψας πάσας τὰς άμαρτίας αὐτῶν, ib. xxxi. 1, 2, Nehem. iv. 5 μη καλύψης ἐπὶ ἀνομίαν, Ep. ad Diogn. c. 9 τί γὰρ ἄλλο τὰς ἁμαρτίας ἡμῶν ἡδυνήθη καλύψαι ἢ εκείνου (Χριστοῦ) δικαιοσύνη; 1 There can be no doubt about the meaning of the verse in Proverbs, 'love refuses to see faults': are we to attach the same meaning to it in St. Peter, where it follows a warning to 'be sober and watch unto prayer'? 'Above all things being fervent in your love amongst yourselves, for $(\tilde{o}_{\tau i})$ love covereth a multitude of sins.' Love is recommended because it covers (hides) sin. This seems to imply more than the mere shutting the eye of man to sin: it implies that sin, including the sin of him who loves, at least as much as that of him who is loved.2 is thus cancelled, blotted out even in the sight of God, cf. Luke vii. 47 ἀφέωνται αἱ ἀμαρτίαι αὐτῆς αἱ πολλαί, ότι ήγάπησεν πολύ, and above ii. 13 κατακαυχάται έλεος κρίσεως. other Hebrew writings we find love narrowed to ἐλεημοσύνη (·pity' rather than 'almsgiving'), yet with the same promise attached to it, Sir. iii. 28 έλεημοσύνη έξιλάσεται άμαρτίας, Dan. iv. 24 τὰς άμαρτίας σου έν έλεημοσύναις λύτρωσαι καὶ τὰς άδικίας έν οἰκτιρμοῖς πειήτων, Tobit iv. 10 έλεημοσύνη έκ θανάτου ρύεται καὶ οὐκ έᾳ εἰσελθεῖν εἰς τὸ σκότος, δῶρον γὰρ ἀγαθόν ἐστιν ἐλεημοσύνη, ib. xii. 9 ἐλεημοσύνη ἐκ θανάτου ρύεται καὶ αὐτὴ ἀποκαθαίρει πᾶσαν άμαρτίαν, οἱ ποιοῦντες ἐλεημοσύνην χορτασθήσονται ζωη̂s. Or love is narrowed to the keeping of the fifth commandment, as in Sir. iii. 3 ὁ τιμῶν πατέρα ἐξιλάσεται άμαρτίας, ib. v. 14 ἐλεημοσύνη πατρὸς οὐκ ἐπιλησθήσεται καὶ ἀντὶ ἁμαρτιῶν προσανοικοδομηθήσεταί σοι 'pity for a father shall not be forgotten, it shall be imputed to thee for good against thy sins.' Similarly Clem. R. ii. 16 καλον έλεημοσύνη ώς μετάνοια άμαρτίας κρείσσων νηστεία προσευχής, έλεημοσύνη δε άμφοτέρων, then he quotes the verse from St. Peter, and continues ελεημοσύνη γὰρ κούφισμα άμαρτίας γίνεται, which leaves no doubt as to the way in which he understood it. 3 Dr. Lightfoot in his note says 'in James v. 20 the expression seems still to be used of the sins of others, but in the sense of burying them from the sight of God, wiping them out by the repentance of the sinner.' He cites Tertull. Scorp. 6 as understanding the words to mean 'atones for a multitude of one's own sins,' and so Clem. Al. Quis div. sal. § 38, p. 956 ἐὰν ταύτην (τὴν ἀγάπην) ἐμβάληταί τις τῆ ψυχῆ, δύναται, κἂν ἐν ἁμαρτήμασιν ή γεγεννημένος καν πολλά των κεκωλυμένων είργασμένος, αὐξήσας την άγάπην και μετάνοιαν καθαράν λαβών, άναμαχέσασθαι τα έπταισμένα, ib. Strom. i. p. 423; in Strom. ii. p. 463 $\dot{a}\gamma\dot{a}\pi\eta$ is understood of God's forgiving love. There is a remarkable passage of Origen (Hom. in Lev.

ii. § 4) referred to in the same note, in which the different remissiones peccatorum in the Gospel are enumerated: (1) baptism, (2) martyrdom, (3) almsgiving (which he supports by Luke xi. 41), (4) forgiveness of others (supported by Matt. vi. 14), (5) converting a sinner, ita enim dicit scriptura divina, quia qui converti fecerit peccatorem ab errore viae suae salvat animam a morte et cooperit multitudinem peccatorum, (6) love (supported by Luke vii. 47 and 1 Pet. iv. 8); and much in the same way Cassian (Coll. xx. 8) enumerating the various ways in which sin may be blotted out, besides simple penitence, mentions the conversion of others by our exhortations. Other passages in which almsgiving is referred to as efficacious for the saving of the soul are Didachė iv. 6 ἐὰν ἔχης διὰ τῶν χειρῶν σου δώσεις λύτρωσιν ἀμαρτιῶν σου, Constit. Apost. vii. 12 δός, ἄνα ἐργάση εἰς λύτρωσιν ἀμαρτιῶν σου ἐλεημοσύναις γὰρ καὶ πίστεσιν ἀποκαθαίρονται ἀμαρτίαι, so Barn. xix. 10. Luke xvi. 9 is naturally understood in the same sense.

It appears to me that these passages leave little doubt as to the ordinary way of thinking among Jewish writers on this subject, both before and after the Christian era; and if we further consider the use of the future tense ($\sigma \omega \sigma \epsilon \iota$, $\kappa \alpha \lambda i \psi \epsilon \iota$) touched on in the previous note, and the fact that, if the saving of the soul and the hiding of sins have reference to the sinner, they do not essentially differ from what is already involved in the protasis, which states the conversion of the sinner from the error of his way, it might seem that we ought to interpret the verse as Origen does in the passage just quoted. So Euth, Zig. and Cramer's Catena (in loc.) τοιοῦτον τὸ ἐν τῷ Ἰερεμία εἰρημένον, 'καὶ ἐὰν ἐξαγάγης τίμιον ἀπὸ ἀναξίου ὡς στόμα μου ἔσται.' ἐάν φησιν, εἶς τῶν ἀπολλυμένων διὰ τὴν κακίαν εὐτελῶν σωθή διὰ τῶν σῶν λόγων, ἔντιμος ἔση διὰ τοῦτο παρ' ἐμοί. We may also compare Dan, xii. 3 'they that be wise shall shine as the brightness of the firmament, and they that turn many to righteousness as the stars for ever and ever, 1 Tim. iv. 16 ἔπεχε σεαντῷ καὶ τῆ διδασκαλία· τοῦτο γὰρ ποιῶν καὶ σεαντὸν σώσεις καὶ τοὺς ἀκούοντάς σου, 1 Cor. iii. 14, 15, Pirké Aboth v. 26, 27 'whosoever makes the many righteous, sin prevails not over him, and whosoever makes the many to sin, they grant him not the faculty to repent,' Clem. Al. Str. vii. p. 52 δ γνωστικός, ιδίαν σωτηρίαν ήγούμενος την των πέλας ωφέλειαν, αγαλμα έμψυχον εἰκότως αν τοῦ Κυρίου λέγοιτο, Const. Ap. ii. 18 τοὺς ὑπνώδεις καὶ παρειμένους έπίστρεφε, ὑποστήριζε, παρακάλει, θεράπενε, ἐπιστάμενος ἡλίκον μισθὸν ἔχεις ταθτα έπιτελων, ώσπερ οθν και κίνδυνον έαν αμελήσης τούτων. For a discussion as to how far this is in accordance with the general teaching of the N.T., see comment below. St. Paul's words in 1 Cor. ix. 16 may perhaps be compared, 'woe is me if I preach not the Gospel,' and the punishment of 'the wicked and slothful servant,' Matt. xxv. 26. It may on the other hand be urged that it is at any rate a lower motive than that proposed in Matt. xviii. 15 ἐὰν ἀμαρτήση ὁ ἀδελφός σου, ὕπαγε έλεγξον αὐτὸν μεταξύ σοῦ καὶ αὐτοῦ μόνου εάν σου ἀκούση, ἐκέρδησας τὸν άδελφόν σου, and that such phrases as $\pi\lambda\hat{\eta}\theta$ ος άμαρτιῶν and σώσει ψυχ $\hat{\eta}\nu$ έκ θανάτον naturally remind us of the preceding άμαρτωλός, and of the άμαρτία which brings forth death in i. 15, but are unsuitable if used of one whom St. James would be likely to commission to call others to repentance; cf. Luke xxii. 32 σύ ποτε ἐπιστρέψας στήρισον τοὺς ἀδελφούς σου, Psa. l. 16, li. 13, Matt. xv. 14: on the other hand the psalmist who had 'preached righteousness in the great congregation' speaks of his iniquities as more numerous than the hairs of his head (Psa. xl. 9, 12). We need not however press the force of a proverbial phrase, nor indeed would there be any objection to make $\pi \lambda \hat{\eta} \theta_{0s}$ cover the sins of both parties, as Bede does: qui peccatorem ab errore convertit, et ejus peccata per hanc conversionem ab aspectu judicis abscondit, et sua quoque in quibuscunque offendit errata ab intuitu ejus qui omnia videt proximum curando contegit; similarly Bengel and Schneckenburger. 1 Cf. Clem. Rom. ii. 19 (I exhort you to give heed to the things that are written) ίνα καὶ ξαυτούς σώσητε καὶ τὸν ἀναγινώσκοντα ἐν ύμιν μισθον γὰρ αἰτῶ ύμᾶς τὸ μετανοήσαι έξ όλης καρδίας, σωτηρίαν έαυτοῖς καὶ ζωὴν διδόντας, ib. 17 (if we are commanded to convert even the heathen, how unpardonable would it be to allow the ruin of a soul which has once known the true God!) συλλάβωμεν οὖν έαυτοῖς καὶ τοὺς ἀσθενοῦντας ἀνάγειν ἐπὶ τὸ ἀγαθόν, ὅπως σωθῶμεν ἄπαντες καὶ έπιστρέψωμεν άλλήλους καὶ νουθετήσωμεν, ib. 15 (he that obeys) καὶ έαυτον σώσει καὶ ἐμὲ τὸν συμβουλεύσαντα: μισθὸς γὰρ οὐκ ἔστιν μικρὸς πλανωμένην ψυχήν και απολλυμένην αποστρέψαι είς το σωθήναι. that case we might suppose the phrase σώσει ψυχὴν ἐκ θανάτου to be parenthetical and refer to the converted person, the future being attracted from the main verb.

¹ Hammond, Hofmann and Schegg following Erasmus and the R.C. commentators generally understand the sins covered to be those of the preacher of rightcousness; most modern commentators take them to be the sins of the person converted. Calvin's note deserves to be quoted: Cibum dure esurienti et sitienti potum, ridemus quanti Christus aestimet: atqui multo pretiosior est illi animae salus quam corporis vita. Cavendum ergo ne nostra ignavia percant redemptue a Christo animae, quarum salutem quodam modo in manu nostra ponit Deus. Non quod salutem conferamus ipsi; sed quod Deus ministerio nostro liberat ac servat, quod alioqui videbatur eritio propinquam... Alludit potius ad dictum Salomonis quam pro testimonio citat... Qui oderunt, libidine sese mutuo infamandi ardent: qui amant, libenter inter se condonant multa: caritas ergo peccata sepelti apud homines. Jacobus hic altius quiddam doct, nempe quod deleantur coram Deo, ac si diceret, Salomon hune caritatis fructum praedicat, quod tegat peccata: atqui nulla melior tegendi ratio, quam ubi in totum coram Deo abolentur.

COMMENT

I. 1—15. Paraphrase.

Rejoice when you meet with trials (temptations) of whatever kind, knowing that these are designed to prove your faith and fix in you the habit of patient endurance, with a view to your attainment of the perfect Christian character. To make the right use of trial there is need of wisdom, which must be sought by prayer from Him who gives freely without upbraiding for past neglect or ingratitude. But prayer, to be effectual, must be the utterance of a fixed purpose which is in no danger of being diverted by changing moods or circumstances. No answer will be given to the prayer of the doubleminded and unstable. The true attitude of the Christian is exultation in the glorious truth which has been revealed to him. If poor, he should exult in the new dignity thereby imparted to human nature; if rich, in the fact that he has been taught the emptiness of earthly wealth and station and has learnt to aim at heavenly riches; since the rich man of this world is doomed to pass away like the flower of the field.] Remember however that it is not trial in itself, but the patient endurance of trial to which the blessing is promised. He whose faith has been thus approved shall receive the crown of life promised to all that love God. Let no one say when he is tempted (tried), that God is the author of his temptation, for God, as he is ineapable of being tempted, so He tempts none. Each man is tempted by his own lust (impulse), by which he is carried away from right and allured to wrong: lust, when it has conceived, becomes the parent of sin; sin when matured brings forth death.

ΤRIAL, ΤΕΜΡΤΑΤΙΟΝ-πειρασμός, πειράζεσθαι.

We have here the first attempt at an analysis of Temptation from the Christian point of view. It may be compared with that given by Bishop Butler in his Analogy. Speaking of what constitutes our trial both with regard to the present and to a future world, the latter says (Part I. ch. 4): 'It must be somewhat either in our external circumstances or in our nature. For on the one hand persons may be betrayed into wrong behaviour upon surprise, or overcome upon any other yery singular and extraordinary external occasions, who would otherwise have preserved their character of prudence and of virtue: in which cases every one, in speaking of the wrong behaviour of these persons, would impute it to such external circumstances. And on the other hand men who have contracted habits of vice and folly of any kind, or have some particular passions in excess, will seek opportunities, and, as it were, go out of their way to gratify themselves in these respects at the expense of their wisdom and their virtue; led to it, as every one would say, not by external temptations, but by such habits and passions. . . . However, as, when we say, men are misled by external circumstances of temptation, it cannot but be understood, that there is somewhat within themselves to render those circumstances temptations, or to render them susceptible of impressions from them; so, when we say, they are misled by passions, it is always supposed that there are occasions, circumstances, and objects exciting these passions, and affording means for gratifying them. And therefore temptations from within and from without coincide and mutually imply each other.

Again, speaking of moral improvement by discipline, he says (ch. 5): 'Mankind and perhaps all finite creatures from the very constitution of their nature, before habits of virtue, are deficient and in danger of deviating from what is right, and therefore stand in need of virtuous habits for a security against this danger. For, together with the general principle of moral understanding, we have in our inward frame various affections towards particular external objects. These affections are naturally, and of right, subject to the government of the moral principle as to the occasions on which they may be gratified, as to the times, degrees, and manner, in which the objects of them may be pursued; but then the principle of virtue can neither excite them nor prevent their being excited. On the contrary, they are naturally felt when the objects of them are present to the mind, not only before all consideration whether they can be obtained by lawful means, but after it is found they cannot. For the natural objects of affection continue so; the necessaries, conveniences, and pleasures of life remain naturally desirable, though they cannot be obtained innocently, nay, though they cannot possibly be obtained at all. And when the objects of any affection whatever cannot be obtained without unlawful means, but may be obtained by them; such affection,—though its being excited, and its continuing some time in the mind, be as innocent as it is natural and necessary,—yet cannot but be conceived to have a tendency to incline persons to venture upon such unlawful means; and therefore must be conceived as putting them in some danger of it. . . . This tendency in some one particular propension may be increased by the greater frequency of occasions naturally exciting it, than of occasions exciting others. The least voluntary indulgence in forbidden circumstances, though but in thought, will increase this wrong tendency, and may increase it further till, peculiar conjunctures perhaps conspiring, it becomes effect, and danger of deviating from right ends in actual deviation from it; a danger necessarily arising from the very nature of propension, and which therefore could not have been prevented. though it might have been escaped or got innocently through. . . . It is impossible to say how much even the first full overt act of irregularity might disorder the inward constitution, unsettle the adjustments and alter the proportions which formed it, and in which the uprightness of its make consisted; but repetition of irregularities would produce habits. And thus the constitution would be spoiled, and creatures made upright become corrupt and depraved in their settled character, proportionably to their repeated irregularities in occasional acts. But on the contrary these creatures might have improved and raised themselves to an higher and more secure state of virtue by the contrary behaviour; by steadily following the moral principle supposed to be one part of their nature, and thus withstanding that unavoidable danger of defection, which necessarily arose from propension, the other part of it. For, by thus preserving their integrity for some time, their danger would lessen; since propensions by being inured to submit would do it more easily and of course; and their security against this lessening danger would increase; since the moral principle would gain additional strength by exercise: both which things are implied in the notion of virtuous habits. Thus then vicious indulgence is not only criminal in itself, but also depraves the inward constitution and character. And virtuous self-government is not only right in itself but also improves the inward constitution and character; and may improve it to such a degree that, though we should suppose it impossible for particular affections to be absolutely coincident with the moral principle, and consequently should allow that such creatures, as have been above supposed, would for ever remain defectible, yet their danger of actually deviating from right may be almost infinitely lessened, and they fully fortified against what remains of it,'

Butler then proceeds to argue that 'this world is peculiarly fit to be a state of discipline to such as will set themselves to mend and improve. For the various temptations with which we are surrounded,—our experience of the deceits of wickedness, having been in many instances led wrong ourselves, the great viciousness of the world, the infinite disorders consequent upon it, our being made acquainted with pain and sorrow either from our own feeling of it or from the sight of it in others,—these things, though some of them may indeed produce wrong effects upon our minds, yet when duly reflected upon, have, all of them, a direct tendency to bring us to a settled moderation and reasonableness of temper, the contrary both to thoughtless levity, and also to that unrestrained self-will and violent bent to follow present inclination, which may be observed in undisciplined minds. . . . Allurements to what is wrong, difficulties in the discharge of our duty, our not being able to act an uniform right part without some thought and care, and the opportunities which we have, or imagine we have, of avoiding what we dislike or obtaining what we desire by unlawful means, when we either cannot do it at all, or at least not so easily, by lawful ones,— these things, i.e. the snares and temptations of vice, are what render the present world peculiarly fit to be a state of discipline to those who will preserve their integrity; because they render being upon our guard, resolution, and the denial of our passions, necessary in order to that end. And the exercise of such particular recollection, intention of mind, and self-government, in the practice of virtue, has from the make of our nature a peculiar tendency to form habits of virtue, as implying not only a real, but also a more continued, and a more intense exercise of the virtuous principle, or a more constant and stronger effort of virtue exerted into act. Thus suppose a person to know himself to be in particular danger for some time of doing anything wrong, which yet he fully resolves not to do; continued recollection and keeping upon his guard, in order to make good his resolution, is a continued exerting of that act of virtue in a high degree, which need have been, and perhaps would have been, only instantaneous and weak, had the temptation been so.'

Butler's distinction between the two factors in temptation, the inner nature and the external circumstances, will help us to understand the contrast apparent in the text between the trial $(\pi \epsilon i \rho a \sigma \mu \acute{o}s)$ in which the Christian is to rejoice, and the temptation (πειράζεσθαι) which must not be ascribed to God, since from Him only good proceeds. latter is the inner temptation, the former the outer trial, and not even that in its full extent. External circumstances may try us either by suggestions of pain, of which the great example is our Lord's agony in the garden, or by suggestions of pleasure, exemplified in our Lord's temptation in the wilderness, i.e. either by intimidating or by alluring. It is the former, the trial by pain, which St. James has in his mind in the 2nd verse, and by which those to whom he writes were assailed. They were mainly poor and were suffering persecution and oppression from the rich, as we gather from ii. 6, v. 7 foll. They were tempted to murmur against God and to speak evil of men. St James (below v. 7-11) urges upon them the duty of patience, by showing how necessary it is in common life, by appealing to the example of the prophets, and pointing to the near approach of the judgment day, in which murmuring and impatience would be punished and the blessedness of patient suffering be revealed. Here he bids them rejoice in these trying circumstances, because, if patiently endured, they would confirm their faith and fit them to receive the reward of eternal life promised to all that love God. It is the same motive which is appealed to in the Sermon on the Mount (Matt. v. 4, 10-12) and in 1 Pet. i. 6 foll. Another reason for rejoicing in affliction is given in Heb. xii. 6: it is a mark of God's love towards those whom he chastises. In Acts v. 41 we read that the Apostles, when scourged, rejoiced that they were counted worthy to suffer shame for the name of Christ. St. Peter speaks of the partaking of Christ's sufferings as a ground for rejoicing (1 Pet. iv. 13). St. Paul rejoiced in the thought that he was allowed to supplement the afflictions of Christ for the sake of the Church (Col. i. 24).

The stages of Christian growth according to St. James are as follows:

Trial tests faith; the testing of faith produces endurance; endurance, if it is continued till it attains its end, builds up the perfectly matured Christian character, thoroughly furnished to all good works. For an example of this testing of the faith, patiently endured to the end, we may take the Syro-Phoenician woman. It is manifest what strength of endurance, what unshaken trust in God, she must have gained through that one victory. The converse is equally true. Where there has been little trial, there has been little to test and exercise faith, little experience of ourselves, little to instil the habit of submission and resignation, little to lead us away from earth and up to heaven. The old Greek proverb, $\pi a\theta \dot{\eta} \mu a \tau a \mu a\theta \dot{\eta} \mu a \tau a$, is adopted by the writer of the epistle to the Hebrews, and applied where, without his sanction we might have hardly ventured to apply it, in the words $\kappa a (\pi \epsilon \rho) \dot{\sigma} \nu \dot{\nu} (\sigma) \dot{\sigma} (\sigma$

But is not St. James' exhortation to rejoice in temptation opposed to the petition 'Lead us not into temptation,' where the same word πειρασμός is used in the same signification of external temptation? In the Lord's Prayer however there is no reason to limit its application to pain-temptation any more than in 1 Tim. vi. 9 (they that will be rich fall into temptation and a snare). In the next place one who is conscious of his own weakness may without inconsistency pray that he may be kept out of temptation, and yet, when he is brought into it through no fault of his own but by God's providential ordering, he may feel such trust in Divine support as to rejoice in an opportunity of proving his faithful-St. James speaks to those who are in the midst of trial, and in danger of losing heart in consequence: it was evidently not God's will that they should be kept out of temptation, but that they should turn it to good account; and this is what St. James encourages them to do. Another way of explaining the difficulty is by a comparison of the words in Matt. xxvi. 41 προσεύχεσθε ίνα μη εἰσέλθητε εἰς πειρασμόν. The disciples to whom Jesus addressed these words were already in a situation of extreme trial, and he does not propose to remove them from it: they are all to be sifted. Still they are to pray that they may not enter into temptation, i.e. that they may be so supported by Divine grace as to go through trial without its being able to tempt them. do not think however that there is any need to limit in this way the meaning of the petition in the Lord's Prayer.

Allowing that St. James is here thinking mainly of trial arising out of affliction, how far may we generalize his 'divers temptations'? Beside pain, sorrow, fear, it will certainly embrace all sorts of perplexities, difficulties, disappointments, anxieties, anything which troubles or annoys us. We are naturally inclined to wish them out of the way, to think of them simply as interfering with the comfort and happiness which we esteem our right. The true way is to regard them as part of our schooling for heaven, helping to form the cross which has to be borne by every Christian. We should strengthen ourselves to bear them by looking away from the pain to the good involved in it, if rightly borne. But may we also rejoice in such tests of faith as are not naturally grievous, in wealth, power, beauty, popularity, prosperity of every kind? Or, yet further, in the external temptations of the world, the flesh and the devil? Might Joseph rejoice in the temptation which came to him in Potiphar's house, as well as in that which came when his brothers sold him to the Midianites! The conquest of pleasure-temptation is not less useful as experience; it is not less strengthening to the character than the conquest over pain: to have gone through such temptation unscathed may be the ground of deepest thankfulness afterwards; but the spiritual joy in resisting temptation of which St. James speaks is not compatible with any lower feeling of pleasure. To have suddenly come into possession of a great fortune is a cause of rejoicing to the natural man: one who has a right sense of the responsibilities and the snares of wealth may shrink from it as a burden, or enter upon it with much anxiety and self-suspicion; but we can hardly conceive of such an inversion of the ordinary view as to allow of a man's rejoicing in wealth St. James just below speaks of the poor as rejoicing in his dignity, but the rich in his humiliation as a Christian—both equally difficult and the latter especially painful to the natural man. Onesimus and Philemon may both rejoice in the new relation of brotherhood, which replaces that of slavery and lordship: to the one it may bear the aspect of a levelling up, to the other of a levelling down; but in reality what both rejoice in is the falling into the background of the old transitory distinction in comparison with their common fellowship in the eternal glory.

The call to rejoice is of course not exclusively made to those who are tried. There is a natural joy which is not condemned, but which needs to be associated with the thought of God to guard it from becoming a snare to us (ch. v. 13). 'Rejoice in the Lord always' is a universal precept for all Christians, but one that has to be insisted upon especially in the case of those whose circumstances naturally tempt them to sorrow. It is a bracing appeal to them (like St. Paul's in Eph. vi. 10 foll.) to muster up all their courage, and to look their difficulties in the face, seeing in them a Divine discipline, which they are to accept as sent by Him who knows what is best for them and will not suffer them to be tempted above that they are able. On the other hand there is a false joy springing from a confidence in ourselves and in our circumstances, which shows that we aim at the friendship of the world, and which necessarily separates us from God (ch. iv. 4, 16). This false joy must be exchanged for the sorrow of repentance before the true joy can enter our hearts (iv. 9, 10).

In ver. 12 St. James guards against a possible misunderstanding of the encouragement given in ver. 2. Trial can only be a subject of rejoicing when it is patiently endured. He who gives way to the temptation involved in trial is in no way benefited, but the reverse, unless, as in the case of St. Peter, his discovery of his own weakness leads him to a deeper repentance.

A still more serious error is met in ver. 13. Man throws the blame of his wrong-doing on God, who made him what he is, and placed him in circumstances which it was impossible to contend against. St. James meets this in two ways: (1) by showing that it involves a supposition which contradicts what we know of God, (2) by explaining more fully the nature of internal temptation. (1) (a) God is untemptable; (b) He tempts none. But how are these statements to be reconciled with other passages of Scripture, in which God is said both to be tempted and to tempt? Such are Ex. xvii. 2 'why do ye tempt (πειρά- $\zeta \epsilon \tau \epsilon$) the Lord?' ver 7 'he called the name of the place Massah ($\pi \epsilon \iota \rho a \sigma$ μόν) because they tempted the Lord, saying, Is the Lord among us or not?' Numbers xiv. 22, Deut. vi. 16 'ye shall not tempt the Lord,' Ps. lxxviii. 18, 41, xcv. 9, Isa. vii. 12, Matt. iv. 7, where our Lord meets the temptation to east himself down from the temple by referring to the command in Deut. vi. 16, Acts v. 9 (of Ananias and Sapphira) 'how is it that ye have agreed together to tempt the Spirit of the Lord?' 1 Cor. x. 9 'neither let us tempt Christ as some of them also tempted and were destroyed of serpents' (referring to Numb. xxi. 5 the people spake against God and against Moses, Wherefore have ye brought us up out of Egypt to die in the wilderness?'), cf. Judith viii. 12 (of the rash oath of Ozias to surrender Bethulia if help did not come within five days) 'who are ye that have tempted God?... ye cannot find out the depth of the heart of man, then how can ye search out God or comprehend his purpose?... He hath power to defend us when he will. Do not bind the counsels of the Lord our God.' So selfsought martyrdom and the proposal to test the power of prayer by comparing the results in a praying and in a non-praying hospital may in different ways be regarded as tempting God. The distinction is plain between the temptation to sin of which St. James speaks and such cases as these, in which men are said to tempt God, when they make experiments with Him, or take liberties with Him, try how far they may go, so to speak, instead of humbly submitting to what they feel to be His revealed will or His providential ordering; when in the words of Stier they 'anticipate by the word of their own self-will the word of God upon which they should wait.' Man can be tempted because of the propensity to evil in his own nature; God cannot be tempted because He is absolute goodness.

But (b) we also read of God tempting man, as where he tested Abraham's obedience by demanding the sacrifice of his son (Gen. xxii. 1), or the Israelites by the forty years' wandering 'to humble thee, and to prove thee $(\pi \iota \iota \rho \acute{a} \sigma \eta)$, to know what was in thine heart,' Deut. viii. 2, or Hezekiah by the Babylonian embassy 2 Chron. xxxii. 31, Judith viii. 25–27. But here again the design of temptation is quite different from that spoken of in the text; it is not temptation with the view of drawing man into sin, but trial with the view of discovering his motives and principles and of gradually building up the perfect Christian character, as stated in the second verse.

What then is the real history of the temptation which allures us to sin? It has its root in man himself, in his appetites, desires and impulses of every sort, suggesting the thought of pleasure to be obtained (or pain avoided) by the commission of a wrong act.

At first the impulse is a blind instinctive movement, involuntary and therefore innocent, but if unchecked it discovers a definite um, which it seeks to attain by uniting itself with thought and Sin originates when we choose to dwell upon the thought of the pleasure suggested, though knowing, or strongly suspecting, hat it cannot be lawfully obtained. The desire becomes stronger by includence, the thought of sin ceases to shock as it becomes more familiar, until at last that which had been long rehearsed in the imagination is enacted in real life. In most cases the commission of the outward act is followed by something of shame or remorse, which may lead to genuine repentance, but if the sting of conscience is disregarded, the first wrong action is naturally followed by others, which give rise to a sinful habit, and at length conscience is silenced, the will is permanently enslaved, the moral nature is to all appearance dead; and so the soul departs to the other world to receive the reward of the things done in the body. The genesis of temptation is admirably illustrated in the story of Macbeth. In the second scene we have the picture of an innocent and laudable ambition. The interview with the witches shows this ambition perilously sensitive to ontward solicitation, and already open to the suggestion of unlawful means for the attainment of the coveted object, a suggestion seconded by his wife's direct instigation, and supported by external circumstances, the nomination of Malcolm as heir to the throne and the visit of Duncan. then after many misgivings the final resolve and the execution of the murder: the consequent change from the noble Macbeth, whose nature is full of the milk of human kindness and of whom it is said 'what thou wouldst highly that wouldst thou holily,' to the bloodthirsty tyrant of the later scenes. It is to be noticed that in Macbeth we are always conscious of a background of hellish instigation. This does not appear in the first chapter of St. James, but is recognized afterwards in iii. 6 where the tongue is said to be set on fire of hell, iii. 15 where false wisdom is described as devilish, iv. 7 where we are bidden to submit ourselves to God and resist the devil, 'the tempter' as he is called by St. Paul, who makes use of our natural impulses to bring us

Here however a further difficulty arises, for the action of Satan is sometimes said to be permitted by God, as in the temptation of Job; at other times an action is attributed indifferently to Satan and to God, as in the numbering of the people by David, which is said to be instigated by God in 2 Sam. xxiv. 1, by Satan in 1 Chron. xxi. 1; and yet again God seems to be represented as the author of immoral or irreligious conduct in man, as in Ex. ix. 16 'the Lord hardened the heart of Pharaoh.' With regard to the first case the answer is simple: Satan tempts with the design of inducing Job to give up his righteousness and his trust in God; God permits the temptation, because he knows the end will be to prove Job's faith and confirm his righteousness. It is fundamentally the case of those to whom St. James writes. They are in trouble; Satan is allowed to suggest that this trouble is a sign that God neglects them; yet they are to rejoice in this trouble with its attendant temptation, because in this way their faith will be strengthened, and they will learn endurance. In such a case as this it might be said, either that Satan tempted them by Divine appointment, or that God tempted them through Satanic agency. The difference of expression in 2 Sam. xxiv. 1 and 1 Chron. xxi. I is due to the idiosyncrasy of the writers, the later writer shrinking from the bold anthropomorphism of the earlier. There is more difficulty in the passage in which God is said to have hardened Pharaoh's heart, especially if we read it with St. Paul's commentary (Rom. ix. 17-24) whom he will, he hath mercy on, and whom he will, he hardeneth,' and his silencing of the objector by what looks like an appeal to unlimited power 'Shall the thing formed say to him that formed it Why hast thou made me thus?' It is no doubt in reference to such a passage that we read that the epistles of St. Paul contained things hard to be understood which they that are unlearned and unstable wrest to their own destruction.' Perhaps it is most easily explained by regarding it as an abbreviated way of saying that Pharaoh's hardness was the natural consequence of the Divine law which has ordained that prolonged resistance to conscience should result in the searing of the heart, and that this hardness was also part of the providential plan by which Israel was brought out of Egypt and the power of God manifested. It is not meant that Pharaoh was under any compulsion to sin, or that God tempted him to sin. Lastly the argument of St. Paul is more justly regarded as an appeal to man's ignorance than as an assertion of the doctrine that might makes right. Throughout the Bible God's claim to man's obedience is founded on His righteousness. The faith of Abraham rests on this foundation. 'Shall not the Judge of all the earth do right?' In the mind of St. Paul as well as of Moses, no miracle, no sign of power could justify the Israelite or the Christian in accepting a doctrine different from that which he had received from Him whose name is Holy.

Setting aside however the precise language of Scripture, does not experience show cases in which it might be said that man is tempted of God? Take the child of criminal or vicious parents. He inherits a special predisposition to evil, and he is placed in circumstances which encourage and call out that tendency. Here we have to consider (1) the teaching of our Lord with regard to the many stripes and few stripes. Guilt is very different according to the different degrees of light accorded. But (2) every one has received some measure of light from above, teaching him that there is a right and a wrong, and further light and strength are given in proportion as the existing light is used. The publicans and sinners were nearer to Christ than the Scribes and Pharisees.

The following scheme may serve to illustrate the teaching of St. James on this subject.

STAGES OF TEMPTATION.

Internal nature with its impulses (ἐπιθυμίαι) which often require some external stimulus (πειρασμός) to rouse them, otherwise remaining dormant.

Pre-Moral Stages

- 2. Excitement of particular impulse through external stimulus of present or prospective pleasure or pain.
- The impulse thus roused is brought under the purview of reason and conscience, and, if unsanctioned by them, constitutes full temptation (πειράζεται).
- 4. The two ways. Action of will under temptation:
 - (a) passively yielding under Satanie influence.
- (a) The understanding cooperates with the impulse, suggesting modes of gratifying it, and picturing the pleasure of gratification (συλλαβοῦσα).
- (a) The will identifies itself with the impulse and resolves on the steps required to attain desired object (τίκτει ὑμαρτίαν).
- 7. (a) Sinful act.
- (a) Habit of vice formed by repetition of vicious action (άμαρτία ἀποτελεσθείσα).
- (a) Final result, death (b) Final result, crown of (ἀποκυεῖ θάιατου).

- (b) actively resisting under Divine influence.
- (b) The will summons up the other powers of the mind and above all seeks aid from God to enable it to resist temptation (ὑπομονή).
- (b) The will identifies itself with conscience and refuses all parley with temptation.

(b) Virtuous act.

- (b) Habit of virtue formed by repetition of virtuous acts (ή ὑπομονη ἔργον τέλειον ἔχει).
 - Final result, crown of life (δοκιμὸς γενόμενος λήμψεται τὸν στέφανον τῆς ζωῆς).

Moral Stages

I. 16—18. Paraphrase.

Beware of wrong thoughts as to the character and work of God. All good from the lowest to the highest comes from above, descending from the Source of all lights, with whom (unlike the luminaries of this lower world) there can be neither change from within nor overshadowing from without. God of His own good pleasure implanted in our hearts the germ of His own nature by the preaching of the Gosnel, in order that we might be the first-fruits of His new creation.

GOD THE AUTHOR OF ALL GOOD.

To dissipate entirely the idea that temptation comes from God, and that man is therefore not responsible for his sin, St. James here gives the positive side of that characteristic which he had shadowed out on its negative side in ver. 13. God is not merely Himself free from all touch of evil, and therefore incapable of injuring others, He is absolute Goodness, always communicating good to others, and Himself the hidden spring of all good done by others. Nor is it only moral good that comes from Him, though that may be His most perfect gift; but all light, all truth, beauty and happiness, all that at first made the world appear good in the eyes of its Creator, is still His work, His gift. It is vain to look for good from any other quarter, from the lusts of the flesh, or the smiles of the world. Man, however, by his own sin raises up a cloud which hides from him the face of God; and thus he comes to picture to himself a God who is no longer loving, but stern, vindictive, jealous of human happiness. Such an imagination is a delusion of the devil. Even this material sun does not cease to shine behind the cloud which hides it from human view; and God's love, more unchanging than the brightness of the sun, knows no eclipse. In all worlds He is eternally the same, the giver of all good, who cannot do otherwise than will what is best for every one of His creatures. His purpose for us Christians is that we should be the first-fruits, the sample and earnest, of His new creation. Through us He reveals to the world what He would have all men to be. means by which He renews in us the divine image, which is the true nature of man, is the declaration of His love, made first through the Son, and then further explained and enforced by those whom the Son has sent to sow the good seed of the kingdom. The teaching of Christ rightly received into the heart constitutes the germ of a new divine life, by which it is the will of God that humanity as a whole should in the end be permeated and transfused.¹

It shows how liable men are to be deluded by phrases, that Luther, with this passage before him, could imagine the teaching of St. James to be opposed to that of St. Paul. 'By grace are ye saved through faith, and that not of yourselves, it is the gift of God' is not a stronger expression of the doctrine of free justification than the words before us, 'of his own will begat he us with the word of truth.'

REGENERATION.

It is worth while to compare the different terms used in the Bible to express the change wrought in man's nature by the Divine influence.

- (1) It is described as a new birth. This is expressed in the text by the verb ἀποκνέω. St. Peter in his First Epistle (i. 23) employs the verb ἀγαγατάω 'being born again not of corruptible seed, but of incorruptible, through the living and abiding word of God,' cf. ib. ii. 2. St. John has either γεντάω ἄνωθεν or the simple γεντάω, as in i. 12, 13, As many as received him, to them gave he power to become the sons of God, even to them that believe on his name: which were born, not of blood, nor of the will of the flesh, nor of the will of man, but of God, ib. iii. 3 'except a man be born from above, he cannot see the kingdom of God,' this new birth being further explained by the words in verses 5, 6, 'except a man be born of water and of the Spirit, he cannot enter into the kingdom of God. That which is born of the flesh is flesh; and that which is born of the Spirit is spirit'; similarly I ep. iii. 9 'every one who is born of God committeth not sin; for his seed remaineth in him, and he cannot sin, because he is born of God'; ib. v. 4 'whatsoever is born of God (παν το γεγεινημένον έκ $\tau_0 \hat{v} \Theta_{\epsilon 0} \hat{v}$) overcometh the world; and this is the victory that overcometh the world, even our faith, ef. also ii. 29, iv. 7, v. 1, 18. Paul uses the word παλιγγενεσία in Tit. iii. 5 'according to his mercy he saved us by the washing of regeneration and renewing of the Holy Ghost,' and addresses the Galatians as 'my little children of whom I travail in birth until Christ be formed in you' (Gal. iv. 19).
- (2) Nearly related to this is the description of the change as that of adoption $(vio\theta\epsilon\sigma(a))$ or sonship, for which see Rom. viii. 14—17, 'As many as are led by the Spirit of God, they are the sons of God. For ye did not receive a spirit of bondage again to fear, but ye received a spirit of adoption, whereby we cry, Abba, Father... The Spirit itself witnesseth with our spirit, that we are the children of God,' cf. Gal. iv. 5, 6, Eph. i. 5.
- (3) Or again, that which speaks of a new heart, a new man, a new creation, a new nature, cf. Ezek. xi. 19 'I will put a new spirit within you; and I will take the stony heart out of their flesh, and will give them a heart of flesh.' Ib. xxxvi. 25-27, Jer. xxxi. 33, Ps. li. 10, 2 Cor. v. 17 'If any man be in Christ, he is a new creature $(\kappa a a r) \kappa \tau (\sigma s)$; old things have passed away, behold all things are become new,' Eph. iv. 22 'that ye put off the old man which is being destroyed in accordance with the lusts of deceit, and be renewed in the spirit of your mind; and that ye put on the new man which after God is created in righteousness and holiness of truth,' 2 Pet. i. 4 'in order that through the promises ye may become partakers of the divine nature,' Gal. vi. 15, Eph. ii. 15, Col. iii. 9, 10.
 - (4) This new nature is further described as a resurrection from death, and combined with the thought of our being joined with Christ in His crucifixion and resurrection. Thus we read (1 Joh. iii. 14) 'we know that we have passed from death to life, because we love the brethren,' Eph. ii. 4-6 'God, for his great love wherewith he loved us, even when we were dead in sins, quickened us together with Christ, and raised us up together and made us sit together in heavenly places in Christ Jesus,' Col. ii. 12, 13, iii. 1, Rom. vi. 3-11.

(5) At other times it is described as a change from darkness to light, as in Eph. v. 8 'ye were once darkness, but now are ye light in the Lord,' Col. i. 13, 1 Pet. ii. 9, 1 Joh. ii. 8-11.

(6) Or from slavery to freedom, as in Rom. vi. 22 'but now being made free from sin and become servants to God, ye have your fruit unto holiness, and the end everlasting life,' Rom. viii. 2 'the law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus made me free from the law of sin and death,' Joh. viii. 32, James i. 25.

(7) Or it is described more simply as conversion or turning, see Matt. xviii. 3 'except ye be converted ($\partial u \mu \eta \sigma \tau \rho a \phi \hat{\eta} \tau \epsilon$) and become as little children, ye shall not enter into the kingdom of heaven,'

Jas. v. 19.

(8) The most common, however, as well as the most complete description of this change is the receiving of the Holy Spirit, through whom Christ dwells in us and we in Him, see Rom. viii. already quoted, Gal. v. 16—26, Eph. iii. 14 foll., James iv. 5, John xiv.—xvi.

The idea of regeneration was connected by the Jews with their rite of circumcision and also with the admission of proselytes by the ceremony of baptism. It was therefore only natural that when baptism became the sacrament of admission into the Church of Christ it should be regarded as possessing a regenerative power. St. Peter, comparing it with the preservation of Noah in the ark, says 'the like figure whereunto, even baptism, doth now save us' (1 ep. iii. 21). St. Paul speaks of our being saved by the washing of regeneration and renewing of the Holy Ghost (Tit. iii. 5), and says that 'as many as were baptized into Christ did put on Christ' (Gal. iii. 27); that 'ye were buried with Christ in baptism, wherein also ye were raised with him through faith in the power of God who raised him from the dead' (Col. ii. 12). So St. John l.c. 'except a man be born of water and the Spirit he cannot enter into the kingdom of God.' The love of system led later Church writers to limit the use of the term Regeneration to the special grace conveyed in Baptism, carefully distinguishing it from Justification, Conversion, Sanctification, and so on.2 In our Baptismal Service water is said to be sanctified to the mystical washing away of sin, and the baptized child is said to be regenerate and grafted into the body of Christ's Church. J. B. Mozley in his treatise on Baptismal Regeneration argues that since regeneration, strictly taken, implies Christian perfection, the assertion here made must be understood hypothetically, as expressing a charitable hope that the person is on the way to perfection. The more common explanation is that all baptized persons are by the fact of their baptism placed in a new state of spiritual capacity. It is important to notice here two things: (1) that the same distinction is made between outward and inward baptism as between outward and inward circumcision. Of the latter St. Paul says, borrowing the figure used in the book of Deuteronomy (xxx. 6), 'he is not a Jew which is one outwardly; neither is that circumcision which is outward in the flesh; but he is a Jew which is one inwardly and circumcision is that of the heart, in the spirit and not in the letter'; and so St. Peter after saying that 'baptism saves us,' adds the caution 'not the putting away of the filth of the flesh, but the answer of a good conscience (συτειδήσεως ἀγαθῆς ἐπερώτημα) towards God'; and St. John, who reports the words 'except a man be born of water and the Spirit, he cannot enter into the kingdom of God,' gives a test by which we may ascertain who is thus born, in the words 'every one that doeth righteousness is born of him' (1 ep. ii. 29), 'whatsoever is born of God doth not commit sin' (ib. iii. 9), 'whatsoever is born of God overcometh the world; and this is the victory that overcometh the world, even our faith ' (ib. v. 4). That baptism was not always a regeneration in this high sense is shown by such instances as that of Simon Magus, who, after he had been baptized by Philip, and received the gifts of the Spirit by the laying on of the hands of Peter, was declared by the latter to have neither part nor lot in the matter, but to be still in the gall of bitterness and the bond of iniquity.' (2) We have to remember that the Apostles wrote at a time when adult baptism was the rule, and infant baptism the exception. Baptism was then, as it is now in heathen or Mahometan countries, the confession of the faith of Christ erucified, when it entailed shame, persecution, even death. such confession Christ himself said 'whosoever shall confess me before men, him will I confess also before my Father which is in heaven' (Matt. x. 32); and St. Paul, 'with the heart man believeth unto rightcourness; and with the month confession is made unto salvation' (Rom. x. 10); with which we may compare the words recorded in Mark xvi. 16 'he that believeth and is baptized shall be saved.' Faith and repentance (or conversion) were the necessary preliminaries to baptism; but baptism, being the outward sign and seal of the inward change, being also the confession of Christ before men, and being accompanied by further gifts of the Spirit, became the summary expression for the new birth which preceded it. It is evident that in these respects infant baptism now is something very different from adult baptism then. Yet these differences do not derogate from the uses of Infant Baptism. We rightly regard the offering of the child to God by the parents in baptism as the first step in the Christian life, the acknowledgment on their part of their duty towards the child as a creature born not for time, but for eternity; and the authoritative declaration on the part of God of His saving will in regard to each child thus brought to Him. In bringing our infants to the font we only carry out the principle laid down by St. Paul (1 Cor. vii. 14)) in respect to the children of Christian parents, and obey the word of Christ Himself 'Suffer little children to come unto me.' If all goes on as it should do, we may hope and believe that the child will lead the rest of his life according to that beginning; that there will be a steady onward growth, as in the case of Timothy, without any deliberate falling away, such as to require that entire change of heart and life which we generally understand by the term 'conversion.' In this, which ought surely to be the normal case in a Christian country, the child is brought up to believe that he has not to win God's favour by any special merit of his own, but that he is already redeemed, already grafted into the true Vine, a participator in the gifts of the Spirit, and an heir to all the promised blessings of the Gospel, unless by his own neglect he refuses to avail himself of these privileges. And in such a life as this it does not seem possible to fix on any other moment as the moment of regeneration, except that in which the parents proclaimed their intention to bring up their infant as a member of Christ and a child of God.

It is interesting to observe the acknowledgment of the necessity of a conversion or new birth even among heathen writers. Some found this in the initiation of the mysteries, others in the teaching of philosophy.¹

THE WORD OF TRUTH.

As there are some who attribute a magical virtue to the material rite of baptism, so there are others who attribute a magical virtue to sermons. They support their view by citing such texts as the following: 'Faith cometh by hearing, and hearing by the word of God. How shall they hear without a preacher?' (Rom. x. 14, 17); 'God hath manifested his word through preaching' (Tit. i. 3). But we have only to compare the state of things in the early Church with the state of things which now prevails, in order to see how entirely inappropriate such language, literally understood, is to our own time. When St. Paul thus spoke, it is almost certain that there was no written Gospel. It was an oral revelation, passed from mouth to mouth. The words of eternal life spoken by Christ were reported by those who heard him, and these words were spirit and life to all who received them. But even then it made no difference whether they were addressed to many at once in the temple, as by Peter, or to one in a chariot, as by Philip. Nor did it make any difference, when James set the example of preaching by letter, where he could not preach in person, and was followed by Paul and the other Apostles. Preaching is only one out of many Christianizing influences now at work in England. Some go so far as to question whether it would not be for the advantage of all, preachers and hearers alike, if we would give heed to St. James' advice ($\mu \hat{\eta} \pi \delta \lambda \delta \hat{\delta} \delta \delta \delta \delta \delta \kappa \delta \lambda \delta \epsilon \gamma (r \epsilon \sigma \theta \epsilon)$ and put a stop to four-fifths of the preaching which now goes on. Still there is room for sermons in the adaptation of the Gospel to the varying needs of successive generations, and different classes of men, as well as to the idiosyncrasics of different individuals. And there is need of course for personal influence, especially with the less educated. Next to the influence of believing parents, and in some cases superior to it, is the influence of a schoolmaster like Arnold, of a preacher like Maurice or Keble, in convincing a man of the reality of Christianity.

I. 19—27. Paraphrase.

Since you know that it is God who of His own good pleasure hus infused a new life into us by means of the preaching of the Word, listen with cancerness to the Word which comes from Him, remembering that it is not something to talk about or to fight about, but to receive into our heart and to manifest in our actions. Human passion and bitterness are not pleasing to God or productive of the righteousness which God requires, and which He alone can give. Therefore begin by putting away all that unkindness which is so ready to overflow the lips and defile the man; and then open your hearts to receive in meckness the Word sown, which is able to save the soul. Do not however deceive yourselves with the idea that it is enough to be heavers of the Word without carrying it out in action. Such a hearer is like a man who, looking at his face in a mirror, gives one glance, and is yone, and at once forgets what he was like. If we wish to make a right use of the heavenly mirror, the Word which shows us what we are and what we should be, we must not be satisfied with a hasty glaner, we must give our minds to it; we must embrace it as the law of our lives and never lose sight of it. Only thus will God's blessing attend our actions. If any one regards himself us a religious man, while he knows not how to britle his tongue, such a man deceives himself and his religion is of no avail. Such was the religion of the Pharisees, who decoured widows' houses while for a pretence making long prayers. The religious service which God approves, consists in kindness to all who need our kindness, and in rising superior to worldly motives and solicitations.

HEARING THE WORD.

The parallel passage in St. Peter shows that the immediate reference here is to the good seed of the Word sown by the preaching of the Apostles. But the rule laid down by St. James need not be confined to this. It is a direction as to the way in which all good thoughts, all higher aspirations, all that raises and purifies our ideal, should be received in the mind. As St. Paul says (Phil. iv. 8), 'whatsoever things are true, whatsoever things are just, whatsoever things are pure, whatsoever things are lovely, these things we are to think upon,' whether we read them in books, or see them in the lives and actions of other men, or have them suggested to us by the teachings of art or nature, or by the voice of conscience, or whatever else may seem to come through the more immediate inspiration of God. In respect to all of these the lesson is the same: 'take heed how ye hear.' Let your hearts and minds be receptive of these higher Hearken for the still small voice, ponder its accents, submit yourselves humbly and lovingly to its guidance. Keep a firm hand on vanity, pride and passion, lest they get the dominion over you, and drive away the Spirit or drown His voice within you. To the same effect are the words of the Psalmist, 'Commune with your own heart upon your bed, and be still,' 'I will hearken what God, the Lord, will say concerning me,' 'Rest in the Lord and wait patiently for Him'; and the words of the youthful Samuel, 'Speak, Lord, for thy In like manner Wordsworth speaks of the servant heareth.' influences of nature.

But pure contemplation is not enough. Man is made for action, as well as for thought and feeling; and if the latter have no influence on his action, they become merely a refined self-indulgence, and tend to dull the moral sense, and harden the heart, until moral renewal becomes all but impossible, because we have destroyed the natural connexion between the emotional stimulus and the response in act, In the well-known words of Bp. Butler: 'Going over the theory of virtue in one's thoughts, talking well, and drawing fine pictures of it; this is so far from necessarily or certainly conducing to form habits of virtue in him who thus employs himself, that it may even harden the mind in a contrary course and render it gradually more insensible, that is, form a habit of insensibility to all moral considerations. For, from our very faculty of habit, passive impressions by being repeated grow weaker.' Few things are more fatal to moral and spiritual growth than the satisfaction derived from a merely aesthetic or sentimental religion.

vocation! Are not some men called to be artists, poets, philosophers, students or teachers, as other men are called to be men of business and action! Is not action itself crippled and wasted from want of knowledge! Is it not one of the most deplorable features of modern life, that there is so much restless activity with so little thought as to the end to be pursued, and the means to be employed for arriving at the end; so much talk and profession, and so little feeling; so much fuss, and so little real enjoyment!

We may allow all this, and yet hold with Bp. Butler and St. James, that it is a disastrous thing for a man to rest satisfied with his own passive impressions.' If a poet like Wordsworth devotes himself steadily to the task of raising the standard of thought and feeling among his countrymen, or a jurisprudent, such as Bentham, lives laborious days in order to reform men's ideas of what law should be, and so ultimately to bring about that vast improvement in the statute law of England which has been witnessed in this century, no one could deny that these were in the highest sense men of action. It is true there have been artists and philosophers who were less consciously practical, 'who sang but as the linnets sing,' who wrote or composed in obedience to the inner impulse without any definite idea of benefiting others; whose work nevertheless has been rich in practical results of the greatest importance. Here too, for the work to produce such results, there must have been a high degree of mental activity, and a conscientious effort to render faithfully the impression or the thought by which the writer or artist was possessed. To borrow St. James' figure, no great work of art was ever produced by a mere hasty plance at the mirror of the Divine Word. But St. James is of course speaking primarily of moral and spiritual truth. He does not deny that one who preaches or theorizes on these subjects without practising his own precepts may put forward thoughts which may be good and useful for other men; nor that he may even be a medium, like Balaam, for divine inspiration, though he should be found in the end fighting, like Balaam, for the enemies of God: but what he says is that, to the theorizer himself, moral theory without practice is of no avail, but rather a dangerous snare as fostering the habit of selfdeception.

SLOW TO SPEAK.

But is it not the duty of a Christian to let his light shine? to preach! the Gospel to every creature? Does not the Psalmist say (1xxii. 74), 'my mouth shall speak of thy righteousness all the day,' and St. James himself (v. 20) give a special encouragement to one who 'converts a sinner from the error of his way'? On the other hand, in ch. iii., he warms his readers against being too ready to take upon themselves the office of teacher, and urges on them the necessity of controlling the tongue. Doubtless we are to understand him in the text as deprecating rash and hasty speech on religious subjects, in accordance with the teaching of the wise man, 'God is in heaven and thou on earth; therefore let thy words be few' (Eccl. v. 1, 2). A grave reverence, modesty and humility, careful previous consideration of the subject on which he has to speak, these seem to be the qualities St. James requires in a teacher, in contrast with the flippant familiarity, the readiness to pour out prayers or exhortations on the shortest notice, which are often found so attractive. 'Slow to speak' seems also to imply a long period of testing and preparation for the work of the ministry, in contrast with the plan ascribed to the Salvationists, of taking one who has only just abandoned a life of sin himself, and setting him up to be an evangelist to others. The words slow to speak' are applied by Stier to conversation on religious topics as well as to actual preaching. 'How many Christians,' he says, 'hold that God's word is a matter about which people must talk together—God's word which should always speak directly to the heart!...Guard against the so much loved pious conversations, which are often so unprofitable, often no more than mere idle babbling. Do not talk away from your hearts the power and blessing of saving truth.' Allowing this to be the general rule, we must not forget that the demoniac was bidden to tell how great things God had done for him; and that however unwilling a man may be to set himself up as censor morum or an instructor of others, it is every one's duty to make confession of his own belief and principles when occasion calls for it.

Should we limit the injunction to the sphere of religion, or give it a general application, equivalent to Carlyle's 'Silence is golden'? Let us consider the case of one who was certainly $\tau \alpha \chi \dot{\nu}_s \lambda \alpha \lambda \epsilon \hat{\nu}_s$, the Apostle Peter. His promptness of speech is shown on many occasions, as when he said 'Depart from me, for I am a sinful man, O Lord,' 'Let us make three tabernacles,' 'Thou art the Christ, the son of the living God,' 'This be far from thee, Lord, this shall not be unto thee,' 'Thou shalt never wash my feet,' 'Not my feet only but my hands and my head.' Here we have the immediate, spontaneous, expression of the feelings of the heart, sometimes right, sometimes wrong, but always attractive and interesting. It is this simplicity and openness which draws us so much to the Apostle and makes us place such confidence in his sincerity. So in general, expansiveness and freedom of utterance is both a loveable and useful quality. We do not wish the natural flow to be checked by the constant question 'Is what I am about to say wise? Is it prudent? How will it affect people's estimate of me?' On the other hand what can be more wearisome than a flow of words where there is little of feeling or thought? words which are mere words, or words prompted simply by vanity, or which betray a shallow or coarse or malicious nature? That a talker of this kind should be induced to check the current of his words by asking 'Is this true? Is it likely to pain or injure any one? Can it do good to any one?' is surely much to be desired. But even in the case of natural kindly utterance, some sort of control is desirable. The impulse to hear should balance the impulse to speak. There should be the thought that others too may wish to express themselves, and that the thoughts and experiences of others may be not less interesting and useful than our own to the company at large. There should be the instinctive shrinking from any approach to falsehood, as well as from anything which could give pain or do mischief. There is nothing unnatural or artificial in such control as this, nothing to excite a suspicion of Jesuitism.

But if we have no difficulty in finding cases in which we should all echo the admonition of St. James; if we should allow that for the Jews of his time, as for certain races in our own time, the rule 'slow to speak' might be of very general application; do we not also find cases, especially in England, where a stimulus is needed in the opposite direction? Is there not sometimes a stolid absence of interest both in persons and things, which does away with the chief motive for conversation? or a sluggishness of thought and speech, which amounts almost to dumbness? or a timidity and self-distrust, which make it a painful effort to open oneself to others? In such cases surely the injunction should be: Try to break through the isolation in which you have placed yourself: learn to interest yourself more in others: remember that you too in your own small circle are intended not only to do the will of God, but to be an oracle of God, reflecting back that aspect of the Divine Glory, to manifest which is the reason of your creation. Certainly neither Moses nor Jeremiah were commended for their slowness of speech. In vain the former pleaded 'I am not eloquent, but am slow of speech and of a slow tongue.' 'The anger of the Lord,' we are told, 'was kindled against him' for his unwillingness to carry the Divine message to his countrymen.

SLOW TO WRATH.

This is not to be understood as enjoining on Christians the habit of Stoic apathy, any more than 'slow to speak' is to be understood as enjoining a Trappist silence. Bp. Butler in his sermons on Resentment has well shown both the use and the abuse of the iraseible element in man. One chief means of raising a degraded moral tone is the sight of the indignation produced in persons of a more generous nature by a mean or unkind action. We have many examples of such indignation in the Bible, notably in the language of John the Baptist and of our Lord. What the text means is 'do not give way to the first impulse to anger. Think how often you have had to repent of what you have done or said under the influence of passion; how often you have found that you had misapprehended the facts, or misinterpreted the motives of the supposed offender. Even when there can be no reasonable doubt on these points, in any case do not let yourself be carried away by blind passion; ask yourself how much of your anger arises from the fact that wrong is done, and how much from the fact that it is done to you, and try to eliminate the latter element; take into account the extenuating circumstances, hereditary predisposition, defective education or whatever it may be. Consider also your own liability to go wrong; and above all consider the royal law, Thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself. Put yourself into his place, and act towards him as you would wish that another should act towards you under like circumstances: that is, act for what you believe to be the offender's best interests, and in such a way as to arouse his own better feelings.' This warning of St. James against over-hastiness in wrath may be compared with St. Paul's warning against too great persistency in wrath, 'Be ye angry and sin not, let not the sun go down upon your wrath.'

The context however shows that St. James is not thinking so much of the passion of anger in general, as of its indulgence under particular circumstances. He is speaking of the way in which men should receive the Word. 'They should be quick to hear, slow to speak, slow to wrath, seeing that the wrath of man does not work the righteousness of God; therefore they are to receive with meekness the word of salvation.' On a first reading we might be inclined to ask, Who ever supposed that man's wrath could work God's righteousness? Why should St. James have given utterance to a truism like this? But the history of religion proves that there is no more common delusion than this—that the best evidence a man can give of his own orthodoxy is his bitterness towards the heterodoxy of others. The monarch's private vices were atoned for by unsparing persecution of his heretical subjects; to join a crusade against the infidel was regarded as a passport to heaven; to burn a Protestant was an Act of Faith. odium theologicum has passed into a proverb. Nor is it difficult to understand why this should be so. Religion, with its vastly extended horizon and its infinite possibilities as to the future, stimulates in a very high degree the faculties of hope and fear, and in the more anxious and less trustful natures tends to arouse an eager longing for some positive assurance of personal safety. Such an assurance may be either objective or subjective; it may be derived either from the authority of the Church without, or the supposed voice of the Spirit within, testifying that we are children of God. The former assurance may be found in the dogmatic coupling together of Conversion and Final Perseverance as different aspects of the same fact, or in the Viaticum and Extreme Unction of the Church of Rome. The latter assurance may be sought from the presence of what is regarded as an overpowering religious emotion. In the last resort, the former also is subjective, in as much as it depends on the degree of confidence placed in the ecclesiastical authority to which a man has submitted himself: and the fact that this confidence is liable to be shaken by the discovery that others do not acknowledge the same authority, is one main cause of the hatred of heresy, as tending to undermine a man's own faith and destroy his own security. Then this very hatred,—itself, as we have seen, the offspring of doubt and fear,—becomes identified in our thoughts with righteous indignation against sin; and the more fiercely it rages, the stronger is the conviction in the mind of the persecutor, that he is the Jehn appointed to carry out the Divine vengeance against the sinner, and that Paradise is secure to the champion of the truth. Something of the same kind may be observed wherever party spirit (the ἐριθία of the third chapter) runs high;

it is so easy, so comforting to be a good hater, to take for granted that one's own side has a monopoly of intellect and virtue, to accept the party watch-word and join in shouting the party warcry; so arduous and so humbling to divest oneself of prejudice, to seek the truth for its own sake, to acknowledge the evil in ourselves, and see the good in those who differ from us.

Modes of Self-Deception.

St. James notices in this chapter four ways in which men may delude themselves as regards their religious state in God's sight, and preach peace to themselves when there is no peace. The first is by their fluency in speaking on religious subjects, the second by their religious zeal, the third by their pleasure in hearing sermons or reading religious books, the fourth (see verses 26 and 27) by the punctiliousness of their religious services. Not that any one of these is in itself wrong; they may be all good and right as means of grace; but they are easily capable of becoming a source of self-delusion, because it is so easy to confound the means with the end. under the old dispensation Isaiah (i. 10-20) was commissioned to declare the utter worthlessness of sacrifices and incense, of sabbaths and holidays, of solemn meetings and many prayers, unless they were accompanied by a moral change, unless the worshippers ceased to do evil, and learnt to do well,—a change exemplified in Isaiah, as in St. James, by kindness shown to the orphan and the widow. like manner Micah (vi. 6 foll.) contrasts the externalities of a sacrificial worship with that which the Lord requires, justice, mercy, humility. The same contrast is found in the New Testament, as in John iv. 20-24, where Christ himself corrects the Samaritan woman's ideas of the special sanctity attaching to one place above another, in the words 'God is a Spirit, and they that worship him must worship him in spirit and in truth'; and again in Matt. vii. 21-23, where He declares that, to many who have prayed and prophesied and wrought miracles in His name, it shall hereafter be said 'I never knew you; depart from me, ye that work iniquity.' In his next chapter St. James specifies a fifth mode of self-deception, arising from confidence in the orthodoxy of our creed: 'thou believest that there is one God; thou doest well: the devils also believe, and tremble.' To all these various semblances of religion—not necessarily hypocritical semblances, for it is not a seeming to others, but a seeming to self, which is condemned in the $\epsilon \tilde{\iota} \tau \iota s$ $\delta o \kappa \epsilon \hat{\iota} \theta \rho \eta \sigma \kappa \delta s$ $\epsilon \tilde{\iota} \nu a \iota$ of the 26th verse—he opposes the reality, οὐ γὰρ δοκεῖν ἄριστος ἀλλ' εἶναι θέλω.

H. 1—13. Paraphrase.

An example of the worldly spirit may be seen in your assemblies when a poor man entering is shown to the worst place, and a rich man to the best. How is this regard for worldly distinctions consistent with your belief in Christ, the only glory of believers? Does it not show that you are divided in heart, and allow yourselves to be influenced by lower considerations? In reality the poor have more title to our respect than the rich, since it is among the poor we find those who are rich in faith, and heirs of the kingdom of heaven, while the rich, as a class, maltreat the brethren and blaspheme the name of Christ. If it is from obedience to the royal law of love that we show courtesy to the rich, it is well; but if we do this only from respect of persons, it is a breach of law and defiance of the lawgiver no less than adultery or murder. Remember that both words and actions will be tried by the law of liberty, which regards the motive as well as the deed. If we do not show mercy to others, we shall not receive mercy ourselves. It is mercy only which triumphs over judgment. (See notes on vv. 8 and 12 especially.)

RESPECT OF PERSONS.

It is to be feared that, if St. James were to visit our English churches, he would not find much improvement on the state of things existing in the congregations of which he speaks. While there is perhaps no objection either to the appropriation of sittings, in so far as it assures to regular attendants the right to sit in their accustomed place, or to the exactment of a fixed payment from the well-to-do members of the congregation for the use of their seats; it is surely most contrary to the spirit of the Gospel that all the best seats should be monopolized by the highest bidders. The poor are at any rate not to be at a disadvantage in the House of God. The free and open seats should at least be as good as the paying seats, and it should not be in the power of a seat-holder to prevent any unoccupied sitting from being used.

But the principle here inculcated goes much further than the particular example given. If it is wrong to thrust the poor into bad places in church, it is also wrong to treat them with disrespect in our ordinary intercourse. St. James had before spoken of the change brought about by Christianity in the feelings of the rich and poor themselves: the rich brother was to exult in his humiliation, i.e. in the feeling of common brotherhood which unites all Christians to Christ, and in the special obligation, which lies upon one who is specially favoured, to use his talents and his means for the common good; the poor brother was to exult in his admission to the full rights and privileges of a member of Christ and a child of God. Here he is speaking of the duty of Christians generally towards these two extremes. Apparently he allows of no difference in our behaviour towards them. Our behaviour towards both should be governed by the simple rule laid down by St. Peter, 'honour all men.' This does not mean that we are to show less courtesy than we have hitherto done towards the rich, provided this courtesy proceeds from the right motive: but it means that our courtesy towards the poor should, if anything, be greater than our courtesy towards the rich, partly because they have greater claims upon us—the claims of the widow and orphan were noticed in the previous verse—and partly because it may be more difficult for those who have been long down-trodden to rise to their full dignity as Christians, unless aided by our brotherly sympathy.

There are several questions which suggest themselves here. Does St. James mean that all persons are to be treated exactly in the same way, irrespective of rank, age, sex, colour, creed, nationality, or the special relations by which men are connected one with another? Are all these differences considered to belong not to the man himself, but to the part he plays on the transitory stage of this mortal life? Is it wrong to be influenced by such qualities as beauty, amiability, cleverness, external refinement and good manners? Should our behaviour towards one another be determined only by superiority of moral excellence, as constituting the true essence of the man?

This last distinction must of course in any case put a limit on the injunction to 'honour all men.' We are to honour man as man, but not as coward or liar. It is the godlike, not the bestial or the devilish, in man which deserves our honour. Yet seeing that these elements are bound up in one individual, we must take care that the stern repression which may be the treatment required for the worse elements, does not entirely extinguish or conceal the reverence which should be forthcoming for any manifestation of the higher nature in The reason given in the text for honouring the poor rather than the rich, is that the latter are blasphemers and persecutors, the former the inheritors of the kingdom of heaven. Nor again can we suppose that St. James would disagree with St. Peter's injunction to pay honour to the wife as to the weaker vessel, or that he would fail to recognise the relative duties of parent and child, master and servant, &c. Special honour is due to the king and the magistrate in consideration of the office which they hold. While we give the first place to moral goodness in whatever circumstances it may be found, it is only natural and right to acknowledge with thankfulness God's good gifts of mind or body, provided we are not led by them to condone or to think lightly of the moral defects by which they may be accompanied. We cannot love all alike, nor can we honour all alike, yet still honour and love are due to all who share the image of God (iii. 9).

We come now to the actual case of respect of persons condemned by St. James. Is it right to pay respect to wealth qua wealth? It may be right to respect it, in so far as it is the sign and result of honest skill and industry, or if it is used as a stewardship for the good of others; but where it has been accumulated by withholding his fair wages from the workman, and where it is used simply for the purpose of selfish luxury, St. James has no measure in his indignant denunciations (v. 1—6). On the whole we may say that, while he does not altogether deny to the rich a place in the Church, yet he agrees with his Master and with St. Paul in regarding the pursuit of money and the possession of wealth as greatly increasing the difficulty of entering the kingdom of heaven (ii. 6, 7, iv. 13—16). On the

The question here arises whether, if wealth is thus detrimental and poverty favourable to our highest interests, we should not take steps to diminish the one and increase the other. The writer of our Epistle had himself witnessed the experiment of socialism tried at Jerusalem in the first Pentecostal enthusiasm of the Church. The frequent subscriptions in aid of the Church at Jerusalem, to which St. Paul refers, have been regarded as an indication that the experiment proved a failure from an economical point of view. At all events it does not appear to have been continued for any length of time. Subsequently this view of the comparative advantages of poverty and wealth had great influence on the development of the Mediaeval Church: privatus illis census erat brevis, commune magnum; but this did not extend to the secular order of things. Perhaps it may have been reserved to our age, by legislative enactment, as well as by moral and religious suasion, at any rate to limit the two extremes. We cannot doubt that St. James would have approved of what has already been done by the state in England to ameliorate the condition of the poorer part of the community by means of factory bills, free education, free libraries, extended franchise, &c., nor that he would have sympathized with the efforts which are now being made to give the workman a larger share of the profits of labour, and ensure to honest industry a comfortable old age. And as regards the other extreme, it seems natural to assume that he would have approved of a more careful circumscription of the supposed rights of property and also of any measures, consistent with justice, which would tend to check the concentration of wealth in the hands of a few, such as a graduated scale in the income-tax and the death duties. Outside of the action of the State there will still remain plenty of scope for the influence of the Church in drawing classes together, making them realize more the tie of brotherhood, discountenancing wasteful self-indulgence, not less in the smoking and betting and drinking of the poor than in the luxurious living of the rich, compelling all to recognize their responsibility to God for the use of the talents He has entrusted to them, fostering such a tone of public feeling as would make it a disgrace for men to spend their money or energy merely on their own pleasures or interests, and would encourage them to vie with one another in the promotion of art and science and literature, in making the world happier and better and more beautiful than they found it, in a word, in the advancement of God's kingdom upon earth.

One word as to the kind of honour which St. James would have us pay to the poor. It is not of course that we are to flatter them, now that they have become the depositaries of power, with a view of gaining popularity and power ourselves. This would indeed be to act from those 'sinister motives' $(\delta\iota a\lambda o\gamma\iota\sigma\mu\hat{\omega}\nu \pi o\tau\eta\rho\hat{\omega}\nu)$ which

St. James ascribes to the flatterers of the rich in his day. Might does not make right now, any more than it did under Roman imperialism or mediaeval feudalism. The true way of honouring the masses, if we like to use that term, is first by taking for granted that they, like the classes above them, are largely made up of reasonable beings, who desire to learn the honest opinions of all who have taken the trouble to form opinions for themselves; secondly, by ourselves doing our best to understand their position, listening with respect to their opinions, and freely pointing out where we believe them to be mistaken; thirdly, by seeking to make them sharers in all the civilizing influences of our time, and as far as possible to raise them to the level of the more favoured classes; in other words, by extending as widely as possible the refinement and culture, the selfrespect and self-control, implied in the old name of 'gentleman.' We may hope that in these and other ways much of the bitterness of poverty may be done away with, and that the upward path to competence may be opened to all who are capable of making use of it; but until human nature is entirely regenerated, the ascent of some from the lowest class is likely to be balanced by the descent of others from the upper classes. Nor is this in itself to be regretted, poverty and want being the reformatories provided by nature for the idle and vicious. In time past, it is true, these reformatories have too often acted as incitements to crime rather than to virtue, because the sufferers were left to suffer alone, without guidance for the present or hope for the future. The thought and effort which are now being applied to schemes for the improvement of the condition of the 'submerged tenth' will, we may believe, tend to bring out the good, and neutralize the evil of poverty, while at the same time providing a safe channel for the exercise of Christian charity.

It is however important to remember that the Jewish law, forbidding respect of persons, was directed not less against the partiality which favours the poor, than against that which favours the rich. The caution against the former, which we find in Lev. xix. 15, 'thou shalt not respect the person of the poor,' is certainly as much needed now as it ever was.

Solidarity of Duty and the Law of Liberty.

'He who keeps the law as a whole and fails in one point only is guilty of all.' Such a principle would evidently cause great injustice, if applied in the administration of human law. A child who steals a carrot is not thereby guilty of forgery and murder. If the divine law consisted of rules relating to outward action only, as human law does, the same would be true of it also; but the perfect law of God, as St. James tells us in i. 25 and ii. 12, is a law of liberty. It is fulfilled only when we freely choose what God commands, when His will becomes our will, when we love itim because He loved us; when we love our neighbours as ourselves, because they are children of the same Father, redeemed by the same Saviour, partakers of the same Spirit with ourselves. If then we systematically neglect any one commandment of God, say, the duty of honouring our parents, it will not atone for this, though we should be most scrupulous in all other respects; the one wilful neglect proves that we were not actuated by a right motive in our obedience to the other commandments: it shows that we were not led by the Spirit of God.

In the 3rd chapter we read 'in many things we all offend' the word $(\pi\tau\alpha io\mu\epsilon\nu)$ being the same as that used here, where it is said, that 'he who offends in one point is guilty of all.' How then are any to be saved? This is explained in v. 13 'mercy triumpheth over judgment,' which follows closely on the words 'So speak and so act, as being about to be tried by the law of liberty.' The law of liberty is at once more exacting and more merciful than the law of bondage. It is the former, because it is not satisfied with the outward act: it is the latter, because, where there is real love of good, and real desire and effort to do right, God accepts the will for the deed. To bear in mind therefore that we shall be judged by the law of liberty tends to produce in us a deeper conviction of sin, at the same time that it frees us from anxiety, because we believe that God Himself desires that we may be perfect as He is perfect, and that He will accomplish this perfection in us by the presence of His Holy Spirit in our hearts, if we are willing to receive it.

II. 14—26. Paraphrase.

We have seen that hearing is useless without doing, that the doing which is confined to external forms of worship is equally useless, since the only service which pleases God is that of practical kindness and unselfishness. We have seen further that our faith is of no value if it does not keep us from respect of persons and if it does not manifest itself in love. This may be summed up by saying that faith without works, profession without practice, is worthless, as worthless as a mere verbal philanthropy. Even if such a faith were real, it could not prove its existence; and the uselessness of a bare faith is shown by the fact that even the devils possess such faith. The typical examples of faith given in the Old Testament prove that the faith which justifies must be an active principle. The function of faith is to inspire action, and it is itself perfected by action. An inactive faith is the mere corpse of religion. [See especially notes on vv. 14, 23, 26.]

FAITH.

St. James has already told us that trials are sent to test and confirm our faith (i. 3), that without faith prayer is of no avail (i. 6, cf. v. 15, 16), that Christianity consists in faith in the Lord Jesus Christ

(ii, 1), that those who are rich in faith are heirs of the promised kingdom (ii. 5). By this faith he means trust in the loving will of God revealed to us in Christ, and the reception of His word into our souls, as seed into a good soil (i. 17, 18, 21). If we retain our trust in God's all-wise, just and loving Providence, in spite of the trials which He permits, the habit of endurance is strengthened in us, and thus we grow up to the full stature of Christian manhood (i. 4). The opposite to faith is worldliness: our faith is shown to be tainted with worldliness if we favour the rich above the poor (i. 27, ii. 2-4). the verses which we have now to deal with, faith appears in a different light. It is no longer the essence of Christianity, but a mere dead semblance, or empty profession of faith. For the employment of the same word $\pi i \sigma \tau i s$ to denote the two kinds of faith, we may compare the different meanings of $\pi \epsilon i \rho a \sigma \mu \delta s$ and $\pi \epsilon i \rho a \zeta \epsilon \sigma \theta a i$ in i. 2, and 13, the lormer used of a tempting for good, the latter of a tempting for evil; the use of σοφία to express both a heavenly and an earthly wisdom in iii. 15, 17, 1 Cor. i. 17-ii. 16, and so of πανουργία in Sir. xxi. 12; also the use of $\epsilon_{\rho is}$ in Hesiod (Op. 11-30) for the emulation which is good, and the quarrelsomeness which is hurtful. This use of the same name for different things is natural enough in the rough and ready speech of men little accustomed to metaphysical analysis or subtle refinements of language, and would be intentionally adopted by those who had to address such hearers. The change of meaning is however prepared for here by the use of the word $\lambda \dot{\epsilon} \gamma \eta$ in ver. 14: not faith in itself, but the profession of faith is declared to be of no avail. The thought of faith is apparently suggested by the statement in ver. 13 that 'love (compassion) is the only thing which can triumph over judgment,' judgment being without mercy to him who has shown no mercy. To this an objection is supposed to be made by the worldly-minded Christian of ver. 1: 'Will not faith also triumph against judgment? What is the good of being an orthodox believer, if I am no better off than a Samaritan or a Gentile or an unbelieving Jew?' St. James replies by the parable of the talking philanthropist. Just as a profession of philanthropy unaccompanied by kind actions is of no good to the needy, so a profession of faith unaccompanied by righteous actions is of no good to ourselves; both are alike a mere hypocrisy in the sight of God. Such profession is indeed the dead carcase of genuine religion. midst of this diatribe against a dead faith, St. James gives some further particulars of a true faith, such as Abraham's (ver. 22): faith cooperated with his works and by works was faith made perfect'; words which are in close agreement with St. Paul's teaching as to 'faith which worketh by love,' and the 'fruits of the Spirit.'

If St. James were not so fully justified by the subsequent history of the Church, we might be inclined to wonder at the scathing words in which he expresses his contempt for those who place their confidence in the orthodoxy of their creed. But it may be questioned whether any form of fetishism has been quite so mischievous, so destructive to all kindly feeling as well as to moral and spiritual and intellectual progress, as the fetish of orthodoxy, i.e. the idea that the assent to a given form of words is both necessary to, and sufficient for salvation, and that heterodoxy is the worst of sins.

We are not to suppose however that St. James would in these words discourage the wish to arrive at a clear intellectual view in religion. The 'word which is able to save the soul' is itself addressed in the first instance to the understanding, though it must penetrate the whole nature before its work can be accomplished. It no less belongs to man, as a rational being, to think clearly, than it belongs to him, as a moral being, to act rightly. 'I will pray with the spirit' says St. Paul, 'but I will pray with the understanding also': and St. Peter, or whoever is the author of the second Epistle which goes under his name, warns us of the danger arising from the misunderstanding of the written word, where he speaks of the hard things contained in St. Paul's epistles, 'which they that are unlearned and ignorant wrest, as they do also the other Scriptures, to their own destruction.' To grasp fully the meaning of each separate statement, as intended by the writer and understood by the original readers, will often tax our powers to the utmost; and we have besides to consider how far each separate statement is to be qualified or limited or balanced by other statements, whether in the same book or in the other Scriptures; and again how far changed circumstances, changed modes of thought and expression, necessitate a change in the form of the doctrine taught ;-before we can be sure of what is the actual teaching of the Spirit to the Church in our own day. It is from neglecting these things, from the misunderstanding of forms of speech, or from fixing the mind exclusively on one side of Christian teaching, that erroneous views as to the Sacraments and as to Predestination have become so widely prevalent. was therefore only natural and right that the Catholic Church should seek to guard against the misinterpretation of revealed truth, first, by drawing up short summaries of the essentials of belief for the use of all her members, and secondly by careful exposition of the teaching of the Bible on particular doctrines, made by the most learned of her sons. James is not of course to be regarded as objecting to such formularies or treatises. It is not the creed he finds fault with, but the belief that a man is saved by the correctness of his creed.

Every extreme in religion is sure to give rise to the opposite extreme. If therefore one party exaggerate the importance of a correct statement of Christian truth, and make this correctness consist in a repetition of phrases devised by the Fathers of the fourth or of some later century, rather than in the actual teaching of Christ and his Apostles; if they restrict the freedom of thought by unwarrantable assertions that the Church has already arrived at absolute truth, and that the duty of reason is not to question, but simply to bow down in adoration of a mystery; it was to be expected that another party would spring up, who would not only deny that the Church had any right to put out an authoritative statement of doctrine, but would also deny the possibility of arriving at any conclusion whatever in matters of theology, and even that there was any connexion between doctrine and conduct. Such persons might be disposed to claim the authority of St. James on their side, when he speaks of the profession of a right faith being consistent with devilish wickedness. Nor can we evade this by assuming that the profession is merely verbal. supposed case there is real belief, a belief, be it observed, which has a real effect on the believer; but the effect is not that which St. James' opponents claimed for their orthodox faith; not an assurance of salvation, but the extremity of terror. There can, however, be no doubt of what St. James himself really held in regard to the connexion between thought and action. He spoke in i. 19 of the seminal power of the divine Word received into the mind: he is equally explicit below as to the evil influence of words uttered at the instigation of a wisdom which is earthly, sensual and devilish (iii. 6, 15). But, as is explained in the Parable of the Sower, there are many things which may hinder the word, or the thought, or the doctrine, from producing its natural effect. It may lie altogether on the outside of the mind; it may make a mere momentary impression; it may form strange combinations with the already existing growths; as, for instance, the thought of One All-powerful and All-holy, meeting with a will which is obstinately set on evil, is naturally productive of terror. It is only where it finds a good soil, clear of weeds, that the full virtue of the Word is manifested. We need not however assume that the Word is necessarily wasted, where its effect is not immediately perceptible. The use of short formularies, texts or hymns committed to memory, is to store up for the future truths to which the heart may be inaccessible at the moment.

I have in the introduction (pp. lxxxvii. foll.) touched on the relation which St. Paul's teaching on the subject of faith bears to that of St. James. We saw there that there was substantial agreement between them, not withstanding the verbal contradictions which may be found in their Epistles. Both agree that 'in many things we offend all,' that man is saved not by his own merits, but by the goodness and mercy of God. What differences there are, may be explained partly by the difference of the errors which they controvert. St. Paul is arguing against a dependence on the scrupulous performance of the Jewish law (what he calls the ἔργα νόμου), and against the denial of salvation to the Gentiles unless they conformed in all points to that St. James is arguing against a dependence upon Jewish orthodoxy, irrespective of moral conduct (what St. Paul might call ἔργα πίστεως or 'faith working by love'). But partly the difference is due to the difference in the character and development of the two men. To the one, whose spiritual experience had been broken by a violent shock, and whose special office it was to open the kingdom of heaven to the Gentiles, the Gospel is the antithesis of the Law; to the other, who had been brought up with Jesus, who had known His disciples from the first, and whose special office it was to make the final offer of salvation to his own countrymen, the Gospel was the consummation of the Law. Again, the one with his deeply speculative nature loves to fix his gaze on the Divine factor in man's salvation, the other with his strong practical bent directs his attention mainly to the human factor; though each fully allows and even asserts the doctrine complementary to that which may be called peculiarly his own.

III. 1—12. Paraphrase.

Do not be eager to assume the responsibilities of teachers. Hard as it is for man to avoid stumbling in action, it is harder still to avoid it in speech; so that to guide the tongue aright may be regarded as a test of Christian maturity. As the movements of the horse or the ship are controlled by the little bit in the mouth or rudder in the stern, so the whole activity of man is directed by the use made of the tongue, Like the spark which sets the forest on fire, the tongue, by some little insignificant word, can boust of setting on fire the wheel of mortality, the whole round of this mortal life. In the microcosm of man's nature the tongue represents the unrighteous world, and is used by Satan as his organ. Man has learnt to tame the most savage and venomous of animals, but the tongue is untameable and never at rest, and its venom is the deadliest of all. It is as impossible to combine acceptable worship of God with imprecations on man, God's image, as it is impossible for a fountain to send forth sweet and bitter water at the same orifice, or a tree of one species to bear fruit of another species. (See especially notes on verses 8, 10.)

Use and Abuse of Speech.

The teacher here referred to is of course, in the first instance, the teacher in the congregation. It is the same warning as we read in i. 19; the same also as is given by St. Paul in 1 Cor. xiv. 26-40. From the latter passage we learn that the Christian assemblies were often scenes of great confusion, in which a number of persons, women as well as men, were trying to make themselves heard at the same time, one with a psalm, one with a revelation, one with a teaching, and so St. Paul insists that those who prophesy, or speak with unknown tongues, should speak by two or at the most by three (with which we may compare the μη πολλοί of St. James), and that by course, so that all things may be done decently and in order. It does not seem that there was any distinct order of teachers: each member of the congregation was at liberty to speak as he was moved by the Holy Spirit, in accordance with the prophecy of Joel, quoted by St. Peter on the day of Pentecost. But even the exercise of the gifts of the Spirit was to be kept under control; the spirits of the prophets were subject to the prophets: there was to be nothing orginstic in the Christian service. If there was anything of mere animal excitement, of pushing, or display, or want of consideration for others, this was a sign that the speaker was not exclusively influenced by the Spirit of God (vv. 14, 15). The dangers arising from the over-freedom of the youthful Church have long ago been effectually guarded against in the Church of England by the denial of the right of speech to any but the clergy. But it may perhaps be questioned whether St. James would have consented to purchase immunity from the disorder of which he complains, by investing one of the teachers, not selected for that particular post, as being specially qualified for it, either by the congregation, or by the Apostles, or by the Church at large, but merely nominated by some wealthy person, perhaps one who was an entire stranger to the congregation, and who had never given proof of his qualifications to exercise such an important trust,—whether, I say, St. James would have approved of investing a teacher, so chosen, with exclusive authority over the ritual and the teaching of the congregation, and would further have thought it expedient to enable him, however incompetent or unsuited for that particular post, to disregard the wishes and feelings alike of his ecclesiastical superiors and of the people committed to his charge, by ensuring to him a practically irremovable tenure. And yet, after all, our present system does not make St. James' caution inapplicable. We may silence the laity, and still leave too many teachers; since it does not follow that, because a man is ordained and has the charge of a parish, he must therefore be able to preach. A man may be an excellent parish priest without having the qualifications of a prophet and teacher.

We must not, however, suppose that the caution is limited to preaching. It applies to all who set themselves up as instructors of others, whether as schoolmasters, lecturers, politicians, journalists, critics, writers of whatsoever kind, who make themselves responsible, not only for their own actions, but for the seed they sow in the minds of others. As there never was a time when people pressed more eagerly into these professions, so there never was a time when it behoved each man more seriously to ask himself, what kind of vocation he has for the work which he proposes to undertake, and whether he has conscientiously endeavoured to prepare himself for it. As regards education, perhaps the time has now come when it may be possible to require a certificate, both of adequate knowledge and of ability to teach, from others besides the teachers in our elementary schools.

On a first reading, there is to a western mind something odd and exaggerated in St. James' remarks as to the Tongue. The tongue is of course merely the innocent instrument employed by the free will of man. The rhetorical figure by which it stands for the abuse of the faculty of speech, and of which examples have been given in the note, need not however imply a want of earnestness in the speaker, any more than Cranmer's apostrophe to 'this unworthy hand.' In some cases there can be no doubt that temptation comes from 'the pleasures encamped in our members' (below iv. 1). There would be nothing inappropriate, for instance, in ascribing to the palate the evils which arise from gluttony. But there is no physical pleasure in the actual movement of the tongue, and but little in hearing ourselves talk. The pleasures and temptations connected with the use of the tongue as an organ of speech, are entirely psychological; but they constitute an easily recognized department of man's activity, which St. James tickets by this name; and besides, like the pleasures of the palate, they seem to have a separate life of their own, independent of our will, so that we often find it the hardest thing in the world to hold our tongue (ver. 8). The next point which we might be disposed to question is the statement that one who controls the tongue is a perfect man: that, as the movement of the horse is governed by the bit, so the activity of man is governed by his use of the tongue. Perhaps we may find this easier to understand if we go back to the analysis of temptation given in i. 14. Man's own lust is the cause of sin. The angry or impure or impious thought goes on to express itself, first in words, and then in action. Under the Old Dispensation it was wrong action, which was forbidden by the Ten Commandments. St. James, like his Master, bids us stop the evil current at an earlier point. Not only he that kills is in danger of the judgment, but he that says 'Raca' or 'Thou fool.' Evil is to be met and conquered in its initial stage of thought, before the bitter or malicious feeling has had time to vent itself in words. It may be objected that there are cases in which some such vent is needed for the raging passion within, which only becomes more dangerous by the endeavour to stifle it, just as grief when it is unable to find relief in tears. Allowing this to be the case, it need not, in the first place, diminish the value of the general rule that we should accustom ourselves to check the evil impulse in the bud; and, secondly, we have to remember that, in St. James' view, prayer is the natural vent for all the agitations of a Christian (below v. 15). Perhaps however we may conclude from the language used here and above (i. 19) that St. James was addressing people more prone than the English to give expression to their feelings in words, people of more fiery and less phlegmatic tempers.

We are not of course to suppose that St James denies or ignores the right uses of the tongue. The very importance he attaches to hearing proves the value he puts on the right kind of speaking, and the description he gives just below of the qualifications of the truly wise teacher is worthy to be compared with St. Paul's panegyric on Charity.

III. 13—18. Paraphrase.

If a man claims to be wise, let him prove his wisdom by his conduct. True wisdom shows itself in modesty, recognizing the immensity of the universe and the narrow limits of man's capacity, and bowing in reverence to God who made both man and the universe. The mixing up of personal feelings, envy, jealousy, ambition and party spirit, with the attempt to teach others, proves the absence of true wisdom. Such a teacher sets up self above truth: his wisdom ceases to be a gift from God: it is charged with other elements derived from the flesh, the world and the devil. It is materialistic, irreligious, hating God and goodness, and is attended by unrest, disquietude and every kind of evil. On the other hand the wisdom which comes from God is first of all pure: it has gained the victory over all the lower impulses of our nature: it is at peace with itself, with God and with man: it is gentle, reasonable, compassionate, single-minded, free from dissimulation, abounding in good fruits. It is by the peaceful activity of such lovers of peace that the seed, which will spring up into a harvest of righteousness, is sown in the hearts of men.

WISDOM.

St. James, following the books of Job and of Proverbs and the sapiential books of the Apocrypha, has already spoken of wisdom as the gift of God, which we are to seek by earnest prayer, and which will enable the Christian to understand the purpose of the trials to which he is exposed, and to make the right use of them (i. 3). In the O. T. the word has a very wide sense, including both science and literature (1 Kings iv. 29-34, Prov. i. 6), but laying most stress on practical wisdom, of which the foundation is said to be the fear of the Lord. Here it is introduced as a sequel to the instructions to teachers, especially religious teachers, and is defined by the moral qualifications which go to the making of a good teacher or student. Freedom from personal objects, single-minded devotion to the pursuit of truth, simplicity, modesty—these qualities are essential to students in whatever department of thought. Gentleness and sympathy, appreciation for the work of others—these qualities are essential to a persuasive teacher. So much we shall all admit; but it may be asked, Is wisdom to St. James nothing more than this? If we test his description of wisdom by applying it to the case of men who are universally esteemed wise, a Thucydides, a Plato, a Shakespeare; or to an Athanasius, or a Pascal, or a Bishop Butler; even to St. Paul or St. John, do we find that it supplies us with anything like an exhaustive analysis of what we know as wisdom in them? evidently takes no account of the original powers of the mind, or of the strictly intellectual training needed for the full development of those powers. It is as suited to the ordinary Sunday School teacher as to the highest genius. So far, we may regard this exhortation of St. James as illustrating the Christian freedom from exclusiveness. Gospel addresses itself to the Publican as well as to the Pharisee, to 'this people that knoweth not the law' as well as to the doctor and the scribe. Every one has some mental powers: wisdom consists in the right use of those powers, be they small or great. But there is no reason to suppose that St. James intended to give a complete exposition of his ideas on wisdom in this passage. He is simply dealing with the evils incident to the religious teaching of the time. There were in the Christian assemblies, as we learn from the Pastoral Epistles and elsewhere, the counterparts of the Jewish rabbis, men fluent and positive and argumentative, who arrogated to themselves the name of wise. St. James says nothing as to the extent of their learning or knowledge; he is content to point out those particular characteristics of heavenly wisdom in which they were manifestly deficient. We cannot argue from this that he would have disapproved of elaborate disquisitions on theological questions such as we read in the Epistle to the Hebrews, or that he would have condemned the pursuit of learning or science for its own sake; but for the present his mind is fixed on practical issues.

IV. 1—17. Paraphrase.

The real source of our quarrelsomeness is the greediness with which each one grasps at pleasure for himself. We are envious, if we see others succeed where we have failed; and we are conscious that our whole life is a failure, as it always must be, when men either omit to pray, or pray only for worldly objects whereby to gratify their selfish impulses. But those who seek the world's favour can never obtain the favour of God. The two are absolutely incompatible. As the Scripture says, 'the Spirit which He has planted in us jealously longs for our love.' It is owing to this jealous affection that He resists the proud and gives grace to the humble. If we submissively accept His chastisement and return to Him, He will return to us, and the tempter, who offers the world to each of us, as he did to Christ, will flee from us also, when he finds we are determined to resist him. This we must do by renouncing all wicked actions and checking all evil thoughts, by learning to take a serious view of life, giving up our thoughtless mirth, practising self-denial and repentance, mourning over sin and humbling ourselves before God. If we thus turn from the world to God, He will raise us up and grant us a share in His kingdom.

Do not think lightly of ill-natured gossip. To speak against a brother or to condemn a brother is really to speak against and condemn the law of God, who has bidden us to love one another, and has given a special warning against this sin in the words, 'Judge not, that ye be not judged.' Shall we venture to set up our opinion against God's law, and claim to do that which has been distinctly forbidden by the sole Lawgiver and Judge! Our duty is not to criticize, but to obey.

A further characteristic of the spirit of worldliness is exhibited in our confident forming of plans for the future, without any thought of the precarious nature of earthly enjoyment, and of our dependence on God for the life of each successive day. All schemes for the future should be accompanied by the proviso 'if God will'

Do you say that you know all this already! Remember then that it is the knowledge of good, combined with the choice of evil, which constitutes sin.

THE WORLD.

The term κόσμος is borrowed from the Greek philosophers who used it to express, first, the divine order apparent in the universe, and then the actual universe and especially the heavenly bodies. In the pantheistic system of the Stoics the κόσμος itself was deified. By the writers of the N. T. it is generally used in a dyslogistic sense. Thus St. James (i. 27) bids his readers 'keep themselves unspotted from the world.' In ii. 5 he speaks of those who were 'poor in the view of the world' as being 'rich in faith.' In iii. 6 he speaks of the tongue as the organ of the unrighteous world in our body. Here he says the friendship of the world is enmity with God.' St. John (1 Ep. ii. 15-17) analyses the influence of the world into the 'lust of the flesh, the lust of the eyes and the pride of life.' He tells us further (iii. 1) that the world knew not God and therefore knows not the sons of God; (iii. 13) that the world hateth you; (iv. 5) that false prophets are of the world and the world hears them; (v. 4) 'whatever is begotten of God overcometh the world: and this is the victory which overcometh the world, even our faith'; (v. 19) 'the whole world lieth in wickedness' (or 'in the evil one'); (iii. 17) 'the world's good' is used in the same sense as 'the unrighteous Mammon.' So in his Gospel we read (xiv. 17) that the world cannot receive the Comforter': (xiv. 30) 'the prince of this world cometh and hath nothing in me'; (xv. 19) 'If ye were of the world the world would love its own, but I chose you out of the world, therefore the world hateth you.' So St. Paul 'the world through its wisdom knew not God' (1 Cor. i. 21); 'God chose the base things of the world' (1 Cor. i. 27); and St. Peter 'that ye may become partakers of the divine nature, having escaped the corruption which is in the world through lust' (2 Pet. i. 4). It is evident that in these passages the world is used not for the external universe, but for the world of men, that same world of which we are told that God so loved it, that he sent his Son that the world through him might be saved (Joh. iii. 16, 17); and yet St. James says that one who loves the world thereby becomes an enemy of God. How are we to explain this? What is the exact nature of that world which is so dear to God, and so dangerous to man?

In the simplest sense of the word, the world is each man's natural environment, that into which he enters at birth, and from which he departs in death. It is the immediate present, the seen and temporal, of which our senses bear witness, in contrast to the unseen and eternal; as St. John says 'the world passeth away and the lusts thereof, but he that doeth the will of God abideth for ever.' It supplies the objects of all our appetites, the stimulus to our activities, the occasions of our passions, the subject-matter of our thoughts. This environment is partly inanimate, so far as our senses, thoughts, and appetites are concerned, but far more largely human, in all that has to do with feelings, passions, desires. It is the appointed training-place of the immortal soul. But just as the inanimate world, which was intended to reveal the glory of the eternal Godhead, was itself deified through the folly of man; so the world of humanity, which was intended to be a further revelation of the inner character of God, engrosses our attention until we no longer hear the voice of God speaking in conscience, but take the custom of the world for our law, submit ourselves to its judgment, strive for its prizes, seek its approval,—in a word, worship the world as In speaking of the world we must remember that it is not one, but multiform. Each man's world differs from that of every other man, depending partly on his surroundings and partly on the working of his own mind. The same surroundings may be to one man a channel of divine influence, to another the very embodiment of the worldly spirit. Where the mind of one sees or creates good in all around him, the mind of another may be conscious only of evil; and thus the same set of people may constitute a church to the one, a world to the other. In like manner there will be a broad distinction between man's world and woman's world, the world of youth and the world of age, the world of poverty and the world of wealth. Fashion, politics, religion,—the criminal, the school-boy, the working-man,—all have their separate worlds; there is the world of the nun in her convent, of the hermit in his cell. Incalculable mischief has been caused by the imagination that the worldly spirit could be avoided by keeping out of some particular society which men chose to identify with the world. The world is in the heart of man. There may be endless differences in point of refinement between the various forms of the world; but in so far as they all tend to separate us from God and lower our standard of duty, the influence of all is alike baneful. He who makes it his chief aim to gain the favour of his world thereby becomes an enemy of God. And yet all the while each separate soul, included in the aggregate of worlds, is itself the object of God's love, though the worldly influence, which in the Bible often goes by the name of the world, is so hateful to God that, as we have seen, no man can love it without becoming His enemy.

St. James in the text tells us that the cause of quarrelling is our eagerness to get the world's good things, which are palpably limited in quantity, and often derive their chief value in our eyes from their difficulty of attainment. The fact of this limitation inevitably leaves many disappointed of their desire. But even the successful are not satisfied. No sooner is the coveted object attained, than the process of disillusion commences. There is a moment's delight at the victory over our rivals, and again the cloud of disappointment settles over us. We feel that, once more, happiness has eluded our grasp, and we are filled with envy and jealousy of those whom we fancy to be in any respect more fortunate than ourselves, till in the end we find our nearest approach to happiness in striving to prevent or destroy the happiness of others. How is this to be remedied? The Stoics answered: 'By ceasing to desire.' The Christian answer is: 'By desiring to be and to do what God wills, and by desiring others' good rather than our own.'

THE DIVINE JEALOUSY.

We are familiar with the Greek idea of Nemesis. Excessive prosperity on the part of man even apart from evil-doing, as in the well-known story of the Ring of Polycrates, portended utter ruin, because it provoked the divine jealousy of human happiness. We are familiar also with the ascription of jealousy to the God of the Jews, visiting the iniquity of the fathers upon the children unto the third and fourth generation. This seems to us to belong to the same stage of thought as the lex talionis an eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth,' or as the expulsion of Adam out of Eden for fear that he might put forth his hand and eat of the tree of life; or again as the dispersion of mankind over the face of the earth, for fear that they might make themselves too strong by building the tower of Babel. Such conceptions seem to us natural to the anthropomorphism of a rude people and period, when even Moses could urge as a reason for sparing the Israelites the fear that the Egytians might say, 'because the Lord was not able to bring them into the land which he promised them, he hath brought them out to slay them in the wilderness.' But under the New Dispensation we are perhaps surprised that it should still be possible to make use of a figure which seems derogatory to the Divine Perfection. We think jealousy a defect in human love; how much more in Divine! The phrase itself is no doubt due to the writer's Hebraic tone of thought and speech; but it is at the same time a most forcible expression of a most important truth; and the addition 'He giveth more grace' removes from it all that is unamiable in the idea of jea-It is really a parable in which the soul is represented as standing between rival wooers, God and the world. The strongest human passion is boldly taken to represent the Divine longing for the entire possession of the human heart, i.e. for the expulsion of every thought and feeling which interferes with the recovery of the Divine image in man and the attainment of the perfect ideal of humanity. We blame human jealousy, because it is so largely made up of a selfish desire for our own pleasure and honour; so liable to turn into hatred of the object of our passion. The Divine jealousy, as depicted in the N.T., desires nothing but the best good of the beloved object, and hates nothing but that which would injure and degrade it. How is this jealousy concerned in 'resisting the proud, and giving grace to the humble'? Pride here consists in man's claim to be independent of God, to do what he likes and gratify all his natural impulses irrespective of God's will. It is the choice of the temporal in preference to the eternal, of the world in preference to God. This pride is resisted, as was shown in the previous Comment, by the continual failure to obtain the happiness sought for. The Divine jealousy having ordained that the world shall never give satisfaction, he who seeks his happiness there cannot but feel himself continually thwarted in his ambitions, until at last he conceives himself to be the victim of some jealous and hostile power seated upon the throne of the universe. Yet 'He giveth more grace.' Underneath the dark suspicion which blots out heaven from our eyes we are dimly conscious of an appeal to feelings long lost sight of and all but extinct within us. In the Prodigal's heart there begins to arise a loathing, not only for the husks with which he has striven to satisfy the cravings of the immortal soul, but also a loathing for his own folly and sin, a longing for the home which he has forsaken, joined with the sense of his own unworthiness, which makes him fear lest he should have lost it for ever. To one thus humbled grace is given in full measure: the soul, which could never satisfy its thirst from earthly cisterns, finds never-failing supplies of happiness in that inner union with God which is typified by the well of water springing up unto everlasting life.

ACCOMPANIMENTS OF REPENTANCE.

Does St. James mean that God's grace and favour are to be won by fasting and self-discipline? Not so; God's loving favour is ours to receive, the moment we believe in it. He means be willing to give up what has till now seemed to be the chief interest of your life: give up the pursuit of honours and pleasures: no longer indulge in dreams of conquering your rivals and taking vengeance on your enemies: welcome what may seem the gloom of renunciation: examine yourself to see where you have gone wrong in the past: and set to work to atone, so far as may be, for any wrongs you have done to others. Listen for the voice of God in conscience, and do your duty, as in His sight and relying on His strength, with all the more energy in proportion to its irksomeness and difficulty.' The natural accompaniments of such feelings and resolutions amongst the Jews were weeping and fasting, the rending of clothes and the casting of dust on the head. If these things help the inward change, good: if they are its natural accompaniments, good also: but, if they are used as substitutes for the inner change, or as an anodyne to quiet the conscience and pave the way for the resumption of the former life, then they are nothing better than the vain religion (θρησκεία μάταιος) already condemned by St. James.

JUDGING.

Are we then never to find fault with others? It may be an essential part of our duty, as in the case of a magistrate, appointed for the very purpose of deciding whether the accused is guilty or not guilty; of a parent, who has to train up his children to distinguish between right and wrong; and so in every case where instruction or criticism is required. What St. James means is that we are not to indulge in the habit of fault-finding from the mere love of it, where duty does not call us to it, for the sake of showing off our acuteness and pulling down others by way of exalting ourselves. Even where it is our duty to judge, it should be done under a sense of responsibility, with the consciousness of our own liability to go wrong and a genuine desire for the improvement, not the humiliation, of the person blamed; and further our judgment should be determined by the objective standard of right, not by our private tastes or likings; otherwise we set up ourselves above the law and the lawgiver. There is no fault which brings about its own punishment more certainly than the love of fault-finding. While we become quick to see the mote in a brother's eye, the beam is still growing in our own. The habit of negative criticism is destructive to the creative faculty and to much besides. All human action is more or less blundering; if we choose to concentrate our attention on the blunders, and shut our eyes to the honest aim and the real good effected in spite of the blunders, we lose the stimulus of admiration and emulation; thus deadening within us all that makes life worth living, if it be true, as the poet teaches, that 'we live by admiration, hope, and love.'

Making Plans.

Are we then to live at hap-hazard? not to use our best endeavours to foresee the future and shape our actions in accordance with probabilities? This would be to give up one main use of reason. When our Lord said 'take no thought (R.V. 'be not anxious') for the morrow, for the morrow shall take thought for the things of itself' (Matt. vi. 34), he did not mean to forbid serious consideration of the course to be adopted under given circumstances. He did not mean that it was wrong to make engagements beforehand and to take steps to keep our engagements; that it was wrong for a man to deliberate carefully before choosing a profession or accepting a post which might be offered him; or again, that it was wrong for a statesman to consider carefully what measures he should bring forward in Parliament. His meaning was that we should not worry ourselves with the anticipation of evil: we should make all due preparation for it, and then await it calmly in reliance upon God. As Christ forbade undue anxiety, so St. James here forbids undue confidence. We should bear in mind that we cannot foresee the issues of things; so that what we think desirable now, may turn out hereafter to have been undesirable; and again that the best-laid plans are liable to fail; so that, however good the object, still it may be unattainable by us; that we should therefore not stake our life, as it were, on a single throw of the dice, but join with all our plans for the future the reservation 'if God will,' and the aspiration 'Thy will be done.' Some people, perhaps thinking of Christ's promise of divine assistance to those who should be brought before synagogues and magistrates for his sake(Matt. x. 18), seem to have an idea that forethought and planning are in themselves opposed to faith, and that, in religious matters especially, there is something approaching to impiety in making preparations for the future. It is enough to say in answer to this, that while we are no doubt justified in believing that Christ's grace will be sufficient for us in whatever difficulties, still it is our duty to use all our powers, especially our nobler powers, in God's service; that the powers of imagination, hope, and reason, were given to us especially as guides to action; and that no great and permanent work has ever been effected in which these powers were not fully exercised.

It is probably this passage which has given rise to the common use of the letters D.V., as to which see the note. It is a comparatively trivial example of what may be called the objectification of ideas, which in greater matters has been productive of so much evil in regard to religion. To have acquired the habit of submission and resignation to the Divine Will is all-important for man: but the use of the symbol is a matter of indifference. Where it is used in one place and omitted in another, it would rather seem to imply that, when omitted in writing, it was not present in the mind.

V. 1—11. Paraphrase.

Another form of worldliness is the love of wealth, whether stored by the miser, or squandered by the voluptuary. The decay which threatens unused wealth is itself symbolical of the destruction awaiting its selfish possessor. The ery of the labourer, from whom his just wages are withheld, is not unheard in heaven. As for the voluptuary who, in this final crisis of his country's fortunes, thinks of nothing but personal gratification, he can only be compared to a sheep fattened for slaughter. By the help of an unjust law he may get rid of the unresisting rightcous, whose life is a continual witness against him; but let him remember that the Lord is coming to judgment. Let the brethren, on their side, wait patiently and strengthen their hearts to endure for the short period which has still to elapse before the coming of the Lord. Let them take a lesson from the husbandmen who patiently wait for the rains to mature the fruits of the earth, and from the prophets of old who spoke and suffered in the name of the Lord. The story of Job is a striking example of the blessing which awaits patient endurance. It shows us that, however severe may be the trial to which the believer is exposed, God's mercy and lovingkindness will be made manifest in the end. The brethren, however, must remember that the Lord comes not only to take vengeance on His enemies but to judge His people; and must beware of a marmaring, unforgiving spirit.

STERNNESS OF ST. JAMES.

What are we to say to the stern denunciation of this passage? Is it not inconsistent with the warning against judging and evil-speaking, given in iv. 11? At any rate it is not inconsistent with the denunciation of the Pharisees by John the Baptist and by our Lord. What would be presumption in an ordinary Christian may be part of the commission of a prophet. It was not presumption in Jonah to declare the approaching downfall of Ninevel: the presumption came in, where he expostulated with God for refusing to make good his threats, when they had produced the desired effect. The prophetic announcement of impending evil is not inconsistent with the tenderest sympathy, as is shown by our Lord's lamentation over Jerusalem. Here we can see ample reason for the strongest warning. The rich represented the pride of the world. Their success, their triumphant career of selfish oppression, while it left little hope of the possibility of their own repentance, caused despair in the hearts of the brethren whom they oppressed. It was the truest kindness on the part of the prophet to set before both the fact of imminent judgment revealed to him by the Spirit. To the rich it was the final invitation, the hand-writing on the wall, which, if instantly accepted, might still enable them to seek a share in the humiliation of a Christian (i. 10); to the poor it was the encouragement needed to prevent their falling away. Nor is this prophetic office yet extinct in the Church of Christ. Wherever sin is rampant, wherever oppression and cruelty prevail, where the denunciation of the evil-doer is a dangerous and unpopular service, there the heart of the prophet will still burn within him, till at the last he speaks with his tongue.

V. 12—20. Paraphrase.

Do not make use of oaths of any kind, lest you fall into condemnation. Let all your feelings, whether of joy or sorrow, be controlled and sanctified by laying them before God. In case of sickness send to the elders, and let them pray and unoint the sick person, and the Lord will answer the prayer of faith, and, if his sickness is the consequence of past sin, it shall be forgiven. Confess your offences therefore to one unother, and pray for one another, that you may be healed. The story of Elijah on Mt. Carmel shows how great is the power of a good man's prayer prompted by the Spirit of God. If a brother falls into sin, you know that he who brings him back into the right way will be the means both of saving a soul and of hiding a multitude of sins.

SWEARING.

From the form of the prohibition, we might suppose that St. James took the same view of the subject as St. Augustine, quoted in the note, and forbade swearing, not so much because it was wrong in itself, as because it was likely to lead to wrong, and therefore to condemnation. He could not have said of murder 'Do not kill lest you fall under condemnation.' At any rate by giving his warning in this form he made it easier for the Jews to accept it. Whatever their practice was, they would certainly allow that there was much careless and irreverent swearing, and that this could not but be displeasing to God. St. James is, however, quoting Christ's own words, and it is therefore probable that he means 'Whatever form of oath you use, it will come under the prohibition of Christ.' understand from this that every kind of swearing is absolutely forbidden, that the Quakers, for instance, were right in refusing to take an oath in a court of justice? This is not what we should gather from the conduct of St. Paul and of Christ Himself. The former calls God to witness that he is speaking the truth in more than one passage (2 Cor. i. 23, xi. 31, Gal. i. 20, etc.), and our Lord took the oath proposed to Him in the words of the High Priest 'I adjure thee by the living God.' So the angel in the Apocalypse is represented as swearing 'by Him that liveth for ever and ever." The same rule of interpretation must be applied here as in the case of the other precepts of the Sermon on the Mount. They supply an ideal standard, a goal to be aimed at, but not a code of law to be immediately put into execution, regardless of existing circumstances, and of the manner in which their exact observance would affect our carrying out the two great commandments on which hang all the law and the prophets. Take for instance the precept to turn the other cheek: if this is tried by the principle that we should do to others as we would wish them to do to us, it is evident that the last thing which a sane man could wish for himself or for one whom he loved would be that he should be allowed to strike and insult others with impunity. We have to disregard the letter, in order to keep the spirit of the precept; which is that a Christian should never act from mere vindictiveness. The law of love requires us to act for the best interest of the offender, i.e. to act in such a way as to induce him to avoid such faults in future. It is only where there is sufficient generosity of character to make a man ashamed of striking one who offers no resistance, that non-resistance becomes the fitting course for a Christian, the right way of obeying the law 'Thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself.' Yet in proportion as a society becomes Christianized, it becomes more and more possible to practise non-resistance without transgressing the higher law of love, which bids us always act for the best interest of our neighbour. So with swearing: the right state in a Christian community is that all should feel so strongly the obligation of truth, that there should be no occasion for further sanction beyond the simple 'yes' and 'no.' Wherever there is need of more 'it comes of evil.' But often the standard of truthfulness is so low, that it is necessary to appeal to the All-seeing Witness in order to make the affirmant realize what is his duty in respect of the truth. And thus swearing becomes allowable, just as war is allowable in the present imperfect state of things; yet the aim of the Christian should be, as far as possible, to limit the use both of oaths and of war, so as ultimately to get rid of them altogether. See an excellent article, in the Cont. Rev. vol. 49, pp. 1—i7, by the late Archbishop Magee, on the substitution of a declaration for an oath in admitting members of Parliament. Unhappily in this, as in some other matters, the professed advocates of religion have often taken a lower view than its professed opponents. The earnestness of St. James in this prohibition is probably to be explained by the constant breach of the third commandment caused by the Jewish habit of swearing.

HEALING OF THE SICK BY ANOINTING WITH OIL AND BY PRAYER.

There can be little doubt that St. James is here describing a miraculous cure following the prayer of faith. To encourage the elders to obey his injunctions, he first insists on the power of prayer, when inspired by the Divine Spirit, and then refers to an example of this power in the person of Elijah, a man, as he reminds them, of like weakness with ourselves. A difficulty arises here: if every sick person could be miraculously healed, how is it that St. Paul did not miraculously heal Timothy and others (1 Tim. v. 23, 2 Tim. iv. 20)? Why was not his own thorn in the flesh removed? We hear occasionally of miraculous cures, but they are plainly exceptional. May not the explanation lie in the word ἐνεργουμένη (ver. 17)? When a miracle was to be wrought the power of the Spirit made itself felt in the prayer which preceded. Elijah himself could not work a miracle at will. He too must wait, like Samson, till the Spirit of the Lord came upon him. One reason why the elders, rather than others, were to be called in, may have been that they were better able to judge what was the will of the Spirit. From v. 16, however, it would appear that the office of prayer and anointing and receiving confessions was not confined to them. It has been already pointed out (pp. exxi, exxii) that the assumption here made by St. James, that the anointing of the sick would be attended by a miraculous cure, if performed in the spirit of prayer, is a mark of the very early date of the Epistle.

Are we to consider that the scope of this injunction, which is evidently temporary in form, is limited to the age in which it was written, or is it in any way applicable to our own time? The prayers of the Congregation are still requested for the sick in the public services of the Church of England; and to offer such prayers is a natural, we might say, an inevitable outcome of Christian friendship. There are some who disbelieve in anything beyond a subjective answer to prayer. Yet even they must allow that a subjective action on the imagination may produce an objective change in the bodily condition, as has been attested in many cases of faith-healing, both among Protestants and Roman Catholics. But the teaching of St. James and of the writers of the N.T. in general goes much further than this. Men are to cast every care upon God, knowing that He careth for us. If there is a drought, men pray for rain; if there is a bodily infirmity, they pray for its removal; if there is danger or difficulty impending, the example of Christ Himself shows that we are not wrong in asking that 'this cup may be taken away,' provided we add 'nevertheless, not my will, but Thine be done.' In these latter cases, however, we are told that prayer is absurd, or even impious, because it brings us into collision with the laws of nature: and certainly, when we are convinced that a certain sequence regularly follows a certain antecedent by natural law, or, as Christians would say, by God's ordinance,-in such a case it would be not only folly. but the extreme of presumption to ask that God's ordinance might be set aside for our convenience. The husbandman does not pray that the grain which he has sown one day may spring up into the golden crop of corn on the next day, or that it may come to maturity unaided by rain or sunshine. These things he knows to be impossibilities, and he does not ask for them, because he cannot deliberately desire them. But where a change for the better is not, so far as he knows, an impossibility, there he cannot help strongly wishing for the change; and in the mind of a Christian every wish becomes a prayer, because it is joined with the aspiration 'Thy will be done.' If meteorological science is ever so far advanced that the meteorologist can predict the weather with the same certainty as the astronomer predicts an eclipse. prayer for fine weather would become impossible; but wherever desire is possible, there prayer is possible and right. We do not even pray for the recovery of the sick, when the symptoms make it clear that God's will is otherwise: our prayer is then for a peaceful and painless departure.

As the request for the prayers of the Church, so the service for the Visitation of the Sick is founded upon this passage. The parish priest, being notified of the sickness, attends by the bedside, joins in prayer for the sick person, reminds him of his duty to make confession both of his sin to God and of his shortcomings towards other men, assures him of the Divine forgiveness promised to all repenting sinners, administers to him the Sacrament of the Body and Blood of Christ the ever-present Saviour, in whom he realizes his communion with all saints, not only those still on earth, but those who have crossed the dark river before him, and whom he hopes soon to rejoin on the other side.

The Church of Rome claims to keep closer to St. James' injunction by its use of Extreme Unction for the remission of sins and the spiritual comfort of the dying. It is one of the curious phenomena of our time that English Churchmen have been found to regret that our Bishops persist in withholding from the clergy the power to administer this sacrament of comfort¹; as to which it has been shown in the Notes that, as far as we can judge, it was never contemplated by St. James, and that there is no evidence of its use during the first eight centuries by any except an obscure sect of Gnostics. are others who, while allowing that the belief in spiritual benefit to be derived from Extreme Unction is a mere unauthorized fancy, are still inclined to wink at it, as a means of tranquillizing the mind and preserving it from terrors as unreal and as superstitious as the remedy. If a false theology has fastened on the mind the belief that God's mercy is limited to this life, and that after death He has no further compassion for the sinner who has not repented and believed while on earth, but is henceforth only the Judge and the Avenger, is it not allowable to drive out one error by another? The question is far-reaching, but no lover of truth can hesitate. Even at the last hour let the true Gospel sound in the ears of the dying penitent, still more of the dying saint, who is terrified by suspicions that he has not the right faith or the true conversion. He who has once grasped the idea that Christ is the propitiation for the sins of the whole world; that God's mercies are everlasting over all His creatures; that He will do for each after death exactly what perfect love and perfect wisdom dictate; that Eternal Justice and Eternal Holiness, no less than Eternal Love, are our guarantee against an eternity of evil, will have no need and no wish for a material anointing.

Confession of Sin.

The connexion between suffering and sin was universally believed in, and even exaggerated, when St. James wrote; as is evident from our Lord's words about the Galileans, whose blood Pilate mingled with the sacrifices, and also from the question of the disciples about the man who was born blind. St. Paul asserts that many were punished with sickness and even with death for irreverence in receiving the Eucharist. The Jewish proverb quoted in my note to the effect that 'a man could not recover from sickness till his sins were forgiven' is quite in accordance with our Lord's procedure in healing the sick of the palsy, where the words 'Son, thy sins are forgiven thee' preceded the command 'Rise up and walk'; and both enable us to understand why confession and forgiveness are introduced here in the instructions given for the healing of the sick.

There seems, however, to be a certain want of consecutiveness in the language of St. James. We should have expected the confession of sins to be mentioned before the forgiveness of sins, and even before the prayer for healing, since healing, as we have seen, was regarded as implying forgiveness; whereas it is brought in afterwards as a second thought, though connected with what precedes by the inferential particle ov. The emphatic $i\lambda\lambda\lambda\eta\lambda\omega_0$ and $i\lambda\lambda\lambda\eta\lambda\omega_0$ of v. 16 are decisive against the Romish limitation of confession to the priest. Either the Elders mentioned in v. 14 have no special position distinguishing them from the other members of the Church, or, more probably, we are to suppose that the duty of visiting the sick is not confined to them, but falls on the brethren generally. Are we to understand that no one may hear the confession of others unless he at the same time confesses his sins to them? This would seem the most natural meaning of the Greek; but it evidently could not be always carried out. Children ought to confess their faults to father or mother, but it would in most cases be far from expedient that the former should in their turn hear the confessions of the latter. On the other hand we can easily conceive cases in which mutual confession is most natural and desirable, since one party is seldom so entirely in the right, as to leave all the regrets and apologies to the other party. If however we are to think of confession here in connexion with healing, it must be the confession of sin against God which is intended: how would this suit the idea of mutual confession? We can understand that confession is made easier to the sinner, if another is ready to join in the expression of sorrow and repentance. We can understand too that an unsympathizing Pharisaic tone is likely to repel any confidences on the part of a penitent. But the idea of mutual confession does not seem altogether appropriate in the case of the sick man, and yet, if the word $i\alpha\theta\hat{\eta}\tau\epsilon$ is taken literally, we seem to be tied down to this case. If on the other hand we give it a metaphorical meaning, we may suppose that the precept is of general application, and that St. James is recommending the habit of mutual confession between friends. It cannot, I think, be doubted that in many respects such mutual confidences might be productive of great good. How much easier it would be to put up with hastiness or coldness on the part of a friend, if we knew that he was himself conscious of his faults and trying to amend them! What a relief it would be to one of a sensitive self-conscious nature to lay his anxieties before another of whose wisdom and sympathy he felt assured! Might it not tend to increase the feeling of Christian fellowship, if those who were exposed to the same difficulties, anxious to conquer the same weaknesses and to practise the same virtues, could break through their isolation and confirm themselves in their good resolutions by the knowledge that they were shared by others? Might it not help to diminish the miseries of life, and to change the course of thoughts which may be tending towards insanity or suicide, if there were more of outspoken sympathy in the world, if people were sure that they might trust their secret feelings to others without fear of being despised or laughed at or shrunk from? The Church of England has wisely refused to follow Rome in requiring regular confession to the priest; yet, where the parish priest is what he should be, wise with the heavenly wisdom described by St. James, none should be better fitted than he by position, training, and experience, to receive such confidences and give the needed comfort and

'The object of the passage is to encourage the exercise of those mutual spiritual aids rendered by Christians to each other, which is one of the great objects and privileges of the institution of the Church. The body was to sympathize with its several members. If a man was in trouble, he was to pray; if in joy, to sing hymns: in neither case is the Apostle speaking of private prayer or private singing; but of those of the Christian congregation 1: there every individual Christian could find the best relief for his sorrows, and the liveliest sympathy in his joy. St. Paul's command "Rejoice with them that do rejoice and weep with them that weep," applies to this same sympathy, which the prayers and hymns of the church services were a constant means of expressing. But if a man were sick and could not go to the congregation, still he was not to lose the benefit of his Christian communion with them; he might then ask them to come to him; and as the whole congregation could not thus be summoned, the elders were to go as its representatives, and their prayers were to take the place of the prayers of the whole church. Care, however, is taken to show that the virtue of their prayers arises not from their being priests, but from their being Christians, and standing in the place of the whole church. For these words immediately follow: "confess therefore to one another your sins, and pray for one another, that ye may be healed; there is much virtue in a just man's prayer, when it is offered earnestly." Now, this most divine system of a living Church, in which all were to aid each other. in which each man might open his heart to his neighbour and receive the help of his prayers, and in which each man's earnest prayer, offered in Christ's name, had so high a promise of blessing annexed to it, has been almost 2 destroyed by that notion of a priesthood, which claiming that men should confess their sins to the clergy, not as to their brethren, but as to God's vicegerents, and confining the promised blessing to the prayers of the clergy as priests, not as Christians, nor as the representives of the whole church, has changed the sympathy of a Christian society into the dominion of a priesthood and the mingled carelessness and superstition of a laity.

St. John's language agrees with that of St. James: "If any man see his brother sinning a sin which is not unto death, he shall pray, and Christ shall give him life, for those who are not sinning unto death. There is a sin unto death;—it is not for that that I am bidding him to pray." Here the very same blessing which St. James speaks of as following the elders' prayers is said by St. John to follow the prayer of any Christian, a clear proof that the elders were sent for as representatives of the Church, and not as if their prayers possessed a peculiar virtue, because they stood as priests between God and the people.'

1 I cannot agree with Arnold in confining the exhortation to congregational

CONVERTING THE SINNER.

Is this a new case, or another aspect of the case of the sick man? If the latter, it seems to imply strange sloth and lukewarmness on the part of the Elders, that they should stand in need of exhortation to the performance of a duty, which would not have seemed to be particularly arduous or irksome. The previous verses insist on their power to heal the disease and procure forgiveness by their prayers: v. 20 speaks of the reward. If, as seems more likely, it is a new case, St. James may have added it as an afterthought on finding that his warnings had been chiefly against over-activity, too much vehemence, too much eagerness to teach. In ver. 14 he had begun to speak of our duty towards the sick in body; in ver. 16 he had extended this into a general precept as to mutual help in spiritual matters; in ver. 19 he turns to the case of the backsliders. Even here nothing is said as to the duty of the Church to go out into all the world and preach the Gospel to every creature; nothing is said as to making proselytes from the Gentiles or even from the unbelieving Jews. It is the exhortation of the Bishop, whose aim is the reformation and improvement of the Church, not of the Apostle, whose aim is the extension of the Church by the diffusion of the faith.

In my note I have pointed out that the words of ver. 20, 'he who recalls an erring brother saves (or 'will save') his soul from death and will be the means of blotting out many sins' are capable of two interpretations, according to the reference we give to 'his.' I have mentioned some difficulties which lie in the way of our taking 'his' to refer to the sinner, and have shown that it was not uncommon with Jewish writers to hold forth the prospect of salvation and forgiveness of sins, as an inducement to certain kinds of right conduct, such as alms-giving. I postponed to the present occasion the consideration of the question whether it was possible that St. James should have adopted a similar mode of speaking. We cannot, of course, imagine that he would ever have dreamt of a man's being able to atone for his own sins by his assiduity in calling others to repentance. Such a notion is forbidden, not less by our Lord's words recorded in Matt. vii. 20-22 'Many will say to me in that day, Lord, have we not prophesied in thy name? . . . then will I profess unto them, I never knew you; depart from me, ye that work iniquity,' and by the words of St. Paul in I Cor. xiii. 1-3, 'Though I speak with the tongues of men and angels ... though I have the gift of prophecy ... though I have all faith ... though I give my body to be burnt, and have not charity, it profiteth me nothing,' and in ch. ix. 26, 27 'I keep under my body and bring it into subjection, lest having preached to others, I myself should be a castaway,'—than by the words of St. James himself, 'Be not many masters, knowing that we shall receive the greater condemnation,' and by his constant depreciation of mere speaking, unaccompanied by deeds and practice. St. James has told us already how the soul is saved (i. 21-25): not by preaching to others, but by receiving in meekness the ingrafted word, and continuing in the perfect law of liberty. What in fact could be more contemptible in itself and more fatal to any good influence, than for a man to urge upon others a course which he has determined not to follow himself, and expect to be rewarded for their faith and works, when he has no faith or works of his own? The passages from the N.T. quoted in the notes do not contemplate the possibility of a preacher of righteousness, who has still to be saved from his sins. It is only in the Apocrypha that we find such unchristian sentiments as 'Almsgiving saves from death and purges away all sin' (Tobit xii. 9). The other quotations are simply encouragements to sincere but sluggish workers, to throw more energy into their work. It is allowable to say 'you have done much evil in the past, try and make up for it by the good you do in the future,' or 'remember that you are appointed by God to be a teacher or an elder: it is not enough for you to keep yourself unspotted in the world: you must bring your influence to bear on others, or you will be found wanting at last ": but it is not in accordance with Christian truth to say 'If you make a convert, your own sins will be forgiven.' It appears therefore that we must fall back on the other interpretation understanding 'his' of the The chief difficulty in this interpretation is that the apodosis seems to add so little to the protasis. 'Conversion' to us already implies 'saving the soul'; but this need not have been so to the first readers of the Epistle. To them the words may have meant 'However many sins the wanderer has been guilty of, still, if he turns, he will be saved from the death he has deserved, and all his sins will be forgiven.' We can imagine that such a promise might have been a great encouragement to those who were dispirited at the state of the backsliders in the church to which they belonged, and doubted whether it was possible to renew them again unto repentance.
